

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

3 1761 0001701 2

HANDBOUND
AT THE

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESS

15

457

7

M. TVLLI CICERONIS
TVSCVLANARVM DISPVTATIONVM
LIBRI QVINQVE

LONDON
Cambridge University Press
FETTER LANE

NEW YORK · TORONTO
BOMBAY · CALCUTTA · MADRAS Macmillan

TOKYO
Maruzen Company Ltd

All rights reserved

~~5684~~ (M. TVLLI CICERONIS)
TVSCVLANARVM DISPVATIONVM
LIBRI QVINQVE,

A REVISED TEXT WITH INTRODUCTION AND COMMENTARY AND A COLLATION OF NUMEROUS MSS.

BY THE LATE
THOMAS WILSON DOUGAN
PROFESSOR OF LATIN IN QUEEN'S COLLEGE, BELFAST AND
ROBERT MITCHELL HENRY, M.A.
PROFESSOR OF LATIN IN QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY, BELFAST

VOLUME II
CONTAINING BOOKS III-V

321860
4. 12. 35

CAMBRIDGE
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS

1934

PA 6304
TG 1905
V.2

PREFACE

WHEN on the death of the late Professor Dougan his papers were examined it was found that the second volume of his edition of Cicero's Tusculan Disputations, upon which he had been engaged up to the last, was in a very incomplete condition. He had left a fair copy of the explanatory notes upon Book III and the first 34 paragraphs of Book IV, and there were several notebooks containing his collations of various MSS. His widow (now Mrs Bor), to whom he entrusted the task of seeing that the book should be completed, and his executor, Mr William Dougan, handed these over to the present editor with the request that he should finish the work. The editor has accordingly printed as it stood that portion of the commentary which had been finished before Professor Dougan's death, adding only a few notes of his own enclosed in square brackets, and has himself written the commentary upon the remainder of Book IV and the whole of Book V, together with the Introduction containing a detailed analysis of the three books and a discussion of the question of Cicero's sources. Deciding to keep the critical notes uniform with those of the first volume, he used Professor Dougan's collations as far as they went, but collated himself for this volume the following MSS, E 1 E 2 R 1 R 6 R 7 R 10 R 16 R 17 V and P.

To the list (vol. I, p. ix) of editions consulted should be added for this volume that of L. W. Hasper (Gotha, 1883-5) (Ha.).

The editor desires to record his sincere thanks to the Syndics of the Press for their kindness in undertaking the publication of this volume and for their great patience in the long delay that has occurred in the completion of the work. He must also thank the readers of the press for the care and skill which detected errors that but for them might have passed unnoticed; and his friend Professor R. K. McElderry for his kindness in reading the proofs of the text and commentary.

R. M. H.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
I. INTRODUCTION . . . . .	ix
The argument of books III-V. . . . .	ix
The sources of books III-V . . . . .	xxx
II. TEXT, MS READINGS AND COMMENTARY . . . . .	I
III. INDEX . . . . .	305

INTRODUCTION

THE ARGUMENT

BOOK III

On relieving annoyance

THOUGH we possess a mind as well as a body, it is a strange thing that while the science of medicine exists for the benefit of the latter and is in high esteem, the corresponding science, philosophy, is either neglected or disliked—because, perhaps, while the mind appreciates a bodily disorder, the body has no sense of mental disorder and a diseased mind is unaware of its own condition. Nature who might have ordered otherwise has so designed our constitutions that the sparks or seeds of virtue which, if cultivated, ensure health of mind are easily destroyed. The process of destruction begins almost at birth under the influence of nurses, parents, teachers, literature and public opinion which teach us to mistake the false for the true, and to aim at material rather than moral success: we aim in consequence at the false rather than at the true glory, the counterpart of virtue, seduced by popular opinion rather than in reliance upon the judgment of the wise. Blinded by these false notions men are involuntarily the instruments of disaster to others as well as to themselves. Must we not try to find some remedy for this unhealthy state of mind, which is far more serious than any bodily disorder? Anxiety and lust are, for instance, worse than disease; and surely the human mind which has invented a cure for diseases can discover, and has discovered, a cure for the mind more reliable even than the science of medicine; this cure is to be found in philosophy, and it is surely important enough to be taken seriously. The general question has already been discussed in the Hortensius; here Cicero will only reproduce the aspect of the matter discussed upon this particular occasion, as following up the discussion of the two preceding days he and his friends discussed upon the third day the truth of a general proposition laid down by one of their number, §§ 1-7.

The proposition was: The wise man is subject to annoyance. Cicero contends in reply that as aegritudo is only one of several disorders of the mind, the mind which is subject to one may be subject to all and become so thoroughly unhealthy as to be practically insane, a word which taken literally means "in an unhealthy state," which (according to philosophers) a mind under such conditions undoubtedly is—Latin brings this point out better than Greek. A mind under the sway of passion is out of its own control, though here two states of mind must be distinguished: one, temporary, called furor or μελαγχολία, to which even wise men are subject, and the other (insania or μανία), a state inconsistent with true wisdom, §§ 7-11.

The position to be combatted is one that appeals to human nature on its tender side; and there is much to be said for Crantor's view that total absence of feeling can only be secured at the cost of brutality of mind and torpor of body. And yet Cicero fears that this view merely humours our weakness. We must remove this emotion; yet so deep-rooted is it that an ineradicable minimum will probably be left. And we must deal with the other emotions, too, but with this one first, §§ 12, 13.

A. Cicero now proceeds to put forward compressed Stoic arguments in syllogistic form to prove that the wise man is not affected by annoyance, §§ 14-21.

(a) Fear and annoyance are concerned with the same objects: the man who is liable to the one is also liable to the other: the wise man is not liable to fear, therefore he is not liable to annoyance, § 14.

(b) The wise man is too high-spirited to regard human concerns and being so must be superior to annoyance, § 15.

(c) The mind which is annoyed, like the eye which is inflamed, cannot do its work. The mind of the wise man is always equal to its work: therefore it is always free from annoyance.

(d) The wise man is self-controlled (σώφρων), and therefore calm, and therefore free from annoyance, c. 8, §§ 16-18.

(e) If the wise man were liable to annoyance he would also be liable to anger, §§ 18, 19.

(f) The wise man cannot fall into a state of envy or compassion; but the former is annoyance at the good fortune, and the latter annoyance at the evil fortune, of another; therefore the wise man cannot fall into annoyance, §§ 20, 21.

B. These fine-drawn arguments must be considerably expanded, but still principally according to Stoic views, for the Peripatetic theory of the mean as applied to emotions does not recommend itself to Cicero, § 22.

The original question: "Is the wise man affected by annoyance?" (except for the passage in the end of § 25 'id enim sit propositum, quando- quidem cam tu uideri tibi in sapientem cadere dixisti, quod ego nullo modo existimo') is now tacitly dropped (cf. § 80 'sed nescio quo pacto ab eo quod erat a te propositum aberrauit oratio, tu enim de sapiente quaesieras...'), and Cicero divides his main subject into two parts, the setting forth of the cause of annoyance and the discovery of its cure, § 23.

I. The cause of annoyance, §§ 24-75.

1. The relation of aegritudo to the other emotions, and its definition:—

The whole cause of the irrational emotions is a false opinion. Every perturbatio is 'animi motus uel rationis expers uel rationem aspernans uel rationi non oboediens.' Irrational emotions are related thus, §§ 24, 25:—

Perturbationes	{	boni	praesentis,	laetitia,	ἡδονή
			absentis,	cupiditas,	ἐπιθυμία
		ex opinione	{	praesentis,	aegritudo	λύπη
				absentis,	metus,	φόβος.

We must remove all these, and aegritudo now. Aegritudo is defined as 'opinio magni mali praesentis, et quidem recens opinio talis mali, ut in eo rectum uideatur esse angī, id autem est ut is qui doleat oportere opinetur se dolere.'

2. Analysis of the nature of aegritudo:—

It is—

(a) opinio magni mali praesentis, §§ 28-61.

The Epicureans held that this opinion was inevitably produced by every present great evil, the Cyrenaics only where such evil was unexpected. Cicero admits that the unexpected character of an evil tends to intensify the resulting annoyance, § 28.

Hence ills that have been anticipated by reflexion fall upon a man less heavily. Illustrations from the Telamon (?) of Ennius, from the Theseus of Euripides, from Anaxagoras, from the Phormio of Terence, §§ 28-30.

Cicero accepts from the Cyrenaics this principle of praemeditatio as a weapon against annoyance but sees in its effect a proof that annoyance is due to opinion, not, as they held, to inevitable necessity, § 31.

Of the Cyrenaics in more detail anon: the view of the Epicureans must first be dealt with. They held that where a man thinks himself to be in evil he must necessarily be in annoyance, even though the evil has been foreseen or is long-established. They even condemned the practice of anticipatory reflexion upon evils, which may or may not occur, as a gratuitous undertaking of additional annoyance, § 32.

There were, according to them, two means for the abatement of annoyance: (a) to call off the attention from the source of trouble; (b) to divert it to some pleasant thought such as might be supplied by memory or anticipation, § 33.

But they are wrong to reject praemeditatio rerum futurarum and their remedy, which consists in diverting the attention from the cause of annoyance, is useless, § 34.

Praemeditatio secures a double advantage: (a) by meditating upon the circumstances amid which we live a man performs the true duty of a philosopher; (b) when misfortunes confront a man he has a threefold consolation: (a) he has long anticipated the possibility of the occurrence; (β) he knows that the incidents of the human lot must be borne with resignation; (γ) he knows that there is no evil where there is no moral blame.

And who are the Epicureans to bid us ignore the annoyance at the very moment when it pierces us and yet deny us all healing influence from time? And, by the way, what are these good things to which they would call off our attention? § 35.

Here Cicero loses the thread of his subject in a tirade against the views of Epicurus, §§ 36-51.

Pythagoras or Socrates or Plato might well rouse a man who was thus succumbing to annoyance; they might bid him consider the four cardinal virtues in turn, but Epicurus bids us think of pleasures, and those pleasures the pleasures of sense. Epicureans need not deny it: the assertion is proved out of the mouth of their cleverest man, Zeno of Sidon, §§ 36-8, and from the work of Epicurus himself on the chief good, §§ 41-42.

A fine life they prescribe and fine reflexions they would provide for the solace of a Thyestes or an Aetes or a Telamon or a captive Andromache in distress, §§ 39, 40, 43-46.

Some may seek to defend Epicurus. It is true that he has uttered many noble sentiments, but his statement of the chief good is only too plain, c. 20, § 46.

It need not be urged that he places the essential cause of happiness in repose of mind. He contradicts himself, and he fails to distinguish between pleasure and absence of pain, and he separates pleasure from the chief good, § 47.

But it may be urged that he often praises virtue. What of that? C. Gracchus praised economy with regard to the public money. But look to his acts, which the story of Piso Frugi serves to illustrate. So Epicurus may assert that virtuous living is essential to happy living; he may deny that fortune has any power over the wise man; he may award the preference to frugal fare; he may assert that the wise man is at all times happy—all these utterances are inconsistent with his doctrine with regard to pleasure, §§ 48, 49.

Epicureans complain that this is to attack Epicurus in the spirit of a partisan. A very likely story! This is no exciting question and yet even exciting questions such as questions of war can be argued without acrimony, as the case of Cato and Lentulus shows, §§ 50, 51.

To return to the view of the Cyrenaics: they hold that where annoyance arises the occurrence which causes it is unexpected. This is an important point: and Chrysippus also holds that the blow is heavier where it is unexpected. But this is due to two causes: (a) the suddenness of the occurrence prevents us from rightly measuring its true dimensions: (b) the annoyance is increased by a feeling of self-accusation due to the idea that the occurrence might have been foreseen, § 52.

That this explanation is correct is shown by the case of enslaved captives: though their evils continue unchanged their annoyance is not only abated but in many instances removed by lapse of time. Examples are furnished by Carthaginians, Macedonians, Corinthians, § 53.

When Carthage was destroyed Clitomachus thought it necessary to console his fellow-countrymen with a book which we have read. Had he delayed the sending of it for a number of years there would have been no wounds to heal, § 54.

Accordingly it is not because they are unexpected that misfortunes loom large upon us but because they have newly occurred; quia recentia sunt maiora uidentur, non quia repentina, § 55.

There are two ways in which we may ascertain the real dimensions of a seeming evil (or a seeming good)—We may examine its real nature, take e.g. the case of poverty; or we may illustrate it from the behaviour of individual men, e.g. Socrates, Diogenes, Caecilius' philosopher in a mean cloak, Fabricius: such instances, when placed before us, gradually bring us to a perception of the true dimensions of the supposed evil (or good). And previous reflexion upon possible future evils brings about the same result as is produced by lapse of time: the true dimensions of the supposed evil are better seen, §§ 56-59.

Antiochus writes that Carneades used to blame Chrysippus for quoting from Euripides in illustration of the inevitability of pain and woe, asserting that such sentiments could only bring consolation to spiteful persons. But Cicero thinks otherwise, holding that the inevitability of the human lot forbids us to fight with the deity and that the citation of examples is calculated not to delight the spiteful but to bring people to resolve to endure what they find that many have endured, §§ 59-60.

Annoyance is a terrible thing, compare Chrysippus' derivation of the word λύπη, but it will be rooted out now that its cause is set forth. This cause is nothing else than opinio et iudicium magni praesentis et urgentis mali, § 61.

(b) aegritudo is intensified where to the idea of a great present evil is added the idea that it is our duty to be annoyed at what has occurred, §§ 62-74.

To this idea are due disgusting modes of displaying grief, tearing the cheeks, plucking out the hair; to the same idea is due the blame bestowed by others upon those who fail to display the expected measure of grief, e.g. the blame which Aeschines cast upon Demosthenes.

Owing to the same idea some, when in grief, rush to the desert; some become dumb, others rabid, hence the legends of Niobe and Hecuba; others, like the nurse in Ennius, tell their sorrows to the desert air, §§ 62, 63. And all act in these various ways because they think it is their duty to grieve. That this is so is shown by the fact that, if those in mourning forget their grief for a moment, they blame themselves for doing so and purposely recall their grief, and if children, in time of mourning, do not display the proper air of gloom their elders take measures to produce it artificially. Notice, too, the word 'decreui' in the play of Terence, a plain indication that grief is an evil voluntarily, and not inevitably, incurred. This fact explains why people can abstain from grief where the circumstances forbid it, e.g. where men are daily falling in numbers on the battle-field. It also explains why those who witnessed the murder of Pompey were able to make good their flight to Tyre before their grief burst forth, §§ 64-66. And just because grief is a voluntary matter nothing is more effective in bringing about its abandonment than the persuasion that it does no good. And, because grief is a voluntary matter and they have found that it does no good, men, who have suffered much, endure their woes with more patience, § 67.

The voluntary character of annoyance is further shown by the fact that though the greatest philosophers recognise that they are in a most evil state, since they are insipientes, inasmuch as they have not yet attained to perfect wisdom, they nevertheless do not lament because in their case there is no idea that it is a matter of duty to lament. The greatest philosophers, e.g. Aristotle and Theophrastus, have admitted that there was much that they did not know, §§ 68, 69.

Again where a man thinks it unmanly to mourn he proves able to abstain from mourning, §§ 70 fin., 71 init.

Even those who deny that any man would voluntarily give way to grief, and maintain that it is unavoidable, admit that men go further than is necessary in giving way to it, in other words they admit that a portion of it is voluntarily incurred, § 71 fin.

But there are motives which actually cause men voluntarily to incur grief:—

(α) the conception of an evil as of such magnitude that we must grieve;

(β) the idea that our mourning is acceptable to the dead;

(γ) the idea that the gods are pleased at our self-abasement beneath their stroke.

The inconsistency of these popular views is apparent from the fact that men are praised for meeting their own death calmly though they are blamed for taking that of another in the same way, for it is nonsense to suppose that anyone could love another more than himself, §§ 72, 73 init.

Objections are untenable: if some are not influenced by consolatory addresses this, so far from proving that their grief is not a matter of will, serves only to show that they have made up their minds to grieve. If some are too illogical to apply to their own case the good advice they give to others in distress (e.g. Oileus, § 71) they are not more inconsistent than misers who blame the avaricious or than ambitious men who condemn ambition. It is will that operates in all cases. Thus where grief seems healed by time it is really by reflexion, for which time has given opportunity, and not by time, that the cure is wrought. The Peripatetic theory of the mean cannot apply. For if grief is a matter of inevitable necessity why do they employ consolation? If, on the other hand, it is incurred by an act of will, why not root it out entirely? Cicero sums up the result of the enquiry as far as this point in the words 'satis dictum esse arbitror aegritudinem esse opinionem mali praesentis, in qua opinione illud insit ut aegritudinem suscipere oporteat,' §§ 73, 74.

(c) Lastly Cicero says that Zeno rightly adds to the definition of aegritudo the qualification that it be recens, this word not being limited to a strictly temporal meaning but applying so long as the belief in the evil retains fresh vigour and force. The grief of Artemisia, for instance, remained recens in this sense until she died through its effect, § 75.

II. The remedial treatment of annoyance, §§ 75–79 end.

Different remedies are put forward by different philosophers. Some combine all these remedies, since some are affected by one, some by another; this is the method adopted in Cicero's own Consolatio where he tried every possible remedy; still, as Prometheus says in Aeschylus, one must wait for a suitable opportunity for administering the proper treatment.

In administering consolation one will show that the evil is non-existent or very small; that it is incident to the human lot; that grieving over it is of no avail. Cleanthes' remedy which consisted in pointing out that there was no evil where there was no disgrace is not a practical one. His statement is not even always true; it was not true, for instance, when Alcibiades grieved because he did not possess virtue, §§ 77, 78.

To point out to a sufferer that his misfortune is a common one does not bring conviction in every case. The truest remedy, but one not easy to apply while the annoyance is at its height, is that of Chrysippus, which consists in convincing the sufferer that his grief is due to his own volition, and to an idea that it is demanded by duty. We must vary our mode of treatment according to the person treated, § 79.

EPILOGUE. The discussion has digressed from the original question which was "Is the wise man affected by annoyance?" Instead of dealing with that question we have discovered that the evil which is involved in annoyance results not from inevitable and necessary causes but from an act of will and erroneous opinion, § 80. Moreover we have dealt chiefly with one form of annoyance, grief for the dead (luctus), this being the severest of all its subdivisions, but the same treatment applies to all the rest, §§ 81-4.

BOOK IV

On the remaining irrational emotions

Abstract of contents:—

Introduction, §§ 1-7.

The theme for discussion, §§ 8-10.

Main Division A. Stoic division and definitions of the emotions, §§ 11-33.

B. Refutation of the Peripatetic defence of the emotions, §§ 34-57.

C. The treatment of the emotions, §§ 58-81.

Epilogue, §§ 82-4.

Introduction, §§ 1-7.

Our ancestors made early progress in constitutional development and in the military art, § 1; and Cicero sees reason for thinking that they had also acquired some knowledge of philosophy. His reasons are the following:—

(a) It is not likely that the early Romans were deaf to the doctrines of Pythagoras taught in Magna Graecia and widely celebrated, § 2.

(b) The fiction that Numa was a Pythagorean seems to indicate an early Roman admiration for the Pythagoreans.

(c) The Pythagoreans and the early Romans alike are said to have sung to instrumental accompaniment and the poem of Appius Caecus seems to show Pythagorean influence, §§ 2-4.

Though the Romans have been philosophic from of old, no Roman philosopher can be named before the age of Laelius and Scipio. When these were young men the embassy of Diogenes, Carneades (and Critolaus) was sent to Rome in 155 B.C., § 5.

The philosophy of the schools founded by Plato and Aristotle is hardly as yet represented in Latin literature, but the Epicurean writings of Amafinius have had much influence, § 6.

The theme for discussion, §§ 8-10.

The question for the day's discussion is "Is the wise man free from all irrational emotions?" Annoyance was disposed of the previous day; fear is so closely connected with annoyance that the same decision applies to each. Exultant joy and desire remain to be considered, § 8.

The Stoics give much attention to the classification and definition of the several emotions. The Peripatetics disregard this department and attend rather to the remedial treatment of the emotions. Cicero will deal with classification and division first, §§ 9, 10.

A. Stoic division and definitions of the emotions, §§ 11-33.

(a) Perturbatio and its genera and their subdivisions defined, §§ 11-22.

Zeno defines perturbatio as 'aversa a recta ratione contra naturam animi commotio.' There are four main divisions (cf. iii 11, 24 and table on p. xxxi), viz. desire and joy, annoyance and fear, § 11.

All perturbationes are due to a mental decision and to the forming of a mere opinion, § 14. The forming of such an opinion is a weak act of assent, § 15. Constantia is opposed to perturbatio, being a movement of the soul in accordance with reason (εὐπάθεια). The constantia opposed to desire is reasonable wish (uoluntas, βούλησις): to unrestrained mirth (laetitia gestiens) is opposed joy (gaudium, χαρά, εὖλογος ἔπαρσις), a tranquil movement; to fear (metus) is opposed prudence (cautio, εὐλάβεια); annoyance (aegritudo) has no constantia opposed to it, §§ 12-15.

Each separate perturbatio has its subdivisions, § 16.

Definitions of the several subdivisions of each perturbatio, §§ 17-21. The source of all irrational emotions is want of self-control (intemperantia, ἀκράτεια), § 22.

(b) Stoic comparison between diseases of the mind and diseases of the body, §§ 23-32.

Disordered states of the mind arise from the disturbing effect of emotions just as similar states of the body arise from corruption of blood, or redundancy of phlegm or bile.

From perturbationes spring diseased cravings (morbi) and vicious habits (aegrotationes, ἀρρώστηματα), and, as errors of an opposite kind, diseased aversions (offensiones). The Stoics, and especially Chrysippus, push this parallel between diseases of the body and those of the mind too far, § 23.

These morbi, aegrotationes and offensiones are illustrated in detail, §§ 24-7.

Further parallelism between the health of the body and that of the mind, §§ 27-8.

And, as in the body we find diseases, chronic ailing states and deformity, we find corresponding evils in the mind. Definition of uitiositas, §§ 28, 29.

And there is the same parallelism between good conditions of the mind and those of the body as there is in the case of evil conditions, §§ 30, 31.

They differ in this that the mind while sound cannot be assailed by disease but the body can, c. 14, § 31.

How the clever differ from the dull as regards the irrational emotions. Morbi and aegrotationes are more difficult to uproot than uitia animorum, § 32.

(c) Transition to the second division of the subject, § 33.

B. Refutation of the Peripatetic defence of the emotions, §§ 34-57.

Virtue being a settled and laudable state of the mind, giving rise to good desires and actions, and its opposite uitiositas, which the Greeks call κακία, giving rise to irrational and disturbing desires, the only method of getting rid of these evil results is to be found in virtue, § 34.

Nothing can be more wretched and revolting than the sight of a man who is the slave of an emotion, for instance, of fear (like Tantalus): and foolish men are always such; emotions like desire and exultation are just as foolish; the only person who is free from them all is the wise man, §§ 35, 36.

The wise man free from these disturbing emotions is certainly happy. How can he be mistaken in his judgment of the importance of any event who has studied the constitution of things and is on guard against surprise? His keen vision sees that the only home of peace is a quiet mind, free from disturbing emotion, while a mind ill at ease loses its health, §§ 37, 38.

How then can the Peripatetics adopt the effeminate view that a certain limited amount of emotion is necessary to man? The emotions are all contrary to reason, and nothing that is so can be tolerated.

Besides no limit is possible. One may under a single misfortune give way to emotion, and if misfortune be repeated the emotion will increase till it passes all bounds, §§ 39, 40. To try to set a limit to what is in itself a utium is to try to stop oneself in mid air after leaping from a cliff; a mind once upon the downward track will go on; the disease will increase; without reason the mind has no strength; it is no protection against vice to be moderately vicious, §§ 41, 42.

Besides the Peripatetics declare the emotions to possess a certain utility; (a) anger, for instance, whets the courage of warriors and inspires orators; a man who cannot be angry is no man; (b) Themistocles was roused to energy by jealousy of Miltiades; (c) even philosophers have a greed for knowledge; (d) annoyance has its moral uses when men are annoyed at their own faults—and so they argue about (e) pity, envy, fear and all the rest, of which they approve in moderation, §§ 41-46.

Cicero is not going to join in the bout of sparring between the Peripatetics and the Stoics, the only question being for an impartial enquirer "What is the true definition of perturbatio?" Can a better than that of Zeno be found, "an unnatural movement of the mind away from right reason"? Cicero now takes the Peripatetics up point by point: (a) Anger: to say that a man cannot be brave unless he is angry is to degrade a brave man to the level of the gladiator in Lucilius. Was not Ajax joyful instead of angry when he challenged Hector, as is apparent from their colloquy before their duel? The bravery of Torquatus, Marcellus, Africanus, Hercules borrowed nothing from anger. Bravery is the deliberate judgment of the mind that death and pain are to be despised and endured: anger is a kind of madness, as much akin to valour as is drunkenness. The definitions of bravery given by Sphaerus and Chrysippus support this view (the Stoics are right when they say that all but the wise are mad). Again, anger can hardly be said to be of use in domestic life. It is true that an orator or a poet may simulate anger, but that is a different thing; (b) Greed: to say that philosophers are greedy for knowledge is an abuse of language; (c) Annoyance: the moral uses of annoyance have nothing to do with a wise man; (d) Pity, jealousy and the rest are similarly useless; a wise man should help, not pity, and there is little utility in envy and jealousy, §§ 47-56.

If a man has any of these vices even to a slight degree he is so far to be blamed, and cannot be called a wise man; the only safe remedy is not to prune but to eradicate, § 57.

C. The treatment of the emotions, §§ 58-81.

Cicero is not sure that the friend who laid down the general proposition of § 8 may not, under the guise of an abstract discussion, be anxious for some personal guidance ; and happily nature has provided a remedy for moral as well as bodily disorders, § 58.

There are many methods of dealing with mental disturbance : one may either argue the general question whether one ought ever to allow his mind to be disturbed, or the particular question whether the patient has in a given instance any adequate reason for disturbing his mind : the former is the better course, as it can be applied to all cases. One may then show (a) that the object of fear or annoyance is not an evil or the object of desire and delight not a good ; or (b) that a state of mental disturbance is in itself vicious, unnatural and unnecessary. Even those who will not yield to argument (a) may still be persuaded to moderate their emotions, and it must be admitted with regard to (b) that it is not always successful or of general utility. Different arguments must of course be used with those whose annoyance proceeds from consciousness of a lack of virtue and desire to obtain it: but the view that emotion (whatever be our view as to the value of the exciting cause) is inconsistent with the grave and serious character of a philosopher ought to be admitted universally, §§ 59-61.

In dealing with libido or desire, even for virtue, one ought to deal not with the value of the object desired, but dwell upon the effects which this emotion produces in the mind; aegritudo or annoyance can be cured by a consideration of the universal lot, though this point has been dealt with in the previous book and in the Consolatio. Fear (an uneasy emotion with regard to the future as annoyance is with regard to the present) may be dispelled by the consideration (a) of its debasing effect upon the character; (b) of the harmless nature of the chief objects of fear, pain and death, which have been dealt with in Books I and II, §§ 62-64.

Cicero now passes to the emotions caused by supposed goods, i.e. delight and desire. Here again the preferable method is to show, not that the supposed goods are not real goods but that these emotions, even if the objects of them be granted to be good, must not be carried to excess (immoderate laughter ex. gr. is offensive) and are as vicious in their own way as their opposites, §§ 65-67.

A special case of the emotion of delight is the passion of love, the most unworthy of all emotions. The poets praise it and attribute it to the gods, and even philosophers have been found to patronize it: the former even have praised unnatural vice. Stoic philosophers speak of a kind of love which is a mere overture for friendship inspired by the sight of beauty; if there be such an emotion it is harmless and calls for no cure; but the passion as ordinarily conceived is more akin to madness and is so represented by the poets, §§ 68-74.

Here the proper course is either to show (a) the trivial character of the pleasure aimed at, or (b) to inspire the lover with other interests, or (c) to get rid of one passion by means of another, or (d) to show that the passion is really insane and disgusting, and in any case a voluntary and not a necessary affection, §§ 75, 76.

Anger is still more clearly a form of insanity; here the patient is to be treated by the withdrawal of the object of his anger, or by being induced to defer its satisfaction, as Archytas voluntarily did, §§ 77, 78. How absurd then is the view that anger is either natural or useful! If the former, all men would be equally angry, and no one need ever repent of its results as did Alexander: like other emotions it is purely voluntary and proceeds from a false estimate of the value of objects; like other emotions it may be cured, and it is true of it as of the others that some men are naturally prone to it, and if it be not checked in time it becomes incurable, §§ 79-81.

EPILOGUE. The four days' discussion has shown that next to the knowledge of final good and ill there is nothing more useful than the discussion of such subjects. It has been shown (a) that death, and (b) that pain are to be despised and endured, (c) that annoyance, and (d) that all emotions are evil and can be cured. Annoyance is perhaps worse than the others and so has been treated in a separate book; but they are all effects of wrong judgment and can be cured, nor while they remain uncured can we be really happy or of sound mind, §§ 82-4.

BOOK V

Virtue is sufficient for a happy life.

Abstract of Contents:—

Introduction, §§ 1-11.

The theme for discussion, §§ 12-14.

Proof of the proposition, §§ 15-82.

A. The proof in syllogistic form, §§ 15-20.

B. Detailed consideration of various arguments, §§ 21-82.

The proposition true from the standpoint of all philosophers, §§ 83-118.

Epilogue, §§ 119-121.

Introduction, §§ 1-11.

The consideration of the fifth day's subject, the self-sufficiency of virtue to ensure happiness, must end the discussions; this thesis, though difficult to prove, is the most important message of philosophy; the desire to secure happiness gave rise to philosophical speculation, and if happiness is to be secured by philosophy, who would not be a philosopher? If virtue cannot secure happiness amid the accidents of fortune we must despair, as Cicero confesses he sometimes does himself, of ever attaining it. Our bodies are so subject to disease and pain that one sometimes fears the mind must necessarily be subject to a similar fortune ; this fear proceeds from a distrust of the power of virtue, which can raise us above all accidents of life and fate, by giving us true views of the world, §§ 1-4.

Philosophy alone can correct our mistaken views and ensure our happiness. Cicero breaks into an impassioned apostrophe of the philosophy which has created society, literature and civilization ; whose precepts make a moment of time more precious than immortality ; which has destroyed the fear of death. But in spite of such services to man, it is not merely neglected but despised and its history forgotten.

Though the word philosophy is new, the subjects it deals with are old : the Seven Wise Men, Lycurgus and others were philosophers in fact though not in name, the name being coined by Pythagoras who considered the contemplation of nature the most liberal pursuit, and the knowledge of it the most precious possession : he advanced the study of science and applied it in the public and private life of Magna Graecia. Until Socrates philosophers studied merely geometry, arithmetic, physics, astronomy ; Socrates was the first to study moral science ; his dialectical skill and intellectual power can be seen in the dialogues of Plato ; he was the real founder of the Academic method, of which Carneades was the most celebrated exponent, to which Cicero will adhere in this discussion—the method of suspension of judgment and refusal to dogmatize, §§ 7-11.

The theme for discussion, §§ 12-14.

The proposition is laid down by one of the company that virtue is not sufficient to ensure a life of happiness. From this Cicero strongly dissents ; he asserts that virtue is sufficient to ensure a life of goodness, rectitude, and honour and that such a life is a happy life. His opponent retorts that a man may live such a life and yet be unhappy, if for example he is subjected to torture. Cicero refuses to believe that happiness will not unite itself to the company of the virtues even though they be in the hands of the torturer. The reply of his opponent is a refusal to be put off with Stoic figures of speech ; he demands that leaving abstractions aside Cicero should deal with the facts of life and with the dictates of common sense which declares that pain and happiness are incompatible. This Cicero promises to do though denying the right of his opponent to prescribe the method of proof to be adopted, §§ 12-14.

Proof of the Proposition that Virtue is Sufficient for a Happy Life, §§ 15-82.

A. The proof in syllogistic form, §§ 15-20.

If the results arrived at in the discussions of the preceding days are valid (as they admittedly are) then the matter is easily disposed of; for, (1) men who are under the influence of such emotions as fear, annoyance, lust, etc. are unhappy; (2) men who are subject to none of these are tranquil and therefore happy; (3) this tranquillity is produced by virtue; therefore virtue is in itself sufficient to produce happiness, §§ 15-17; Cicero's opponent admits the premiss that freedom from emotion and passion produces happiness, while he also grants that the further premiss that the wise man is free from emotion and passion has been proved on the preceding days, and it seems as if there were no more to be said, § 17.

But Cicero admits that a proof by axioms, after the style of geometers and Stoics, is unsatisfactory in a philosophical discussion which requires and is conceded, even by the Stoics, a broader treatment. Besides, the conclusion is too important to be dismissed so briefly; happiness, which even Xerxes with all his power and wealth could not secure, must be put beyond the reach of doubt, §§ 18-20.

B. Detailed consideration of various arguments, §§ 21-82.

Cicero's opponent here declares himself ready to admit the logical validity of the two positions (a) The only good is what is honestum, therefore virtue produces happiness, and (b) A happy life consists in virtue, therefore virtue is the only good; but he objects that other philosophers, such as Aristus and Antiochus, hold the existence of other goods than virtue. Cicero's reply is that the question of the agreement with their own premisses displayed in the conclusions of others must be discussed elsewhere; he has discussed the matter with the philosophers named; his own position was, and is, that if bodily infirmities and misfortune be evil, then since the wise man can be subject to such things, and no man can be happy surrounded by evils, it is possible for the wise man not to be happy. Antiochus holds that while such things are evils yet happiness (like most words of the kind) is a relative term, and that a man may be happy, even though he is subject to some evils. Since Cicero will not go into the question at this stage he contents himself with saying that he cannot conceive degrees of happiness, nor can he see how, if of the three kinds of evils (bodily, external and moral) a man is subject to the first two, he can be described even as relatively happy, §§ 21-23. Theophrastus, he proceeds (still labouring the digression), felt the difficulty; admitting the existence of external and bodily evils, he could not take a very lofty tone ; he is blamed for this, but he has at least the merit of consistency ; he is universally blamed also for his view that fortune, not philosophy, is the mistress of human life ; but here again he is quite consistent. Why should we imitate the inconsistencies of Epicurus who holds both that pleasure is the only good, and that abstemiousness is praiseworthy ; that pleasure is happiness and yet that no one can be happy who does not live virtuously ; that pain is the greatest, nay the only evil, and yet that fortune has little to do with the wise man ? Metrodorus too defies fortune in language which might become Zeno or Aristo but is inconsistent in the mouth of a follower of Epicurus, §§ 24-27. Uneducated persons are taken in by the language of these men but a trained mind detects their inconsistency. Cicero's own position (the good are always happy) is, however, free from this reproach ; by the good (or the wise) he means those equipped with all virtue ; by happiness he means the full possession of all good and the exclusion of all evil ; it is necessary then to deny the existence of any good except goodness, or virtue ; pain, poverty, slavery may befall the wise man, but as they are not evils they cannot interfere with his happiness. Philosophers like Aristotle and others who hold misfortunes to be evils are then inconsistent when they say that the wise man is always happy. If they wish to deserve the honourable name of philosophers they should despise misfortune and seek happiness within ; but they must not adopt at once the language of the crowd and of philosophy ; this is to be as inconsistent as Epicurus who speaks as if he did not understand his own theories, §§ 28-31.

Cicero's opponent here interjects that, though all this is plausible, it is entirely inconsistent with the statement in the Fourth Book of the De Finibus that Zeno differs from the Peripatetics only in terminology ; if this be so why should they not be allowed to use the same language in regard to virtue in its relation to happiness ? Cicero protests strongly against an Academic being tied down to previous statements, and points out that in any case he is at present only concerned with the mere question of logical validity. If Brutus (for instance) wishes as a Peripatetic to hold that the wise man is always happy that is his own affair ; and Cicero only differs from him in holding that the wise man is always absolutely happy, §§ 32-34 init.

Besides, if Zeno be a parvenu in philosophy, one can go back to Plato for the truth of the Stoic position : Plato makes Socrates in the Gorgias identify happiness with virtue and in the Epitaphios he lays stress upon the self-dependence of the wise man and his superiority to external fortune or misfortune. It is entirely upon the authority of Plato that Cicero will rely, §§ 34-36.

Where then must we search for our premisses? Clearly in nature, which aims in everything at self-development and perfection. This is true not only of the vegetable, but specially of the animal, world; every species remains true to its own natural development; and much more of man, whose principle of development is the divine principle of reason, whose cultivation brings enlightenment and whose perfection is virtue: and since to be perfect is to be happy, then all virtuous men are happy. So far the Peripatetics go: but Cicero goes farther and holds this happiness to be absolute, since happiness which cannot be depended upon to continue is not happiness at all, and if there be such goods as bodily and external goods (upon which no one can depend) real happiness is unattainable; the happiness which such goods confer is like the merchant's fortune tied to his rigging—nothing that may be lost can confer happiness. True happiness is at once indefectible and complete, just like courage (ex. gr.) which fears, not little, but nothing. Such happiness is impossible if there be any good but virtue, the only possession which confers confidence and independence; the virtuous man is like the Lacedemonian state which no threat could terrify nor death dismay—such fortitude combined with self-control is of the essence of virtue, §§ 37-42.

If it be true, as it is, that fancied goods and fancied evils produce mental disturbance at variance with reason, must not the man who is free from these be happy? The wise man who is always free from them is therefore always happy. Further every good gives pleasure; what gives pleasure is to be well spoken of, and what is to be well spoken of is glorious and so praiseworthy, that is to say virtuous or honestum, and therefore 'the good' is identical with virtue: but no one would call an external good honestum, such a 'good' therefore is not 'the good.' Must not a man in possession of all possible external goods be wretched if he is unjust, intemperate or cowardly; how then can such things which cannot confer happiness be called good? A happy life must be homogeneous, it cannot admit of anything but what is good. The good is an object of desire, and therefore of approbation, and of worth and deserving of praise; nothing but virtue is such, §§ 43-45.

We must abandon this view if other things are to be called good: if riches, birth, popularity, beauty are goods, philosophers are no better than the crowd. The Stoics call such things 'objects of preference' (producta, praecipua) but not 'goods' and not capable of producing happiness: even the Peripatetics admit they do not confer absolute happiness, the only happiness we are concerned with. A man is what he feels; what a man says, he is; his life is as his doctrines; a good man's feelings are praiseworthy, so is his life and therefore his life, being praiseworthy, is virtuous. A good man's life then is happy. What else has all that has been said been intended to prove? How can a man be good whose feelings and acts do not proceed from what is praiseworthy? What can be praiseworthy but virtue? Virtue therefore ensures happiness, §§ 46-48.

We may reach the same conclusion by another line of reasoning. In a wretched life (or in one that is neither happy nor wretched) there is nothing praiseworthy, nothing to be well spoken of. There must be some kind of life in which there is something of this kind; a happy life is such, for there is nothing to be well spoken of but happiness; but unless a virtuous life be a happy one there is something better than happiness (virtue of course being better)—an absurd conclusion: and if vice produces misery why should its opposite not produce the opposite? Is not this the real teaching of Critolaus' illustration of the balance? Why, if he admits virtue to be so superior to everything else, does he not admit its power to confer absolute happiness? Annoyance produces fear and servility of mind—the opposite of the freedom conferred by virtue; if virtue produces a good, i.e. a brave and lofty, life it must produce a happy life, free from regret, abundant, unhampered and (unlike the life of the foolish man) contented, §§ 49-54.

Was not Laelius, who was virtuous and wise, happier than Cinna, though the latter was consul four times and Laelius only once? There are of course men who would prefer to be Cinna; but can a man like Cinna, stained with the murder of Octavius, Crassus, Caesar and others, be called happy? He was wretched, not merely because he was a murderer, but because he had the heart of a murderer. Was Marius not happier when he shared his glory with Catulus than when, without a rival, he gave orders to murder him? Of the two Catulus was happier even in death than the man who stained his glory and his last days with crime, §§ 54-56.

Dionysius of Syracuse, though temperate and energetic, was malicious and unjust and, so, miserable; in spite of his birth, high position and crowds of favourites he practically lived in a prison owing to his suspicion of everyone, even of his two wives; a boy who made a harmless jest was executed on suspicion of having meant more than he said. The episode of Damocles showed what value Dionysius set upon his own happiness: yet so deeply was he involved in evil that he could not extricate himself even if he wished. True friendship was denied him; his artistic and musical, even his literary, talent could find no satisfaction; he had to pass his life in the company of barbarians and ruffians, §§ 57-63.

To compare the life of a Plato or an Archytas with his would be absurd. Archimedes, the mathematician of Syracuse, is a better parallel.

Even the site of Archimedes' grave had been forgotten until Cicero discovered it when he was a quaestor at Syracuse; yet what cultivated man would not prefer his life to that of Dionysius?—the one exercised his mind and reason in scientific investigation, the other in murder. What wealth or power can compare with the life of a philosopher, who enjoys the exercise of the best part of his nature, and is happy because he is virtuous? §§ 64–67. But more cogent arguments can be advanced: let us call up in imagination the character of the man distinguished for virtue, intellect and mental energy, full of zeal for knowledge of nature, of the laws of conduct and of thought: can we imagine any greater pleasure than such a person derives from the study and contemplation of nature as seen in the heavens, in the facts of biology or physics? He is led on from these to the realization of the truth of the Delphic maxim, "Know thyself," and to imitation of the gods who are the upholders of the order of the universe. What peace and joy, what independence of mind and feeling, are the result! He understands what virtue is and how to live virtuously and happily; his trained mind is incapable of yielding to false appearances. If he should engage in public life, his knowledge and justice benefit the community; he enjoys the blessings of friendship. What life can be happier? Is not such virtue identical with happiness? §§ 68–72.

If Epicurus, who places all pleasure in sensation, can claim that the wise man under the most cruel torments will smile at them with contempt, what is to be said of the really wise man who is armed against bodily pain by the virtues of firmness and fortitude, and has not to depend in his pain merely upon the memory of past pleasures? If Epicurus can take up this position why may not the Peripatetics? For even granting their doctrine of the existence of other goods than virtue, provided these others are allowed to be inferior to virtue, the virtuous man should be supremely happy. Is pain to affright a philosopher, who, as we have seen, is superior to the fear of death and other disturbing feelings? Even youths in Sparta treat it with contempt; Indian sages are superior to heat and cold; widows in India are not afraid to be burned along with a dead husband; the superstitious Egyptian would endure any torture rather than injure one of his sacred animals; even brutes despise cold and hunger and will die for their young; ambition and love lead men to endure anything, §§ 73–79.

The fact is that happiness and virtue are inseparable, and even pain and torture cannot effect their divorce: the virtuous man has nothing to regret, his every action is noble and right, he is proof against the surprises of fortune, he is stable and independent. Nothing can confer greater happiness than this. The Stoics define the final good as a life in harmony with nature ; such a life is the duty of the wise man and is possible for him, and therefore happiness is within his reach. Nothing more can be said about happiness than this, §§ 80-82 init.

Cicero's opponent grants the validity of the argument so far ; but he would like Cicero to develop a statement made during his argument (in § 75) that even the Peripatetics should admit that the wise man was supremely happy ; he is not sure that this would be consistent with their main position, § 82.

The proposition true from the standpoint of all philosophers, §§ 83-118.

Cicero promises, availing himself of the liberty accorded him as a member of the New Academy, leaving the Stoic view aside (which, as has been sufficiently demonstrated, supports his conclusion), to prove the consistency of his thesis with the doctrine of the good held by rival schools, §§ 83, 84 init.

The philosophic schools may be divided into two classes, according as they regard the chief good as (a) simple, or (b) composite: (a) to the first class belong the Stoics (whose chief good is virtue), the Epicureans (pleasure), the school of Hieronymus (absence of pain), the school of Carneades (enjoyment of naturae prima bona) ; (b) to the second class belong the Peripatetics and Old Academy (who divide the good into bona animi, bona corporis and bona externa) ; the followers of Dinomachus and Callipho (pleasure and virtue) ; the followers of Diodorus (virtue and absence of pain). The schools of Aristo, Pyrrho and Erillus are out of date, §§ 84, 85.

These are now taken one by one : (a) The Peripatetics, who assert that the animi bona are immeasurably superior to the other two, can assent to the view expounded by Cicero, by regarding the absence of the bona corporis and bona externa as negligible or by understanding "happy" to mean "happy multo maiore ex parte." (β) The followers of Callipho and Diodorus can speak of virtue as producing happiness because they admit virtue to be immeasurably preferable to pleasure and absence of pain. (γ) The Epicureans and the followers of Hieronymus and Carneades will be harder put to it, yet even they will admit that the mind being judge for itself of what is good and bad can rise superior to mere appearances, §§ 85-88.

If the truth of our position can be proved even from the premisses of Epicurus it must be admitted to be consistent with the premisses of all the others. Now Epicurus proclaims his indifference to death (for as it means annihilation it need not concern us) and to pain (which can be relieved either by recollections of past pleasure or by the thought that severe pain cannot last, while pain which lasts cannot be severe). No philosopher takes up a nobler position in regard to these two sources of unhappiness. What about poverty? Epicurus is an adherent of the simple life; and indeed a man who keeps far from him the passions which money is required to gratify has no need of money. Anacharsis the Scythian might be an example to Greek and Roman philosophers in this respect; and all might imitate with advantage the contempt for wealth that was displayed by Socrates, Xenocrates and Diogenes, §§ 88-92.

Epicurus' division of the desires into (a) those natural and necessary, (b) those natural and unnecessary, (c) those neither natural nor necessary, while not very scientific, is useful: for (a) the first class are satisfied with next to nothing, (b) the second class are more or less a matter of indifference, and (c) the third class should not be satisfied at all. On these points the Epicureans point out that ex. gr. the passion of love, which falls under the second class, can be gratified easily and easily done without; and Epicurus' doctrine of the wisdom of enduring pain in the hope of securing greater future pleasure, and of the function of the mind in deciding what pleasure is, makes it possible for the wise man to be perpetually happy, at any rate with the help of recollection and anticipation, §§ 93-96.

This has its bearing upon the gratification of appetite; hunger and thirst make anything sweet; exercise produces a healthy appetite, the gratification of which gives pleasure even though the food be coarse, as we see in the case of the Spartans and Persians; simple fare and abstinence ensure health, and consequently pleasure; on the other hand rich food and gluttony produce discomfort and disease, as the anecdotes told of Timotheus and Plato show. A Sardanapallus was little better than a brute, §§ 97-101. Nor is wealth required for the satisfaction of the artistic tastes, which are gratified not by possession of works of art but by contemplation of them, § 102.

Again obscurity or unpopularity need not cause unhappiness. Men like Demosthenes or Democritus should be above the judgment of the vulgar, as even a flute blower is in the practice of his profession. A community often hates or neglects its most eminent citizen, as the people of Ephesus and of Athens did in the cases of Hermodorus and Aristides: a life of ease and contemplation is better than a public career after all, §§ 103-105.

Many men fear exile, unreasonably; but its usual cause, unpopularity, and its frequent concomitant, poverty, have been already shown to be of no consequence, and merely to be absent from one's country is not a misfortune; many go abroad for gain, many philosophers to acquire knowledge—if one is exiled for crime that is a different matter. A philosopher is equally at home in every place where he is well off. Of this history furnishes many examples, §§ 106-109.

The best antidote to annoyance is a mind pleasantly occupied, as Epicurus teaches. Such a mind is unaffected even by the awful calamity of blindness, which might seem to deprive us of the noblest sense. A philosopher can meditate in the dark, witness the examples of Diodotus and Democritus: Homer was blind and yet how lifelike are his descriptions; if Polyphemus bewails his blindness to the ram, it is because the one was no more a philosopher than the other, §§ 113-115.

Deafness, again, which is reckoned a misfortune, is what we all suffer from (in a sense) without pain; for everyone is deaf in respect of a language he does not understand; and if a deaf man misses music, he misses along with it many unpleasant sounds, and he can always converse with himself, § 116.

If, finally, a man is overwhelmed with all these at once, the remedy is in his own hands—he need not continue to live; like a guest at a banquet unable to partake of the good cheer he had better depart at once. Epicurus and Hieronymus both sanction this remedy, §§ 117, 118.

EPILOGUE. If Epicurus, to whom virtue is an empty name, can say what he does of the happiness of the philosopher, why should not the followers of Socrates and Plato who lay so much stress upon virtue in comparison with everything else say at least as much? After all, the difference between the Stoics and the Peripatetics is a mere matter of terminology.

The five days' discussion being now over, Cicero promises to write an account of them in five books which he will dedicate to Brutus in the hope that they may confer upon others the same comfort that the discussion has brought to himself, §§ 119-121.

THE SOURCES OF BOOKS III—V.

BOOK III.

The most divergent views have been propounded as to Cicero's sources for this book. Posidonius, Chrysippus, Crantor, Antiochus, Philo have each been named as Cicero's principal authorities, though the possibility of his having used such subsidiary sources as Panaetius, Plato and Dicaearchus is admitted even by those who hold to the doctrine of one main and principal authority.

It is hardly necessary to criticize each of these views in detail: it will be sufficient to give the main grounds upon which the claims of each authority have been urged, and develop any necessary criticism of them in the analysis which follows.

TABLE OF THE PERTURBATIONES AND THEIR EFFECTS, TO ILLUSTRATE IV 5, 11 ff.

		maledolentia [ἐπιχαλεμακεία] delectatio [κῆλησις] iacctio (et similia)		morbi (νοσήματα)		avaritia [φιλοχρηματία] gloriae cupiditas [φιλοστύμια] (ambitio) multitrositas (φιλοστυμνία) [λαγυρία] peruicacia [προσπάθεια] ligurritio [γαστριμαργία] uinulentia [οἰνοφλυγία] cuppedia [φιλοψία] (et similia)
		ira [ὄργη] excandescencia (θύμωσις) odium [μῆνις] inimicitia [μίσος, κόρος] discordia indigentia [σπάρσις] desiderium [πῶθος, ἕμερος] (et similia)		quae inueterata fiunt
		inuidentia [φθόνος] aemulatio [ἐγγίλος] obrectatio (σηλοστυπία) misericordia [ἐλεος] angor [ἄχθος] luctus [πένθος] maeror [ἄχος] aerumna [δδύνη] dolor lamentatio [γῶθος, κλαυσις] sollicitudo [φροντισ] molestia [ἀνία] adfectatio [ἐνόχλησις, ἄσχη] desperatio [ἀθυμία] (et similia)		quae inueterata fiunt		offensiones [προσοκοπαί] odium mulierum [μισογυνία] odium generis humani [μισανθρωπία] inhospitalitas
		pigritia [ὄκνος] pudor [ἀσχηδύνη] terror [ἐκπληξίς] timor [δέτιμα] pauor [δέος] exanimatio [ἀγωνία] conturbatio [θόρυβος] formido [ὀρρώδια]		quae inueterata fiunt
		laetitia [ἠδονή] (iuoluptas) [opp. to gaudium [χαρά]] libido [ἐπιθυμία] [opp. to iuluntas (βουλήσις)] metus [φόβος] [opp. to cautio [εὐλάβεια]] aegritudo [ἀσθη]

PERTURBATIONES
(παθή)
oriuntur

Greek words within round brackets are given in the text : the rest are supplied from the sources mentioned in the commentary.

R. Hirzel (Untersuchungen zu Ciceros philosophischen Schriften, iii, pp. 414 ff.), rejecting the views of Poppelreuter (Quae ratio intercedat inter Posidonii περὶ παθῶν πραγματείας et Tusc. Disp. Ciceronis, Bonn, 1883), who claims Posidonius as the source, and of Heine (Einleitung p. xxi) and Zietzschmann (De Tusc. Disp. fontibus, Halle, 1868), who hold that Chrysippus was the source, argues in favour of the view that Cicero derived his material and method of treatment from Philo. He puts aside possible claims in favour of Panaetius and of Antiochus, of the former on the ground that he admits "naturgemässe Lust" in opposition to the view championed by Cicero, and of the latter on the ground that though noted for his Stoic leanings and quoted incidentally on a particular point by Cicero (25, 59) he would not have subscribed to Cicero's polemic against the Peripatetics. The claims of Posidonius are easily disposed of, as the view of the origin of the emotions apparently taken by Cicero is opposed to all that Galen tells us of his doctrines in the fourth and fifth books of his "De placitis Hippocratis et Platonis" (pp. 330 ff. ed. Müller). Hirzel also claims that the known views of Chrysippus on the proper method of curing the πάθη and of the value of time as a remedial agent are inconsistent with the possibility of any work of his being the authority upon which Cicero relied. He takes the general tone of the treatment to be evidence that a writer of sceptical tendencies was the source. This consideration combined with the marked Stoic leanings shown in the book points to Philo as the writer upon whom Cicero relied.

Buresch (Consolationum a Graecis Romanisque scriptarum Historia Critica in Leipziger Studien ix pp. 1-170) considers that Cicero relied upon Crantor and the other writers whom he had consulted in writing his Consolatio, with occasional reference to Dicaearchus, Chrysippus and others. He regards the following passages as either due directly to Crantor or repeated from the Consolatio (1, 2; 6, 12; 13, 28, 29; 14, 30; 16, 34; 22, 54; 24, 58; 26, 63; 28, 66; 28, 70, 71; 30, 73; 31, 76).

Pohlenz, in his article in Hermes (xli pp. 321-355, Das Dritte und Vierte Buch der Tusculanen), finds much in the book to point to Chrysippus as the source or to be at least not inconsistent with his views, while there are some points in which his doctrines are in contradiction to those expounded by Cicero. This latter he holds to be perhaps most distinctly the case in regard to the question of the effect of time upon the cure of aegritudo (cf. 22, 54; 24, 58; 30, 74 with the sketch of Chrysippus' opinions given in Galen op. cit. pp. 394 ff.). It is however possible, according to Pohlenz, that Cicero while holding in the main to Chrysippus slurred over (as indeed Chrysippus himself may have done) the critical point upon which Posidonius (as quoted by Galen l.c.) afterwards laid so much stress. It is possible that Cicero may have been indebted to Antiochus, who defended Chrysippus against Posidonius, for some hints on the treatment of the subject.

J. von Arnim (Stoicorum ueterum fragmenta i, pp. xx ff.) draws attention to the confused and inconsistent treatment of the natural causes of perturbationes and of their cure, as also of the criticism of the Cyrenaics and Epicureans. He regards the crucial question to be whether §§ 28 ff. are to be referred to Chrysippus or to Posidonius and decides in favour of the latter, partly on the ground that the importance given by Cicero to praemeditatio seems more consistent with the general position taken up by Posidonius. On the other hand §§ 24, 25, which are inconsistent with Posidonius' views, are to be referred to some authority who tried to mediate between the rival views of Zeno and Chrysippus, traces of the same authority being also seen in §§ 28, 52, 58, 59 and 62. This authority is most probably Antiochus.

Kühner (Prolegomena, p. 7, to his edition of the Tusculan Disputations, Hanover, 1874) regards Chrysippus' treatise περὶ παθῶν as the source not only of Cicero's description of the passions but of his quotations from Euripides and Anaxagoras. He allows the translation of Epicurus περὶ τέλους in 18, 41 f. to be Cicero's own and thinks he may also owe something to Cleanthes, Crantor, Clitomachus and Antiochus.

Philipp Finger (Die beiden Quellen des III Buches der Tusculanen Ciceros in Philologus LXXXIV pp. 51 ff. and pp. 320 ff.) finds two sources for this book, one a Stoic, and the other the eclectic Antiochus. He divides the book between them as follows: §§ 28–31 Stoic criticism of the Cyrenaics; §§ 32–37 Stoic criticism of the Epicureans; §§ 38–51 criticism of the Epicureans after Antiochus, §§ 52–61 criticism of the Cyrenaics according to Antiochus, §§ 62–71 after Antiochus, §§ 72–84 from the Stoic standpoint. He finds clear evidence of Antiochus being followed in the paragraphs assigned to him above; in ex. gr. § 47 'uirtus maxime expetatur' and § 50 'mihī summum in animo bonum uidetur,' where an orthodox Stoic would have said 'uirtus sola' and 'solum bonum'; again in § 58 'intellecto eo, quod rem continet, illud malum quod opinatum sit esse maximum nequaquam esse tantum ut uitam beatam possit euertere' contains, he says, the kernel of the teaching of Antiochus in opposition to that of the Stoics whose view was 'nullum malum nisi culpa.' The Stoic source he believes to have been Posidonius, the Stoic sections of this book being a faithful reflexion of the teaching of Posidonius as reported by Seneca, Epp. 87, 31 ff. The dualistic psychology of Posidonius which appears in the introduction to the book (ex. gr. § 11, cf. iv, § 34) has neither in Cicero nor in Seneca any influence upon his teaching with regard to the moral character of the πάθη. Finger however admits the difficulty of coming to a definite conclusion in regard to many phrases, as Cicero evidently made an attempt to cover up the fact that his sources were at variance on important points.

The two principal philosophical questions discussed in the book are (a) the nature of the perturbatio (πάθος) known as aegritudo (λύπη) and (b) the proper method of its treatment. Cicero defines aegritudo in 11, 25 as 'opinio magni mali praesentis, et quidem recens opinio talis mali ut in eo rectum uideatur esse анги.' This definition must be interpreted however in the light of the general definition of perturbatio given in the preceding paragraph, 'animi motus uel rationis expers uel rationem aspernans uel rationi non oboediens, isque motus aut boni aut mali opinione citetur.' According to this general definition a perturbatio is a motus animi which takes its rise in an opinio: while according to the special definition of aegritudo this particular perturbatio is an opinio. This apparent looseness or inconsistency of expression is characteristic of the whole book: it is one thing to say of perturbationes that 'causa omnis in opinione est,' it is another to say that every perturbatio is an opinio; and yet the expressions are used interchangeably by Cicero: examples of the former are to be found in 12, 26 (where 'in opinione mali' must be interpreted by 'tumor animi' preceding, though in 28, 71 in opinione is used in a context which belongs to the other definition); 29, 72 'sed plures sunt causae suscipiendi doloris. primum illa opinio mali, quo uiso atque persuaso aegritudo insequitur necessario'; examples of the latter are 25, 61 'est enim nulla alia (sc. aegritudo) nisi opinio et iudicium magni praesentis... mali'; 26, 62; 28, 68; 31, 74 'satis dictum esse arbitror aegritudinem esse opinionem mali praesentis': in the case of other passages such as 13, 28 'tum aegritudinem existere, cum quid ita uisum sit, ut magnum quoddam malum adesse... uideatur' and 34, 82 'aegritudinem omnem procul abesse a sapiente, quod... non natura exoritur, sed iudicio, sed opinione' it is somewhat difficult to say under which head they should be classed. This looseness of expression is all the more remarkable when we remember that it relates to a point which was the subject of a historic difference of opinion between Zeno and Chrysippus, who are both referred to by Cicero as being responsible for the views he expounds without any indication of their opinions having differed: in fact Zeno is quoted with commendation in 31, 75 as the author of an addition to a definition which, according to Galen, was framed not by him but by his critic Chrysippus. With regard to the general difference of opinion Galen says (de placitis Hippocratis et Platonis p. 405 M. [p. 429 K.]) Χρύσιππος μὲν οὖν ἐν τῷ πρώτῳ περὶ παθῶν ἀποδεικνύει πειρᾶται κρίσεις τινὰς εἶναι τοῦ λογιστικοῦ τὰ πάθη, Ζήνων δὲ οὐ τὰς κρίσεις αὐτὰς ἀλλὰ τὰς ἐπιγνομένας αὐταῖς συστολὰς καὶ διαχύσεις ἐπάρσεις τε καὶ πτώσεις ἐνόμιζεν εἶναι τὰ πάθη (cf. op. cit. p. 337 M. [367 K.]). This passage brings out clearly, as do many others in Galen, the distinction between the rival views, Zeno holding that aegritudo was an abnormal state of mind resulting from a recens opinio praesentis mali while Chrysippus held that the aegritudo was the opinio itself. But as not every opinio resulted in a perturbatio it was necessary for Chrysippus to define more closely than had been done by Zeno the particular kind of opinio which in his opinion constituted an aegritudo: he had in fact to include as part of the definition of the opinio what according to Zeno was a distinct condition to which the opinio gave rise. This Chrysippus did by the addition of the words which appear in Cicero's translation (II, 25; cf. 31, 74) as ut in eo rectum uideatur esse angi. That this addition is due to Chrysippus is plain both from its logical consistency with Chrysippus' general position (Zeno's doctrine accounting for the same facts in another way) and from the testimony of Galen op. cit. p. 370 M. [p. 398 K.] where Posidonius' criticism of Chrysippus' view is quoted: εἰ γὰρ τὸ μέγεθος τῶν φαινομένων ἀγαθῶν ἢ κακῶν κινεῖ τὸ νομίζειν καθήκον καὶ κατὰ ἀξίαν εἶναι παρόντων αὐτῶν ἢ παραγινόμενων μηδένα λόγον προσίεσθαι περὶ τοῦ ἄλλως δεῖν ὑπὸ αὐτῶν κινεῖσθαι, τοὺς ἀνυπέμβλητα νομίζοντες εἶναι τὰ περὶ αὐτοὺς τοῦτο ἔδει πάσχειν; ibid. p. 371 M. [p. 399 K.] τὸ δὲ ὑπολαμβάνειν κατὰ ἀξίαν εἶναι τῶν συμβεβηκότων οὕτως κεκινήσθαι ὥστε ἀποτρέφεσθαι τὸν λόγον, μέγα δὲ πάθος ἐμφαίνειν, οὐ καλῶς ὑπολαμβάνειν ἐστὶ: cf. also 31, 76 'Chrysippus autem caput esse censet in consolando detrahare illam opinionem maerenti, si se officio fungi putet iusto atque debito' (see Hirzel, Untersuchungen iii, 416 f.; von Arnim, Stoic. Vett. Fragm. i, xxiii; Heine, de fontibus T. D. 15). Yet Cicero in 31, 74 can speak of Zeno having made an addition to the definition of aegritudo which contains the words 'in qua opinione illud insit ut aegritudinem suscipere oporteat.'

This halting between two opinions, or failure to perceive the radical inconsistency between the two views, might be confidently set down to Cicero's own carelessness, indifference or lack of acumen, were it not that Chrysippus himself is chargeable with precisely the same fault: Galen op. cit. p. 337 M. [p. 367 K.] ἐν μὲν δὴ τούτοις τοῖς ὄροις ὁρμῆς καὶ δόξας καὶ κρίσεις ὑπάρχειν οἶεται τὰ πάθη, κατὰ δὲ τινος τῶν ἐφεξῆς Ἐπικούρω καὶ Ζήνωνι μᾶλλον ἢ τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ δόγμασιν ἀκόλουθα γράφει· τήν τε γὰρ λύπην ὀριζόμενος μείωσιν εἶναι φησι ἐπὶ φευκτῶ δοκοῦντι ὑπάρχειν... καὶ γὰρ αἱ μείωσεις καὶ αἱ ἐπάρσεις καὶ αἱ συστολαὶ καὶ αἱ διαχύσεις, καὶ γὰρ τούτων ἐνίοτε μέμνηται... ὃ καὶ θαυμάζειν ἐπέρχεται μοι τὰνδρὸς ἐν ἐπαγγελίᾳ λογικῆς τε ἅμα καὶ ἀκριβοῦς διδασκαλίας οὐκ ἀκριβοῦντος. This being so it seems somewhat dangerous to assume either that the inconsistencies of statements in Cicero are due to a reliance upon different sources in different passages or to the use of an authority who attempted to combine both views.

The views of both Zeno and Chrysippus were subjected to a penetrating examination by Posidonius, who, as the result, probably, of Academic criticism, abandoned the traditional Stoic psychology and adopted the Platonic threefold division of the soul into τὸ λογικόν, τὸ θυμοειδές and τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν. His view of the emotions (expounded by Galen in books iv and v of the De placitis Hippocratis et Platonis) is thus radically distinct from that adopted by Cicero in T.D. iii. Regarding the emotions as due to the irrational elements of the soul, he could not of course subscribe to any definition which regarded them as originating in, or being identical with, an opinio or δόξα which was a function of the rational intelligence: nor could he regard the corruption of human nature as due primarily to the evil influence of training and environment, a view which is the natural consequence (though not always the consistent lesson) of the doctrine of Zeno and Chrysippus. Of this view there is no trace in Cicero's discussion here, and if we except one passage there is nothing in Cicero's treatment of the question which can fairly be interpreted as due to an acquaintance with the teaching of Posidonius. That apparent exception is the passage in which Cicero deals with an objection to the Chrysippean view of the possibility of aegritudo in the case of a philosopher, which, as it concerns the treatment proper to be adopted in such a case, will be discussed later.

From the discussion of the nature of aegritudo Cicero passes to the question of its appropriate treatment and cure. Setting aside the view of Epicurus that the mind of the patient should be induced to dwell upon pleasurable experiences or anticipations (15, 33; 31, 76), he enumerates the various methods recommended by experience or philosophy; these are (a) the effect of time (16, 35; 22, 53 f.; 30, 74; 31, 76); (b) praemeditatio (14, 29; 16, 34; 22, 52; 23, 55; 25, 60); (c) consideration of the real nature of the object which has given rise to the feeling of aegritudo (23, 56; 31, 76; 32, 77); (d) consideration of the nature of the feeling itself (25, 61); (e) reflexion upon the irrational and useless character of the feeling (27, 64; 28, 66; 31, 76 f.; 33, 79; 34, 82); (f) the appeal to the experiences of others (23, 56; 33, 79). To each of these Cicero allows some weight, as in the case of his own bereavement he had experienced their value when for his Consolatio he had collected and tried them all (31, 76), though he admits that their values vary.

(a) The value of time as an agent of healing resides in the cogitatio diurna for which it affords opportunity. This is a point upon which the views of Chrysippus had been criticized by Posidonius. The view of the former is given by Galen op. cit. p. 394 M. [p. 419 K.] ὅτι δὲ ἐν χρόνῳ μαλάττεται τὰ πάθη κἄν αἱ δόξαι μένωσι τοῦ κακόν τι αὐτοῖς γεγονέναι καὶ ὁ Χρυσίππος ἐν τῷ δευτέρῳ περὶ παθῶν μαρτυρεῖ γράφων ὧδε· ‘ζητήσαι δὲ ἂν τις καὶ περὶ τῆς ἀνέσεως τῆς λύπης πῶς γίνεται πότερον δόξης τινος μετακινουμένης ἢ πασῶν διαμενουσῶν καὶ διὰ τί τοῦτο ἔσται.’ εἶτα ἐπιφέρων φησί ‘δοκεῖ δέ μοι ἢ μὲν τοιαύτη δόξα διαμένειν ὅτι κακόν αὐτό, ὃ δὴ πάρεστιν, ἐγχορονιζομένης δὲ ἀνίσθαι ἢ συστολῇ καὶ, ὡς οἶμαι, ἢ ἐπὶ τὴν συστολὴν ὀρμή· τυχὸν δὲ καὶ ταύτης διαμενούσης οὐχ ὑπακούσεται τὰ ἐξῆς διὰ ποιὰν ἄλλην ἐπιγενομένην διάθεσιν ἀσυλλόγιστον τούτων γινομένων κτλ.’ It is clear from this passage that Chrysippus acknowledged the psychological fact that emotion becomes less vehement by the mere lapse of time, though he seems to have found this fact somewhat difficult to reconcile with his view that emotion was a δόξα upon which time in itself could not have any effect. Posidonius seized upon his difficulty and in a forcible passage (op. cit. p. 399 M. [p. 424 K.]) developed the view that the gradual cessation of the emotions was to be attributed to the satisfaction or exhaustion of the irrational elements of the soul. Of this difficulty and controversy there is not the slightest hint in Cicero, another proof that he cannot have drawn in this book upon a work of Posidonius.

But Chrysippus, while admitting a certain element of uncertainty in the psychological details, was sure that in some cases the value of time in these matters lay in the opportunity for reflexion which it afforded. He is quoted by Galen (op. cit. p. 398 M. [p. 422 K.]) for the remark καθ’ ὃν λόγον οὐκ ἂν ἀπελπίσαι τις οὕτως τῶν πραγμάτων ἐγχορονιζομένων καὶ τῆς παθητικῆς φλεγμονῆς ἀνιεμένης τὸν λόγον παρεισδύομενον καὶ οἰονεὶ χώραν λαμβάνοντα παριστάναι τὴν τοῦ πάθους ἀλογίαν—a passage which Cicero seems almost to quote in 27, 64, ‘ipsa remissio luctus cum est consecuta intellectumque est nihil profici maerendo’ and again in 12, 26 ‘et quidem inueterato malo, cum tumor animi resedisset.’ Cicero’s treatment of the effect of time then is entirely opposed to that of Posidonius and partially identical with that of Chrysippus, though he slurs over the difficulty which the Greek philosopher frankly admitted.

(b) The value of praemeditatio was fully acknowledged by Chrysippus, Galen op. cit. p. 392 M. [p. 417 K.] καὶ φησι διότι πᾶν τὸ ἀμέτρητον καὶ ξένον ἀθρώως προσπίπτον ἐκπλήττει τε καὶ τῶν παλαιῶν ἐξίστησι κρίσεων ἀσκηθὲν δὲ καὶ συνεισθὲν καὶ χρονίσαν ἢ οὐδὲ ὅλως ἐξίστησιν ὡς κατὰ πάθος κινεῖν, ἢ ἐπὶ μικρὸν κομιδῇ· διὸ καὶ προενδημῆν δεῖν φησι τοῖς πράγμασι μήπω τε παροῦσιν οἶον παροῦσι χρῆσθαι—where προενδημῆν expresses what Cicero means by praemeditari.

(c) The consideration of the real nature and quality of the object which has caused the emotion is recommended by Cleanthes (31, 76), who held that the proper remedy for aegritudo was to show that the object was not malum, and by the Peripatetics (ib.) who recommended the consideration that it was not magnum malum. To this Cicero raises two objections: (1) that it is a method only suitable in the case of a sapiens, 'qui consolatione non eget,' and (2) that it cannot be employed in the case of a person whose grief is due to the fact that he is not virtuous or wise. The first objection is at bottom identical with the view of Chrysippus. Galen (op. cit. p. 371 M. [p. 398 K.]) quotes from Posidonius the clause εἶτε πρὸς τῷ μεγέθει τῶν φαινομένων καὶ τὴν ἀσθένειαν τῆς ψυχῆς αἰτιάζονται καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τοὺς μὲν σοφοὺς τὸ παράπαν ἐροῦσιν ἀπηλλάχθαι τῶν παθῶν κτλ., in which, as the context shows, the arguments of Chrysippus and his followers are under discussion. The second objection will be more conveniently discussed when we come to consider the arguments that are to be mentioned under (e).

(d) The method of dealing with aegritudo which consists in the explanation that it is merely an opinio et iudicium magni praesentis atque urgentis mali (25, 61), though separately discussed and briefly dismissed by Cicero, is really identical with (c).

(e) The view, variously expressed by Cicero, that a satisfactory cure or consolatio can be secured by the reflexion that, whatever be the object which has caused the aegritudo, grief is useless and unnecessary and not a matter of duty, is expressly attributed to Chrysippus in 31, 76 and adopted by Cicero (33, 79; 34, 82) as on the whole the most satisfactory, though the practical application of it may cause difficulty when the emotion is still fresh and strong. It affords the only satisfactory reply to the objection urged by Posidonius, that if an emotion be a δόξα that the object which arouses it is very good or very bad then οἱ προκόπτοντες must be in a perpetual state of mental disturbance: the sight of the virtue which they hope to attain and of the evil which they desire to avoid, giving rise to an opinion of their nature which cannot be refuted, must fill them either with unseemly desire or unseemly grief. So far as the actual fragments of Chrysippus go there is no direct evidence that he raised or considered the point, while we know from Galen that Posidonius made much of it (op. cit. p. 370 M. [p. 397 K.]). But the general trend of the views of Chrysippus as well as particular expressions in his extant fragments leave little doubt both that he raised the question and answered it by the argument which Cicero lays such stress upon (see Hirzel op. cit. iii pp. 436 sqq.: Pohlenz Fleck. Jahrb. xxiv pp. 569, 613). If this be so it must be assumed that the discussion of this point in 28, 68 is derived not from Posidonius (who solved the difficulty by the argument that in the persons concerned the rational faculty was so powerful as to keep the emotions in check) but, either mediately or immediately, from Chrysippus.

(f) The attempt to cure aegritudo by adducing examples of persons who have suffered already may be regarded from one point of view as a subdivision of praemeditatio. If, however, the method be employed without regard to the circumstances of the particular case it may do more harm than good (33, 79). There is nothing here which is inconsistent with the general standpoint adopted in the book.

It remains to discuss in detail the method adopted by Cicero and to endeavour to discover whether any particular treatise or author can be shown to be the source probably followed in the dialogue. The introduction (§§ 1-7) is admitted on all hands to be Cicero's own; but it is important to keep in mind that the view adopted in § 2 of the origin of human depravity can hardly be reconciled with any psychological doctrine other than that professed by the strict Stoic. The corruption of human nature is there referred entirely to the environment and upbringing of human beings: it is mali mores opinionesque (imbibed from nurses, parents, schools, literature and life) which quench the original sparks of virtue: there is not a word about the irrational faculties, τὸ θυμοειδές and τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν, the traitors within the soul, upon which Posidonius laid so much stress. In fact no two views of the matter could well be more inconsistent than that expounded by Cicero here and that attributed to Posidonius in Galen op. cit. p. 465 M. [p. 483 K.]. The general parallelism between diseases of the body and those of the soul, though in some points of detail differently expressed by Posidonius and Chrysippus, is too vaguely sketched in Cicero to afford a satisfactory clue to his sympathies in this minor discussion.

The subject of the dialogue is stated and expounded in 4, 7-6, 13. Here the material which can be directly referred to any Greek source is no more than the text upon which Cicero dilates: the digressions upon points of translation and etymology are Cicero's addition and they are so worked in with the rest that the result owes more to Cicero than to any probable source. The definition of πάθη as 'motus animi rationi non obtemperantes' is one to which, it is true, Posidonius might have subscribed if he had been allowed to interpret ratio as τὸ λογιστικόν and animus as the whole which comprised both it and the irrational elements of τὸ θυμοειδές and τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν. But Chrysippus also used such phrases as ἄλογος and ἀπειθές λόγῳ and ἀπεστραμμένον τοῦ λόγου, for which (and especially in the case of ἄλογος) he was charged with an unscientific ambiguity (Galen op. cit. pp. 348 ff. M. [pp. 377 ff. K.]). The quotation from Crantor in 6, 12 is probably derived from the materials amassed for the Consolatio, in which Cicero had collected the views of all philosophers who had written upon the subject. The passage is in any case only quoted to be refuted and Crantor's general position was one which both here and elsewhere is combatted by Cicero. While it is true that Cicero often quoted from him in this book either directly or indirectly, he is at best only a subsidiary source.

The remark in 6, 13 that, while aegritudo may be cured, yet the root of it will remain, must not be pressed into an expression of even partial or guarded sympathy with a view which regarded a certain amount of perturbatio as natural and necessary, a view expressly disclaimed in 10, 22 and other passages. Cicero seems to mean here no more than what Zeno himself admitted (cf. 22, 54 n. on 'cicatricibus'), though using a different metaphor.

Cicero concludes this section with the statement that he will adopt first the Stoic style of treatment and then following his own bent allow himself a free rein.

The "Stoic treatment" is to be found in 7, 14 to 10, 21. So far as the question of form is concerned it is "Stoic" in the style of Zeno and Chrysippus, not in that of Posidonius. The references in 7, 14 to infractio animi and demissio animi are consistent either with Zeno's or Chrysippus' expressions of their views and the phrases in 8, 17 'motus animi adpetentis regere' and 'aduersantem libidini...seruare constantiam,' while perfectly consistent with the doctrine of Posidonius, are not out of keeping with the occasional loose phraseology of Chrysippus.

The digression on frugalitas is clearly derived either from Plato (see the nn. ad. loc.) or more probably from Panaetius whom Cicero followed in that section of the de Officiis (i 27, 93 ff.) in which the virtue of decorum (τὸ πρέπον) is dealt with. The view there expounded of the relation of σωφροσύνη to the other virtues is that of Panaetius (see Schmekel Die Phil. d. Mittl. Stoa pp. 36 ff.) and is in marked contrast to the doctrine of Zeno (whom Chrysippus seems to have followed in the main) that the virtue which comprised all the others was φρόνησις (cf. Plut. de uirt. mor. 2 εἶκε δὲ καὶ Ζήνων εἰς τοῦτό πως ὑποφέρεσθαι ὁ Κιτιεύς, ὀριζόμενος τὴν φρόνησιν ἐν μὲν ἀπονεμητέοις δικαιοσύνην, ἐν δὲ διαιρετέοις σωφροσύνην, ἐν δὲ ὑπομενετέοις ἀνδρείαν· ἀπολογούμενοι δ' ἀξιοῦσιν ἐν τούτοις τὴν ἐπιστήμην φρόνησιν ὑπὸ τοῦ Ζήνωνος ὠνομάσθαι and Dyroff (Die Ethik d. alt. Stoa pp. 79 ff.)).

With regard to the quotations of Dionysius (9, 18) and Theophrastus (10, 21) there is no reason why we should not assume that they may have been derived from the materials collected for the Consolatio.

The whole section is interspersed with Cicero's usual Latin digressions, discussions and quotations.

The following section (10, 22-3) furnishes a transition from the "Stoic" to the "freer," rhetorical treatment which Cicero prefers. He quotes the Peripatetic view of the mediocritates as one to which he cannot subscribe, thereby ranging himself on the side of the Stoics. He has the usual digression upon the superiority of Latin to Greek as an instrument of philosophical expression, though his idea of the strict meaning of πάθος is a mistaken one. There is nothing in this section to indicate direct reliance upon any Greek (or other) authority.

With 11, 24 Cicero enters upon the main subject of the book, the nature of aegritudo and the method of its cure. It has already been shown that the views taken of both these points are certainly not those of Posidonius, and that on the other hand they in many respects coincide with the known views of Chrysippus and are not in any case contradictory of what we know of his teaching. But the treatment is complicated by digressions upon the views of the Cyrenaics and the Epicureans. The Cyrenaics are criticized for their view of the origin of aegritudo, which referred it to an "unlooked for and unexpected evil," and they are praised for having seen that praemeditatio was a sound method of treatment. But there is only a very superficial attempt made to discuss their position; the superiority of Chrysippus' definition to theirs is asserted, not proved, and if Cicero had a Greek authority here he has either cut it down so as to exclude everything characteristic or its treatment must have been so superficial as to make it not worth consulting.

The same may be said of the criticism of Epicurus. With the views of the Epicureans Cicero had been acquainted for years. He had studied under Zeno the Epicurean, whose lectures indeed he quotes in 17, 38. There is nothing in his remarks upon Epicurus here, except the Ciceronian rhetoric, which was not common form; and it may safely be said that if Cicero was not capable of composing these sections without reference to a Greek handbook he was not capable, and never would have dreamed, of writing philosophical treatises at all. It will hardly be contended that the quotations from Epicurus in 18, 41 f. must have been derived from quotations in a Greek original. Cicero must have been familiar with the "liber qui continet omnem disciplinam Epicuri" and we need not assume that his quotations from it were not the result of his own reading and memory. The same remark must be made about the poetical quotations scattered through the book. The quotations from Latin poets (like the illustrations from Roman history) are admitted by all critics to be the result of Cicero's own reading. With the quotations from the Greek poets he must have been equally familiar, if not from the study of the poets themselves, then at least from his study of Greek philosophers in whose writings they seem to have occurred ad nauseam. The same passages were to be met in Chrysippus, Crantor and Posidonius, pressed by each into the service of his own particular theory or introduced for the embellishment of his pages. Many of them must have been long familiar to Cicero and if he had for his Consolatio read, as he says he did (Att. xii 14, 3), everything that had been written on the subject, it is idle to assume that a passage in which (e.g.) a fragment of Euripides occurs must have been borrowed from (say) Crantor merely because we know that Crantor quoted that particular fragment, and have no direct evidence that any other writer on the same subject either did or did not.

Cicero quotes (or professes to quote) the following Greek authors in this book: Crantor (6, 12), Dionysius (9, 18), Theophrastus (10, 21), Zeno the Epicurean (17, 38), Epicurus (18, 41 f.; 20, 46), Chrysippus (22, 52; 25, 61 (?); 31, 76), Clitomachus (22, 54), Antiochus (25, 59), Aristotle (28, 69), Cleanthes (31, 76 (?)), Lycon (32, 78). It is not necessary to assume that all these quotations are at first hand: but it seems like trifling with evidence to assert that this was not so in the cases of Crantor, Epicurus, Chrysippus, Clitomachus and Antiochus: while Zeno is quoted from Cicero's recollections of lectures which he attended at Athens.

On the whole it seems most probable that Cicero followed in the main in this book the doctrines of Chrysippus on the origin of ae-gritudo and the method of its cure; that he relied for his knowledge upon his own acquaintance with the works of Chrysippus and (perhaps) other writers of the Chrysippean school; that he made extensive use of the works of other authors whom he had read for the purposes of his Consolatio (e.g. Crantor and Clitomachus); that he introduced, when necessary, recollections of his reading of other authors both Greek (e.g. Panaetius) and Latin; and that in arranging his materials he was guided by his own judgment and fancy.

BOOK IV.

The subject which was begun in Book iii is continued in Book iv, which deals with the remaining perturbationes and their cure. Hirzel op. cit. iii pp. 456 ff. thinks that it is therefore to be referred to the same source: we have, he argues, the same sceptical tone which is against the assumption of a dogmatic source, and the polemic against the Peripatetics which excludes Antiochus; Posidonius is excluded since Cicero adopts the views of Chrysippus which Posidonius combatted as to the parallelism between mental and bodily diseases. He concludes that Philo is the source. Pohlenz l.c. pp. 339 ff. argues that the subdivision of the πάθη, the polemic against the Peripatetics, the method advocated for curing the πάθη, all point to an orthodox Stoic source. This is most probably some work of Chrysippus, and perhaps the Θεραπευτικός.

Von Arnim l.c. pp. xxvi ff. considers that the book is of composite origin; §§ 11-33 come from a source which while it is not a work of Chrysippus inclines on the whole to his doctrines. The rest of the book is from some other source, as no one holding the views of Chrysippus would use the arguments urged here against the Peripatetics.

Heine (de fontibus Tusc. Disp. Weimar 1863 pp. 13 ff.) holds that in cc. 4-15 a handbook based upon Chrysippus' περὶ παθῶν was the source: in cc. 15-27 the same book, supplemented by Crantor περὶ πένθους, was the ultimate source; while the remainder of the book is based not upon a philosophical but upon a rhetorical treatise.

Ph. Finger op. cit. p. 348 considers that the sources of this book, as of the preceding, are Antiochus and Posidonius, whose influence he divides as follows: §§ 37-46 after Posidonius; §§ 47-56 after Antiochus; §§ 57-65 after Posidonius; §§ 66-78 after Antiochus; §§ 79 ff. after Posidonius.

Upon the question of the origin and nature of the πάθη Cicero adopts in this book practically the same ground as in the preceding book. In 5, 9, 11 he names "Chrysippus et Stoici" as the philosophers who devoted most attention to the classification and definition of the emotions and declares his intention of following them in this part of his work; and where he quotes his authority for a definition it is always a Stoic, e.g. 6, 11 (Zeno), 14, 33 (Stoici), 21, 47 (Zeno), 24, 53 (Sphaerus and Chrysippus). But with regard to the question in dispute between Zeno and Chrysippus as to whether the δόξα, opinio, constituted the emotion or caused it we have the same uncertainty and vacillation as in the previous book. In 6, 11 a perturbatio is an animi commotio, which is Zeno's definition: in 6, 14 aegritudo is an animi contractio; while five lines lower down it is defined as an opinio...in quo demitti contrahique animo rectum esse uideatur. In 7, 15 he regards the perturbationes as the source of the recessus animi and the other mental states which Zeno considered to constitute the perturbationes. Again in 15, 34 the definition of perturbationes as turbidi motus is Zenonian and in 21, 47 Zeno's own definition is quoted with approval. In 27, 59 two other and shorter definitions adpetitus uehementior (ὄρμη πλεονάζουσα) and aspernatio rationis (ἄλογος κίνησις) are adopted, which though Zeno's (Diog. L. vii 110) do not raise the immediate point of controversy and may be reconciled with either view.

It is therefore surprising to find Cicero in 5, 10 announcing that while he intends to employ Stoic definitions (i.e. the definitions of Zeno and Chrysippus) he is an adherent of the rival view, derived from Pythagoras and Plato, which regards the soul as partly rational and partly irrational: the latter being the seat of the emotions of anger and desire (τὸ θυμοειδές and τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν), the former the placid and quiet seat of the controlling reason. Not only is the contradiction between this general position and the subsequent definitions formal and complete, but it is hard to see why the statement should have been introduced at all, and if introduced why it should not have been made earlier. If the general distinction between the irrational soul, the source of the perturbationes, and the rational soul, the seat of the controlling influence, was relevant in any way to Cicero's discussion, the place to draw it was when he began the treatment of the most obstinate of the perturbationes in the third book. It is not even hinted at there: why then is it introduced here?

This casual and careless method of dealing with fundamental questions renders it very difficult to avoid the conclusion that if Cicero really held to the Platonic psychology (as he says he did) he either did not understand, or considered irrelevant for his purpose, the distinction between the Stoic and the Platonic view of the emotions. If he had read Posidonius' criticisms of Chrysippus (upon which there is no direct evidence either positive or negative) he cannot have failed to understand the difference or have regarded it as psychologically unimportant. But his immediate object being not scientific but practical, he seems to have put the question to one side, content to assume that the practical results could be reached independently of theoretical presuppositions. That the Stoic definitions could not be accepted as they stood by any adherent of the Platonic psychology ought to have been self-evident; that the Peripatetic doctrine of the mediocritates, so vigorously repudiated by Cicero, is not easily to be set aside if the Platonic psychology be admitted, does not seem to have been considered by him with sufficient care: and he may have been the more readily induced to gloss over distinctions by the ease with which words may be chosen to conceal them. It is not hard to see how (e.g.) the definition 'aversa a recta ratione contra naturam animi commotio' might be interpreted and applied by a Platonist: how "adpetitiones animi" might be held to be either the ὄρμαι of Chrysippus or τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν of Posidonius. Expressions seem to slip in which it is difficult to interpret from a purely Stoic standpoint. How are we to reconcile with pure Stoicism the phrase in 25, 55 'utile est enim uti motu animi qui uti ratione non potest'?

For this and similar inconsistencies of expression Cicero might have pleaded the example of Chrysippus himself, who, as Galen (De plac. Hipp. et Plat. p. 331 M. (362 K.) ff.) points out, was in the habit at least of accommodating his language to the conceptions of a Platonist if not, as Galen believes, of actually contradicting himself. One might even go the length of conjecturing that Cicero's apparent indifference to important doctrinal distinctions may have been encouraged by Chrysippus' indifference to the importance of verbal consistency.

And with the importance of the practical end tending to overshadow in his mind the importance of scientific accuracy, Cicero might have appealed in defence of his comparative carelessness of philosophical pedantry to the dictum of Chrysippus that whatever be the view held as to the ultimate values of things the πάθη ought to be eradicated. Origen (c. Celsum viii 51) quotes from Chrysippus' περὶ παθῶν θεραπευτικός the sentence κἂν γὰρ τρία ἢ γένη τῶν ἀγαθῶν καὶ οὕτω θεραπευτέον τὰ πάθη· οὐ περιεργαζόμενον ἐν τῷ καιρῷ τῆς φλεγμονῆς τῶν παθῶν τὸ προκαταλαβὸν δόγμα τὸν ὑπὸ τοῦ πάθους ἐνοχλούμενον, a statement which evidently underlies Cicero's discussion in 28, 60. This will not, of course, excuse indifference to distinctions of doctrine in a philosophical treatise, but it is an assertion of the occasional importance of the practical in contrast to the theoretical which is capable of a wider application than Chrysippus intended.

The conclusion seems to be that Cicero, while an adherent in principle of the Platonic psychology (espoused by Posidonius), did not consider the points of controversy between the Chrysippean and Platonic forms of Stoicism sufficiently relevant to his object to prevent his adopting the phraseology of the Chrysippean school in dealing with the perturbationes: but that he judged it necessary to state briefly his own personal preferences in the matter (perhaps merely to satisfy himself or to guard against criticism); and that it being a matter of indifference where this statement was made its appearing here rather than elsewhere is largely accidental.

The introduction (cc. 1-5) is of course Cicero's own both in expression and content. His sketch of the history of "philosophy" in Italy and his insistence upon the influence of Pythagoras and the necessity for a "cultured" philosophy perhaps led him by an association of ideas to a declaration of his own personal preference for the Pythagorean-Platonist school. But he makes it plain (5, 9) that while he will adhere to Chrysippus and the Stoics in matters of definition and proof, he will adopt the more humane methods of their rivals when it comes to the application of the lesson.

The following chapters (cc. 6-14) are derived from Zenonian and Chrysippean sources. This is shown not merely by the direct testimony of Cicero (6, 11 (Zeno), 10, 23 (Chrysippus)) but by the character of the whole passage. The minute subdivision of the various πάθη into meticulously defined particulars is eminently characteristic of Chrysippus, to whose σμήνος ἀρετῶν an equally elaborated σμήνος κακιῶν was no doubt contrasted.

The passages (10, 23 f., 12, 27 f.) in which the comparison between physical and moral disorders is referred to seems to exclude the possibility of any use of Posidonius, who criticized Chrysippus in detail upon this very point. Galen, op. cit. p. 408 M. [p. 433 K.], οὐκ οὖν ὀρθῶς εἰκάζεσθαι φησιν ὑπὸ τοῦ Χρυσίππου τὴν μὲν ὑγίειαν τῆς ψυχῆς τῇ τοῦ σώματος ὑγείᾳ τὴν δὲ νόσον τῇ βραδίῳ εἰς νόσημα ἐμπιπτούσῃ καταστάσει τοῦ σώματος. . . ἀλλὰ δικαιότερον εἶναι προσεικάζειν τὰς τῶν φαύλων ψυχὰς ἤτοι τῇ σωματικῇ ὑγείᾳ ἐχούσῃ τὸ εὐέμπυτον εἰς νόσον, οὕτω γὰρ ὠνόμασεν ὁ Ποσειδώνιος, ἢ αὐτῇ τῇ νόσῳ, εἶναι γὰρ ἤτοι νοσώδη τινὰ ἕξιν ἢ ἤδη νοσοῦσαν. Cicero adopts the Chrysippean parallelism of morbus corporis to morbus animi in such a way as to ignore the criticism by making no attempt to avoid it. Further the definition of sanitas animi given in 13, 30 f. is in exact accord with the views of Chrysippus as criticized by Galen following Posidonius (op. cit. pp. 416 ff. M. [pp. 440 ff. K.]). Chrysippus had said διὸ καὶ καλὴ ἢ αἰσχρὰ ψυχὴ ἀνάλογον ῥηθήσεται κατὰ συμμετρίαν τε τινα καὶ ἀσυμμετρίαν τοιῶνδε τινῶν μερῶν, in which Posidonius scented a contradiction lurking in the word μέρη; which however it seems from a later passage (p. 422) was used by Chrysippus in conformity with his view that the λόγος was ἐννοιῶν τε τινῶν καὶ προλήψεων ἄθροισμα: this corresponds precisely to Cicero's iudicia opinionionesque concordant.

There is therefore no ground for assuming any except a Chrysippean source for these chapters.

With c. 15 Cicero begins the more rhetorical treatment of his subject in which, though still adhering to the Stoic position in principle, he allows himself to "spread his sails." His definition of virtue in 15, 34 is Stoic as is the definition of perturbationes in the same paragraph. The substance of 16, 36 repeats iii 8, 16 f. and the praemeditatio recommended in 17, 37 f. is τὸ προενημεῖν of Chrysippus. There follows (17, 38) a criticism of the Peripatetic view of the mean, which extends with digressions to the end of c. 26. In it the Stoic standpoint is defended against the criticisms alike of the Peripatetics and the New Academy (21, 47; 24, 53). The comparison in 18, 41 f. of a man under the influence of a πάθος to a man falling from a precipice or standing upon a slope is also derived from Chrysippus, who is quoted by Galen (op. cit. p. 360 M. [p. 388 K.]) for the sentence: οἱ δὲ κατὰ τὸν λόγον κινούμενοι ὡς ἂν ἡγεμόνα καὶ τούτῳ οἰακίζοντες τὰς κατὰ μέρος δηλονότι κινήσεις τῆς ψυχῆς κρατοῦσι τῶν κατὰ αὐτὰς ὁρμῶν ἀνάλογον τοῖς περιπατοῦσι ἀλλ' οὐχ ὑπὸ αὐτῶν ἐκφέρονται βιαίως ὥσπερ οἱ κατὰ πρᾶνοῦς θέοντες. Here again Cicero ignores the criticisms of Posidonius, who, as reported by Galen, pointed out that the inability to stop when running down a slope was due to causes outside the person concerned, and that in the case of the mind such a comparison, if relevant, implied that other than purely rational causes must be postulated. According to him, then, the comparison was in Chrysippus' mouth inept and inconsistent with his psychological assumptions. This is ignored by Cicero in a way which seems unlikely if he were here in any way dependent upon Posidonius. On the other hand the particular use made of the comparison here suggests rather a reminiscence than a reference, unless we assume a recurrence of the illustration in some other work of Chrysippus than the περὶ παθῶν.

The historical examples and poetical quotations in this section are about equally Latin and Greek and Cicero turns so naturally from one to the other as to make it appear that Greek as well as Latin examples and quotations are not copied from some original but drawn from his own wide reading.

The remainder of the book from c. 27 to the end is devoted to a discussion of the remedies for perturbatio. On this head, as Cicero confesses (5, 9), the Stoics had little to say, whereas the Peripatetics devoted much attention to it. Cicero could therefore, if he relied upon a Stoic source, do little more than expand brief hints. But, as in Book III, when it comes to a question of consolatio, the practical outweighs the theoretical, and he takes into account methods of cure for mental disorders which cannot be reconciled with strictly Stoic principles. In doing so he had the authority (and perhaps the example) of Chrysippus who both deprecated the insistence upon philosophical subtleties in the case of acute πάθη (29, 63) and laid stress upon the desirability and possibility of curing the perturbationes no matter what philosophical principles were espoused either by the patient or the practitioner. In this respect the standpoint of 28, 60 f. and 31, 66 is the same as that of Chrysippus as quoted by Origen (see p. xlv above). Where this eclectic standpoint is not assumed Cicero is entirely in the matter of the curatio on the side of the Stoics who assumed perturbatio to be purely a matter of opinion (δόξα), e.g. in 31, 65; 34, 76; 35, 74; 37, 79; 37, 81; 38, 82 f. And the psychological view implied in 35, 78 (see explanatory notes there) is emphatically that of the older Stoics.

There is nothing then in this book to induce us to assume that Cicero had any other authority or source than either Chrysippus or some Stoic who adopted the Chrysippean standpoint. As in the preceding book the evidence does not seem to point to any more than a general dependence upon this source except in the case of the list of definitions in 7, 14 ff. where it is not unreasonable to assume that Cicero is copying directly either from some handbook or, perhaps, from a list compiled for his use.

BOOK V.

Zietzschmann op. cit. pp. 32-70 gives a long and careful analysis of the possible sources of the book. He discovers evident traces of Posidonius in the introduction; the view that philosophy is the source of civilisation (2, 5) is expressly attributed by Seneca (Epp. 90, 5) to Posidonius. The treatment in cc. 5-26 is obviously Stoic: the arguments in 15, 43 ff. are drawn from Chrysippus (Plut. de Stoic. repugn. 13, p. 1039 Stob. Ecl. ii. 126, 202): so is the treatment of fear in 18, 52 (cf. Stob. Ecl. ii 172 Diog. Laert. vii 112); and the long digression about Dionysius is like Chrysippus 'qui totos libros adscribere solebat.' But it is not necessary to assume an immediate dependence on Chrysippus: it is more likely that Cicero's source is some controversial Stoic handbook composed to defend Stoicism against the Peripatetics and Academics. Since the tenets of Antiochus seem to be often in view it is probable that the source was contemporary with him. And of the generation of Antiochus what Stoic was so prominent as Posidonius? It accords with this that the ascription of the premier place in philosophy to physics, not logic (24, 68), is characteristic of Posidonius in contrast to Chrysippus (Diog. Laert. vii. 40), and the position accorded to Plato (e.g. 12, 34) points in the same direction. If Posidonius be the source of this part of the book his ἠθικὸς λόγος (Diog. Laert. vii 91) was probably drawn upon chiefly. A short passage (27, 76-28, 82) is probably Cicero's own and serves to introduce his next source Antiochus whose De fine bonorum is responsible for the matter of 29, 82-31, 88: the argument of 31, 86 is indeed expressly attributed to Antiochus in 8, 22. The remainder of the book is from an Epicurean source, as may be seen, if detailed proof be required, from a comparison of 33, 93 with Diog. Laert. x 130; of 33, 95 with Diog. Laert. x 129 and of 34, 97-99 with Diog. Laert. x 130-131. It is not however any work of Epicurus, but that of some later Epicurean writer, upon which Cicero draws; and this may be either Zeno or Phaedrus or possibly Apollodorus: in any case, it was the same as the source of Plutarch de exilio. Hirzel op. cit. iii pp. 468 ff. holds that the case for regarding Posidonius as one of Cicero's sources is weak. He thinks that the references to Plato are not sufficient in themselves to prove it and that it is impossible to suppose that a Stoic like Posidonius could have used the language of 12, 34 with regard to Zeno. Nor is the case for Antiochus any stronger. The view defended by Cicero that, no matter what view may be taken of the summum bonum, the practice of virtue is sufficient to ensure happiness is the view not of Antiochus but of Carneades: indeed it is plain from De Finn. v. that Antiochus would have denied this if uoluptas or uacuitas doloris were assumed to be the summum bonum.

Again while the Peripatetic standpoint is most prominent in De Finn. v (which is known to be derived from Antiochus) it is thrown into the shade in T. D. v in which the Stoic standpoint is predominant. Cicero's whole treatment of the questions discussed in the book is not dogmatic but sceptical: he assumes the Stoic position, not because he is convinced that it is the truth, but because it furnishes the most logical and consistent proof of the thesis which he was really interested to maintain, that virtue was sufficient for happiness. This must have been the treatment adopted in his source, which cannot have been a treatise of Carneades, who fought bitterly against the Stoics, but of some other adherent of the school of the Sceptics. This source was probably Philo. This assumption is not contradicted by 24, 68, which seems to be due to some dogmatic source, since the threefold division of philosophy there referred to may be an addition of Cicero's or due to the retention, for the sake of convenience, by Philo of a division which is as old as Plato.

The introduction to the book (1, 1-4, 11) is admittedly Cicero's addition to whatever source may be assumed for the book as a whole. The praise of philosophy in 2, 5 is (though closely resembling sentiments quoted from Posidonius by Seneca) more or less of a common-place and the matter of 3, 7 ff. is Stoic in content where it is not directly borrowed from Heraclides of Pontus. Cicero concludes his introduction by a statement that he intends to employ, not the dogmatic, but the sceptical method in the discussion, a method derived from Socrates by Carneades. It may also be assumed without discussion that the section 5, 12 to 7, 20 need not be directly referred to any literary source.

With 8, 22 begins the formal discussion of the question which is the principal thesis of the book, that virtue ensures absolute happiness. This, Cicero contends, can only be maintained by assuming that virtue is the only good, the philosophers who, admitting other bona besides virtue, yet insisted that virtue was productive of happiness, being logically inconsistent. The discussion of this point occupies the section 8, 22 to 26, 75.

Cicero begins with the assertion that he discussed the question often with Antiochus and recently with Aristus during a visit to Athens. Antiochus asserted the position (defended in his books) that virtue produced happiness: this happiness was not absolute, there being certain bona which virtue alone could not confer; but the happiness conferred by virtue was sufficiently great to justify both the disregard of the partial unhappiness that might be caused by the absence or loss of the other bona and the general statement that the virtuous man was, on the whole, happy. Cicero argues from the Stoic standpoint that there are no degrees in happiness and that to admit other bona besides virtue is, not to dilute happiness, but to destroy it altogether.

Cicero's statement as to the fact of his discussing the question himself with Antiochus must be accepted: the only question remaining is whether the treatment of the matter here is such as to make it necessary to assume that he was copying or adapting the published work of some other person who had opposed Antiochus' conclusions from the same standpoint as himself.

In 9, 24 he quotes and criticizes Theophrastus: the statement 'non usquam id quidem dicit omnino, sed, quae dicit, idem ualent' seems undoubtedly to show that Cicero was relying upon his own knowledge of the writings of Theophrastus, as well as his acquaintance with the "libri et scholae omnium philosophorum" (9, 25) who criticized his views. The references to, or quotations from, Epicurus in 9, 26 and 10, 31 are so general as to make it absurd to assume that Cicero must have borrowed or copied them from some previous writer. Nor is it any more than an assumption that the quotations from Plato in 12, 35 f. must have been borrowed either from a platonizing Stoic like Posidonius or from some other opponent of Antiochus. The references to Critolaus (17, 51) and to Xenocrates (18, 51) are in both cases sufficiently superficial and general to obviate the necessity of searching for a particular authority. The passages (14, 41; 15, 43-45; 16, 48; 18, 53) in which Cicero makes conspicuous use of the laquei Stoicorum point undoubtedly to an acquaintance with the method of argument employed by Chrysippus and the earlier Stoics, and the "chain-arguments" reproduced in these paragraphs are no doubt translations or close imitations of the arguments of some Greek Stoic. The long digression (20, 57 ff.) in which the evil case of Dionysius is expounded is, no doubt, reminiscent of the habit of Chrysippus: but it falls very far short of being evidence of direct dependence by Cicero upon Chrysippus or upon any one else. The somewhat contemptuous reference to Zeno in 12, 34 which Pohlenz thinks to be an argument against regarding Posidonius as the source of this section is not an argument either for or against anyone: it is, if anything, an argument for Cicero's independence of any direct source, being a dramatic adaptation of the expression to the situation. Cicero is protesting against the assumption that he is bound to have adopted as his own conviction the philosophical view which he may happen to be advocating at the moment. His interlocutor is on the Peripatetic side, and he is pressing the Stoic point of view not (he says) because he is committed to its truth, but because it 'nostros animos probabilitate percussit,' "but," he says, "if Zeno of Citium, that mere outsider and low verbal mechanic, be considered to have wormed his way into philosophy" then let us take Plato and leave him aside. To attempt to use such a phrase as evidence either for or against a particular literary "source" is childish.

It is extremely unsafe to infer from 24, 68 fin. in which philosophy is divided into physics, ethics and logic that the section in which the divisions are arranged in this order must be derived from Posidonius. It is true that he adopted this particular order: but so did Panaetius, as is expressly stated by Diogenes Laertius (vii 40, Παναίτιος δὲ καὶ Ποσειδώνιος ἀπὸ τῶν φυσικῶν ἄρχονται), who makes it plain that there was considerable divergence among the Stoics on the point. In any case an order which goes back to Panaetius is not valid evidence that a passage in which it occurs ought probably to be referred to a work of Posidonius.

There is nothing in the section which compels us to assume direct dependence upon any particular author or treatise. Cicero was no doubt aware of what was to be said, and had been said, from the Stoic standpoint against the views of Antiochus. He took his arguments where he found them, and he may have found some of them in Posidonius, though most of them are sufficiently obvious to have occurred to any one interested in the discussion. But if he discussed the matter often with Antiochus (by which he certainly does not mean that he repeated to him extracts out of Posidonius) there is no reason why he should not have composed this section without taking a treatise of either Posidonius or Philo as the groundwork of his treatment.

Having shown that the Stoic ethics alone furnished an absolutely satisfactory basis for his main thesis, Cicero proceeds to examine what may be said for it upon the basis of other ethical systems (27, 76 ff.). Assuming the threefold division of bona, he enquires whether, supposing the bona corporis and the bona externa to be practically equivalent to the Stoic προηγμένα, the same result will not follow. Of course, if these two classes of bona are sufficiently depressed the result is the same as on the Stoic hypothesis, and Cicero refers to the discussion in the previous books, as well as to fresh examples (27, 77 ff.), to sustain the inference, repeating some of the more extravagant statements of the Stoics and declaring that their statement is the most courageous that can be made (28, 80 ff.). No one seems inclined to look for any source here beyond Cicero himself.

He proceeds in 29, 82 ff. to examine the question how far it is logically consistent with the views of the Peripatetics and Academics to assert 'sapientis esse semper beatissimos.' Carneades had asserted that no matter what view was held de finibus virtue possessed 'satis ad uitam beatam praesidii' (29, 83), and this being already proved in regard to the Stoics, the other sects are passed in review in the light of Carneades' dictum. After enumerating the finis adopted by the various schools (30, 84) he proceeds to examine them in order. The case of the Peripatetics, which he takes first (30, 85), is the easiest. With the exception of Theophrastus, they rank the bona corporis and the bona externa so low in comparison with the bona animi, that the happiness derived from the latter overshadows any unhappiness due to the loss of the former: besides, the argument which Cicero had learned from Antiochus (8, 22) applies—life can be called happy if it is predominantly so. He proceeds to argue that the Peripatetics can all consistently speak with the extravagance of the Stoics. So may Callipho and Diodorus. The case of others is more difficult; but that of Epicurus being, to outward seeming, most difficult of all, he offers to show that even he may consistently speak of virtue as sufficient to ensure happiness. The only argument in this section is one which Cicero confessedly borrowed from Antiochus, whose teaching, whether written or oral, may legitimately be regarded as the "source" of this section.

From 31, 88 to the end of the book Cicero is engaged upon a demonstration of the compatibility of a belief in his thesis with adherence to the teaching of Epicurus. Epicurus, he asserts, despises death and pain and poverty: he is abstemious, and free from avarice like Anacharsis, Socrates, Xenocrates and Diogenes. The Epicurean division of cupiditates is insisted upon to prove on the one hand that the Epicureans did not attach an excessive value to the satisfaction of particular desires, and on the other that to the Epicurean the mind was the standard of pleasure, the body being merely the percipient. This being so, the life of the Epicurean philosopher, aided by recollection and anticipation, would be a long and unbroken series of pleasures. The moderation in eating and drinking exemplified by Epicurus is dwelt upon and enforced (34, 97–35, 102) by other examples: examples are given of philosophical indifference to ignobilitas (36, 103–105), and to exile (37, 106–38, 110), to blindness (38, 111–39, 115), to loss of hearing (40, 116–117), to pain (40, 117–41, 119). In all these cases he asserts that on the principles of Epicurus the sapiens is able to derive enough pleasure from life to overbalance his calamities and may therefore be called happy or may in the last resort escape from pain by suicide.

Thus he concludes (41, 120) the judgment of Carneades as to the essential agreement of all schools of philosophy upon the sufficiency of virtue for a happy life is proved to be sound.

In this section Cicero, as he says both at the beginning (29, 83) and at the end (41, 120), is defending a view of Carneades. It is a natural presumption that he became acquainted with this view from the works of the disciples of Carneades who recorded his doctrines (Diog. Laert. iv 65): but it would seem to follow from Cicero's references to Carneades that, while he laid down the general position 'quaecumque dissentientium philosophorum sententia sit de finibus, tamen uirtus satis habeat ad uitam beatam praesidii' (29, 83), his "proof" of it was mainly a discussion of the apparent discrepancies between the Peripatetics and the Stoics (cf. 41, 120: 'nam cum, quaecumque bona Peripateticis, eadem Stoicis commoda uiderentur, neque tamen Peripatetici plus tribuerent diuitiis, bonae ualetudini, ceteris rebus generis eiusdem quam Stoici, cum ea re non uerbis ponderarentur, causam esse dissidendi negabat'; 29, 83: 'Carneadem disputare solitum accepimus; sed is, ut contra Stoicos, quos studiosissime semper refellebat'). In the detailed discussion of the application of Carneades' dictum to the Epicurean ethics there is no mention of Carneades, and it may be inferred that the substance of 31, 88-41, 119 is not directly due to any recorded discussion of his.

In these sections Cicero quotes Epicurus (or professes acquaintance with his works) more than once: 31, 88, 'eum diem quo moritur beatum appellat'; 32, 89, 'nemo de tenui uictu plura dixit'; 33, 93 'uides, credo, ut Epicurus cupiditatum genera diuiserit'; 33, 95, 'totumque hoc de uoluptate sic ille praecipit ut...'; 38, 110, 'non sine causa igitur Epicurus ausus est dicere.' He refers also to the writings of the Epicureans, 33, 94, 'hoc loco multa ab Epicureis disputantur'; 34, 97, 'atque his similia ad uictum etiam transferuntur'; 38, 111, 'quidam etiam disputent.' He notes the verbal agreement between Epicurus and Hieronymus, 41, 118, 'haec eadem quae Epicurus, totidem uerbis dicit Hieronymus.' To assume, in view of the enormous number of treatises left by Epicurus (Diog. Laert. x 26, γέγονε δὲ πολυγραφώτατος ὁ Ἐπίκουρος, πάντας ὑπερβαλλόμενος πλήθει βιβλίων), of his epistles containing a compendium of his doctrines, of his κύρια δόξαι, of his philosophical importance, of the popularity of his doctrines in Rome, of Cicero's lifelong devotion to Greek philosophy and his constant study of it, that he did not take these references directly from Epicurus, but borrowed them from some later Epicurean or some Sceptic like Philo, is an impossible position. On the other hand, it is plain that he owed a good deal to Epicurean apologists, eager to show that Epicurus was not so bad as his opponents painted him. Of such apologies it is plain that there was a very considerable number. They did not prove that uirtus was sufficient to ensure complete happiness: but they did endeavour to show (what Cicero, with no very exacting philosophical conscience, held to be practically the same thing) that it was possible for a man who held uoluptas to be the chief good to be consistently happy, through recollection, anticipation and the selection of simple pleasures. For Cicero's treatment of the matter we need not, with the evidence before us, assume any other "source" than a moderate acquaintance with the works of Epicurus and of Epicurean apologists. It may be that he relied principally upon some particular writer; but to assert that he did, still more to name the writer or to select one of such a writer's works, is to go far beyond what the evidence will warrant.

NOTES ON THE APPARATUS CRITICUS.

THE MS designated V (V 1) in the critical notes is (as stated in the Introduction to Vol. I, p. xxxi) damaged at the end of Book v: the second column of the recto of f. 96 is imperfect and stained though still legible and the same applies to the first column of f. 96 verso; the second column, ending in surditate uero (v 40, 116), is practically undamaged: f. 97 is imperfect and much stained, the verso being almost illegible. A second scribe has recopied these two leaves, i.e. from aegritudinesque obliuione leniuntur (v 38, 110) to the end of the book. Where V is still legible its readings are quoted, the readings from the folios written by the later hand are denoted by v. A slight inaccuracy in the statement made in Vol. I, p. xxxi may here be rectified: the note added by the original copyist is M. Tullii Ciceronis Tusculanarum lib̄ V explicit feliciter.

The Bodleian fragment published by Professor A. C. Clark in Mélanges pour H. Chatelain (Paris 1910) pp. 169 ff. is called F in the critical notes; Professor Clark proposed to call it O, but that designation was already in use for the group of Oxford MSS.

It may be added that, where a letter (ex. gr. R) used to denote a group of MSS is employed without a number following, it denotes the MS numbered (1) in that particular group; and that where MSS are quoted for any reading and nothing is said about other MSS the others have not been collated for that reading.

M. TVLLI CICERONIS

TVSCVLANARVM DISPVTATIONVM

LIBER TERTIVS

I. 1. Quidnam esse, Brute, causae putem, cur, cum constemus ex animo et corpore, corporis curandi tuendique causa quaesita sit ars atque eius utilitas deorum immortalium inuentioni consecrata, animi autem medicina nec tam desiderata sit, ante quam inuenta, nec tam culta, posteaquam cognita est, nec tam multis grata et probata, pluribus etiam suspecta et inuisa? an quod corporis grauitatem et dolorem animo iudicamus, animi morbum corpore non sentimus? ita fit ut animus de se ipse tum iudicet, cum id ipsum quo iudicatur aegrotet.

I. § 1, 3. ars eius atque R I 6 7 17 V P I-3 G B I 3 K 2 S E I-3 L I-6 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O I-3 7 ed. H. <sup>+ei</sup> arseius atque K I (i.e. arei in ars et mut. nigriore atr. et ei eod. atr. superscr.) ars eius sit atque O 8. ars atque eius
corr. Manutius. || immortalium R V P G S K. immortalium L. 4. inuentione L. || desidera R (sic). desidera<sup>ta</sup> V (manu ant. superscr.) desidera G desiderata
 B I K I 2 L I W I 2 D C H O I-3. 9. quo iudicatur R I 7 17 V P I-3
 B I 3 K I 2 S L I W 2 M I 2 D C Gr. || quod R 6 E 2 W I H O I 7.
 quidē J (i.e. quidem in quod idem mut.) || iudicatus G (sed t expunx. et m superscr. alt. man.) iudicat ed. H.

I. § 1. quaesita: the word implies that the want was felt, cf. desiderata below. Contrast inuenta below for which see i 47, 114 n.

atque eius utilitas, 'and deemed so useful that it has had the honour of being ascribed to immortal gods as its discoverers.' So Anon. in Olivet 'Ars medendi propter suam utilitatem diis assignata fuit tanquam inuentoribus.' For this opinion Dav. compares Pliny, H.N. xxix 1 (medicina) 'diis primum inuentores suos adsignauit et caelo dicauit.'

deorum... inuentioni = dis inuentoribus, cf. Naegelsbach, op. cit. § 74, who quotes Or. ii 58, 237 'parcendum maxime est caritati hominum' = hominibus caris.

deorum: especially Apollo and Aesculapius.

consecrata = cum huius artis consecratione tributa, Naegelsbach, Stil. § 102. Cf. p. Sest. 68, 143 'hanc opinionem si in illo sanctissimo Hercule consecratam uidemus'; N.D. iii 24, 61

'quarum rerum utilitatem uideo, uideo etiam consecrata simulacra.'

animi... medicina: sc. philosophia.

tam... tam... tam...: sc. quam corporis medicina.

pluribus: sc. quam grata est.

an: ii 18, 42 n.

corporis grauitatem: an oppressed feeling is denoted. The expression is not found elsewhere in classical Latin. Dav. quotes it from Celsus i pref. ad fin.; i 10; ii 7, p. 65; and the similar use of βαρύτης, Porphyrius, de Abstin. i ch. 51; Plutarch, de Sanit. Tuenda ii p. 127 D; p. 128 B βαρύτητα καὶ πλησμονὴν σώματος [cf. also grauedo, καρηβαρία ad Att. x, 16, 6, Catullus xlv, 13]. Editors are wrong in referring to Fin. iv 12, 31. There Madv. rightly adopts Bentley's emendation prauitate membrorum. Lucr. iii 478 has 'grauitas membrorum.' grauis is a common epithet of morbus, cf. 'grauitatem morbi' N.D. iii 31, 76.

ita fit ut, 'whence it follows that...,' ii 6, 16 n. Dav. compares Plut. Animine

10 2. quodsi talis nos natura genuisset, ut eam ipsam intueri et perspicere eademque optima duce cursum uitae conficere possemus, haud erat sane quod quisquam rationem ac doctrinam requireret. nunc paruulos nobis dedit igniculos, quos celeriter malis moribus opinionibusque deprauati sic restinguimus, ut nusquam naturae
15 lumen appareat. sunt enim ingenii nostris semina innata uirtutum, quae si adolescere liceret, ipsa nos ad beatam uitam natura perduceret. nunc autem, simul atque editi in lucem et suscepti sumus, in omni continuo prauitate et in summa opinionum peruersitate uersamur, ut paene cum lacte nutricis errorem suxisse

§ 2, 10. talis R V P G B K E L W 2 D. tales S J alii. tales W 1 (e ex i mut. ut uid.) 11. optima R V G B K. 12. haud W 1 <sup>haut</sup> V (h manu ant. superscr.) 1 aub (sic) K 1 (i.e. aut in haub man. rec. mut.) aut R G L. || rationem R 6 O 1 2 rōnē J. rationē V (fort. ead. man.) rationē S (linea super e leuiter impressa et a recent. glossatore ut uid. addita). ratione R 1 17 P 1-3 G B K 1 E 1 L 1 M 2 C II O 3. ratiōe O 7. ratōe O 8. rōne R 7 B 3 E 2 W 2 D Gr. rōē K 2 W 1 M 1. rāōe E 3 (at m alio atr. add.) || ac R 1 6 7 17 V P 1 3 B 1 3 K S E 2 L 1 W 2 M II J O 1 7 ed. H. hac G (h. expunx. et conf. man. ant.) ad O 2. et P 2 E 1 W 1 D O 3 Gr. aut O 8. || doctrinam R 6 O 1 2. doctrinā E 3 J. doctrina R 1 7 17 V P 1-3 G B 1 3 K S E L 1 W M D C II O 3 7 8 Gr. doctrinam ac rationem O 1. || requiret G (at re superscr.) 13. paruulos R V G K L. 14. deprauati B 1. deprauatiſ V. deprauati<sup>f</sup> E 1 (eod. atr. superscr.) deprauatis R 1 6 7 10 P B 3 K 1 S E 2 L 1 2 5 6 W 2 M 1 II O 2 3 7 8. depratis G (at ua superscr.) deprautis K 2. deprauatos R 17 P 2 3 W 1 M 2 D C J O. deprauatos E 3 (al. atr.) deſaut<sup>f</sup> R 16. || restringimus II. || unusquam G (at t alt. man. superscr.) 15. appareat R V P G K S E L. || semita G. 16. adolescere G (h conf. alt. man.). 19. poene G. || nutricis G (s punctis nol. alt. man.). || suxisse R 1 alio atr.

an corp. affect. s. p. p. 500 F τῶν μὲν γὰρ περὶ τὸ σῶμα νοσημάτων ἐρρωμένους ὁ λογισμὸς ἀσθάνεται, τοῖς δὲ τῆς ψυχῆς πρηνόσων αὐτὸς οὐκ ἔχει κρῖσιν ἐν οἷς πάσχει, πάσχει γὰρ ᾧ κρίνει.

When the body is ill the mind, which studies it, is well, but when the mind is ailing, it, though ailing, has to study itself.

§ 2. ut eam ipsam: i.e. ut naturam ipsam. For eam see Küh. Gr. ii § 117 ann. 1 p. 437; Gild. and Lodge § 309 n. 1; Madv. 490 (c) obs. 3. The argument is from the point of view of the Stoics who made the chief good consist in living in harmony with nature, cf. v 28, 82 'Stoicorum...qui...finem bonorum esse senserint congruere naturae cumque ea conuenienter uiuere.'

erat: Madv. 348e.

rationem ac doctrinam, 'systematic instruction,' cf. i 1, 1 n.

nunc, 'but as it is.' This contrasted use of nunc is very common. So nunc autem (as below), nunc uero and in Gk. νῦν, νῦν δέ.

paruulos...igniculos, 'only tiny rays of light,' cf. ii 18, 42 n. on contortulis conclusiuinculis.

deprauati: the nominative, proposed by Lamb., is supported by V<sup>2</sup> B<sup>1</sup> and by in...peruersitate uersamur below, which = deprauamur as Mo. notes, and it is intrinsically preferable to deprauatis.

lumen, 'a glimpse,' ii 24, 58 n.

semina innata uirtutum: cf. Fin. iv 7, 18 'his initiis et, ut ante dixi, seminibus a natura datis...omnis honestas perfecte absoluta est'; v 7, 18 'quorum similia sunt prima in animis, quasi uirtutum igniculi et semina'; 15, 43 'in pueris uirtutum quasi scintillas uidemus.'

editi: sc. a matre.

suscepti: cf. Att. xi 9, 3 'utinam susceptus non essem.' For the custom implied in this word see Ramsay, Rom. Ant. p. 475.

[Nutricis: Old Roman custom seemed to have expected that the mother should nurse her own child: Cato's wife did so (Plut. Cato 20): but the custom seems to 20 uideamur. cum uero parentibus redditi, dein magistris traditi sumus, tum ita uariis inbuimur erroribus, ut uanitati ueritas et opinioni confirmatae natura ipsa cedat.

II. 3. Accedunt etiam poëtae, qui cum magnam speciem doctrinae sapientiaeque prae se tulerunt, audiuntur, leguntur, ediscuntur et inhaerescunt penitus in mentibus; cum uero eodem quasi maximus quidam magister populus accessit atque omnis undique

20. redditi dein V. deinde R 6 B 3 O 8. dein M 1. demum B 1 S E 1 2. demū D C II. reddit idem G. reddidit R (eod. atr. superscr.) idem P al. atr. redditi idē W 2. redditi id est P 3 K 2 M 2 O 2. redditi id ē L 1 J. redditi iisdem O 3. redditi & W 1. redditi uel O 1. 21. inbuimur V G B S. inbuimur R P K E. inbuamur L. 22. opinio G at ni superscr.

alt. man. || confirmatae M 2. confirmata V al. atr. suppl. confirmata R 1 6 7 G B 1 K S E 1 L 1 5 M 1 D C II O 2 8. confirmate W 1. confirmate R 1 7 B 3 O 1 E 3 (at e in ras. alio atr.) confirmare O 3. conformata O 7 om. W 2.

II. § 3, 2. tulerunt R V P 3 G B 1 3 K S E L M D C II O 1-3 7. tulerē P 1. tulerunt W 2. tulerunt J. tulerint R 6 W 1 O 8 (i ex u ras. mut.) 3. inherescunt punitus G (pun. in pen. alt. man. corr.) || accidit eodem M 1 2. accedit eodem E 2 O 7 E 3 (habet al. atr. suppl.) eodem accedit D C.

4. maximus R V G. maximus P (u in i ras. mut.) maximus K (atr. nigr. superscr.) || accessit V al. man. superscr. accedit R 6 7 S II. accedit P 3 B 3 O 2 3 om. R 1 1 7 P 1 G B 1 K E L W M J O 1 7.

have died out at least among the rich and the well-to-do. Plutarch (de lib. educ. 5) has some good remarks on the question; his own daughter had a πρῆθη (Consol. ad ux. 2 p. 608 D), but not his eldest son (ib. p. 609 E). See Marquardt, das Privatleben d. Röm. p. 56. Inscr. show the esteem and affection which often prevailed between nurses and their charges, v. Orelli-Henzen 6260, 6291, 6484.]

cum uero parentibus redditi: the parents are apt to set a bad example, Iuv. xiv passim; Sen. de ira ii 21 9—10 'nutricum et paedagogorum...patrem...': Leg. i 17, 47 'nam sensus nostros non parens, non nutrix, non magister, non poeta, non scaena deprauat, non multitudinis consensus abducit a uero. animis omnes tenduntur insidiae, uel ab eis, quos modo enumerauimus, qui teneros et rudes cum acceperunt inficiunt et flectunt, ut uolunt; uel ab ea, quae penitus in omni sensu implicata insidet, imitatrix boni, uoluptas.'

magistris: e.g. paedagogis. These men were often ignorant and vicious. Cf. Tac. dial. 29; Pseudo-Plut. de educ. 7, Mayor on Iuv. vii 218.

uanitati, 'falsehood.' Cf. N.D. ii 21, 56 and Mayor's n.; Nonius, p. 416.

opinionum confirmatae, 'rooted prejudice.' Cf. ii 26, 63 n. on opinionum.

II. § 3. For this view of the influence of the poets cf. ii. 11, 27 and notes there.

et inhaerescunt, 'and as a result take root....' inhaerescunt is not a fourth member to the asyndetic series but gives the result of the series. Cf. v 5, 12.

cum uero eodem....multitudo: Galen says (de Hipp. et Plat. Plac. v p. 459) that Posidonius censured Chrysippus for holding that men are born with a tendency to the good alone, ὑκείωσθαι πρὸς μόνον τὸ καλόν, that Chrysippus had a difficulty in explaining why children go wrong and that he referred their doing so (p. 462) to two causes, ἑτέραν μὲν ἐκ κατηγορήσεως τῶν πολλῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐγγινομένην, ἑτέραν δὲ ἐξ αὐτῆς τῶν πραγμάτων τῆς φύσεως. The former of the two causes we have here in almost so many words 'quasi maximus quidam magister populus atque omnis undique ad uitia consentiens multitudo.'

quidam: i 12, 27 n.

accessit: the verb, though absent from all the best MSS except V<sup>2</sup>, cannot be omitted. The tense must be perfect and the mood indicative, cf. ii 11, 27 'ad malam domesticam disciplinam...cum accesserunt etiam poetae' and ii 2, 5 n. on occurrit. For the sentiment cf. Seneca, Ep. 115, 11—12 'admirationem nobis parentes auri...fecerunt...deinde totus

5 ad uitia consentiens multitudo, tum plane inficimur opinionum prauitate a naturaque desciscimus, ut nobis optime naturae uim uidisse uideantur, qui nihil melius homini, nihil magis expetendum, nihil praestantius honoribus, imperiis, populari gloria iudicauerunt. ad quam fertur optimus quisque ueramque illam 10 honestatem expetens, quam una natura maxime anquirit, in

6. optime R V P G K L. optimam W 1. || naturam R 1 6 17 V P G B 1
 K 1 E 2 L 1 4-6 M D C II O 1 3 8 Gr. naturā B 3 S J. natām K 2. nām E 3 W O 2 7. nā R 7 E 1 om. charta pertusa. 7. inuidisse R 1 6 7 17
 V P G B 1 3 K S E 2 3 L 1 5 6 W M D C II J O 2 3. i uidisse L 2
 O 7. inuuisse O 1. in iudice O 8 (al. atr. suppl.) E 1 om. charta pertusa. naturae uim uidisse corr. Maduigijs. 9. optumus R V K. obtumus G. optimus L. 10. una R 1 6 7 17 V P G B K S E L 1 3-6 W 1 M II J O 1 2 7 8 Gr.
 unam C. unā D. nām W 2 om. L 2. || maxime R V G L. || inquiri
 R 1 6 7 17 V P G B K S E L 1-6 W M D C II O 1-3 7 8. inquirit J. anquirit corr. Moser.

populus...in hoc conuenit...accedunt deinde carmina poetarum.'

opinionum prauitate: stronger than opinionibus prauis. The corruption extends to all our opinions.

optime naturae uim uidisse, 'to have best perceived the true meaning of nature.'
 This emendation of Madv. in his n. on 'uis naturae perspicui potest' Fin. iii 19, 62 has driven out Bentley's optimam magistram inuidisse which was accepted by Dav. Mo. and others. The conjecture of Keil optime naturam ii uidisse is clever but uidisse naturam is not quite the expression required.

honoribus, imperiis, 'civil and military preeminence.' So long as office and command were bestowed by vote of the people popularis gloria conduced to and resulted from the attainment of both. populari gloria therefore sums up the effect of honoribus imperiis and ad quam refers only to it, not, as Küh. holds, to the other two words as well.

ad quam fertur: trans. 'at this the best men among us aim and, though they desire the truly honourable, the search for which preeminently belongs to nature, they are occupied with the veriest un-realities and pursue no well-defined form of virtue but merely a shadowy semblance of glory.'

optimus quisque: from the social, not from the moral, point of view.

ueramque...expetens: by reason of the paruulos igniculos, the ingenis nostris semina innata uirtutum of § 2.
 Cf. Seneca, Ep. 121, 14; Fin. iii 7, 23 and Madvig's n. They miss their aim, being deprauati by the populus.

It is well-known that the Stoics taught that every living thing tends to preserve its own nature; that nothing can be in harmony with the nature of any individual unless it be in harmony with the course of the universe (cf. Diog. L. vii 88 ἀκο-λούθως τῇ φύσει ζῆν); that a rational life in agreement with the general course of the world is the highest good, or virtue; that virtue alone is good. See Zeller, Stoics, etc. c. x pp. 214-6.

quam una natura maxime anquirit: Küh. thinks natura here = ii homines qui,
naturam secuti, recta uel absoluta ratione instructi sunt. But that meaning would be very obscurely expressed and natura here is certainly the same as natura in §§ 2 and 3. natura is animate, since 'the terms Soul of the world, Reason of the world, Nature, Universal Law, Providence, Destiny—all mean the same thing' Zeller, Stoics, etc., c. vi p. 145. 'Nature seeks out the honourable' I take to mean (in more prosaic form) that the honourable is essential to harmony with nature or conformity to universal law.

una intensifies maxime, cf. Fin. ii 13, 42 'uoluptas quam unam uirtus minimi facit.' Trans. 'which nature preeminently seeks out.'

unam is read by Man. Lamb. and most modern editors except Mo. Kl. and Küh.
 The meaning with unam would be 'which is preeminently the thing that nature seeks out.' The objection of Küh. that this is the only thing that natura seeks out seems insuperable though he does not take natura in the same sense as I do.
 Virtue or the honestum is the only good;
natura demands this alone, not this presumma inanitate uersatur consecraturque nullam eminentem effigiem uirtutis, sed adumbratam imaginem gloriae. est enim gloria solida quaedam res et expressa, non adumbrata; ea est consentiens laus bonorum, incorrupta uox bene iudicantium de 15 excellenti uirtute, ea uirtuti resonat tamquam imago. quae quia recte factorum plerumque comes est, non est bonis uiris repudianda. 4. illa autem, quae se eius imitatricem esse uult, temeraria atque inconsiderata et plerumque peccatorum uitiorumque laudatrix, fama popularis, simulatione honestatis formam eius

 20 pulchritudinemque corrumpit. qua caecitate homines, cum quaedam etiam praeclara cuperent eaque nescirent nec ubi nec

12. uirtutis om. O 1. 14. bonorum & incorrupta V al. atr. superscr. 15. excellenti DC O 1 excellenti V (i.e. e in i mut.) eccellente R P G B K S E L W M II J O 2 3 7 8. exceleste B 3. || gloriae post imago habent R 1 6 7 17 V G B K S E W M D C II J O 1 7 8. non habent P B 3 M 2 O 2 3. 16. rectae G. || repudianda R G B S L W D alii. repudianda K at a ex e eod. atr. mut. repudianda V eod. atr. superscr. E alio atr. superscr. repudianda K 2.

§ 4, 17. uult V G K. uult R eod. atr. uult R 10 16 L. 19. forme G at e puncto not. et ā alt. man. superscr.

eminently. una of the MSS seems to give a good sense as taken above. natura or universal law is not alone in demanding this; men who are in harmony with nature also seek it out.

anquirit: inquiri of the MSS, 'inquires into,' gives an unsuitable meaning. For anquiro see ii 10, 25 n.; iv 21, 47; v 4, 10. In all three places inferior MSS have the more familiar inquirere as a variant.

eminentem effigiem: in these words and in solida and expressa below we have metaphors from sculpture; in adumbratam a metaphor primarily from painting. eminentem, 'filled out,' 'substantial,' nearly = expressam, 'clearly defined,' for which see Reid on p. Arch. 12, 30; Wilkins on Hor. A.P. 32. The latter word is used of clear bringing out of details. adumbratam (= ἔσκιαγραφημένην) is used of a mere sketch in outline, cf. N.D. i 27, 75 'species quaedam deorum, quae nihil concreti habeat, nihil solidi, nihil expressi, nihil eminentis...cedo mihi istorum adumbratorum deorum linimenta atque formas'; p. Caelio 5, 12; Fin. v 22, 61-2; Off. iii 17, 69; p. Planc. 12, 29 and Holden's n.

effigiem uirtutis: some have omitted uirtutis but the word is required to correspond to ueram honestatem above, to which gloriae could not correspond since gloria, even when it is solida, is not uera honestas but only the concomitant of the latter.

est: emphatic by its position, cf. 3, 6 'est profecto animi medicina.'

solida: the opposite of inanis.

bene = recte.

excellenti: it seems better, with most editors, to follow V<sup>2</sup> against the majority of the MSS and give the usual ablatival form of the participle used as an adjective. Dav. Küh. Mo. Schiche read excellente.

tamquam imago: sc. uocis. 'This responds to virtue as its echo.' Cf. Virg. Geo. iv 50; Hor. Odes i 12, 4; i 20, 8.

Varro, R.R. iii 16 12 (of bees) 'primum secundum uillam, potissimum ubi non resonent imagines.' Val. Flacc. Argon. iii 597; Statius Silu. i 3, 18. Gronovius proposed to read and punctuate thus—imago; gloriaque, quia recte factorum... but Dav. rightly rejects this as a patch devoid of Ciceronian colour. gloriae, of most MSS, came in by dittography from gloriae above or else as a marginal gloss.

comes: cf. i 45, 109 'gloria...uirtutem tamquam umbra sequitur.'

§ 4. corrumpit, 'caricatures.' Hei.

qua caecitate, 'by the blinding influence of which' = cuius rei caecitate. Hei. after Schlenger quite unnecessarily reads qua caecati.

cum: concessive.

etiam: with praeclara.

eaque: for que see i 29, 71 n. Translate 'though they aimed at objects which were even noble, yet, understanding neither qualia essent, funditus alii euerterunt suas ciuitates, alii ipsi occiderunt. atque hi quidem optima petentes non tam uoluntate quam cursus errore falluntur. quid? qui pecuniae cupiditate, 25 qui uoluptatum libidine feruntur, quorumque ita perturbantur animi, ut non multum absint ab insania, [quod insipientibus contingit omnibus], his nullane est adhibenda curatio? utrum quod minus noceant animi aegrotationes quam corporis, an quod corpora curari possint, animorum medicina nulla sit?

III. 5. At et morbi perniciosiores pluresque sunt animi quam corporis; hoc enim ipso odiosi sunt, quod ad animum

22. euerterunt B E W M D C II J O 3 7 8. euerterent R V P K. euerterent G L. euertunt O 1. 23. adque G at d in t mut. alt. man. || hi R V P G B 3 K W M J O 1 2 7 hii K 2 D C II O 8 ii S at littera ante ii erasa. ii M 2 O 3. i E in fi al. atr. mut. hec L 1. alii ed. H. || optuma R B K. 24. quid qui R 10 16 P E. quidque R al. atr. superscr. quidq; V. quidq; G L. 27. contingit R V B K S E L W M D C II O 2 3 7 8. contigit P J O 1 G at n alt. man. superscr. 28. contigit W 2. || his R V G B K E L W J O 7. hii C D O 8. iis S. || nulla G at ne superscr. ait. man. 28. an...corporis om. G in marg. infer. add. alt. man.

III. § 5, 2. hi enim ipsi R 1 6 7 V G B K I S E I L 6 W M J O 1 2 7 hii K 2 E 3 L 3-5 D C II O 8 L 2 (om. ipsi). ii M 2 E 2 O 3 (om. ipsi). ei P 3. hi enim odiosi P I L I. hoc enim ipso corr. Bakius.

where these were to be found nor what they really were...?

alii...alii: Cicero is thinking of Caesar and Pompey, as Hei. notes.

atque...quidem, 'moreover,' 'and indeed.' Cicero passes from the case of ambition to the still stronger cases of avarice, etc. The formula atque...quidem...is suited to such transitions. See Küh. here and Hand Tursell. I p. 492 foll. A personal or, as here, a demonstrative pronoun often follows to mark the correspondence of clauses. hi is alone right; the logical pronoun ei would not suit for this purpose. 'And while such men with the best of aims go wrong... though not wilfully it is true but through a mistake with regard to the course, what of those who are carried away by avarice...?'

cursus: gen. of indirect object. See Naegelsbach, Stil. § 120.

uoluptatum libidine: cf. Sen. 12, 39 uoluptatis auidae libidines'; 40 'libido uoluptatis.'

quod insipientibus contingit omnibus: this Stoic commonplace comes in most ineptly here and is rightly bracketed by Bake, whom Bai. and Hei. follow. Ml. and others retain the words. T.S. would make the inaccuracy Cicero's own and Küh. thinks that in these hastily written books we must not be too critical. But though Cicero is often betrayed by haste into inaccuracies of construction it is hardly likely that so great an orator would thus destroy his climax. The clause seems evidently a mere gloss upon the word insania.

III. § 5. at et: the clause at et morbi perniciosiores pluresque sunt animi quam corporis answers the question utrum quod minus noceant animi aegrotationes quam corporis. We ought therefore to have a second et-clause to answer the second part of the preceding double question an...animorum medicina nulla est, such clause running somewhat as follows—et animi medicina certe est, but the intervention of the explanation why the diseases of the mind are more harmful than those of the body hoc enim ipso...grauiores has caused the construction to be broken off and the an-clause is answered in a new sentence qui uero probari potest...leaving et pendens.

hoc enim ipso: the correction of Bake for hi enim ipsi of the MSS is accepted by most editors except Sff. The argument is 'diseases of the mind are more harmful (and more numerous) than those of the body. They are troublesome from the very fact that it is the mind which they affect and disturb; and the ailing mind pertinent eumque sollicitant, 'animusque aeger,' ut ait Ennius, 'semper errat neque pati neque perpeti potest, cupere numquam desinit.' quibus duobus morbis, ut omittam alios, aegritudine et cupiditate, qui tandem possunt in corpore esse grauiore? qui uero probari potest ut sibi mederi animus non possit, cum ipsam medicinam corporis animus inuenerit, cumque ad corporum sanationem multum ipsa corpora et natura ualeat nec omnes, qui curari se passi sint, continuo etiam conualescant, animi autem, qui se sanari uoluerint praeceptisque sapientium paruerint, sine ulla dubitatione sanentur? 6. est profecto animi medicina, philosophia; cuius auxilium non ut in corporis morbis petendum est foris, omnibusque opibus uiribus ut nosmet ipsi

3. sollicitant B K L W 2. sollicitant R V G (alt. man.) sollicitat W. sol icitent S unius litt. spatio post l rel. 4. errat V litt. eras. || pati R I 6 7 17 V P I-4 G B K S E L W M D C J O I-3 7 8. parci E 2 II. || neque perpeti om. O 7. 5. obmittam G at b conf. alt. man. 9. ualeat R I 6 7 V G B K S E L W 2 M J O I-3 7 8. ualeat P al. atr. ualeant W D C II. ualeat E 2. 10. omnes V in e ut uid. mut. omnis R G. omnis E L W 2. omis S W. || passi sunt R I 6 7 10 17 V P 3 G B K S E L W M D C II J O I-3 7 8. st P R 16. K 2. passi sint corr. Tregder. || conualescunt G u exp. et a superscr. alt. man. 11. qui se R I 6 V P G B K S E L W M II J O I-3 7 8. se om. D C.

§ 6, 14. opibus uiribus R P G B L W 2 C O 3. opibus & uiribus V al. man. opibus et uiribus W J O 8. opibus iuribusque R 6 7 B 3 M D O 2. opibus iuribusq; E al. atr. suppl. operibus et uiribus O I. uiribus om. E 2 II O 7 Gr.

is ever wrong, a prey to annoyance and desire, two evils than which, not to mention any others, no ills of body can be more grievous.' Cicero does not offer any proof here that morbi animi are plures for plures was only rhetorically tacked on to perniciosiores, the latter being the only word necessary to take up the words quod minus noceant. Cicero's reason for considering them to be plures is seen from v 1, 3.

Sff. reading hi enim ipsi thinks that these words refer to morbi corporis and that the argument is 'even these affect the mind and are on that account odious.' Hence we infer that the diseases of the mind are plures, while the animus aeger shows that they are also perniciosiores.

Ennius: Fragm. Scen. 392 (ed. Vahlen): the play from which the words are quoted is unknown. [Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poet. Fragm. 2<sup>a</sup> 68, regards the lines as troch. tetrameters: for pati he reads poti (from potior) and potis est for potest, supposing some word or words to have been lost between potis est and cupere.]

pati: in pati...perpeti we have a gradation 'endure...hold out.' The allitera-tive repetition is characteristic of old Latin. [See Vahlen's n. Enn. Poetis Rell. p. 194.] Sff. and Küh. follow Ribbeck in altering to poti=potiri, comparing 18, 41 ut natura eis potiens dolore careat.

qui...probari potest: probari, when negated (qui probari potest?=non probari potest), lends itself to the construction of result since the proposition is only a mental conception: 'how can a view be established which would make it out that the mind...?' Küh. In Fin. ii 33, 108 we may have the same construction but Madv. and MI. there read qui id probari potest. Küh. compares non uerisimile est with ut and subj. and uerisimile est with acc. and inf. See Madv. on Fin. ii 3, 6 'hoc uero optimum, ut is...' and Gram. § 374 obs. 2.

corpora et natura: the two words are looked upon as forming a single whole, natura being the more important, 'the constitution of the body'; the predicate ualeat can therefore be in the singular. Küh. Gram. II p. 32.

§ 6. omnibusque: for que see i 29, 71 n. opibus uiribus, 'resources and forces,' 'might and main.' This reads like a 15 nobis mederi possimus elaborandum est. quamquam de uniuersa philosophia, quanto opere et expetenda esset et colenda, satis, ut arbitror, dictum est in Hortensio. de maximis autem rebus nihil fere intermisimus postea nec disputare nec scribere. his autem libris exposita sunt ea, quae a nobis cum familiaribus 20 nostris in Tusculano erant disputata. sed quoniam duobus superioribus de morte et de dolore dictum est, tertius dies disputationis hoc tertium uolumen efficiet. 7. ut enim in Acade-miam nostram descendimus inclinato iam in posmeridianum tempus die, poposci eorum aliquem, qui aderant, causam dis-25 serendi. tum res acta sic est :

IV. A. Videtur mihi cadere in sapientem aegritudo.

M. Num reliquae quoque perturbationes animi, formidines, 16. quanto opere R V P G B K S E L D O 3 Gr. 17. maxumis R V G B. maxumis P. <sup>v</sup>maximis K atr. nigr. maximis L. 19. eaq G.

§ 7, 22. incademiam G alt. man. superscr. 23. postmeridianum R I 6 7 17 V
 P 1-4 G B K S E L W M D C H J O 1-3 7 8. 24. aliquid G in aliquid alt.
man. corr. || quid adherant G sed d et h conf. alt. man.

IV. Litteras A et M ignorant R I 2 10 16 V B I K I O 7. habent R 6 7
 G B 3 W I O 3. B et M habet R 17. D et T habet II. D et M habet D.
Di et M habet O 1. B et T habet O 8. Atti et Mar. habet O 2.

proverbial expression, cf. equis uiris; uentis remis. The asyndeton might also be justified by the close connexion between the two ideas, cf. i 14, 31 n. It is retained by Küh. Hei. T.S. Ml. Writers are not limited to the proverbial form; thus in iii 11, 25 we have 'omnibus uiribus atque opibus repugnandum est.' For this Klotz compares Ter. Heaut. 904 'dictum factum' with Ter. And. 381 'dictum ac factum.' Dav. reads et before uiribus; Bent. Wes. Bai. (in Tauchnitz text) atque; Schiche ac; Tregder and Baiter-Orelli bracket uiribus.

de uniuersa philosophia: ii 1, 4 n. on 'uniuersam.'

esset: for the preference of the secondary sequence after a perfect see i 1, 1 n.

in Hortensio: see ii 2, 4 n.

scribere: after the Hortensius Cic. wrote the Academica and the de Finibus. See Introd. to Vol. I p. xv.

§ 7. in Academiam: ii 3, 9 n.

posmeridianum is read by T.S. This and not pomeridianum, which Orelli reads in his Oxford edition, is the form which Cic. in Or. 47, 157 professes to prefer. Most editors retain the reading of the MSS.

causam disserendi: 'a subject for discussion.' For causa in this sense cf. Or. ii 36, 153 'istorum omnium summatim causas et genera...gustauit.' The subject of discussion here is a general question (θεός, quaestio infinita); the term causa is more usually applied to a particular question (ὑπόθεσις, quaestio finita); cf. Topica 21, 79; de Inu. i 6, 8.

IV. reliquae: The Stoics divided irrational emotions (perturbationes, πάθη) into four classes viz. λύπη, φόβος, ἐπιθυμία, ἡδονή or aegritudo, metus, libido, laetitia gestiens, cf. iv 4, 8; Fin. iii 10, 35; Zeller, Stoics, etc. p. 233. Each of these main divisions has several subordinate varieties and iracundia (ira) is a subdivision of libido, see iv 7, 16. Thus instead of enumerating the remaining three Cicero only mentions two and a subordinate species of one of the two. Hence emendations have been attempted, e.g. Fr. Fabricius proposed incunditates. But an accurate enumeration is not necessary to Cicero's purpose in this book, where he deals only with aegritudo, as it is in book iv, where he deals with the remaining three emotions. Cf. haec and ferè below and the plurals formidines, etc. 'fits of terror,' etc. Cicero is more rhetorical and less precise here. Similarly in iii 5, 11 he first co-ordinates libido and iracundia and then admits that iracundia libidinis pars est. Dav. cites other in-libidines, iracundiae? haec enim fere sunt eius modi quae Graeci πάθη appellant; ego poteram morbos, et id uerbum 5 esset e uerbo, sed in consuetudinem nostram non caderet. nam misereri, inuidere, gestire, laetari, haec omnia morbos Graeci appellant, motus animi rationi non obtemperantis, nos autem hos eosdem motus concitati animi recte, ut opinor, perturbationes dixerimus, morbos autem non satis usitate, nisi quid 10 aliud tibi uidetur.

8. A. Mihi uero isto modo.

M. Haecine igitur cadere in sapientem putas?

A. Prorsus existimo.

M. Ne ista gloriosa sapientia non magno aestimanda est, 15 siquidem non multum differt ab insania.

A. Quid? tibi omnisne animi commotio uidetur insania?

M. Non mihi quidem soli, sed, id quod admirari saepe soleo, maioribus quoque nostris hoc ita uisum intellego multis saeculis

3. libidines R V G K S E L. || <sup>hu</sup> eiusmodi V al. man. superscr. 4. πάθη W. pathe G alii. 7. obtemperantis V P G K L W 2 M 2 J O. optemperantis B 1. obtemperantis R eod. atr. suppl. obtemperantes P 2 B 3 S E 2 W M D C II O 2 3 7 8. optemperantes E.

§ 8, 12. haecine G K. hęcine V. haecine R alio atr. suppl. hęc E alio atr. suppl. h'cine O 7. haecine M 2 hęcine W (t an c incert.) heccine B 3 S E 2 L W 2 M D C II J O 1-3. hęcine B. hęcine O 8. 14. ne R V P G B K S E L W 2 M D C II J O 1-3 8. nae W. nec O 7. || magno R V P G B K S E L W D C II O 2 3 7 8. magna O. 17. admirari K L W. <sup>d</sup> amirari R eod. atr. amirari V O 7. ammirari G. 18. intellego R V G K. intellego R 10 16 S E L.

stances—Off. i 20, 69 'uacandum autem omni est animi perturbatione, cum cupiditate et metu, tum etiam aegritudine et uoluptate nimia et iracundia'; i 29, 102 'licet ora ipsa cernere iratorum aut eorum qui aut libidine aliqua aut metu commoti sunt aut uoluptate nimia gestiunt.'

haec: for the comprehensive use of the neuter cf. ii 26, 62 n.

ego poteram morbos: cf. Fin. iii 10, 35 'perturbationes animum...quas Graeci πάθη appellant, poteram ego uerbum ipsum interpretans morbos appellare, sed non conueniret ad omnia.'

poteram: Madv. 348 (e) obs. 1.

morbos: here as elsewhere Cic. is incorrect in his moralising upon the shortcomings of the Greek language. morbos translates νόσος not πάθος. Cf. his identification of πόνος with labor in ii 15, 35.

uerbum...e uerbo: sc. exprimere or expressum. For similar phrases see Reid on Ac. ii 6, 17.

in consuetudinem nostram=in cons. nostri sermonis.

obtemperantis: accusative.

dixerimus: perf. subj. Küh. Gram. 11 p. 133, cf. iv 6, 12 n. on 'appellemus.'

§ 8. ne: i 30, 74 n.

magno: this abl. is found with aestimare in Cic. as well as magni. For magno cf. Verr. iv 7, 13; Fin. iii 3, 11; v 30, 90; and perhaps Parad. vi 3, 51; also nihilo Fin. iv 23, 62. For magni cf. T.D. v 7, 20; Fin. iii 13, 43; p. Cluent. 58, 159 'maximi aestimare conscientiam mentis suae' but MSS maxime; p. Mur. 37, 79 'magni interest...esse Kal. Ian. in r. p. duo consulēs.'

a quo...manauit: cf. Reid on Ac. i 4, 15—16 and reff. cited there; Zeller, Socrates p. 39 E.T.<sup>2</sup> 'The pre-Socratic philosophy was simply and solely a ante Socraten, a quo haec omnis, qua<sup>2</sup> est de uita et de moribus, 20 philosophia manauit.

A. Quonam tandem modo?

M. Quia nomen insaniae significat mentis aegrotationem et morbum [, id est insanitatem et aegrotum animum, quam appellarunt insaniam. 9. omnis autem perturbationes animi

19. socraten R P K S. socratem V P 2 3 B 1 K 2 E 2 L M C O 1-3. socratē B 3 W D H O 7 8. socratē<sup>m</sup> E 1. socrantem G sed n expunx. et conf. alt. man. || et de moribus R V P G B K S E L M H J O 2 7 8. de om. W D C O 1 3. moribus om. W 2. 23. et aegrotum animum R V P G B K S E L W 2 D C H O 1-3 7 8 Gr. et aegrotum animum M. et aegritudinem ai W. 24. appellarunt G K. appellauerunt W.

§ 9. omnis V. omnis R eod. atr. omis K E L W 2. omnes G. omis S.

philosophy of nature; the transitional philosophy of the Sophists was the first to leave nature for ethical and dialectical questions. After Socrates the dialectical tendency is supreme. His own attention was exclusively occupied with determining conceptions, and enquiries respecting virtue.<sup>2</sup>

For the triple division of philosophy cf. Ac. i 5, 19 'fuit ergo...philosophandi ratio triplex: una de uita et moribus, altera de natura et rebus occultis, tertia de disserendo et quid uerum sit, quid falsum, quid rectum in oratione prauomue, quid consentiens, quid repugnans iudicando,' and Reid's n.

de uita et de moribus = περὶ τῶν ἠθικῶν.

The double translation of a Greek term see ii 21, 47 n. on eneruatum quodam modo et languidum. The repetition of the preposition is strange, and unusual in such translations. It is probably intrusive.

mentis: the ruling portion of the animus, cf. § 11 'mentis cui regnum totius animi a natura tributum est' and N. D. ii 11, 29 quoted on i 10, 20 n.

id est insanitatem...insaniunt: this passage is open to much suspicion. The id est clause introduces an unnecessary explanation and an absurd repetition. The rest of the passage gives us the views of philosophers in a hackneyed Stoic syllogism to show that all non-philosophers are mad, though the point to be proved is not this but that the early Romans held mental disturbance to be identical with madness, and a view is thus attributed to philosophers which is limited to Stoic philosophers. Then with a change from present to past time and a meaningless enim we have the sentence sanitatem...non posset tacked on, with philosophi instead of the required maiores nostri as its only possible subject, a construction which would leave us quite without explanation of the views of the early Romans.

Sff. emends and reads id est insanitatem ex aegrotato animo...nostri sanitatem animorum...comparing for ex (et the variants (inter alia) on i 39, 93 and accounting for the loss of nostri by the abbreviation nri and for the intrusion of enim by assuming dittography from the preceding em. But the id est clause would still be unsatisfactory and the comparison which he finds between the view of the Stoics and that of the early Romans to shew that both arrived at the same conclusion would not be clearly expressed.

Bentley, followed by Dav. and others, declared the clause id est...insaniam to be spurious. Bake bracketed the whole passage id est...insaniunt, and the theory of a double gloss has found many adherents, among them Wes. Bai. Hei. T. S. Ml. Schiche.

Nissen Or. and Mo. retained the whole passage. Or. notes 'haec etymologica sunt, addita in eum finem ut, cur iam Romani antiqui diu ante Socratem rectum nomen illi animi commotioni indidissent, manifestius appareret.'

It seems best to suppose that the unconvincing nature of Cicero's argument has led to the fabrication of glosses to eke out his meaning, these glosses being compiled from §§ 9 and 10.

Hei. notes that the Stoic tendency to support argument by appeal to the popular consciousness often leads to strained interpretations. Of course Cic. did not find in his Greek sources a ref. to the views of the early Romans but he may have adapted an argument drawn from the views of the early Greeks.

25 morbos philosophi appellant negantque stultum quemquam his morbis uacare. qui autem in morbo sunt sani non sunt, et omnium insipientium animi in morbo sunt; omnes insipientes igitur insaniunt]. sanitatem enim animorum positam in tranquillitate quadam constantiaque censebant; his rebus mentem 30 uacuam appellarunt insaniam, propterea quod in perturbato animo sicut in corpore sanitas esse non posset.

V. 10. Nec minus illud acute, quod animi adfectionem lumine mentis carentem nominauerunt amentiam eandemque dementiam. ex quo intellegendum est eos qui haec rebus nomina posuerunt sensisse hoc idem, quod a Socrate acceptum
5 diligenter Stoici retinuerunt, omnis insipientes esse non sanos. qui est enim animus in aliquo morbo (morbos autem hos perturbatos motus, ut modo dixi, philosophi appellant), non magis est sanus quam id corpus quod in morbo est. ita fit ut sapientia sanitas sit animi, insipientia autem quasi insanitas quaedam, quae non potit W 2. non potest O 1 om. B. posset corr. Ernestius.

25. his morbis R V G B K E L W M O 1 2 7. hiis morbis D C II O 8. iis morbis M 2 S (at una litt. ut uid. ante i eras.) morbis his O 3. 31. non possit R V P G K S E L W M (non ut Küh.) D C II O 2 3 7 8. non poterit L 3 5.

V. § 10, 1. ille G alt. man. corr. || occulte L al. atr. || adfectionem V P G K E. adfectionem R. affectionem S L. 3. intellegendum R V P G K. intelligendum L. 4. posuerunt R V P G B 3 K S E L M D C II O 2 3 7 8. posuere L 5 W 2 J O. imposuerunt W. imposuerunt B. imposuere R 7. || sensisse G. 5. omnis

V B K O 2. omnis R. omis W 2. omnes G. om̄s L. || insipientes R V G B K S E L W 2 O 2. 6. qui S M. quis P. quis R V B K E M 2

D C J O 7 8. Qis W 2. quis G alt. man. superscr. quid L O 1 2. cuius R 7 W. || est enim animus R V P G B K S E L W 2 (at sanus in marg.) M J O 1-3. enim om. C D. est enim sanus M 2 B 3 (at animus in marg.) enim est animus O 7. enim animus est W. animus enim qui est E 2 II.

§ 9. mentem uacuam = mentis uacuae adfectionem.

posset: i 4, 7 n. on dedimus... aude-remus. possit of the best MSS could not be defended by possim which may be right in i 4, 7.

V. § 10. amentiam... dementiam, 'lack of mind'... 'loss of mind.'

rebus nomina posuerunt: inponere nomen is much more usual, but Dav. compares N. D. i 17, 44 'sunt enim rebus nouis noua ponenda nomina.'

a Socrate acceptum: the Stoic paradox  $\delta\tau\iota\ \pi\acute{\alpha}\varsigma\ \delta\phi\rho\omega\upsilon\ \mu\alpha\lambda\iota\gamma\epsilon\tau\alpha\iota$  was never uttered by Socrates. But the germ of the doctrine may be found in his teaching, cf. Xen. Mem. iii 9, 6 where he is said to have pronounced the failing to know oneself and the imagining that one knows what one does not know to be  $\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\gamma\upsilon\tau\acute{\alpha}\tau\omega\ \mu\alpha\lambda\iota\varsigma$ .

Editors should not refer to the 'Second Alcibiades' in this connexion, for Socrates says there that while all madmen are unwise all unwise men are not mad, Ps.-Plato Alc. ii cc. 4-5 pp. 139-140. Cic. makes similar assertions in Ac. ii 44, 136 and in Parad. 4.

qui est enim animus: the argument is 'They rightly named that state of mind which lacks the control of reason amentia and dementia. For the diseased mind (and an excited mind is a diseased mind) is not sound. Hence wisdom is a sound state of mind and lack of wisdom may be termed "unsoundness" of mind or, in other words, madness or loss of reason.'

ut modo dixi: c. 4 § 7.

quasi insanitas quaedam: the word insanitas occurs in Cic. only here and in 10 est insania eademque dementia; multoque melius haec notata sunt uerbis Latinis quam Graecis, quod aliis quoque multis locis reperietur. sed id alias, nunc quod instat. 11. totum igitur id, quod quaerimus, quid et quale sit, uerbi uis ipsa declarat. eos enim sanos quoniam intellegi necesse est, quorum mens motu 15 quasi morbo perturbata nullo sit, qui contra adfecti sint, hos insanos appellari necesse est. itaque nihil melius quam quod est in consuetudine sermonis Latini, cum exisse ex potestate dicimus eos qui ecfrenati feruntur aut libidine aut iracundia; quamquam ipsa iracundia libidinis est pars; sic enim definitur: iracundia

20 ulciscendi libido. qui igitur exisse ex potestate dicuntur, idcirco dicuntur, quia non sint in potestate mentis, cui regnum totius

12. reperietur R V P B K E W M D C O 2 3 8. reperitur S W<sub>2</sub> II J O.

reperitur G (ead. man.) repperietur L. reppitur E 2.

§ 11, 14. quoniam R I 7 V P G S E L 4 C II O 3 Gr. quidem R 17 O 8. qm K 2 E 2 L D. qm B. quō K. quomodo O 1 om. R 6 B 3 L 3 5 6 W M O 2 7. || intellegi R V P G B K. intelligi S E L W C. 15. nullo B 3

E 2 W M D C II O 1-3 8. nullo V (ex nulla mut.) nulla B. nulla R G K E L O 7. || adfecti V K E. adfecti R d in f al. atr. mut. adfecti G B L. || sint R V P G B K S E L W 2 M II J O 1 2 8. sunt W D C

O 3 7. 16. insani G alt. man. superscr. || appellari R V G B K E L. appellari S.

18. ecfrenati B K. ecfrenati R al. atr. suppl. hecfrenati G sed h conf. alt. man.

hecfrenati V. ecfrenati R 6 P 2 S L W M 2 D C J O 1 3 8. & frenati E.

affrenati O 7. || libidine R V P K L. || iracundia G (bis). 19. libidinis R V P K L.

20. qui igitur R P G K. quīs igitur V. quīs igitur R 16 O 7. || idcirco R V P G K L. idcirco B. 21. sint R V G B K S E 2 L W 2 M II J O 3 7.

sint P al. atr. suppl. sunt E D C O 1 2 8. st' W.

the suspected passage above, and here its use is apologised for as involving an unfamiliar metaphor. Cf. i 12, 27 n.

multoque melius: cf. ii 15, 35 n. on 'amantis doloris.'

id alias: sc. agemus, cf. de Inu. ii 11, 37 'qua re ante factis omissis illud, quod instet, agi oportere.'

§ 11. quid et quale sit, 'its nature and quality.'

quoniam: for the position of the conjunction after one or more emphasised words see Madv. § 465 b.

exisse ex potestate, 'to have lost their self-control.' Gk. ἐξήρασθαι ἐαυτῶν. Cf. iv 36, 77 'exisse de potestate, id est de consilio, de ratione, de mente; horum enim potestas in totum animum esse debet.' It is not necessary to adopt the suggestion of Turnebus, Aduers. ii 11, approved by Dav. that this expression arose from the fact that furiosi were from an early period subject to the potestas of their adgnati and gentiles. Dav. quotes Senec. de Ira i 12 'uenitque in alienam potestatem, dum in sua non est.'

iracundia libidinis est pars: iv 7, 16 and iii 4, 7 n.

iracundia ulciscendi libido, 'for so the definition runs: anger, a desire for revenge,' much as we should say 'for so the dictionary has it.' This punctuation, adopted by Mo. and Küh., is better than that of most editors 'sic enim definitur iracundia: ulciscendi libido,' for Cicero is evidently quoting as from a glossary. Cf. Festus, passim. H. Stephanus in Mo. takes Cic. to be translating this definition from the Greek: ὀργή· τιμωρίας ἐπιθυμία.

The well-known fact that sic is often redundantly used, pointed out here by Ml. 'for the benefit of Küh.,' does not determine the point.

igitur: resuming, i 13, 30 n.; i 7, 14 n. mentis, cui regnum: § 8 n.

animi a natura tributum est. Graeci autem μανίαν unde appellent, non facile dixerim; eam tamen ipsam distinguimus nos melius quam illi. hanc enim insaniam, quae iuncta stultitia 25 patet latius, a furore disiungimus, Graeci uolunt illi quidem, sed parum ualent uerbo; quem nos furorem, μελαγχολίαν illi uocant; quasi uero atra bili solum mens ac non saepe uel iracundia grauiore uel timore uel dolore moueatur; quo genere Athamantem, Alcmaeonem, Aiace, Orestem furere dicimus. qui ita sit ad-

22. Graecia G sed a exp. et conf. alt. man. || appellent R 7 L 2 W. appellant R V P G B K S E L W 2 M D C I I J O 1-3 7 8. om. R 6. 23. ipsa G. 24. stultitia P G L 5 W 2 O 1. stultitiæ R a in æ al. atr. mut. stulticia R 1 7 L J. stultitiæ V P 3 K M 2 O 2 Gr. stultitię B. stultitiæ R 6. stultitię W. stultitię P 2 4 S E 2 3 M C O 3 7. stultitię B 3 K 2 E D I I O 8. 25. disiungimus V G B K S E L W M 2 C I I O 8. distinguimus R cod. atr. distinguimus W 2 M D E 3 O 7. 26. melancholiam G B. 27. hac non G sed h confossum. || saepæ G. 28. dolorem G.

Graeci...μανίαν unde appellent: the root man- from which μανία is derived is found also in μαῖνās and μάντις in Gk. and in the Latin words mens and monco: Giles, Manual of Comp. Phil. pp. 32 ff.

distinguiamus, 'subdivide.' Cic. takes μανία to be the Gk. general term and seems to find no particular term to correspond to insania and only an inadequate term to correspond to furore. But he does not indicate a Latin general term to include insania and furore and his assertions with regard to μανία and μελαγχολία are incorrect, μανία not μελαγχολία being the usual word for furore in Hippocrates and other pre-Ciceronian Gk. writers. Cf. Sylburg in Mo., where it is also pointed out that Cic. elsewhere fails to observe his own distinction e.g. in Off. iii 25, 95 'si gladium quis apud te sana mente deposuerit, repetat insaniens,' where furiosus would be the proper word according to the distinction here drawn.

iuncta stultitia: examples of the abl. without prep., to express that which is united with something else, are rare and are confined to the participle and gerundive, unless v 33, 96, where most editors now follow Madv. in inserting cum after tum, be an instance from the finite verb. Instances are found in Att. ix 10, 4 'infinitum bellum iunctum miserima fuga'; Or. iii 14, 55 'magis probitate iungenda summaque prudentia,' where see Wilkins' n. Brut. 44, 162 quoted by Küh. on v 33, 96 seems to require emendation; see Piderit's and Kellogg's n. In Leg. iii 20, 47 'id est enim iunctum magistratibus' the case may be dat. not abl., or cum may have fallen out after tum. coniungi is more common than iungi and coniunctus cum aliquo or cum aliqua re is usual. The simple abl. is found in Phil. iii 14, 35 'ea summa miseria est summo dedecore coniuncta'; v 7, 20 'huius mendicitas auiditate coniuncta.' The dat. is found with iungor Ac. ii 14, 44 'posteriori superius non iungitur,' but not in the same sense as in our passage.

patet latius: being united with folly it has a wide application since all stulti are insani.

illi quidem: i 3, 6 n.

uerbo: abl. of means. 'They are unfortunate in their word.'

quasi uerbo: for the pres. subj. cf. i 22, 50 n.

ac non=ac non potius, cf. i 7, 13 n. on 'et non eos.'

Athamantem: Athamas, father of Phrixus and Helle by Nephele, and of Learchus and Melicerta by Ino, was driven mad by Juno and slew Learchus and pursued Ino, who jumped into the sea with Melicerta, whereupon she was changed into Leucothea and M. into Palaemon. Cf. i 12, 28 n.; Ovid, Met. iv 416—562.

Alcmaeonem: Amphiarus joined the expedition of the Seven against Thebes, induced thereto by his wife Epiphyle, who had been bribed with the gift of the golden necklace. At Thebes the earth opened and swallowed him together with his chariot. Before quitting Argos, knowing the fate that was in store for him, he charged his sons to avenge him upon their mother when they should be grown up. Alcmaeon accordingly slew his mother and was in consequence driven mad and persecuted by the Furies. Cf. ii 25, 60.

30 fectus, eum dominum esse rerum suarum uetant duodecim tabulae; itaque non est scriptum 'SI INSANVS' sed 'SI FVRIOSVS ESCIT.' stultitiam enim censuerunt constantia, id est sanitate, uacantem posse tamen tueri mediocritatem officiorum et uitae

29. orestem R V P G K S L D. orestē E. horestem B W. || adfectus V G K E.

adfectus R al. atr. mut. affectus B S L. 30. duodecim G K. duodecim R eod. ut uid. atr. duodecim V. XII D. 31. furiosus esse incipit R V P G B K S E L M D C II O 1-3 7 8. ēē incipit W. incipit J (esse om.) icip̄ W 2 (esse om.) furiosus escit corr. Bouhier. 32. stultitiam R 16 P 3 B L 2-6 W 2 M O 1-3 7. stultitiā R 7 K W J O 8 Gr. stultitiā R et P linea alio atr. supra duct.

stultiā V. stulticiam K 2 E 2. stulticiā B 3 E D II. stultitia G. stulticie R 10. || inconstantiam V. inconstantia G. inconstantia B 3 K L 5 W M D O 8. iŕstatiā W 2. inconstantiam R 16 P B K 2 S E L M 2 O 1-3 7 Gr. i constantiam J. inconstantiam R 7 17 II. || id est G K O 1 3 7 Gr. idest W 2 id ē L O 8. idē E 2. id B. -i. W.

Aiacem: i 41, 98 n.

Orestem: persecuted by the Furies for slaying his mother Clytaemnestra who, along with Aegisthus, had murdered his father Agamemnon.

furere: present, because they appeared upon the stage in plays then extant. Cf. 18, 42 n. on 'uolt.'

duodecim tabulae: see the extract and reff. under ii 21, 48 n. on 'amicorum propinquorumque custodiis.'

escit: an inchoative form = esse incipit of the MSS, which is evidently due to an explanatory gloss. That escit was rightly restored by Bouhier is indicated by the fact that Nonius, p. 443, quotes this passage with essit and MSS of de Inu. ii 50, 148 quote this law with erit and those of ad Herenn. i 13, 23 with existet or existat. escit occurs in Lucr. i 619 and in Gellius xx 1, 25; escunt in Leg. iii 3, 9 'discordiae ciuium escunt' and it is also no doubt the true reading lower down in the same section 'ast quando consules... nec escunt' and in ii 24, 60 'cui auro dentes iuncti escunt.' Festus has super-escit = supererit and Paulus from Festus escit = erit and obescit = oberit.

stultitiam = insaniam, as maintained in the preceding sections, and this = insanos, abstract for concrete. Nonius p. 443 quotes the passage thus 'insaniam enim censuerunt...' but insaniam...sanitate uacantem would be intolerable and the authority of Nonius is slight, cf. Muller's Nonius II<sup>2</sup> p. 257. Ern. proposed stultitiam enim censuerunt, id est inconstantiam sanitate uacantem, posse...

id est = ergo etiam. These words are often used not to express identity but to add something necessary to the argument, cf. i 31, 75 n.

mediocritatem officiorum = media officia, but the idea in media receives more prominence from the substantive, cf. Naegelsbach, Lat. Stil. § 74. This use is very common in Latin, cf. p. Ligario 11, 33 'hunc splendorem omnium' = hos omnes uiros splendidos; Tac. Hist. iv 24 'unius senis ualetudine' = ab uno sene inualido.

While the strict Stoic doctrine was that only those actions that were done in accordance with virtue as the outcome of perfect intention (possible only to the ideal wise man) were good—these being καρορθώματα, recte facta—and that only the direct opposites of these were evil—ἀμαρτήματα, peccata—and that all things except virtue and vice were matters of indifference, ἀδιάφορα, res indifferentes, virtue being an unchangeable condition of the mind in accordance with right reason, the Stoics were compelled as a concession to the practical facts of life to admit that whatever contributes to bodily well-being must have a certain positive value (ἀξία) and must be desirable (προηγμένα, producta) in all cases in which no higher good suffers in consequence, and that whatever is opposed to bodily well-being, when higher duties are not involved, must have a negative value (ἀπαξία) and consequently deserve to be avoided (ἀποπροηγμένα, reiecta); and that an action might be done in accordance with reason even though the perfect intention necessary to make it a right action were lacking. All actions which occupied this intermediate position they called καθήκοντα (appropriate actions), officia (duties); and as καρορθώματα, right actions, were sometimes termed καθήκοντα τέλεια these intermediate actions were sometimes termed καθήκοντα μέσα, media officia. The stultus (i.e. the non-philosopher) cannot have the perfect intention necessary to the performance of right actions but communem cultum atque usitatum; furorem autem esse rati 35 sunt mentis ad omnia caecitatem. quod cum maius esse uideatur quam insania, tamen eius modi est ut furor in sapientem cadere possit, non possit insania. sed haec alia quaestio est; nos ad propositum reuertamur.

VI. 12. Cadere opinor, in sapientem aegritudinem tibi dixisti uideri.

A. Et uero ita existimo.

M. Humanum id quidem, quod ita existimas. non enim
5 silice nati sumus, sed est naturale in animis tenerum quiddam

34. cultum G c in ras. uisitatum G in usit. corr. 38. praepositum G pae in pro alt. man. corr.

VI. 12. 3. et uero R V P G B K S E L D C II O I 3 7 8 Gr. et uere B 3
M O 2. et uero W 2 J. ego uero W. || existimo R V B K S E L. existimo G.

4. existimas S L. existumas R V G B K E. || enim silice R K L W. enim silice V.

5. scilice E. || naturale R 6 P 2 E 2 L 5 W I II J. naturabile V P 3.

naturabile R I 7 17 P I 4 G B I 3 K E L M I 2 D C O 2 3 7 8. nbile K 2.

file W 2. || animis tenerum R I 6 7 17 V P I - 4 G B I 3 K I 2 S E I 2
L I - 6 W 2 M I 2 D C I I J O I - 3 8. aio tenerum W I. ais et'num O 7. || quiddam B I 3 K E 2 L W I 2 M 2 C O I 3. quidam R (fort. eod. atr. suppl.) V. quiddam G at ddam in ras. quidam M O 2.

he may perform officia. Zeller, Stoics etc.,
c. xi pp. 261—274; Diog. L. vii 108;
Stob. Ecl. II 158 foll.; Off. i 3, 8; iii 3, 14;
Ac. i 10, 37; Fin. iii 17, 58.

ad: 'in respect of,' a common use.
Küh. compares (inter alia) 33, 79
'Chryssippi consolatio ad ueritatem fir-missima est, ad tempus aegritudinis difficilis'; Livy xxi 54, 3 'hostem caecum ad has belli artes habebitis.'

quod: sc. ad omnia caecum esse.

furores...insania: the sapiens cannot have that form of madness which implies weakness of intellect. Virtue is right-ordered reason, iv 15, 34; and once possessed it can never be lost, ii 14, 32 n.; but furores may be produced by an overpowering physical cause, cf. Diog. L. vii 118 ἐπι δὲ οὐδὲ μανήσθαι προπεσεῖσθαι μέντοι ποτὲ αὐτῷ φαντασίας ἀλλοκότους διὰ μελαγχολίαν ἢ λήρησιν, οὐ κατὰ τὸν τῶν αἰρετῶν λόγον, ἀλλὰ παρὰ φύσιν, quoted by Dav. See also ibid. § 127, quoted in v. Arnim's Stoica III 237.

possit, non possit: cf. ii 17, 39 n. on 'posset...non posset.'

VI. § 12. et uero: de R.P. i 32, 49;
vi 1. 1. See also ii 11, 26 n. on 'uero.'

non enim silice...: a ref. to those early myths which represented men as sprung from stocks and stones, cf. Hom. Od. xix 163 οὐ γὰρ ἀπὸ δρυὸς ἔσσι παλαιφάτου, οὐδ' ἀπὸ πέτρης; Il. xvi 33—5; Virg.

Aen. viii 315 'gensque uirum truncis et duro robore nata,' and Conington's n.; iv 366. See also Reid on Ac. ii 31, 101.

naturale: Lamb. read natura, followed by Bai. and T.S. Some early editors read naturabile with MSS, relying upon a variant in Laelius 21, 80 'maxime naturali carent amicitia,' but to this Bent. objected that Cic., who wrote naturalis hundreds of times, was not likely to write naturabilis once or twice. Bent. himself proposed natura fere which Dav. Lall. and Mo. adopted. The emendation of Sff. natura tractabile in animis et tenerum is very plausible and has been adopted by Küh.
natura (nra) would pass into the MS reading by quasisaplography and et might readily fall out before tenerum. Moreover, the passage in Lael. 13, 48 cited by Sff. in support of his reading is very parallel and must have been taken from the same source as our passage. There we have a use of humanitatem similar to that of humanum here, and then 'quid enim interest...inter hominem et truncum aut saxum...? neque enim sunt isti audiendi, qui uirtutem duram et quasi ferream esse quandam uolunt: quae quidem est... tenera atque tractabilis.'

naturale, however, read by Hei. Ml. and Schiche, has MS support and gives a good sense = natura insitum, as in Diu. ii 12, 29, 'tauri opimi iecur...quid atque molle, quod aegritudine quasi tempestate quatiatur, nec absurde Crantor ille, qui in nostra Academia uel in primis fuit nobilis, 'Minime,' inquit, 'adsentior iis, qui istam nescio quam indolentiam magno opere laudant, quae nec potest ulla esse nec debet. ne aegrotus sim; si, inquit, fuero, sen-

6. qua G in quod alt. man. corr. 7. qui in nostra R 6 7 C D O 8. qui, nra V. <sup>in</sup>
 q in nra W 1. qui nra E (al. atr. superscr.) qui nostra R 1 17 P G S L 1 5 W 2 M 2 J O 2 3. qui nra B 1 3 K 1 E 2 3 M II. qui nram K 2.

8. adsentior R V. assentior S L. absentior B K. absentior E al. man. corr. || his R 1 10 16 V P G. 9. magno opere V P. magno opere R (al. atr. corr.) magno opere L. magno ope B 2. magnopere R 10 16 B 1 3 S E. || queneq V (i in e corr.) queneq B (e ex i ut uid. mut.) qui nec B 2 G. quinec R P E.

10. ullē G alt. man. corr. || ne aegrotus sim G. ne aegrotassem P B. nec egrotassē R. nec egrotassem R 7 17 P 4 B 2 K 1 2 E 1 2 L 1 4 D C II O 7 8. neq egrotassem V. nec egrotasse S at duarum uel trium litt. spatio post hoc uerb. cum ras. rel. nec egrotasse L 5 J. nec aegrotis est L 3. nec egrotis est P 2. nec egrotis est B 3. nec egrotus est P 3 M 1 2. nec egroto etiam R 6. nec egroto etiam W. nec egrotis est O 3. nec aegrotis ē O 2. nec egrotare L 6. || si inquit R 1 17 B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 2 L W 2 D C II J.

si inquit V. <sup>is qui</sup> si inquit P al. atr. superscr. si inquit O 7 G at d in t alt. man.
corr. si inquit E. <sup>l' is qui</sup> si is qui R 7 B 3 L 2 4-6 M 1 2 O 1 8. si hijs qui P 4. || fuerat R 1 7 P 1 4 G B 1-3 K S E L 1 3 4 6 M 1 2 D II J O 1 8. fuerat V. fua't E 2 L 5. fua't C (sic). fueāt O 7. fuerāt L 2. affua't K 2 (sic). fui't R 1 7. fui't W 2.

habet naturale, quod declarare possit quid futurum sit?' quoted by Ml. Cf. also iv 26, 57 'nam quod aiunt nimia resecari oportere, naturalia relinqui.' There seems to have been some tendency in copyists to confuse the terminations -abilis and -alis.

[For the sentiment cf. ii 21, 47 est in animis omnium fere natura molle quiddam, demissum, humile, eneruatum quodam modo et languidum.]

Crantor: i 48, 115 n. The passage referred to is preserved in Plut. Cons. ad Apollon. p. 102 C οὐ γὰρ ἔγωγε συμφέρομαι τοῖς τὴν ἀγριον ὑμνοῦσι καὶ σκληρὰν ἀπάθειαν, ἔξω καὶ τοῦ δυνατοῦ καὶ τοῦ συμφέροντος οὐδ' ἀν... 'μὴ γὰρ νοσοῦμεν' φησὶν ὁ ἀκαδημαϊκὸς Κράντωρ, 'νοσήσασι δὲ παρήη τις αἰσθησις, εἰτ' οὖν τέμνοιτό τι τῶν ἡμετέρων εἰτ' ἀποσπῶτο. τὸ γὰρ ἀνώδυνον τοῦτ' οὐκ ἄνευ μεγάλων ἐγγίγνεται μισθῶν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ· τεθριώσθαι γὰρ εἰκὸς ἐκεῖ μὲν σῶμα τοιοῦτον ἐνταῦθα δὲ ψυχὴν.

indolentiam: a word invented by Cic., cf. Madv. on Fin. ii 4, 11. Crantor was a contemporary of Zeno of Citium, the founder of the Stoics, whose doctrine, in its strictest form, demanded the suppression of all emotion (ἀπάθεια), Zeller, Stoics, etc., p. 238. For the εὐπάθεια, a modification of the strict doctrine, see ibid. p. 274. The question of the suppression of the emotions must have been much discussed at least from Plato's time onwards, the germ of the doctrine being found in Plato. See Grote's remarks upon the Philebus, Plato II c. 30, pp. 608 foll. Cf. also Democritus' εὐθυμία or ἀθαμβία, Fin. v 29, 87; Diog. L. ix 45.

ne aegrotus sim...: Gronovius conjectured ne aegrotassim, inquit, sin fuerit (sc. ut aegrotare debeam) sensus adsit; P. Victorius, whom Dav. follows, ne aegrotassim; sin quid fuerit sensus adsit; Fr. Fabricius, followed by Küh., ne aegrotus sim, inquit; sed, si fuerim, sensus adsit; F.A.W. and Mo. ne aegrotus sim; sin: is qui fuerat sensus adsit; Halm, followed by Bai., ne aegrotus sim: si sim, qui fuerat sensus adsit; Sff., followed by T.S., Hei., Hasper and Ml., ne aegrotus sim: si, inquit, fuero, sensus adsit; Schiche agrees with Sff. except that he inserts et before sensus. The reading of Victorius is open to the objection that the euphemism si quid fuerit is only used of death; that of F.A.W. presents an ellipse with sim for which it would be hard to find parallels; to that sus adsit, siue secetur quid siue auellatur a corpore. nam istuc nihil dolere non sine magna mercede contingit inmanitatis in animo, stuporis in corpore.' 13. Sed uideamus ne haec oratio sit hominum adsentantium nostrae 15 inbecillitati et indulgentium mollitudini; nos autem audeamus non solum ramos amputare miseriarum, sed omnis radicum fibras euellere. tamen aliquid relinquetur fortasse; ita sunt altae stirpes stultitiae; sed relinquetur id solum quod erit necessarium. illud quidem sic habeto, nisi sanatus animus sit, quod sine philo-20 sophia fieri non potest, finem miseriarum nullum fore. quam ob rem, quoniam coepimus, tradamus nos ei curandos; sanabimur, si uolemus. et progrediar quidem longius; non enim de aegritudine solum, quamquam id quidem primum, sed de omni animi, ut ego posui, perturbatione, morbo, ut Graeci uolunt, explicabo.

12. istuc RVP 13 G B 23 KL M 12 O 1-378. istud R6 BS E 12
 W 12 DC II J. 13. inmanitatis VP B 2 KEL. inmanitas R. immanitatis
 B S G at m in n alt. man. mut.

§ 13, 14. assentantium RVGBKL. assentantium B 2 S. 15. inbecillitati RVG B 2 K L. inbecillitati B. 16. omnis RVGBKEL. ois W 2. ois B 2.

17. altae R B. alta V. alte L W. alte W 2 D O 1378. alta G B 2 K. || scurpes G ut uid.; in stirpes alt. man. corr. 20. quam G, in marg. quam alt.
 man. adscr.

of Halm, Sff. objects that the words qui fuerat are unnecessary. The reading of Sff. agrees closely with the MSS and with the Gk original. The repetition of inquit within the space of two lines has been objected to, but Küh. refers to ii 19, 44; N.D. i 7, 17; Or. ii 3, 13; 74, 298. See especially Or. ii 3, 13. Schiche's et may be right, but fuerat may have arisen out of fuero owing to the following s, s and t being often confused.

secetur: this and auellatur are subj. because the siue clauses depend upon a pure mental conception. Draeger, H.S. i § 151, 5 h, puts these subjunctives under the head of attraction. See also i 25, 60 n. 'siue ignis sit.'

mercede: cf.  $\mu\sigma\theta\acute{\omega}\nu$  in the Gk, quoted above. More usually of pay, here of cost, as in p. Domo 11, 29 'data merces est erroris mei magna'; Fam. i 9, 3 'te... gaudeo eam fidem cognosse hominum non ita magna mercede, quam ego maximo dolore cognoram.' For the genitive cf. i 15, 34 n. on 'mercedem gloriae.'

§ 13. uideamus ne: a polite mode of expressing warning and doubt, Küh. on i 34, 83.

quod erit necessarium, 'which must inevitably be retained,' i.e. without which the man would cease to be a homo. See ii 17, 39 n. on 'si quidem homo esset.' Hieronymus, Ep. 133 (ad Ctesiphontem), mentions the Stoic doctrine that the last trace of the perturbationes must be rooted out and says that this doctrine was disputed by the Peripatetici... et Academici noui, quos Tullius sequitur and adds hoc est enim hominem ex homine tollere... et optare potius quam docere. Cicero in Off. iii 5, 26 has quid cum eo disseras qui omnino hominem ex homine tollat? but he is not referring there to the perturbationes. Where Cicero uses optare hoc quidem est, non docere (in ii, 13, 30) he is referring to the despising of pain, and Jerome may have found hoc est enim hominem ex homine tollere with the same reference in Cicero's Consolatio, a work with which he was familiar.

sic habeto, 'of this be assured.'

ut ego posui, 'to use the expression that I have adopted' in 4, 7. Cf. 20, 46 'non... uerbo solum posuit uoluptatem'; Fam. i 9, 21 'ut paulo ante posui.' Küh primo: sc. as far as c. 10 § 22.

Stoicorum more: cf. iv 4, 9 foll. The Stoic style is described in the introduction to the Paradoxa § 2 'Cato autem, perfectus mea sententia Stoicus, ... in ea est haeresi, 25 et primo, si placet, Stoicorum more agamus, qui breuiter astringere solent argumenta; deinde nostro instituto uagabimur.

VII. 14. Qui fortis est, idem est fidens, quoniam confidens mala consuetudine loquendi in uitio ponitur, ductum uerbum a confidendo, quod laudis est. qui autem est fidens, is profecto non extimescit; discrepat enim a timendo confidere. atqui, in 5 quem cadit aegritudo, in eundem timor; quarum enim rerum praesentia sumus in aegritudine, easdem independentes et uenientes timemus. ita fit ut fortitudini aegritudo repugnet. ueri simile

25. astringere R V G B 2 K S L. adstringere B E.

VII. § 14, 2. uerbum a confidendo R I 10 16 G B 1 3 K L D O 1 7 8.

uerbum confidendo V. uerbum confidendo E. uerbum a confidendo B 2.
uerbum a fidendo W. 3. quod laudis R I 10 16 G B 2 E 2 W I 2 M I 2 D

O I 3 8. quod laudis V. quod laudi E. quod laus O 7. || fidens G L.
2 fidens V al. man. superscr. 4. atqui R 6 S M 2 II E 2 (at qui in ras. alio atr.).

atque R al. atr. suppl. atq; P al. atr. suppl. atque G. atq; R I 7 V
B I 2 K I 2 E L W I 2 J O I 3 7 8. atq; R 7 B 3 M I O 2. at C D.

6. independentes R G K E L. independentes V. independentes P B I 2. uenientes

G B. uenientes V. 7. uere G e in i alt. man. corr.

quae nullum sequitur florem orationis neque dilatat argumentum; minutis interrogatiunculis quasi punctis quod proposuit efficit.' See also ii 18, 42 n. and reff. there.

astringere, 'compress,' cf. Brut. 90, 309 'eram cum Stoico Diodoto...a quo... in dialectica exercebar, quae quasi contracta et adstricta eloquentia putanda est'; also Brut. 31, 120 quoted on § 22, below.

nostro instituto = more oratorio.

uagabimur: cf. 'neque dilatat argumentum' in Paradoxa § 2 above.

VII. § 14. quoniam: elliptic = hoc dico quoniam or non dixi illum confidentem quoniam hoc uerbum...; cf. 9, 20 non dixi inuidiam, compared by T. S.

confidens: the participle was more usual at all times in a bad sense than in a good one, cf. the exx. in Nonius 262; it is used in a good sense in Ter. And. v 2, 14 'ellum, confidens, catus.' The good sense is more common with the adverb confidenter. Confidentia has both senses.

atqui was much used to introduce a minor premiss in syllogistic argument, cf. i 43, 104 n. on 'in corpore autem.' It is therefore read here by editors generally, though atque has much better MS support. Fluctuations in MSS between atque and atqui are very frequent, cf. v 15, 43 init., 18, 53 init.; N. D. ii 15, 41 init. It may be observed that et was sometimes thus used (cf. § 18), and therefore atque 'and further' does not seem in itself unsuitable but the meaning yielded by atqui seems better here [cf. the similar use of καὶ μήν in Greek].

ita fit ut...repugnet: Hei., Posen Progr. p. 19, maintains that these words are a gloss summing up, out of place, the argument which is again summed up lower down in non cadunt autem.... But the argument would not run on if these words were cut out, and the conclusion to be reached is not that the brave man is not liable to annoyance but that the wise man is not so.

We have in this chapter three chain arguments to prove that the wise man cannot suffer annoyance, the first occupying the whole of § 14; the second from praeterea down to non cadet igitur in sap. aegritudo; the third from et quem ad modum to the end of § 15. The stages in the first argument are the following: he who is brave is also confident: he who is confident does not fear: but he who is liable to annoyance is also liable to fear: hence liability to annoyance is out of keeping with bravery. At this point Cicero takes a new start and brings the argument down to the same point by another set of inferences, viz.—he who is liable to annoyance would seem liable to fear, loss of spirit, despondency: he who is liable to these is liable to become a slave, to admit defeat: he who is liable to this is liable to timidity and cowardice:

est igitur, in quem cadat aegritudo, cadere in eundem timorem et infractionem quidem animi et demissionem. quae in quem 10 cadunt, in eundem cadit ut seruiat, ut uictum, si quando, se esse fateatur. quae qui recipit, recipiat idem necesse est timiditatem et ignauiam. non cadunt autem haec in uirum fortem; igitur ne aegritudo quidem. at nemo sapiens nisi fortis; non cadet ergo in sapientem aegritudo. 15. praeterea necesse est, qui fortis sit, cadit R<sub>67</sub> P<sub>1-3</sub> G B<sub>3</sub> E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>12</sub> DJII O<sub>38</sub>. 9. quidem R<sub>7</sub> VPG
 15 eundem esse magni animi; qui magni animi sit, inuictum; qui inuictus sit, eum res humanas despiciere atque infra se positas

8. igitur om. L. || cadat RV P<sub>4</sub> B<sub>12</sub> KLWC O<sub>127</sub>. cadat S eod. atr.
 B<sub>1-3</sub> KE L<sub>15</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> J O<sub>138</sub>. quandam R<sub>6</sub> P<sub>4</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> WMII
 O<sub>2</sub>. quamdam K<sub>2</sub> DC. quādā O<sub>7</sub>. qndā R at in marg. quidem
al. atr. adscr. E<sub>3</sub> om. at in marg. quādam habet. || et demissionem B<sub>2</sub> S L

W<sub>12</sub> D O<sub>1</sub>. et demissionē R<sub>10</sub> 16. et demisionem V. et demisionē R
atr. nigr. suprascr. et demisionem G K. et demisione E. || quae in quē cadit G ē et d<sub>t</sub> in ras. alt. man. scr. 10. si quando se esse R<sub>17</sub> P<sub>4</sub> GB K<sub>12</sub>

E W<sub>2</sub> J. si quando esse P al. atr. superscr. si quando se L esse om.
 si quando esse se E<sub>2</sub>. se si quando esse DC O<sub>7</sub>. si quando ēē B<sub>2</sub> se om.
 aliquando se esse V E<sub>3</sub>. aliquando esse se S at ali in ras. se quandoque esse P<sub>23</sub> B<sub>3</sub> M<sub>12</sub> O<sub>3</sub>. se quandoque O<sub>1</sub> esse om. se quandoquaque esse R<sub>6</sub>. fe quandoq<sub>3</sub> esse se II at q<sub>3</sub> al. atr. suppl. et fe mut. esse suspicor.

se qnq; esse O<sub>7</sub>. si qn ee O<sub>8</sub> al. atr. superscr. ut quandoque se uictum ēē W.

13. cadet R<sub>16</sub> P<sub>4</sub> G B<sub>12</sub> E<sub>1</sub> L<sub>1</sub> O<sub>8</sub>. cad& V man. ant. suppl. cadat
 P K<sub>1</sub> O<sub>3</sub>. cadit B<sub>3</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> DCJ O<sub>127</sub>.

§ 15, 15. qui magni animi sit inuictum R<sub>67</sub> B<sub>13</sub> E<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> DJII
 O<sub>1278</sub>. qui animi magni sit inuictum C. qui magni animi inuictum W<sub>1</sub>. qui magni animi om. R<sub>1</sub> G B<sub>2</sub> E<sub>3</sub> L<sub>1</sub> O<sub>3</sub>. sit inuictum R eod. atr. sit inuictum

P al. atr. corr. magni animi sit inuictū V. qui magni animi habet K<sub>1</sub> eod. atr. superscr. qui magni sit inuictum K<sub>2</sub>. sic inuictum E<sub>3</sub>.

the brave man is not liable to these: therefore the brave man cannot be liable to annoyance. Having now reached the point which he had reached in the first set of inferences Cicero adds two more propositions which apply to both sets alike, viz.—but no one is wise unless brave: therefore the wise man cannot be liable to annoyance.

cadat: for the subj. cf. § 15 'qui fortissim'; 9, 19 'qui...id concupierit.' The sentences are conditional relative. The dependency of the clauses makes the statements hypothetical. But the clauses above, e.g. in quem cadit, are unconditional statements.

et infractionem quidem, 'and in fact a weakening of spirit.' The idea in timor is expanded to lead up to the next inference (ut seruiat, ut...fateatur). It seems, therefore, unnecessary, with Küh. Mo. and F.A.W. to alter quidem of the best MSS to quandam, making that word modify infractionem as a new word metaphorically used, for which use of quidam cf. i 12, 27 n. The participles, especially demissus, are common in this metaphorical sense, cf. post Red. ad Quir. 8, 19 'non modo non infracto animo...sed confirmato'; in L. Pison. 26, 62 'ita nescio quid istuc fractum, humile, demissum'; T.D. iv 30, 64 'humile, summissum, molle, effeminatum, fractum.'

si quando: Küh. compares for this elegant elliptical use (sc. est, accidit) the frequent use of si forte.

recipit, recipiat: i 22, 52 n. on 'esset, non esset.'

igitur: for the position of this word cf. i 2, 4 n.

cadet: for the future cf. uacabit § 15 and i 22, 53 n. on 'nesciet...sciet.'

§ 15. res humanas, 'the vicissitudes of life,' cf. ii 14, 33 n. on 'humana contemnentem'; ii 27, 65 n. on 'humane.'

arbitrari; despiciere autem nemo potest eas res propter quas aegritudine adfici potest; ex quo efficitur fortem uirum aegritudine numquam adfici; omnes autem sapientes fortes; non 20 cadit igitur in sapientem aegritudo. et quem ad modum oculus conturbatus non est probe adfectus ad suum munus fungendum, et reliquae partes totumue corpus statu cum est motum deest officio suo et muneri, sic conturbatus animus non est aptus ad exsequendum munus suum. munus autem animi est ratione 25 bene uti, et sapientis animus ita semper adfectus est ut ratione optime utatur; numquam igitur est perturbatus. at aegritudo perturbatio est animi; semper igitur ea sapiens uacabit.

VIII. 16. Veri etiam simile illud est, qui sit temperans—quem Graeci σώφρονα appellant eamque uirtutem σωφροσύνην uocant, quam soleo equidem tum temperantiam, tum moderationem appellare, non numquam etiam modestiam; sed haud 5 scio an recte ea uirtus frugalitas appellari possit, quod angustius apud Graecos ualet, qui frugi homines χρησίμους appellant, id est tantum modo utilis; at illud est latius; omnis enim abstinencia,

18. adfici (hic et infra) V E K. affici (hic et inf.) R al. atr. mut. affici (hic et inf.) B S L. affici hic habet G at af in ras. alt. man. scr. et ad ante af eraso: infra adfici. 21. adfectus V G K. adfectus R. affectus B S L. 24. exsequendum B L. exequendum R V P G K. O 2. 26. optime R V G B K E L.

VIII. § 16, 1. illi <sup>ud</sup> G man. alt. superscr. 2. ΚΩΦΡΟΝΑ naappellant G. NA in ras. et na man. alt. confod. appellatur R I 6 spat. post rel. appellant σώφρονα R 10. 3. tum temperantiam R V P G B I-3 K. E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O 2 3 8 7. tum temperationem O I. || moderantiam O I. 7. utilis R V P G B I 2 K E L J. utiles S.

conturbatus: conturbatio oculorum is used by Scribonius Largus, Comp. Med. 19, as a technical term for inflammation of the eyes.

fungendum: the gerundive with personal constr. from utor, fruor, fungor, potior, nescor and their compounds is in classical use; the acc. with these verbs is ante- and post-classical, except in the case of potior, for which see i 37, 90 n. on 'urbem nostram.' Cf. i 7, 36 'quod utendum acceperis'; Fin. i 1, 3 'non paranda nobis solum ea, sed fruenda etiam est.'

statu: the metaphor is the same as in 'de sententia esse deiectum' ii 5, 14 n.

deest: for the number of the predicate when two or more subjects are connected by a disjunctive particle see Madv. § 213 b, obs. 1.

[at: cf. v 15, 43 n.]

VIII. § 16. qui sit temperans... an anacolouthon. Having set down temperans as an equivalent for the Gk σώφρων Cicero pauses to consider the fitness of the translation and develops a preference for frugi, with frugalitas as an equivalent for σωφροσύνη, and so loses the thread of his construction, which he resumes in a new sentence in § 18 in the words qui sit frugi igitur uel, si mauis, moderatus et temperans, eum necesse est esse constantem.... F.A.W. compares the anacolouthon in Hor. Epp. i 15, 1-22.

quem...eamque: Cicero might have written cuiusque uirtutem...; for the transition from the relative to the demonstrative cf. v 3, 8 n. on 'eumque.'

haud scio an: cf. ii 17, 41 n.

frugalitas, 'goodness.'

quod angustius apud Graecos ualet, 'an idea which the Greeks express by a word of narrower meaning.' Orelli in his notes on F. A. Wolf's lectures observes omnis innocentia (quae apud Graecos usitatum nomen nullum habet, sed habere potest ἀβλάβειαν; nam est innocentia adfectio 10 talis animi quae noceat nemini)—reliquas etiam uirtutes frugalitas continet. quae nisi tanta esset, et si iis angustiis, quibus plerique putant, teneretur, numquam esset L. Pisonis cognomen tanto opere laudatum. 17. sed quia, nec qui propter metum praesidium reliquit, quod est ignaviae, nec qui propter auaritiam clam de-15 positum non reddidit, quod est iniustitiae, nec qui propter temeritatem male rem gessit, quod est stultitiae, frugi appellari solet, eo tris uirtutes, fortitudinem, iustitiam, prudentiam, fru-

9. adfectio V G. affectio R B K L.
 B 2 E. tanto opere R al. atr. corr. tant opere S o post nt eras. tanto opere K. tantopere B I L.

§ 17, 14. reliquit R 10 16 B 2 W 2.

11. si his G B L. 12. tanto opere V G tant opere S o post nt eras. tanto opere K.

reliquit V. relinquuit R B K E W.

relinquit G at d in t alt. man. mut.

17. tris R V G K E.

tris P al. atr. suppl.

tres B 2 S L W J. tri B I litt. eras.

that the clause quod angustius apud Graecos ualet, qui frugi homines χρησίμους appellaut, would be thus expressed in the modern style, quod Graece aliter reddi nequit quam χρήσιμος, hoc autem est angustius; nam apud nos χρήσιμος tantum est utilis; frugi autem latius patet.

Dav. notes 'Glossae ueteres: Frugalis χρήσιμος,' and he quotes Donatus on Ter. Eun. iii 5, 60 and iv 7, 46 for frugi = utilis, necessarius, and for the wider sense of the word T. D. iv 16, 36 'quod nisi eo nomine (frugalitatis) uirtutes continerentur, numquam ita peruolgatum illud esset, ut iam prouerbiū locum obtineret, hominem frugi omnia recte facere,' and for both uses he compares Quintil. i 6, 29 'M. Caelius se esse hominem frugi uult probare, non quia abstinens sit, (nam id ne mentiri quidem poterat,) sed quia utilis multis, id est fructuosus, unde sit ducta frugalitas.'

omnis enim abstinentia, omnis innocentia: another anacolouthon, the consideration of the Gk equivalent leading to the substitution of the active constr. for the passive, reliquae etiam uirtutes frugalitate continentur. Dav. compares Ter. Hec. iii 1, 6 'nam nos omnes quibus est alicunde aliquis obiectus labos, omne quod est interea tempus prius quam id rescitumst lucrest'; Hirtius, Bell. Afr. c. 18 and c. 23.

ἀβλάβειαν: the noun does not seem to occur before Plutarch, and there it has the passive sense of incolumitas, 'freedom from harm.' The adj. ἀβλαβής and the adv. ἀβλαβῶς often have an active sense in classical Greek (see Liddell and Scott) and Dav. quotes 'Glossarium Graeco-Latinum: Ἀβλάβεια, innoxia, innocentia.'

reliquas etiam uirtutes: sc. prudentiam, fortitudinem, iustitiam.

iis angustiis, quibus plerique putant: angustiis = angusta significatione. The word frugi was much applied to slaves, cf. Plautus and Terence, passim. Cic. in p. r. Deiot. 9, 26 quotes the sentiment 'frugi hominem dici non multum habet laudis in rege' but expresses his own dissent 'ego tamen frugalitatem, id est modestiam et temperantiam, uirtutem maximam iudico.' In Att. vii 4, 1 Cic. says of Dionysius, a freedman of Atticus, 'quem quidem cognoui...frugi hominem ac, ne ut libertinum laudare uidear, plane uirum bonum,' with which Bouhier compares Mart. xii 30 'siccus, sobrius est Aper. quid ad me? | seruum sic ego laudo, non amicum.' For the cause of this limitation of the application of the word frugi Bouhier quotes Augustin. de Beata Vita 31 'propter uulgarem dicendi consuetudinem, qua frugalitas quasi parsimonia dici solet.'

L. Pisonis: L. Calpurnius Piso Frugi, consul 133 B.C. and subsequently, as it seems, censor, wrote annals, and as trib. pl. in 149 carried the lex Calpurnia de repetundis, by which the first of the quaestiones perpetuae was established. He adhered to the optimate party, cf. 20, 48.

cognomen: cf. pro Fonteio 17, 39.

§ 17. eo tris uirtutes: Hei. compares Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii p. 112 τῆς δὲ σωφροσύνης ἴδιον κέφαλαῖον ἐστὶ, τὸ παρέχεσθαι

galitas complexa est (etsi hoc quidem commune est uirtutum; omnes enim inter se nexae et iugatae sunt); reliqua igitur est, 20 quarta uirtus ut sit, ipsa frugalitas. eius enim uidetur esse proprium motus animi adpetentis regere et sedare semperque aduersantem libidini moderatam in omni re seruare constantiam; cui contrarium uitium nequitia dicitur. 18. frugalitas, ut opinor, a fruge, qua nihil melius e terra, nequitia ab eo (etsi erit

19. omnis G. omīs K. || est quarta C. ē quarta R 7. et quarta R 1 2 6 10 16 17 V P 1-4 G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 3 W 1 2 II J O 1-3 7. 20. ut sit R 1 2 6 7 10 16 17 P 1-4 G B 2 3 K 1 2 E 2 3 L 2 3 5 6 M 1 2 II O 1-3 7.

ut sit V. ut sit B 1. sit ut sit E D C. ut sit S nihil in marg. add. ut W 2. ut sunt L. necesse est ut sit W 1 L 4. || frugalitas eius enim R 1 2 7 V P 1-4 G B K S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C J O 2 3 8. frugalitas eis enim B 2. frugalitas necesse est eius enim R 6. f. est necesse e. e. O 1. frugalitas eius enim II at in marg. necesse est add. 21. adpetentis R V G E. adpetentis K 1 (sic) eod. atr. appetentis P 2 B 1-3 S L 1-6 W 1 2 M 2 D J O 1 3 7 8.

appetentis P at p post a in ras. apētētis E 3. 22. auersantem R 1. aufantē R 10. auersantem G. || libidini R V P G K L. libini E.

§ 18, 24. melius e R V P 1 2 4 G B K S E 2 W M 2 II O 2. melius ex B 2. melius a K 2 L 1 W 2 J O 3 7. melius in D C O 1. melius ē a O 8. melius est a M 1. om. E 1.

τὰς ὁρμὰς εὐσταθεῖς καὶ θεωρεῖν αὐτὰς προηγουμένως, κατὰ δὲ τὸν δεύτερον λόγον τὰ ὑπὸ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετὰς, ἕνεκα τοῦ ἀδιαπτῶτως ἐν ταῖς ὁρμαῖς ἀναστρέφεσθαι· καὶ ὁμοίως τὴν ἀνδρείαν προηγουμένως μὲν πᾶν ὁ δεῖ ὑπομένειν, κατὰ δὲ τὸν δεύτερον λόγον τὰ ὑπὸ τὰς ἄλλας· καὶ τὴν δικαιοσύνην προηγουμένως μὲν τὸ κατ' ἀξίαν ἐκάστω σκοπεῖν, κατὰ δὲ τὸν δεύτερον λόγον καὶ τὰ λοιπά. πάσας γὰρ τὰς ἀρετὰς τὰ πασῶν βλέπειν, καὶ τὰ ὑποτεταγμένα ἀλλήλαις; Plato Gorg. p. 507; Cic. Off. i 28, 100. As frugalitas includes the other three cardinal virtues Cicero concludes that that word suitably translates σωφροσύνη.

etsi: for this corrective use see i 42, 99 n.

omnes...iugatae sunt: for this view see ii 14, 32 n. and ref.; the words hoc quidem...iugatae sunt are quoted by Nonius p. 47.

reliqua igitur est, quarta uirtus ut sit, ipsa frugalitas: this is the conjecture of Madv., adopted by T.S. Hei. Sff. Ml. Schiche and Bai., though the punctuation of Bai., ut sit ipsa, frugalitas, is not to be followed. The reading involves practically no departure from the MSS, est and et being specially liable to be confused. Dav., followed by Mo., read reliquum igitur est, quarta uirtus ut sit ipsa frugalitas. He also suggested relinquitur ut quarta uirtus sit ipsa frugalitas, and this reading, as improved by Bake, who kept ut where the MSS have it, before sit, is very Ciceronian. Dav. supports this conjecture by ref. to Fin. iii 9, 31 'circumscriptis igitur eis sententiis, quas posui, et eis, si quae similes earum sunt, relinquuntur ut summum bonum sit uiuere scientiam adhibentem...'

Lucr. v 795 'linquitur ut merito matrum nomen adepta | terra sit'; Varro R.R. i 5 'relinquitur quot partes ea disciplina habeat ut sit uidentum.' To these examples may be added Diu. ii 5, 14 'ita relinquuntur ut ea fortuita diuinari possint...'; Ac. ii 38, 119; Att. x 8, 2 'relinquitur ut si uincimur in Hispania quiescamus.'

adpetentis: accusative. motus animi adpetentis = 'the desires,' τὰς ὁρμὰς, cf. the definition of σωφροσύνη quoted above from Stobaeus.

aduersantem refers to the subject acc. frugalitatem, not to constantiam.

§ 18. nihil melius: more effective without est which Baiter (following Wessenberg) inserted, cf. 5, 11 'itaque nihil melius quam quod...'

ab eo...ab eo: the repetition of the sake of clearness is not uncommon after a parenthesis or in a sentence of some length, cf. 28, 71 'ergo id, quod alii...id hi turpe putantes aegritudinem repperunt.'

nequicquam: the same erroneous etymology is given by Varro L.L. x 5 'ut 25 hoc fortasse durius, sed temptemus; lusisse putemur, si nihil sit) ab eo, quod nequicquam est in tali homine, ex quo idem nihili dicitur. qui sit frugi igitur uel, si mauis, moderatus et temperans, eum necesse est esse constantem; qui autem constans, quietum; qui quietus, perturbatione omni uacuum, ergo etiam aegritudine. 30 et sunt illa sapientis; aberit igitur a sapiente aegritudo.

IX. Itaque non inscite Heracleotes Dionysius ad ea disputat quae apud Homerum Achilles queritur hoc, ut opinor, modo:

Corque meum penitus turgescit tristibus iris,

Cum decore atque omni me orbatum laude recordor.

25. temptemus R V G B K L O 13. temnemus E. temerius W 12 D C O 7 Gr. teme. cius S. || lusisse R 6 P 3 B 3 K 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 J O 3.

lu fiffe V (ras. post lu). iusisse R 1. luxisse R 7. lussisse E 3 eod. atr. corr. iussisse P 1 4 G B 1 K 1 S E 1 2 L 1 DC O 1 7 Gr. iuxisse P 2. iusisse R 17. iusse B 2. et lusisse O 2. etlississe II. dixisse O 8. || si nihil sit R 1 al. atr. corr. et in marg. mn<sup>9</sup> add. si nil G. 26. idem nihili V i fort. post. add. nihili idem R 6. idem nihil R P 1 3 B 1 3 K S E L 1-3 6 M 1 2 O 1-3. idem nihil G at litt. post 1 eras. idem nichil R 7 P 2 4 B 2 L 4 5 W 2 D C J H O 8. idem nich' E 2. idem nil K 2 O 7. nihil idem W 1 (non ut Küh. et Mo.). idem nihili ed. H. 27. qui scit G at c eras.

28. costans G alt. man. superscr.

IX. 1. insite G. || heracleotes R V G K. eracleotes R 10 16 B. yracleotes P. dionysius V R 10 16. dyonysius R. dyonysius P B K. 2. queritur P B 1 2 K L. queritur V at e ex e ras. corr. ut uid. quaeritur R G.

ex non et uolo nolo, sic ex ne et quicquam item media extrita syllaba coactum est nequam. itaque ut eum, quem putamus esse non hili dicimus nihili, sic in quo putamus esse nequicquam dicimus nequam.<sup>7</sup>

The similarity between the above extract and Cicero here, taken along with the greater fulness and clearness of the extract from Varro, gives some reason for thinking that Cicero had Varro's passage before him when writing, unless both writers derived this etymology from a common source. As early as 47 B.C. Varro promised to dedicate to Cicero an important work and he ultimately dedicated to him books v to xxv of the de Lingua Latina, but he had probably not done so when Atticus delivered to him the copy of the second edition of the Academia dedicated to him by Cicero, and he certainly had not done so by the 28th of June 45 B.C. Cf. Att. xiii 12, 3 and xiii 18. The date of the letter which records the delivery of the Academia to Varro (Att. xiii 44, cf. § 2) is fixed by O. E. Schmidt as 20 or 21 July 45 B.C. The Tusculans were pretty certainly finished by the end of September of that year. Varro's work may possibly have been delivered to Cicero in September, a month not represented by any letters in Cicero's correspondence.

For the derivation of nequam see Lindsay, Lat. Lang. p. 571.

nihili: for the form Mo. compares Varro, quoted above, and also L.L. viii p. 111 (ix § 54 in Müller) 'dicimus hic homo nihilis est et huius hominis nihili et hunc hominem nihili.' Wesenberg, Em. II p. 4, refers to passages in Plautus and to Q. Fr. i 2, 14 'noli spectare, quanti homo sit; parui enim pretii est, qui iam nihil sit,' where the emendation nihili is required by the play on words. The form nihili has some MS support here and is well supported in iv 35, 74.

constantem, 'firm.'

et: occasionally used to introduce the minor premiss in a syllogism, cf. 7, 14 n. on 'atqui.'

IX. Heracleotes Dionysius: ii 25, 60 n. ad ea: i 4, 7 n.

hoc, ut opinor, modo: introduces, with some diffidence, Cicero's somewhat free translation of Iliad ix 646—8 ἀλλὰ μοι οἰδάνεται κραδίη χόλω, ὀππότε κείνων μνήσομαι, ὡς μ' ἀσύφλον ἐν Ἀργείοισιν ἔρεζεν

Ἀτρεΐδης, ὡς εἴ τιν' ἀτιμητον μετανάστην.

tristibus, 'gloomy,' cf. ii 8, 20 'tristis Eurystheus.'

5 19. num manus adfecta recte est cum in tumore est, aut num aliud quodpiam membrum tumidum ac turgidum non uitiose se habet? sic igitur inflatus et tumens animus in uitio est. sapientis autem animus semper uacat uitio, numquam turgescit, numquam tumet; at iratus animus eius modi est; numquam igitur sapiens
10 irascitur; nam si irascitur, etiam concupiscit; proprium est enim irati cupere, a quo laesus uideatur, ei quam maximum dolorem inurere; qui autem id concupierit, eum necesse est, si id consecutus sit, magno opere laetari, ex quo fit ut alieno malo gaudeat; quod quoniam non cadit in sapientem, ne ut irascatur 15 quidem cadit. sin autem caderet in sapientem aegritudo, caderet etiam iracundia; qua quoniam uacat, aegritudine etiam uacabit.
20. etenim si sapiens in aegritudinem incidere posset, posset etiam in misericordiam, posset in inuidentiam. non dixi inuidiam, aliquod quippiam S in marg. aliud man. ant. aliquod quippiam K 1 eod. atr. aliq̄ quippiam R 10 G B L. aliquid quippiam J. aliq̄' quidpiam K 2.

§ 19, 5. adfecta R V P G K. affecta B. afflicta L. 6. aliud quippiā W 1 (non ut Küh.). aliud quippiam L 3. aliud quidpiam O 3. aliū quippiam O 2. aliquod quippiam R 17 17 V P 1-3 B 23 E 1-3 L 2-6 M 12 DC O 17.

aliq̄ quippiam II O 8. aliq̄ quippiā W 2. āqd quippiam R 16. aliquot quippiam P 4. aut num quippiam R 6. aliud quodpiam corr. Turnebus 7. uatio G a in i corr. 9. at iratus R 167 P 134 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 L W 12 M DC II J O 1387. aut iratus O 2. ac iratus M 2. aut irati V at i in ras., duabus litt. eras. 11. maxumum R V B. maximum K eod. atr.

maximum G L. 12. sit G alt. man. corr. 13. magno opere G B 2. magno opere V. magno opere R punct. alio atr. supp. magnopere B 1 K L.

magnope S E. || aliaeno G. 16. iracundia G alt. man. corr. || aegritudone G o in i corr.

§ 20, 17. in aegritudine G. 18. dixi inuidiam R V P G B 13 K 12 E L W 12 M 12 DC J O 1-3 78. dixi in inuidiam S II ed. H. dixi in inuidiam E 2. dixi in uiam B 2.

§ 19. aliud quodpiam: for the form aliquodpiam, proposed here by Gronovius on Livy xli 6 and by some subsequent scholars, see Neue, Formenlehre II<sup>3</sup> 482, where the subject is fully treated.

[tumidum ac turgidum: tumidum medici dicunt praeter naturam inflatum; turgidum cum ex tumore quippiam erumpere paratum est. Forc.]

in uitio est = uitiosus est, cf. i 39, 94 n. iratus animus: but sapientis animus in the contrasted clause. Hence some have approved and Ern. adopted irati of V<sup>2</sup>. Cf. proprium est enim irati, below.

ex quo fit: not a conclusion but merely an explanation, 'thus exulting in the ills of another.' The wise man does not give way to the irrational emotions of desire or joy.

sin: the preceding si-clause begins at nam si irascitur, of which all that follows is a development, cf. i 49, 119 n.

§ 20. etenim, 'and in truth,' does not refer to the clause immediately preceding but continues the argument that the wise man is free from aegritudo, by introducing a new proof [cf. Madvig's note Fin. i 1, 3].

in misericordiam: pity was, according to the Stoics, an irrational emotion inconsistent with the unruffled calm which characterised the wise man, cf. Seneca de Clementia ii 4, 4-6, 4.

inuidentiam, 'enviousness,' a word coined by Cicero, who wanted a word of active force only, since incidere in inuidiam might be either active, 'to fall into a state of envy,' or (more usually) quae tum est cum inuidetur; ab inuidendo autem inuidencia 20 recte dici potest, ut effugiamus ambiguum nomen inuidiae, quod uerbum ductum est a nimis intuendo fortunam alterius, ut est in Melanippo:

Quisnam florem liberum inuidit meum?

male Latine uidetur, sed praeclare Accius; ut enim 'uidere,' sic 25 'inuidere florem' rectius quam 'flori.' nos consuetudine pro-hibemur; poeta ius suum tenuit et dixit audacius.

X. 21. Cadit igitur in eundem et misereri et inuidere. nam qui dolet rebus alicuius aduersis, idem alicuius etiam secundis

19. quae tum est R 26 I O 16 17 B 13 K E 12 L W 1 II O 23 87.
 quae tum est R I an t mut. sit incert. quae tūc est R 7. quae cum est G B 2.
 quae cūm est V P c in t mut. quae tā ē W 2. 20. rectae G a conf. alt. man. || ut effugiamus R I 10 16 V G K I L I W 1 2 D O 1-3 7 8. ueffugiamus P. ut effugiā K 2. ut effugiam ed. H. ut et fugiamus Non. cod. L (ap. Mueller, p. 443). 21. dictum G alt. man. superscr. 22. melanippo R V P G B K. melanipo J. menalippo S E L W 1 D C. 23. quasnam G in quisnam alt. man. mut. 24. accius R V P G B E L, actius K S J. 25. florem B 1 K 2 E 2 D C O 1-3. florē B 3 K I E 1 W 1 2 II O 7 8. florē R at linea al. atr. supra duct. flore V G B 2 L.

X. § 21, 2. dolet B 1-3 S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 2 3 8. dolet V ras. ante o. dolet R man. ant. superscr. dolet P al. atr. superscr. dolet K I eod. atr. solet G K 2 L 1. || dolet alicuius etiam secundis W 1.
 dolet secundis O 1. alicuius passive, 'to become an object of envy.' This is more clearly shown in iv 7, 16 'quoniam inuidia non in eo qui inuidet solum dicitur, sed etiam in eo cui inuidetur.' Hence inuidia is referred to lower down as ambiguum nomen. Hence too Dav. proposed to insert et (Bentley's conj.) or item, and Bouh. etiam, before tum, and Schiche reads in qua etiam est. But Cicero wishes to limit inuidia to the passive use, giving the active use to inuidencia. The meaning therefore is 'I do not use the word inuidia, since this word applies where one is the object of envy.' The extract posset etiam...nomen inuidiae is quoted by Nonius p. 443 M.

a. nimis intuendo: lit. = 'over-regarding.' For the separation of the prep. from its case cf. i 43, 102 n. on 'de nihil sentiendo.' Bentley's conj. limis for nimis is unnecessary. Bouhier explains that the eyes by prolonged regard were supposed to shoot forth irresistible darts of love or hatred, this action being termed fascinare in the case of hatred. Bouh. compares Pliny N.H. vii 2 'esse in Triballis et

Ilyriis...qui uisu quoque effascinent interimantque quos diutius intueantur.'

Melanippo: for the plot of Accius' Melanippus (from which play the following line is taken) see Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. pp. 521-4; Frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 190.

Quisnam: the line is quoted differently by Nonius p. 500 'sic et inuidit illam rem pro illi rei Accius Melanippo, unde haec: quis mortalis florem liberum inuidit meum.' Ribbeck Frag. p. 190 reads unde quis non mortalis... and Röm. Trag. p. 523 num quis non mortalis. The speaker is uncertain.

florem...inuidit: lit. 'blighted the bloom of my children' i.e. 'blighted my fair children'; for inuidere of injuring by spiteful glance cf. Catullus 5, 12 'aut nequis malus inuidere possit.' florem liberum = florentes liberos, cf. 5, 11 n. 'mediocritatem officiorum.' For the genitive form in liberum and meum cf. 24, 58 n.

male Latine sc. dixisse.

dixit audacius: F.A.W. notes that this is no bold expression but the usual constr. of Accius' day.

dolet, ut Theophrastus interitum deplorans Callistheni, sodalis sui, rebus Alexandri prosperis angitur, itaque dicit Callisthenem incidisse in hominem summa potentia summaque fortuna, sed ignarum quem ad modum rebus secundis uti conueniret. atqui, quem ad modum misericordia aegritudo est ex alterius rebus aduersis, sic inuidia aegritudo est ex alterius rebus secundis. in quem igitur cadit misereri, in eundem etiam inuidere; non cadit autem inuidere in sapientem; ergo ne misereri quidem. quodsi aegre ferre sapiens soleret, misereri etiam soleret. abest ergo a sapiente aegritudo.

22. Haec sic dicuntur a Stoicis concludunturque contortius. sed latius aliquanto dicenda sunt et diffusius, sententiis tamen

3. theophrastus K. theophratus G alt. man. superscr. et theoph in ras. || callisthenis R V G B I K I M 2. callisthe<sup>nis</sup> E cod. atr. calisthenis S W I D C. callidis thenis B 2. calisthem L I. 4. callisthenem R V G B I 2. calisthonē L I. 11. egre ferre R 7 P 4. hoc aegre ferre R 6 M 2 O 2. hoc egre ferre P 3 B 3 E 3. h̄ egre ferre M I. h̄c egre ferre O 3. hec egre ferre P 2 egre hec ferre E 2 II. ergo h' referre O 7. egre hec referre S.

heg referre V atr. uiridiore. haec referre R G K I. h̄c referre B I L I.

hoc referre J. h' referre R 17 W 2 C. h̄ referre D. h̄ reff're K 2. qd' hec referre B 2. h̄c sapiens referre W I. 12. a sapiente R I IO I6 G B I 2

K L. sapiente V cod. atr. suppl.

§ 22, 13. sic dicuntur R IO K 2 W I 2 D O 3 8. sidicuntur R cod. atr. B cod. atr. V alia man. suppl. si dicuntur R I6 P G B 2 K L.

14. aliq̄nto D C. aliq̄to L 4. aliquando R I 6 7 G B I 2 K I 2 E I 2 L I 3 5 M 2 II O I-3 8 ed. H. aliq̄n R 17 B 3 E 3 L 2 6 W I 2 M J O 7. ali'q̄ndo S at d atr. nigriore script.

X. § 21. ut Theophrastus: sc. in his Καλλισθένης ἢ περὶ πένθους, mentioned by Diog. L. v 44 in a list of Theophrastus' works. Cf. v 9, 25. See also Buresch, Leipzig. Stud. IX p. 34.

Callistheni: of Olynthus, a relative and pupil of Aristotle, on whose recommendation he was taken by Alexander the Great in 334 to the east, to record the history of his Asiatic campaigns. By his freedom of speech he gave offence and was ultimately put to death by order of the King. The circumstances are variously related. He was arrested at the same time as Hermolaus and his fellow-conspirators. Q. Curtius viii 29 says that he was innocent and Diog. L. v 5 only asserts that he was thought to have conspired. Arrian, Anab. iv 14, says that Aristobulus and Ptolemy Lagi (writers contemporary with these events) stated that the conspirators asserted that Callisthenes had instigated them to conspire; that this was denied by most authorities; but that as Alexander already disliked Callisthenes, and the latter was very intimate with Hermolaus, the King readily believed the worst with regard to him. [On the termination of the genitive cf. v 16, 46 n.]

hominem, i.e. Alexandrum.

ne...quidem, 'not...either,' as often.

aegre ferre = aegritudine adfici, cf. 26, 62.

abest ergo: a false conclusion; to prove that he is free from two forms of annoyance does not prove that he is free from all annoyance.

§ 22. concludunturque contortius: see ii 18, 42 n. on 'contortulis...conclusionibus.'

latius...diffusius, 'must be considerably expanded and treated in detail.' Cf. Brut. 31, 120 'nam ut Stoicorum adstrictior est oratio aliquantoque contractior quam aures populi requirunt, sic

15 utendum eorum potissimum qui maxime forti et, ut ita dicam, uirili utuntur ratione atque sententia. nam Peripatetici, familiares nostri, quibus nihil est uberius, nihil eruditius, nihil grauius, mediocritates uel perturbationum uel morborum animi mihi non sane probant. omne enim malum, etiam mediocre, malum est; 20 nos autem id agimus ut id in sapiente nullum sit omnino. nam ut corpus, etiamsi mediocriter aegrum est, sanum non est, sic in animo ista mediocritas caret sanitate. itaque praeclare nostri, ut alia multa, molestiam, sollicitudinem, angorem propter similitudinem corporum aegrorum aegritudinem nominauerunt. 23. hoc 25 propemodum uerbo Graeci omnem animi perturbationem appellant; uocant enim πάθος, id est morbum, quicumque est motus in animo turbidus. nos melius; aegris enim corporibus

15. potissimum R V G B K L. positissimum P. || maxime R V P G L.

maxime B. utuntur R V G K L.
 utatur S. || peripatetici R V P G K. peripathetici B. 16. utuntur R V G K L.
 B 12 K W 2 D O 17. mediocritatē W 1 L 1. 17. mediocre magnum est R 16 7 17 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 1-3 L 1-5 W 1 M 12 DC II O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. et magnum est J. i magnum est W 2. mediocre malum est corr. Bouhier.

§ 23, 26. id B. id ē L.

illorum (Peripateticorum et Academicorum) liberior et latior quam patitur consuetudo iudiciorum et fori.' Cicero generally uses fuse rather than diffuse in the sense here found, cf. iv 26, 57 'quamuis fuse lateque'; N.D. ii 7, 20 'uberius disputantur et fusius' (breuius angustiusque concluduntur'; Leg. i 13, 36.

eorum: sc. the Stoics.

familiares nostri: the expression no doubt indicates Cicero's admiration for the School as a whole, not his friendship for individual Peripatetics. Cicero praises these philosophers (as also those of the nearly related Academy) not only for their doctrine but also for their usefulness to the orator. Cf. Fin. v 3, 7. Similarly in i 32, 78 he refers to the Stoics, with whom he agreed on many points, as amici nostri.

nihil: often as here referring back to persons, cf. i 2, 5; N.D. i 33, 93 'Phaedro nihil elegantius.' Similarly the interrogative quid e.g. 12, 27.

mediocritates: μεσότητας, 'theory of the mean as applied to emotions,' 'theory of middle states.' Cf. Eth. Nic. ii 6, 10 οἶον καὶ φοβηθῆναι καὶ θαρρῆσαι καὶ ἐπιθυμῆσαι καὶ ὀργισθῆναι καὶ ἐλεῆσαι... ἔστι καὶ μάλλον καὶ ἥττον, καὶ ἀμφοτέρα οὐκ εὖ· τὸ δὲ ὅτι δεῖ καὶ... ὡς δεῖ μέσον τε καὶ ἄριστον. 31, 74 'hic mihi adferunt mediocritates'; Ac. ii 44, 135. The doctrine of τὸ μέσον is omne enim malum: the introduction of the word malum 'begs the question.' The Stoic doctrine that all perturbations are evils is assumed.

Aristotelian though the germ of it is to be found in Plato's μέτριον, Politicus 283d, foll. uel...uel, 'emotions or mental diseases, if you prefer the expression.'

id agimus ut...sit: compressed for ut probemus id...esse. Cf. Lucr. iii 765, 'in tenero tenerascere corpore mentem confugient' = eo confugient ut dicant... Küh. compares i 8, 16 'mors ut malum non sit efficiet' i.e. ut mortem malum non esse putem; see also Madv. on Fin. i 5, 14 n. on 'nam illud quidem adduci uix possum ut...uideantur.'

§ 23. hoc propemodum uerbo, 'by a very similar word.'

morbum: in 4, 7; iv 5, 10 and Fin. iii 10, 35 Cicero prefers perturbatio as a translation of πάθος and that is the word that he usually employs. See Reid on Ac. i 10, 38 n. on 'quasi morbis.'

nos melius: since we limit the word which is similar to morbis to one of the four πάθη, viz. to aegritudo, 'sickness of soul.' For the four πάθη or irrational emotions here mentioned, see n. on § 24, below. For the Stoic parallel between the state of health of the body and that of the soul, see iv 10, 23 n.

aegris enim... = animi aegritudo simil- simillima animi est aegritudo; at non similis aegrotationis est libido, non inmoderata laetitia, quae est uoluptas animi elata et 30 gestiens. ipse etiam metus non est morbi admodum similis, quamquam aegritudini est finitimus, sed proprie, ut aegrotatio in corpore, sic aegritudo in animo nomen habet non seiunctum a dolore. doloris huius igitur origo nobis explicanda est, id est 35 causa efficiens aegritudinem in animo tamquam aegrotationem in corpore. nam ut medici causa morbi inuenta curationem esse inuentam putant, sic nos causa aegritudinis reperta medendi facultatem reperiemus.

XI. 24. Est igitur causa omnis in opinione, nec uero aegritudinis solum, sed etiam reliquarum omnium perturbationum, quae sunt genere quattuor, partibus plures. nam cum omnis perturbatio sit animi motus uel rationis expers uel rationem

28. simillima R V P G B K L. || animi est aegritudo R V G B I 2 K I S E I 2 L I II O 7 8. animi aegritudo est B 3 M I 2 O 2. est animi aegritudo R 6 W I 2 D C J O I. est om. O 3. || similis G. similis R B i in e mut. sites B 2. || aegrotationis E 2. aegrotationes R V G B K E L.
 29. inmoderata R V G K E. immoderata B L. 31. aegritudini W I.

egritudini O I. aegritudine R G K. aegritudine V B. aegritudine L I. aegritudine B 2 E. 33. doloris huius igitur R V P G B K E O 3 7. doloris igitur huius R 6 B 2 3 L I W I M I 2 D J O I 2 8. igitur doloris huius S E 2 II. doloris igitur W 2 huius om. 37. reperiemus R V P G E I 2. reperiemus L.

XI. § 24, 3. nam cum S h. l. non in quom mut.

lima est adfectioni corporis aegrotantis.
 For the change from plural to singular see i 17, 40 n.

gestiens, 'exultant,' 'boisterous'; lit. = gestus faciens.

proprie, 'but with strict accuracy annoyance in the case of the mind, just as illness in the case of the body, bears a name which contains the idea of pain.'

tamquam: here = sicut, cf. i 36, 88 n.

inuenta...reperta: to find here the usual distinction, for which see i 47, 114 n., would involve a satire upon the medical profession of the day which I see no reason for expecting from Cicero. inuento seems substituted merely for variety in Fin. v 6, 17 'fons reperiendus est, in quo sint prima inuitamente naturae; quo inuento...', quoted by Mo.

XI. § 24. in opinione, 'due to a mere opinion,' cf. i 22, 53 n. and i 26, 63 n. Virtue was based on accurate knowledge (ἐπιστήμη), according to the Stoics (and Socrates, Plato and others), e.g. courage is based upon a knowledge of what is to be feared and what not. Cf. iv 15, 34

'ipsa uirtus breuissime recta ratio dici potest,' and Zeller, Stoics, etc., p. 238.

genere quattuor, partibus plures: cf. Fin. iii 10, 35. See the table, Introd. p. xxxi.

The four genera are given within a single verse by Virgil, Aen. vi 733 'hinc metuunt cupiuntque, dolent gaudentque' and by Horace, Ep. i 6, 12 'gaudeat an doleat, cupiat metuatne, quid ad rem?'

partibus: the sub-divisions of a genus are usually called partes in Cicero, who rejected species. Varro and Silver Age writers have the latter term in this sense. Cicero also employs the term formae. Cf. v 25, 71 'genera partesque uirtutum'; de Inu. i 22, 32 'genus est quod plures partes amplectitur, ut animal. pars est, quae subest generi, ut equus'; Topica 6-7, 30-31 'nolim enim, ne si Latine quidem possit dici, specierum et speciebus dicere; ...formis et formarum uelim.'

cum omnis perturbatio sit: see Zeno's definition in iv 6, 11 n. on 'haec definitio, ut.'

5 aspernans uel rationi non oboediens, isque motus aut boni aut mali opinione citetur bifariam, quattuor perturbationes aequaliter distributae sunt. nam duae sunt ex opinione boni, quarum altera, uoluptas gestiens, id est praeter modum elata laetitia, opinione praesentis magni alicuius boni, altera, quae est inmoderata adpetitio opinati magni boni rationi non obtemperans, uel cupiditas recte uel libido dici potest. 25. ergo haec duo genera, uoluptas gestiens et libido, bonorum opinione turbantur, ut duo reliqua, metus et aegritudo, malorum. nam et metus opinio magni mali inpendentis et aegritudo est opinio magni mali praesentis, et quidem recens opinio talis mali ut in

5. aspernans R V G B K S E. aspernans L. || oboediens R V G K. oboediens B. 6. citetur R 16 7 17 V P G B 13 K 1 S E 12 L 1 W 2 M 1 2 D C II O 1-3 7 8. excitetur W 1. 7. nam duae sunt om. B 1. ||

expinione V. 9. alicuius boni rationi non obtemperans B 3 O 2. alicuius boni roē nō tēpans M 1. altera cupiditas quae recte uel libido dici potest quae est inmoderata adpetitio opinati magni boni rationi non obtemperans uel cupiditas recte uel libido dici potest hunc ordinem uerborum habent R 12 10 V P G B 12 K 12 S E 1-3 L 1 3 4 M 1 et magna ex parte R 6 16 17 B 3 L 26 W 1 M 2 C D J; om. O 2: II habet uel cupiditas...dici potest transuers. cal. notat. : post opinati magni boni habet V et ad pedem paginae man. ant. sed atram. nigriore subscr. et quidē magis significat nom̄ libidinis magnitudinem erroris. itaque in ea cupiditate q̄ flagrantissima ÷ ppie plerūque nom̄ h' ponitur si omnis appetitio opinati boni: textum restituit Dauisius. || inmoderata R 12 17 V P. inmoderata G K L.

10. adpetitio R V G K E. appetitio R 2 10 17 L. || obtemperans R 12 10 17 B 3 W 1 alii. obtemperans D C. optemperans G. tēpans M 1.

11. libido R V P G K L. § 25, 12. libido R V P G K L. 13. ut duo G K L. ūt V (ut in at eod. atr., ut uid., mut.). 14. inpendentis R V K E. inpendentes G alt. man. corr. inpendentis B L.

uel rationis...oboediens: Bouh, and others thought the first uel, and Ern. the clause uel rationi non oboediens, intrusive, but Nissen explains thus: 'Haec tria genera sunt motuum animi, quorum primo uoluptas comprehenditur, quae proprie eam partem hominis attingit, quae expers est rationis; alteri subiecta cupiditas est, quae praefracte rationem aspernatur; tertio denique metus et aegritudo, quibus uires hominis adeo extenuantur, ut obedire rationi nequeat. etenim duo haec genera animi motuum etsi sic conspirant, ut neutrum rationi obediat, ita tamen differunt, ut in altero contumacia, in altero imbecillitas inobedientiae sit causa.'

Zeno's definition of perturbatio is expanded to indicate the separate perturbationes.

citetur, 'is called forth,' 'is excited.' Usually excitare, concitare. The simple verb is elsewhere used by Cic. only of persons. ciere motus occurs i 10, 19;

N.D. ii 32, 81; cf. Ti. 7, 24 'eoque motu cuius orbis...ciebatur.'

praeter modum elata...: Diog. L. vii 114 ἡδονὴ δὲ ἐστὶν ἄλογος ἑπαρσις ἐφ' αἰρετῶ δοκοῦντι ὑπάρχειν.

opinati: in passive sense. Cf. 'meditata' iii 14, 30; Madv. § 153; Roby I § 734.

§ 25. turbantur=cum animi perturbatione mouentur, 'are disturbing causes due to a mere opinion with regard to good things.' This compressed use of the verb is fully illustrated by Naegelsbach, Stil. § 102, who compares turbare bellum=turbis concitandis efficere bellum. Cf. iv 15, 34 'ex qua concitantur perturbationes'; Top. 26, 99 'huic generi, in quo et misericordia et iracundia et odium et inuidia et ceterae animi adfectiones perturbantur': iii 1, i n. on 'consecrata.'

recens opinio: cf. Stobaeus Ecl. ii 174 λυπην δ' εἶναι συστολήν ψυχῆς ἀπειθῆ λόγῳ, αἴτιον δ' αὐτῆς τὸ δοξάζειν πρόσφατον κακόν eo rectum uideatur esse angī, id autem est, ut is qui doleat oportere opinetur se dolere. his autem perturbationibus, quas in uitam hominum stultitia quasi quasdam furias inmittit atque incitat, omnibus uiribus atque opibus repugnandum est, si uolumus hoc quod datum est uitae tranquille placideque tra-

20 ducere. sed cetera alias; nunc aegritudinem, si possumus, depellamus. id enim sit propositum, quandoquidem eam tu uideri tibi in sapientem cadere dixisti, quod ego nullo modo existimo; taetra enim res est, misera, detestabilis, omni con-

25 tentione, uelis, ut ita dicam, remisque fugienda.

XII. 26. Qualis enim tibi ille uidetur

Tántalo prognátus, Pelope nátus, qui quondam á socru Oéno-mao rege Híppodameam ráptis nanctust núptiis?

16. uidetur L 1. 17. quas in uita B 3 K 2 S W 1 D C II O 2 3 7 8. quas in uita R litt. post s eras. Vi post s eras. quasi in uita P (al. atr. corr.) E (cod atr. fortasse corr.). quasi in uita G B 1 2 K 1 W 2. quas i uicta J. quas O 1 in uita om. in uita L 1 quas om. in uitam corr. Lambinus.

18. inmittit R V P G B K E. 20. tranquille G. tranquille B K L. tranquillae R. 21. cetera R V P G B 2 3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 2 D C II J O 1 3 7 8 Gr. cetera B 1 W 1 L 1. caetera M 2 O 2. ceteras M 1.

22. id enim sit R P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 L 1 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1 3 7 8. id enim sit V. 24. existimo G K. estimo L. || taetra V G. taetra R. t&tra K 1. tetra P. tetra B L. || misera detestabilis R 1 0 P G K 1 W 1 M 1 2 alii. miser adetestabilis V inter r et a latet ~ in ras. misera

& detestabilis L 1. || omni K 1. omī R 1 0 P B L. oī R 1 6. omne R V. omne G. omē B 2 E.

XII. § 26, 2. a socro S L 6. a socero R 1 6 7 1 6 1 7 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 1 E 1-3 L 1-5 W 1 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8 W 2 (in marg. e cont. om.).

a foco K 2. a socru corr. Bentleyus. 3. oenomaō regi G. oeno mago regi L. ||

hippodameam V G K. hippoda meā B 2. hippodameam R 1 atr. nigriore superscr. ippodameā E B 1. hippodemeā L 1. hippodamiam W 1 M 2 O 2. hippodomiam O 3. ippodomīā S in marg. hippodamiam. hiipadamiam M 1. || nanctus V G B 2 L. nañctus R cod. atr. nantcis E cod. atr. nactus P B 1 3 K 1 2 S E 2 W 2 M 1 2 D J O 1-3 7 8. nactus ē W 1. nactis R 7. nanctus corr. Tregder.

παρέναι ἐφ' ᾧ καθήκει συστέλλεσθαι, iii 31, 75 'additur ad hanc definitionem a Zenone recte ut illa opinio praesentis mali sit recens'; also 12, 26; iv 7, 14.

in eo, 'while it continues' lit. 'amid it.' Mo. compares in Cat. ii 9, 20 'qui se in...repentinis pecuniis...insolentius...iac-tarunt.'

oportere opinetur: the importance of this element in aegritudo was insisted on by Chrysippus, see 31, 76 n. on 'Chrysippus autem...'

in uitam: the conj. of Lamb. is adopted by most editors. Nothing is more common than the loss of a final m. Küh. retains in uita of the MSS in the sense of 'while men live,' supplying in eam to inmittit atque incitat, but the meaning so obtained seems weak, nor are the words in eam naturally supplied.

quasdam: intensifies, cf. ii 4, 11 n. on 'excelsum quendam.'

furias, 'hell-hounds.' inmittere involves a metaphor from slipping dogs from a leash, cf. Verr. iv 21, 47 'inmittentur illi continuo Cibyrici canes.'

omnibus uiribus atque opibus: 3, 6 n. uelis, ut ita dicam, remisque: a proverbial expression like opibus uiribus = 'with all our might' 'with might and main.' Editors compare Plaut. Asin. i 3, 5 'remigio ueloque, quantum poteris, festina

Louis iste quidem pronepos. tamne ergo abiectus tamque 5 fractus?

Nolíte, inquit, hospité ad me adíre! ilico ístic, Ne cóntagió mea bonís umbraue óbsit.
. . tanta uís sceleris ín corpore haéret.

6. ilico R W1 D Gr. illico V. illico G alt. man. corr. illico K1.
dico B2. om. L1. || istic R16717 V P4 G B12 K1 S E12 L W12
DC O78. istinc P2. istic P at al. atr. linea supra duct. isthinc O3.
isti M1. ista B3 O12. istane P3 M2. istat J. 7. obsit tanta uis R167101617 V P1-4 G B1-3 K12 S E12 L2-6 W12 M12
DC II J O1-378. obstante uis L1. absit tanta uis ed. H.

et fuge,' and without metaphor Virg. Aen. iii 563; Sil. Ital. i 568 'remis uelisque impellite puppim'; Off. iii 33, 116 'uiris equisque, ut dicitur'; Ter. And. i 1, 134 'manibus pedibusque.'

XII. § 26. ille: sc. Thyestes.

Tantalo prognatus... Bentley first saw that these lines were verse, viz. trochaic septenarii, and corrected the unmetrical socero of MSS to socru referring for socrus as masc. to Naeuius in Nonius and Accius in Priscian p. 698. Cf. Nonius 223 'socrus et masculino genere ueteres dici posse uoluerunt. Naeuius Pellice: desim socru tuo, fratri patrueli meo?' Priscian i p. 248 ed. Krehl. 'uetustissimi tamen communiter hic et haec socrus proferebant—"Accius in Atreo simul et Pisaea praemia arrepta a socru possedit suo."' Küh., Hei., Ml. and others accept the reading socru; Kl., followed by Bai. and T.S., reads socru having found that form as a dat. in an inscription (Muratori 532).

qui quondam: sc. Pelops, not Thyestes, cf. ii 27, 67 n.

Oenomaos: ao are treated as one syllable by synizesis.

raptis...nuptiis: Hei. T.S. and Hasper refer raptis to the treachery by which Pelops gained his victory; but the word does not lend itself to this meaning nor was the story of treachery the only or, as it seems, the prevailing one with regard to the contest. Cf. ii 27, 67 n. In Pausanias v 17, 7 we read that on the front of the chest of Cypselus Oenomaos was represented pursuing Pelops who had Hippodamia with him, each hero having two horses and the horses of Pelops having wings. And Frazer there notes that 'on a terra-cotta relief, which was found at Velletri, Pelops and Hippodamia are apparently represented in a chariot drawn by winged horses' (O. Jahn, Archäologische Aufsätze, p. 6 n. 7). It seems to me that the idea of the artist in each case with regard to the race was that Pelops drove off with Hippodamia to take her away if he could on the condition of being slain by Oenomaos if overtaken. Pelops not being overtaken gained H. raptis nuptiis. The lines Tantalo prognatus... nuptiis are referred by Vahlen (Ennianae Poesis Reliquiae<sup>2</sup>, p. 187) to Ennius' Thyestes (Fr. 357). Vahlen thinks with Bentley that the words Louis iste quidem pronepos belong also to the poet, but most editors give them to Cicero, and they seem to lack the Ennian ring. Ribbeck (Röm. Trag., p. 20) is pretty certainly right in thinking that these lines came soon after the lines 'pol mihi fortuna...' of 19, 44.

pronepos: the descent was Jove, Tantalus, Pelops, Thyestes. Cf. Quintil. ix 3, 57.

Nolite hospites... Bentley first saw that these three lines were bacchiac tetrameters, as also the line 'quidnam est, obsecro? quid te adiri abnutas?' which is seen from Or. iii 41, 164 to have followed them. The three lines in the text are from the Thyestes of Ennius (Vahlen op. cit., p. 186) and spoken by Thyestes to the chorus when he finds that he has eaten the flesh of his children; the line from the de Oratore was spoken in response by a member of the Chorus. Ribbeck, Röm. Trag., p. 202.

istic: sc. manete. It is difficult to decide between this and istinc sc. abite or possibly dicite. Vahlen quotes Plaut. Merc. 912 'atque istic sta ilico'; Kl. Eur. Ph. 896.

The line 'tanta uis...haeret' is incomplete. Bentley inserted meo before tanta; Lachmann (on Lucr. iii 880) stetis; Sff. followed Küh. uobis. Sff. objects to meo that the adj. is not necessary since contagio mea precedes. Ribbeck in his first edition put in meo after haberet making four cretics, but in the second edition Frag., I p. 59, writes 'sed fortasse nullo opus est additamento, siquidem post creticum dimetrum ditrochaicum posuit poeta.' But there is no trochaic rhythm in the line.

tu te, Thyesta, damnabis orbabisque luce propter uim sceleris 10 alieni? quid? illum filium Solis nonne patris ipsius luce indig-num putas?

Refúgere oculi, córpus macie extábuít,

Lacrimaé peredere úmore exsanguís genas,

Situm ínter oris bárba paedore hórrida atque

15 Intónsa infuscat péctus inluuie scabrum.

9. tu te B<sub>3</sub> II (at fuerat tu ne). tute V P G B<sub>2</sub> K<sub>2</sub> L<sub>1</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub> 2 D C O 1-3 8. tute R atr. nigr. mut. tu<sup>n</sup> S al. atr. suppl. tu & E 1.

tu ne E 2. tu & hýesta B 1. 12. extabant G alt. man. corr. 13. lacrimae R.

lacrimę V L. || humore B<sub>3</sub>. umorē V eod. atr. uimorem K<sub>1</sub> atr. nigr.
suppl. et corr. humorē R 10 P 2 4 B<sub>1</sub> K<sub>2</sub> W<sub>1</sub> 2 M<sub>2</sub> D J O 7 8. umorem R 1. humorem P 1 3 G B<sub>2</sub> S E 1 2 L 2-6 M<sub>1</sub> C O 1-3 ed. H. hūorem R 16. humor L 1 om. II. || exsanguis B E D C. exanguis R V P G
B<sub>2</sub> K<sub>1</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>1</sub> J O 1. exangues S E 2 W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O 2 3 8. etiam sanguis L 1 om. II. || gene sic C. gene sit D. 14. situ nitoris R 7 10 16 17

P 1 2 G B 1 2 K 1 2 S L 1-5 W 2 M 1 J O 1 3 ed. H. situ nitoris R 1

atr. nigriore suppl. sitū nitoris V al. atr. mut. situ nidoris R 6 B<sub>3</sub> E<sub>3</sub> L 6 W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>2</sub> D C O 7. si tu nitoris E 2. sic unitoris E 1. situ mucoris O 8. situ indecoris O 2 om. II. situm inter oris corr. Lachmannus. || pedore G B 1 2 K 1. pendere L 1. 15. inluuie V E L. inluuiae G.

inluuiae R. illuuie B 1 2 K 1.

luce: by shrinking from the sight of men he shrinks from the light of day. Billerbeck compares Cato M. 4, 12 'nec uero ille in luce modo atque in oculis ciuium magnus, sed intus domique praestantior.'

sceleris alieni: sc. of his brother Atreus, who had murdered Thyestes' children and served their flesh up to him.

filium Solis: Aetes, king of Colchis, son of Helios and Perseis (Homer's Perse, Od. x 139). His brother Perses usurped his throne. His daughter Medea, who had left him with Jason when the latter carried off the golden fleece, returned after many years in a car drawn by winged dragons. Medus, her son by Aegeus, had a little earlier been shipwrecked on the Colchian coast and, finding himself among enemies, had pretended to be Hippotes the son of Creon. Supposing him to be really Hippotes Medea persuaded Perses to hand him over to her for slaughter. Then discovering him to be her own son she hands him a sword wherewith to avenge the wrongs of his grandfather Aetes by slaying Perses. The lines that follow were no doubt part of the Medus of Pacuuius, and were uttered by Aetes who appears upon the stage in woeful plight while Medea is talking to Medus.

The line announcing his entry preserved by Festus 'atque eum in ipso tempore ostentum senem' must have almost immediately preceded. Cf. Ribbeck's Röm. Trag., p. 323; Frag. 12 p. 263; Welcker, Griech. Trag., p. 1215; Hyginus, Fabulae 27; Apollodorus i 9, 28, 4; Diodorus iv 56.

refugere oculi, 'my eyes are sunken.' The metre is iambic trimeter.

peredere, 'have furrowed.'

situm inter oris: this correction of Lachmann is nearer to situ nitoris the reading of the MSS than even situ nidoris and yields a much better meaning. It would probably be written in uncial MSS SITVINTORIS with continuation stroke to denote the last two letters of inter. The error would then consist merely in missing the two top-strokes and writing NI for IN, an error of the most common kind. Situs lit. 'a letting alone' is used of the coating of dust that comes over objects lying by neglected, cf. Prop. iv 5, 72 'inmundo pallida mitra situ'; or the scurf that comes over fields left untilled, Virg. Geo. i 72 'segnem patiere situ durescente campum'; Aen. vi 462 'per loca senta situ'; or of rust, Tib. i 10, 50 'occupat arma situs.'

haec mala, o stultissime Aeeta, ipse tibi addidisti; non inerant in iis quae tibi casus inuexerat, et quidem inueterato malo, cum tumor animi resedisset (est autem aegritudo, ut docebo, in opinione mali recentī); sed maeres uidelicet regni desiderio, non filiae. illam enim oderas, et iure fortasse; regno non aequo animo carebas. est autem inprudens luctus maerore se confidentis, quod imperare non liceat liberis. 27. Dionysius quidem tyrannus Syracusis expulsus Corinthi pueros docebat; usque eo imperio carere non poterat. Tarquinio uero quid inprudens, qui bellum gereret cum iis qui eius non tulerant superbiam? is cum restitui in regnum nec Veientium nec Latinorum armis ueipientium O 3. uegentium R 1 eod. atr. uegentium P B 1 K 1 E 2 W 2 II O 8. uegentiū E S at in marg. uehietū. uegentium K 2. ueipientium O 7. uehientiū W 1. uegentiorum M 1. uehientium ed. H.

16. stultissime R V G B K L. || aeota V G. eota R 1 B 1 2 K 1. eota P at e in t al. man. mut. oeta K 2 L 3-6 W 1 2 D O 1 3 8. tota R 1 0 1 6 O 7. poeta L 2 om. L 1. Aeeta corr. edd. 17. in iis S. in hiis D. in his R V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 2 L W 2 J. 19. recentis R 1 6 7 1 0 1 6 1 7 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 1-6 W 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. p̄ntis W 1. recenti corr. Bakius. 21. inprudens V P G E. ipudens R. inprudens B K. || merere sed G at punctis not. et conf. alt. man.

§ 27, 22. dionysius G. dionisius R V K S E L. d̄yonisius B. 23. tyrannus G K L. tyrannus V. || syracussis G alt. man. corr. || chorinthi G. 24. inprudens G E. inprudens R V B K S L. 25. cum his G B. || tulerant G alt. man. corr. 26. ueientium R 6 7 1 7 B 2 3 L 1 M 2 C O 1 2 G at ientium in ras. alt. man. scr. ueientiū V D at uegentiū al. atr. suppl.

Beroaldus (in Mo.) seems to take situ nidoris as meaning 'with reek of stench.' Beroaldus quotes Donatus on Aeneid vii 440 'uicta situ uerique effeta senectus' where he says that situs is corruptio ex umore et diuturnitate contracta and that the word was also applied to a musty smell. But it is obvious that the action of umor is not necessarily implied in the word. nidor is used of various smells, cf. Juv. v 162 'nidor culinae'; Lucr. vi 792 of a candle blown out; Livy xxxviii 7, 13 of burning feathers. The reading situ liuentes had formerly some vogue owing to Turnebus' assertion (Adversaria xxvi, 6) that he found it in certain MSS.

atque: with hypermetric syllable, the next line beginning regularly with a vowel or h. et quidem inueterato malo, 'and this you did at a time when the evil was of long standing.' Many years elapsed between the loss of Aetes' throne and the return of Medea and Medus. [Ribbeck loc. cit. omits atque.] tumor: cf. 31, 76; 'erat enim in tumore animus.'

est autem...recenti: Ern. regarded these words as intrusive but F.A.W. more correctly notes that here, as in other places, Cicero departs from the dialogue, and speaks, as it were aside, to the reader.

uidelicet: with some irony, as often.

liberis: the word can only mean 'the free,' and we may perhaps see with T.S. a veiled allusion to Caesar's ambition. The Colchians were no more free under Perses than they had been under Aetes. The word cannot mean 'men who ought to be free.' Bouhier suspected that Cicero wrote Iberis.

§ 27. Dionysius the younger. Dav. notes that the same statement is made by Val. Max. vi 9, 6 ext.; Lucian Gallus c. 23 p. 737; Iustin xxi 5 and many more. But Aelian, V.H. ix 8, says that he ended by μητραγωγῶν καὶ κροῦων τύμπανα καὶ καταλούμενος and Athenaeus xii p. 541e agrees, neither writer mentioning school teaching. Cic. makes the same statement as here in Fam. ix 18, 1.

quidem: introducing an instance in illustration, cf. i 48, 116 n.

usque eo...non, 'so little.'

imperio carere: cf. i 36, 88 n. on 'tamquam in febris.'

quid: 10, 22 n. on 'nihil.'

qui...gereret: causal subj.; cf. i 18, 41 n.; 32, 78 n.

potuisset, Cumas contulisse se dicitur inque ea urbe senio et aegritudine esse confectus.

XIII. Hoc tu igitur censes sapienti accidere posse ut aegritudine opprimatur, id est miseria? nam cum omnis perturbatio miseria est, tum carnificina est aegritudo. habet ardorem libido, leuitatem laetitia gestiens, humilitatem metus, sed aegritudo 5 maiora quaedam, tabem, cruciatum, adfflictationem, foeditatem, lacerat, exest animum planeque conficit. hanc nisi exuimus sic ut abiciamus, miseria carere non possumus.

28. Atque hoc quidem perspicuum est, tum aegritudinem 10 existere, cum quid ita uisum sit ut magnum quoddam malum adesse et urgere uideatur. Epicuro autem placet opinionem mali latinorum R 6 7 B 3 K 2 W 1 M 2 II O 1-3 8 ed. H. latiorum V. latiorum W 2 E 2 al. atr. linea supra duct. latiorum C man. ant. corr.

latiorum R 1 17 G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 L M 1 D O 7. 27. contulisse se R V P G B 2 K 1 E 1 2 L 1 W 1 2 D C H O 1 3 8. se contulisse B 1 3 M 2 J O 2. cum tulisse O 7 se om. contulisse M 1 se om. || se superscr. eod. atr. S. || in qua urbe II. 28. aegritudinem G alt. man. corr.

XIII. 3. tum G. tū W 1. tunc B. || libido R G K L M 2. 4. genstiens
G sed prius n. conf. alt. man. 5. adfflictationem R V P G K. afflictationem L

R 1 6. afflictionem B R 10. 6. planeque G L. plēnaque K i.e. plena in plane atr. nigr. mut.

§ 28, 8. atque G. atq; R V P B 1 K 1 E 1 L W 1 O 1 3 8. atq; B 2 3
S E 2 W 2 M 1 D C J II. atq; M 2. at O 7. 9. existere R V G B K S E.
10. opinionem R V P G B 2 K 1 S M 1 2 C O 1 3 7 8. opinionē B 1 3

E 1 L W 2 D J O 2. opinione E 2 W 1 II. oppini<sup>em</sup> K 2 eod. atr.

Cumas contulisse se dicitur: Dav. refers to Livy ii 21, 5; Dionys. Halic. vi 21 and, for an opposite statement, to Aug. Ciu. Dei iii 15 'in oppido Tusculo... quattuordecim annos priuatam uitam quietus habuit, et cum uxore consenuit; optabiliore fortassis exitu quam socer eius... exstinctus.' See also Mommsen, R.H. I p. 316.

inque ea urbe: the more usual order in Cicero is eaque in urbe. For instances of que attached to the prep., such as this and p. Rocs. Amer. 39, 114 inque eam rem, cf. Krebs, Antibarbarus, p. 406.

XIII. cum...tum: when each of these particles has its own verb, cum has the indicative when it merely introduces a proposition parallel to and independent of that contained in the tum clause; when cum takes the subjunctive, the cum-clause is subordinate to the tum-clause and serves to explain it more clearly. Küh. Gram. II pp. 895-6. The subjunctive in the latter case is often concessive, e.g. v 39, 113. The verb in the tum-clause need not be expressed, cf. p. r. Deiot. 4, 12.

habet ardorem, 'implies,' cf. i 49, 119 n. on 'leuationem habeant.'

aegritudo...foeditatem, 'annoyance... disfigures a man.'

§ 28. atque...quidem: here, as often, introducing a more detailed treatment of the subject, cf. 2, 4 n.

cum quid ita uisum sit ut...uideatur, 'when anything presents itself in such a way that we think that we are in presence of a great and oppressing evil.' Cf. Pohlenz, Hermes xli 3, p. 323, who observes that the double use of uideri is due to the following Gk form: ὄταν τι οὐτω φαίνεται, ὥστε μέγα κακὸν παρεῖναι δοκεῖ and that this again is due to the necessity of distinguishing between φαντασία and δόξα, the idea as presented from without and the opinion formed with ref. to it by the percipient subject.

[quid: for the indefinite quid after cum see Kühner, Gramm. d. Lat. Spr. § 119, iii.]

opinionem mali aegritudinem esse natura: lit. 'that the belief that one is in evil is an annoyance which is due to aegritudinem esse natura, ut, quicumque intueatur in aliquod maius malum, si id sibi accidisse opinetur, sit continuo in aegritudine. Cyrenaici non omni malo aegritudinem effici censent, sed insperato et necopinato malo. est id quidem non mediocre 15 ad aegritudinem augendam; uidentur enim omnia repentina grauiora. ex hoc et illa iure laudantur :

Égo cum genui, túm morituros scíui et ei rei sústuli.

Praéterea ad Troiám cum misi ob défendendam Graéciam, Scíbam me in mortiferum bellum, nón in epulas mittere.

11. esse natura R I 10 P G. esse natura V. esse non natura E 2. esse natur@ R 16. 12. in egritudine R 7 P 23 B 3 E 2 W 1 M 2 D C II
 O 13. in egritudinē P 4 B 1 S E 1 O 8. in egritudinē L 1. in aegritudinem R 1 V P I G K I M I ed. H. in egritudinem B 2 O 7. in egritudiē K 2.

i egnē W 2. 13. malo aegritudine G. || effici G K L. 14. et necopinato
 R V P G B 12 K S E 12 L I W 2 M 1 I I J O 128 Gr. et om. B 3 W 1
 M 2 D C O 37. 16. et illa iure R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 12 L 1 W 12
 M 12 D C I I J O 1278 et om. O 3. 17. morituros R 1717 V P I-4 G

B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 L 1 M 2 D C II O 2378 Gr. ed. H. moritur W 2
 eod. atr. ut uid. moriturum R 6 W 1 M 1 J O 1. 21. sciebam R V P G B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 L 1 W 12 M 12 D C I I J O 1-378 Gr. ed. H.
 scibam corr. Lambinus. || epulas G B 12 K 1 E 2 W 2 O 1. aepulas R
 M 2. epulas V L 1 W 1.

nature.' The same inaccuracy of expression is not uncommon, e.g. § 25 supr. 'metus opinio magni mali independentis... est'; hence Küh. rightly rejects the conjecture of Sff. ex opinione mali aeg. esse natura as unnecessary. esse natura here = φθσει γλγνεσθαι, i.e. 'necessarily produced,' 'inevitable.'

The same view is stated in other words in 15, 32 'Epicuri...qui censet necesse esse omnis in aegritudine esse qui se in malis esse arbitrentur.' Dav. compares Diog. L. x 119 (where the view λυπηθήσασθαι τὸν σοφόν is attributed to Epicurus) and ii 91 where the same view is attributed to the Cyrenaic Aristippus, καὶ λυπηθήσασθαι μέντοι καὶ φοβήσασθαι φυσικῶς γὰρ γίνεσθαι. The Stoics on the contrary held that emotions are contrary to nature and due to a man's own assent, and that they can be controlled by an act of will. Cf. 33, 80 'quicquid esset in aegritudine mali, id non naturale esse, sed uoluntario iudicio et opinionis errore contractum'; 34, 82 end; Fin. iii 10, 35 'perturbationes autem nulla naturae ui commouentur, omniaque ea sunt opiniones ac iudicia leuitatis. itaque his sapiens semper uacabit.'

in aegritudine: Mo. reads in aegritudinem. Dav. while reading in aegritudine refers to Gellius i 7, 16 where d. imp. Cn. Pomp. 12, 33 is quoted for 'in praedonum potestatem fuisse' and Plaut. Amph. 180 'numero mihi in mentem fuit,' but that construction, though possibly Plautine, is not likely to have been employed sporadically by Cicero.

Cyrenaici: cf. 22, 52. For the relation between the Epicureans and the Cyrenaics see Zeller, Stoics, etc., c. 21 pp. 489 foll.

necopinato: i 39, 94 n.

et illa: the use of et in the sense of a weakened etiam is established in Cicero, though rare. Editors compare iv 34, 73 'probe et ille'; Q. Fr. i 1, 34 'simul et illud Asia cogitet'; i 1, 43 'simul et illud cogita.' It occurs chiefly with pronouns.

ego cum genui... these words are spoken by Telamon on receiving the news of the death of Ajax, cf. 24, 58; Senec. Cons. ad Polyb. 30 quoted below; Fronto, de Bell. Parth. p. 217 Nab. quoted below. Vahlen, Enn. Poes. Rel. p. 177, and Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. p. 133, refer the lines to Ennius' Telamon. See also Ribbeck, Frag. i p. 246.

XIV. 29. Haec igitur praemeditatio futurorum malorum lenit eorum aduentum quae uenientia longe ante uideris. itaque apud Euripiden a Theseo dicta laudantur; licet enim, ut saepe facimus, in Latinum illa conuertere:

- 5 Nam qui haec audita a dócto meminissém uiro, Futúras mecum cómmentabar míserias,
Aut mórtem acerbam aut éxsili maestám fugam Aut sémper aliquam mólem meditabár mali, Vt, sí qua inuenta díritas casú foret,
10 Ne me ínparatum cúra lacerarét repens.

XIV. § 29, 3. euripiden R V P<sub>4</sub> G. euripidem P<sub>12</sub> B<sub>1-3</sub> S M<sub>2</sub> J O<sub>2</sub>. euripidē K<sub>1</sub> E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>2</sub> O<sub>7</sub>. euripedem K<sub>2</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D C II. eurypidē W<sub>1</sub>. || theseo V S L. theseo R G B<sub>2</sub> K<sub>1</sub> E. 6. commentabar R V G B S E. cōmentabar K<sub>1</sub> L<sub>1</sub>. 7. exilii R V P<sub>1-4</sub> G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E L<sub>1</sub> O<sub>138</sub>. || alterum aut in marg. G add. alt. man. 9. inuenta B<sub>3</sub> L. inuenta O<sub>7</sub>. || duritas B<sub>3</sub> L. || casu R V G B<sub>12</sub> K S E<sub>12</sub> L W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> C II J O<sub>1-38</sub>. caū B<sub>3</sub> O<sub>7</sub>. 10. inparatum R V K E L. inparatū G at atū in ras. alt. man. imparatum B.

morituros: the plur. is read by most editors with the best MSS. Dav. Bouh. and Mo. read moriturum. Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. p. 133, thinks that in the beginning of the play Telamon may have received a report that both Ajax and Teucer were slain. If this is correct, Seneca, quoted below, expresses himself inaccurately. Perhaps Telamon may be speaking of his sons in general terms, having heard of the death of Ajax and not as yet knowing anything as to the fate of Teucer. There seems room for a third view. liberi is used at times to refer to one child, e.g. Sall. Jug. c. 10 end. It is even possible that this word had been so used in the preceding context. Seneca, Cons. ad Polyb. c. 30, may be quoting from memory, as Klotz points out. He has 'quanto ille iustior, qui nuntiata filii morte, dignam magno uiro uocem emisit: ego cum genui tum moriturum sciui.' Cf. Fronto, de Bell. Parth. p. 199 ed. Rom. (105 Nieb. 217 Nab.) quoted by Ribbeck and Vahlen, 'an cunctetur de militibus nostris Mars pater illa dicere ego cum genui tum morituros sciui et ei rei sustuli, praeterea cum... ob defendendum imperium scibam me in mortifera bella non...'

ei rei, 'to that end,' 'with that end in view.' Both words are here scanned as monosyllables.

sustuli: cf. I, 2 n. on 'suscepti.'

ob, 'with a view to': this sense is rare. Küh. quotes as Ciceronian parallels Verr. ii 32, 78 'pecuniam ob absoluendum acceperis'; p. Mur. I, 1 'ob...consulatum... obtinendum.' 'ob' praepositione antiquos usos esse pro ad testis est Festus' F.A.W.

scibam: it is not likely that Ennius used the form sciebam here with synizesis as Mo. supposes. Most modern editors follow Lamb. and Dav. in reading scibam for which Dav. refers to Festus p. 198 M. who quotes Ennius s.v. obsidio 'scibas natum ingenium Aiacei cui tu obsidionem paras,' a line also from the Telamo. cf. Ribb. Frag. I p. 55; Röm. Trag. p. 135; Vahlen, Enn. P. p. 180. scibam also occurs in Accius' Clytemestra, cf. Nonius 226, 10 (i p. 340 ed. Müll.) Cf. also Plautus, Rudens 378, scibatis. There is no reason to suppose, with Küh., that Cic. substituted sciebam for Ennius' form, since he usually preserves the archaic forms.

XIV. § 29. longe: not of time but = 'from afar.' So in Laelius 12, 40 'longe prospicere.'

uideris: i 6, 12 n. on 'cum fueris.'

apud Euripiden: in the Theseus, a lost play [quoted again in § 58]. The Greek is preserved in Plut. Cons. ad Apollon. pp. 443-4 and in Galen, de Plac. Hipp. et Plat. iv 7 p. 393 M. ἐγὼ δὲ τοῦτο παρὰ σοφοῦ τιος μαθὼν | εἰς φροντίδας νοῦν συμφορὰς τ' ἐβαλλόμεν | φυγὰς τ' ἐμαντῶ προστιθεὶς πάτρας ἐμῆς | θανάτου τ' ἄωρου καὶ κακῶν ἄλλας ὁδοῦς, | ἵν' εἴ τι πάσχοιμ' ὦν ἐδόξαζον φρενὶ | μὴ μοι νεωπὲς προσπεσὸν μᾶλλον δάκοι. Cic. as usual gives a free translation, cf. ii 8, 20 n. on 'o multa dictu grauia.' Leod. a Quercu in Mo. compares for the same praemeditatio futurorum malorum Virg. Aen. vi 103-5

30. quod autem Theseus a docto se audisse dicit, id de se ipso loquitur Euripides. fuerat enim auditor Anaxagorae, quem ferunt nuntiata morte filii dixisse: 'Sciebam me genuisse mortalem.' quae uox declarat iis esse haec acerba quibus non 15 fuerint cogitata. ergo id quidem non dubium, quin omnia, quae mala putentur, sint inprouisa grauiora. itaque quamquam non haec una res efficit maximam aegritudinem, tamen, quoniam multum potest prouisio animi et praeparatio ad minuendum dolorem, sint semper omnia homini humana meditata. et nimi-20 rum haec est illa praestans et diuina sapientia, et perceptas penitus et pertractatas res humanas habere, nihil admirari,

§ 30, 11. theseus R V G B 2 K L W. thesejus E. || de se ipso R 1 16
 G L W H O 1 3 8. de se ipso K. de ipso V eod. atr. E al. atr. de se B 2 eod. atr. ut uid. de ipso R 10 B 1 S. 12. adiutor L 1. 13. filii R G S
 L 1. 14. his G B L 1. 16. putantur L 1. || inprouisa R V G K L.
 inprouisa B S. 17. maximam R V G. maximam K fort. eod. atr.
 magnam L 1. 19. et nimirum G K L. nimirum V. 21. res humanas R V P G B 1-3 K S E 1 2 L W 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 7 8. humanas res II alio atr. om. W 1. || admirari K 1 E 1 L 1 O 1. ammirari R eod. atr.
 ut uid. ammirari V G B 1 E 2. ammirari B 2.

'non ulla laborum, | o uirgo, noua mi facies inopinae surgit; | omnia praecepi atque animo mecum ante peregi.'

licet enim: Küh. thus explains the ellipse, so usual with enim: 'itaque apud Eur. a Theseo dicta laudantur, quae in Latinum sermonem conuersa sic se habent: licet enim.' Cf. i 6, 11 n.

qui: causal; cf. i 6, 12 n. on 'qui dimiserit.' mortem acerbam: = the Gk θαρátovs áwovovs; cf. i 39, 93 n. acerbius.

exsili...fugam: cf. Or. iii 3, 9 'sibi exsiliium et fugam deprecaretur.' Gen. of definition.

aliquam: not = aliam quam as many have supposed, though the etymology of the word, for which see Lindsay, L.L. p. 447, might seem to support this view. Better as Küh. explains = 'aut mortem aut exsiliium aut omnino aliquam malimolem.'

repens: cf. 22, 52 'hostium repens aduentus.' Cicero's usual word is repentinus.

§ 30. a docto...audisse: Madv. on Fin. i 11, 39 'ut a patre audiebam' notes that Cicero more often wrote audire ex or de aliquo.

id de se ipso loquitur: Galen, de Plac. Hipp. et Plat. iv 7 p. 418, says that Posidonius, in criticising Chrysippus' definition of aegritudo, employs the story of what Anaxagoras said on hearing of the death of his son and said that it was from this remark of Anaxagoras that Euripides got the idea of putting the sentiments translated in the text into the mouth of Theseus.

fuerat... auditor Anaxagorae: cf. Strabo xiv 36 end; Diod. i 7 end; R. and P.<sup>8</sup> § 148 [Diog. Laert. ii 3, 5 [10]].

Anaxagoras: i 43, 104 n.

quem ferunt: a story like that here told of Anaxagoras was also told of Pericles and of Xenophon. All three instances are mentioned by Val. Max. v 10, 1 f. ext. and Plut. Cons. ad Apoll. p. 465 a. Diog. L. ii 13 tells the story of Anaxagoras and adds that some ascribe the remark to Solon and some to Xenophon. Diogenes there speaks of the death of sons and Aelian, V.H. iii 2, mentions two sons; but one son only is spoken of by Val. Max. l.c., Plut. l.c., and by other authorities cited here by Dav. [cf. Trebell. Pollio, uit. Gallien. c. 17, ubi de Valeriano patre comperit quod captus esset, id quod philosophorum optimus de filio amisso dixisse fertur, 'sciebam me genuisse mortalem,' ille sic dixit 'sciebam patrem meum esse mortalem'].

haec una res: sc. the circumstance that they are unexpected.

meditata: with passive force, cf. 11, 24 n. on 'opinati.'

nimirum: i 22, 52 n.

res humanas, 'the vicissitudes of life.'

cum acciderit, nihil, ante quam euenerit, non euenire posse arbitrari.

- 25 Quam ob rem ómnis, cum secúndae res sunt máxime, tum máxime
Meditári secum opórtet, quo pacto áduersam aerumnám ferant.
Perícla, damna péregre rediens sémpet secum cógitet
30 Aut fíli peccatum aut uxoris mórtem aut morbum fíliæ, Commúnia esse haec, né quid horum umquam ácci-dat animó nouom;
Quicquíd praeter spem euéniat, omne id députare 35 esse ín lucro.

XV. 31. Ergo hoc Terentius a philosophia sumptum cum tam commode dixerit, nos, e quorum fontibus id haustum est, non et dicemus hoc melius et constantius sentiemus? hic est enim ille uultus semper idem, quem dicitur Xanthippe praedicare

24. omnis R V G K. omís P B I E I W 2 D. om̄s S L. om̄es J. oēs B 2. || saecundae G. || maxume tum maxime R V P G. maxume K
atr. nigr. tum maxuma superscr. maxime tum maxime B S. sunt tunc maxime L. 26. aduersam V G B E I. adu'sam E 2. aduersum R P K. aduersus L. 28. pericula R V G B K S E. 30. filii G B K L I.
32. ne quot horum L I. 34. p̄pt spem K.

XV. § 31, 1. haec G alt. man. superscr. || sumptum cum R V P G E O 3 S
h. l. non in quom mut. 2. æquorum R eod. atr. aequorum K. equorum L.
4. uultus R V G. uultus P B I 2 S E L. uultus K i.e. u in o al. atr. mut.

nihil admirari: a principle prescribed by many philosophers; e.g. the ἀθαυβία or εὐθυμία of Democritus (R. and P.<sup>8</sup> § 205), the ἀραπαξία of the Epicureans, the ἀράθεια of the Stoics. Cf. v 28, 81; Hor. Epp. i 6, 1.

non euenire posse: not non posse euenire because the negative goes with euenire not with posse. non euenire is contrasted with euenerit. Küh.

quam obrem omnis... Iambicoctonarii from Terence, Phormio 241—246.

pericla, damna... in Terence this line runs thus 'pericla, damna, exsilia peregre rediens semper cogitet' and the next line but one thus 'communia esse haec fieri posse, ut ne quid animo sit nouom.' Faernus thought that Cicero might be quoting from memory and Elmer, App. to Phormio, adds that the copyists who were professedly reproducing the text before them, are more to be depended upon. Bentley introduces into the text of Terence the reading given here by Cicero, applying to the reading supported by the MSS of Terence the adverbs 'insipienter, inepte ac stolide.' Fleckeisen agrees with Bentley's view.

deputare: the infin. depends upon oportet in spite of the intervention of cogitet, which carries on meditari oportet.

XV. § 31. ergo...cum...dixerit: the more usual form of the argumentatio e contrario is seen in i 14, 31. Hence Dav. in ed. 2 struck out cum and F.A.W. in his notes took it to be spurious. But it is similarly used elsewhere in Cicero and both Dav. and F.A.W. subsequently retained the word. Cf. ii 20, 46 n.

nos: sc. philosophi.

hic est enim: enim refers to constantius sentiemus, 'this consistency is seen in that unvarying equability of countenance which...' [For enim introducing an ex-

5 solita in uiro suo fuisse Socrate, eodem semper se uidisse ex-euntem illum domo et reuertentem. nec uero ea frons erat, quae
 M. Crassi illius ueteris, quem semel ait in omni uita risisse Lucilius, sed tranquilla et serena; sic enim accepimus. iure autem erat semper idem uultus, cum mentis, a qua is fingitur, 10 nulla fieret mutatio. quare accipio equidem a Cyrenaicis haec arma contra casus et euentus quibus eorum aduenientes impetus diuturna praemeditatione frangantur, simulque iudico malum illud opinionis esse, non naturae; si enim in re esset, cur fierent

5. socrate R 6 P B 13 K 2 E 23 L 13 4 6 M 12 D C II O 1-3 7 8. socratē R 10 W 2 J. socrate<sup>n</sup> V. socratem R 11 16 B 2 K S L 5 ed. H.

socratam G alt. man. superscr. 6. quae M K I M 2. quae m. R in marg.
 al. atr. marci quem V atr. uirid. ut uid. punct. not. que. m. E 2 II.

que m B 2 E 1. que N M 1. q̄ crassi S (q̄ lineam claudit; M post q̄ extra lineam excurrens erasum est). que crassi B 1. erat & M. illius crassi ueteris L 1.
 q̄ O. W 2 D. que G at e in ē mut. et M add. alt. man. om. W 1. 9. uultus

R V G. uultus B 1 2 S E L. 10. fieri G alt. man. superscr. fieri B 1 fuerit

eod. atr. fieri K. fuerit L. 11. impetus G K L. 12. frangatur R eod. atr. 13. esset P 23 B 3 M 2 O 1-3 8. essēt P 1 S. essent R 1 6 7 17 V P 4 G K I E 1 2 D C II J. eēt B 1 2 W 2 O 7. iure essent L 1 in re mala essent M 1 ed. H. om. W 1.

ample, following a general statement, cf. Draeger, Synt. d. Lat. Spr. § 350, 2d.] Dav. compares Off. i 26, 90 and quotes Dionys. of Halic. in Stobaeus 108, 77 ἡ Ξανθίππη ἔφη μυρίων μεταβολῶν τὴν πόλιν καὶ αὐτοὺς κατασχουσῶν ἐν πάσαις ὁμοίον τὸ Σωκράτους πρόσωπον καὶ προΐοντος ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας καὶ ἐπανιόντος θεασασθαι ἤρμοστο γὰρ δηλονότι πρὸς πάντα ἐπιεικῶς τοιγάρτοι οὐδὲν πώποτε ἐλύπησεν αὐτόν. Aelian, V.H. ix 7, has almost the very same words.

Xanthippe: for the good and bad qualities of this lady see note and reff. in Zeller, Socrates and the Socratic Schools E.T.<sup>2</sup> pp. 61-2.

Socrate: Bake (followed by Schiche) ejected and Bai., Hei., T.S., Ml. bracket, regarding Socratem of best MSS as a gloss upon illum.

eodem semper se uidisse: dicens is carried on from praedicare.

M. Crassi: cf. Fin. v 30, 92. Some accounts represent him as having never laughed, cf. Pliny, N.H. vii 18, 79 'ferunt Crassum, auum Crassi in Parthis interempti, numquam risisse; ob id Agelastum uocatum'; also Solinus, c. 1, quoted by Dav. who also refers to Joannes Sarisb. Policr. viii 8 who quotes this statement of Cicero [cf. Seneca, de ira ii 12, 4].

semel: the mirth-provoking words are recorded by St. Jerome, epist. vii (ad Chromatium Jouinum et Eusebium) 'similem habent labra lactucam asino carduos comedente.'

Lucilius: cf. Marx' Lucilius, i. 1299 and commentary.

a Cyrenaicis: 13, 28.

casus et euentus: ἐν διὰ δυνῶν.

quibus ... diuturna praemeditatione: it seems best, with T.S., Hei., and F.A.W., to regard diuturna praemeditatione as a sort of apposition to quibus, the arms consisting in diuturna praemeditatio. Küh. follows Kl. in taking quibus as abl. instrumenti and the second abl. as abl. modi. If the arms are not the praemeditatio they must be the settled calm which results from the latter.

malum illud: sc. aegritudinis. Wesenberg compares II, 24 'est igitur causa omnis (aegritudinis) in opinione'; 27, 65 'uides opinionis esse, non naturae malum'; 28, 71 'non in natura, sed in opinione esse aegritudinem'; 33, 80 quoted in note on 13, 28; 34, 82 end.

opinionis...naturae: see ii 22, 53 n. and cf. iii 13, 28 n. on 'opinionem mali aegritudinem esse natura' and Fin. iii 10, 35 quoted there. On this point Cic. adopts the Stoic view against that of the Epicureans.

in re esset = natura esset. Cf. 30, 74 'cogitatio...nihil esse in re mali dolori medetur.' The subject is malum illud.

prouisa leuiores? 32. sed est isdem de rebus quod dici possit subtilius, si prius Epicuri sententiam uiderimus, qui censet necesse esse omnis in aegritudine esse qui se in malis esse arbitrentur, siue illa ante prouisa et expectata sint siue inueterauerint. nam neque uetustate minui mala nec fieri praemeditata leuiores, stultamque etiam esse meditationem futuri mali aut fortasse ne futuri quidem; satis esse odiosum malum omne, cum uenisset; qui autem semper cogitauisset accidere posse aliquid aduersi, ei fieri illud sempiternum malum; si uero ne futurum quidem sit, frustra suscipi miseriam uoluntariam; ita semper angere aut accipiendo aut cogitando malo. 33. leuationem autem aegritudinis in duabus rebus ponit, auocatione a cogitanda molestia et reuocatione ad contemplandas uoluptates. parere enim censet animum rationi posse et quo illa ducat sequi. uetat igitur ratio intueri mo-

§ 32, 14. isdem R V P 4 G B I 2 K E I L W 2 J O 7. iisdem S at ii

al. atr. hisdem M I O I. isdem P I (sic) al. atr. superscr. iisdem B 3 E 2 M 2 C O 3. hiisdem D II O 8. om. W I. 16. omnis R V G B I E. omis K W 2. om̄s B 2 S L. 17. illa G at i in ras. litterae u. || expectata R V G B K S E L. 19. meditationem R V P I 4 G B I-3 K S E I 2 L 2-5 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O 3 8 7. praemeditationem O 2. premeditationem O I ed. H. om. L I W I. 23. uoluntariam G addidit alt. man. in marg. extremo inf. || semp pangi B.

§ 33, 24. leuationem G. 25. reuocatione R O I. reuocatōe W 2. reuocationē B I L. reuocationem G K. reuocationem V. reuocatōm B 2. 26. pareri G.

essent of most MSS is due to an attractive influence exerted by the following fierent prouisa leuiores on the mind of an early copyist.

prouisa: substantival = ea quae prouisa essent. So Küh. who compares 13, 28 'uidentur enim omnia repentina grauiora'; 14, 30; 22, 52 'quod prouisum ante non sit, id ferire uehementius' and ibid. 'omnia uideri subita maiora.'

§ 32. subtilius, 'with more precision,' cf. i 23, 55 n.

qui se in malis esse arbitrentur: cf. 13, 28 'si id sibi accidisse opinetur.'

siue...siue... i.e. neither accepting the Cyrenaic remedy of diuturna praemeditatio nor Zeno's view that aegritudo consists in a recens opinio. For the latter see 11, 25 n. on 'recens opinio.'

stultamque etiam esse... cf. Fin. i 17, 57 'stulti autem malorum memoria torquentur, sapientes bona praeterita grata recordatione renouata delectant. est autem situm in nobis, ut et aduersa quasi perpetua obliuione obruamus et secunda iucunde ac suauiter meminerimus.'

uenisset...cogitauisset...futurum sit:

as censet, used of an author who is dead but lives on in his works (i 18, 42 n. on 'uolt'), involves a past idea we have it here followed by secondary and primary sequence in turn. Cf. Fin. iv 21, 58-9 'dicunt (Stoici)...uideatur...esset...uideantur...iudicarem' and other exx. in Küh. Gram. d. Lat. Sprache II p. 775.

§ 33. in duabus rebus ponit, auocatione...: the prep. is usually omitted before clauses in apposition owing to the intimate connexion between such clauses and the words which they explain. Cf. iv 6, 11 'ex malis...metum futuris, aegr. praesentibus'; de Inu. i 5, 7 'tribus in generibus rerum uersari rhetoris officium putauit, demonstratio etc.'

auocatione: sc. animi.

reuocatione: cf. i 16, 38 n. on 'seuocare.'

animum ( rationi, 'feeling') ( reason: cf. i 18, 41 n. on 'animum.'

ratio: sc. as Epicurus holds. The view of Epicurus is being stated.

abstrahit: absolutely used as in Cato M. 6, 15 'a rebus gerendis senectus abstrahit.'

lestias, abstrahit ab acerbis cogitationibus, hebetem <facit> aciem ad miseras contemplandas; a quibus cum cecinit receptui, inpellit rursus et incitat ad conspiciendas totaque mente contrectandas uarias uoluptates, quibus ille et praeteritarum memoria et spe consequentium sapientis uitam refertam putat. haec nostro more nos diximus, Epicurii dicunt suo. sed quae dicant uideamus, quo modo neglegamus.

XVI. 34. Principio male reprehendunt praemeditationem rerum futurarum. nihil est enim quod tam obtundat eleuetque

28. hebetat aciem E 2. hebetem aciem R 1 6 7 17 P 2-4. G K 1 B 3
L 1-3 O 2. hebetem aciē O 3. hebetē aciem K 2 M 2 O 1. hebetē aciē
B 2 W 2 J. hebetem aciem V incert. an al. atr. hebetem aciem P 1 al. atr. superscr. hebetem atiem L 4 6. ebetē aciem Π. hebetem aciem S C. hebetē atiam M 1. hebetē aciem B 1 D O 7. hebetē aciem E 3. habentē aciem E 1. habentem aciem L 5. habentē aciē O 8. om. W 1. hebetem facit aciem corr. Wesenbergius. 29. contemplandas V man. ant. superscr. || cecinat R 6 B 3 E 3 M 2 O 2. cecinit Π at fuerat cecidit. cecidit O 3. cecidit R 1 7 10 16 17 V G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L M 1 D C J O 1 7 8. cecidit W 2. om. W 1. || receptui B 3 E 3 M 2 O 2 3. receptui Π at fuerat receptum. receptu B 1 leuiter superscr. receptu R 10 V B 2 K 2 S E 1 L 1 5 W 2 D C O 8. receptū R 1 E 2 O 1 7. receptum R 16 M 1 ed. H.

receptum pellit G in receptui inpellit alt. man. mut. recepta K 1 atr. nigr. superscr.
om. W 1. 30. impellit R V B K S. inpellit L O 7 G ut supr. 33. epicurii V B 2 G L. epicurei R 1 i in e al. atr. ut uid. mut. epicurei R 6 P 1 2

B 1 K S E 1 2 D C Π O 1. epicuri R 1 7 P 3 M 1 2 J O 3 8 7. epicui
W 2. om. W 1. || quēdicant V i in e eod. atr. mut. 34. neglegamus
R V B 1 K E L J. neglegamus G at primum g exp. et conf. alt. man. negli-gamus B 2.

XVI. § 34, 1. repraehendunt praemeditationum G. 2. obtundat P 4 S E 2
M 1 2 D C Π O 1-3 7 8. obtundet B 2 K W 2 J. optundat V B 1 E 1 L.

optundat R eod. atr. superscr. P 1 al. atr. superscr. optundet G. || eleuetque
R V P 1-4 G B 1 2 K S E 1 L W 2 M 2 D C J O 3 7. <sup>leueut</sup> al. atr. leuetque E 2 Π O 2. releuetque M 1. <sup>euellatq;</sup> O 8

hebetem facit aciem: the reading of most MSS cannot be right though Tr. retained it and Kl., Add. p. 134, approved. Sff.'s conj. faciens for aciem is untenable since the object can neither be the indefinite pronoun nor animum carried on from above. hebetat read by Man. 'e uetere codice' and by Dav. from 'Eliens. tert.' may possibly be right though not found, as Wes. (Em. I p. 15) objected, before the Augustan age (Aen. ii 605). Wes. argues that Cic., who uses hebescere several times (e.g. i 30, 73), says obtundere or praestringere or even hebetem reddere and he thinks that reddit or facit has fallen out here. To Wes. Küh., who reads hebetat, objects that there are many ἀπαξ λεγόμενα in Cic. and that hebetat may have been one. But one brought in by emendation would be unconvincing and it seems safer to adopt Wesenberg's facit with most modern editors.

cecinat: for the mood and tense see ii 2, 5 n. on 'occurrit' and ii 24, 58 n. on 'aspeXimus.'

cecinat receptui = auocauit; a military metaphor. Mo. compares Quint. xii 11, 4. rursus: i 17, 40 n.

contrectandas: a bold metaphor, cf. Tac. Ann. iii 12, 7, where Furneaux also cites Lactantius, de Opif. Dei 1.

nostro more: sc. eleganter et ornate.

suo: cf. ii 3, 7 n. on 'neque distincte... scribere.'

XVI. § 34. male reprehendunt = male faciunt, quod reprehendunt, cf. v 37, 109 aegritudinem quam perpetua in omni uita cogitatio nihil esse quod non accidere possit, quam meditatio condicionis humanae, 5 quam uitae lex commentatioque parendi, quae non hoc adfert, ut semper maereamus, sed ut numquam. neque enim, qui rerum naturam, qui uitae uarietatem, qui inbecillitatem generis humani cogitat, maeret, cum haec cogitat, sed tum uel maxime sapientiae fungitur munere. utrumque enim consequitur, ut et consider- 10 andis rebus humanis proprio philosophiae fruatur officio et

4. non accidere possit R V P G B I-3 K S E I 2 L W I 2 M 2 II J O I-3 7 8. accidere non possit D C. tam abscondere possit M I. || conditionis

G B L. 5. adfert R V G. adfert K atr. nigr. affert B L. 7. inbecillitatem V G B I 2 E L. inbecillitatem R. imbecillitatem K. 8. maxime

R V G B S L. maxime K atr. nigriore. 10. fruatur R I 6 7 16 V P I 3 4 G B I-3 K I 2 S E I-3 L I 5 6 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O 2 7 8 ed. H. fruatur L 3. fungatur R I 7 P 2 L 2 4 O 3. fungatur O I.

'stulte anteposuit': the adv. expresses a judgment with regard to the action, not the manner in which it is done. See Madv. on Fin. iv 23, 63; Küh. Gram. p. 597 Anm. 2.

leuet = extenuet.

cogitatio: for the verbal with acc. and infin. see Madv. § 395; Roby II §§ 1351-2.

non accidere possit: for the order of words cf. 14, 30 n. on 'non euenire posse.'

uitae lex: compressed for uitae legis meditatio; nearly the same as med. condicionis humanae, further explained in the next sentence 'neque enim, qui rerum naturam...'; cf. v 13, 38 'manet in lege naturae'; Fam. vi 6, 12 'leuat enim dolorem communis quasi legis et humanae condicionis recordatio.' 'A consideration of the human lot, of the general laws under which men live, and a preparation to obey those laws.' Virtue, according to Chrysippus, consists in living in harmony with oneself and with nature in general, cf. Diog. L. vii 89 φύσιν δὲ Χρῆσιππος μὲν ἐξακούει, ἣ ἀκολούθως δεῖ εἶναι, τὴν τε κοινὴν καὶ ἰδίως τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην. We must be in harmony with the world in which we live, and consequently know that vicissitudes of fortune are inevitable. Cf. 25, 60 'necessitas ferendae condicionis humanae quasi cum deo pugnare prohibet admonetque esse hominem, quae cogitatio magno opere luctum leuat.'

ut semper: as Epicurus maintained, cf. § 32.

proprio: the Stoics held that 'the proper study of mankind is man.' Of the three main divisions of philosophy, δια-

λεκτική, φυσική and ἠθική, the last-mentioned was 'the central point towards which all other inquiries converge. Even natural science, although lauded as the inmost shrine of philosophy, is, according to Chrysippus, only necessary for the philosopher to enable him to distinguish between things good and evil, between what should be done and what should be left undone.' Zeller, Stoics, etc., c. iv p. 56 and Chrysippus in Plut. Stoic. Rep. c. 9 p. 10, 35 d there quoted.

fruatur officio: Manutius and Lambinus, whether from MSS or their own conjecture, substituted fungatur for fruatur, and Dav. Lall. Ern. and Küh. follow them, but almost every other modern editor retains fruatur. If, as Küh. supposes, fruatur has been substituted by some one whose taste was offended by the recurrence of fungatur, then, since all the best MSS have fruatur, this must have been done at least as early as the 6th cent. A.D., a period when interpolation was not in vogue and a period, too, when such recurrences gave no offence. It is more likely that fungatur is repeated from two lines higher up, in the late MSS in which it occurs. fruatur officio = officio fungendo delectetur, cf. Hand on Wopkens p. 112. Hand compares Senec. Ep. 93, 9 'omnium rerum cognitione frui sumus.' There is also a contrast which would be lost by the change from fruatur to fungatur: the course prescribed gives him before misfortune comes a congenial occupation: after its arrival a three-fold consolation.

aduersis casibus triplici consolatione sanetur, primum quod posse accidere diu cogitauit, quae cogitatio una maxime molestias omnis extenuat et diluit, deinde quod humana humane ferenda intellegit, postremo quod uidet malum nullum esse nisi culpam, 15 culpam autem nullam esse, cum id quod ab homine non potuerit praestari, euenerit. 35. nam reuocatio illa quam adfert, cum a 11. aduersis RV P12 G B1-3 KS E2 L W12 M12 DCII J O 278. aduersus EI eod. ut uid. atr. auersis O3. diuersis O1. || casibus RVG B1-3 KS E12 L W12 M12 DCII O1-378. || sanetur W12 sanetur RVK. sanentur G B2. sanatur L. 12. cogitauerit RV P1-3 G B13 KS E12 L W12 M12 DII O1-3. cogitauit J O78. cogitauit B2 C. cogitauit corr. Bentleyus. || maxime K atr. nigriore. maxime L. 13. omnis RVG BKE. omis W2. omnes SL. || humana humane ferenda V man. ant. superscr. humane ferenda R7 P4 B1-3 KI2 E23 L356 W2 M2 DCII J O2378 Gr. humana ferenda R617 GS L24 W1 M1. humanae ferenda R eod. ut uid. atr. humanae ferenda O1. humanae ferenda P3. humane ferenda P1 E1 L1. humana ferendas P2. 14. intellegit RVPGBK. intelligit L. 15. culpam R6 V P1-3 GB1-3 KE12 L1W1 M2 DCII O13 ed. H. culpā R uel praeri P4 S W2 M1 J O78. 16. praestari R atr. ant. superscr.

§ 35. adfert RVG at ert in ras. alt. man. adfert K r eras. et al. atr. suppl. affert B L. || cum contuendis B a om.

aduersis casibus: abl. abs. giving the circumstances, cf. i 5, 10 n. on 'maxima corona.' Bentley's corr. aduersus casus is unnecessary.

cogitauit: Bentley proposed cogitauit; cogitauerit cannot be right. If it were fut. perf. we should have had consequetur above. The parallelism in the clauses requires the indic. cogitauit in symmetry with intellegit and uidet. Wopkens p. 108 thinks that Cicero forgot his constr. but his exx. are not similar. Or. finds an absurd meaning in cogitauerit 'since perhaps, as we can easily imagine, he had thought,' and Mo. imagines that quod in the first clause means quippe qui or cum and in the second and third clauses quia, or eo, quod.

una maxime: i 9, 17 n.

humana humane ferenda, 'that the incidents of the human lot must be borne with resignation.' Cf. ii 27, 65 n. on 'humane' and exx. quoted there. Dav. quotes here Plut. Cons. ad Apollon. 102 a ἀνθρωπίνως φέρειν τὸ συμβεβηκός, 118 c πειθόντες τὰ κοινὰ τοῦ βίου συμπτώματα κοινῶς φέρειν καὶ τὰ ἀνθρώπινα ἀνθρωπίνως. Fam. vi 1, 4 'simus igitur ea mente, quam ratio et ueritas praescribit, ut nihil in uita nobis praestandum praeter culpam putemus, eaque cum careamus, omnia humana placate et moderate feramus.'

nisi culpam, 'that there is no evil where there is no moral blame.' For culpa cf. Fam. vi 1, 4 above. Camerarius in Mo. quotes Fam. ix 16, 5 'nihil esse sapientis praestare nisi culpam'; v 17, 5 'homines sapientes turpitudine, non casu et delicto suo, non aliorum iniuria commoueri'; ibid. § 3 'ut et communem incertumque casum, quem neque uitare quisquam nostrum nec praestare ullo pacto potest, sapienter ferres et dolori fortiter ac fortunae resisteres'; and he defines culpa as ἀμαρτημα ἴδιον seu malum cuius sibi aliquis auctor ipse fuit, comparing Plut. Cons. ad Apoll. 114 c τὸ μὲν γὰρ μὴ δι' αὐτὸν κακῶς πράττειν ὁ μὲν Κράντωρ φησὶν ὁ μικρὸν εἶναι κούφισμα πρὸς τὰς τύχας, ἐγὼ δ' ἀν' εἰποίμι φάρμακον ἀλυσίας εἶναι μέγιστον. In law culpa = 'negligence' as contrasted with dolus intentional 'wrong' and praestare culpam was much used in this connexion also. [Cf. Cic. de Or. i 24, 113 istam enim culpam, quam ueris, ego praestabo.]

praestari: the word is much used in law, e.g. Off. iii 16, 66 'emptori damnum praestari' lit. 'to put oneself before something' hence 'to be responsible for something' whether for the occurrence or the non-occurrence of an event.

§ 35. nam, 'but as for his proposed remedy...' For nam in transition and refutation see Hand, Tursell. III 147, IV, 7.

quam adfert: sc. Epicurus, cf. § 33 init.

contuendis nos malis auocat, nulla est. non est enim in nostra potestate fodicantibus iis rebus quas malas esse opinemur dissimulatio uel obliuio; lacerant, uexant, stimulos admouent, ignis 20 adhibent, respirare non sinunt. et tu obliuisci iubes, quod contra naturam est, qui, quod a natura datum est, auxilium extorqueas inueterati doloris? est enim tarda illa quidem medicina, sed tamen magna, quam adfert longinquitas et dies. iubes me bona cogitare, obliuisci malorum. diceres aliquid, et magno quidem 25 philosopho dignum, si ea bona esse sentires quae essent homine dignissima.

XVII. 36. Pythagoras mihi si diceret aut Socrates aut Plato: 'Quid iaces aut quid maeres aut cur succumbis cedisque fortunae? quae peruellere te forsitan potuerit et pungere, 18. his rebus G B K. 19. ignis R V G B 1 2 K. ignes S E L J. i

 est qui a natura P G. est quia natura R 1 10 V B K E 1 2 L 1 5 II J O 1 7 8. est quod autem a natura P 2 M 2. quod est autem a natura M 1. est quod quidem a natura R 7 L 2. est q3 natura R 1 6 1 7 B 2 S (in marg. quod aut a). est Q 1 a nā W 2. est qd' natura E 3 (in marg. aut a). quod autem a (est om.) L 3 6 O 2. est quod natura ed. H. est qui quod a natura corr. Tregder. || datum est R V P G K 2 E 1 3 L W 1 II O 2 3 7. est datum L 6. elatum est B 2. || extorqueas R V P G B 1 3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L W 1 2 M 2 II J O 1 2. extorqas B 2 O 8. extorques R 6 ed. H. extorqueris M 1.

extorquens O 3. extorquendi D C O 7. 22. illa quidam V. 23. adfert R V G E. adfr-t K litt. post r eras. affert B L. || bona om. L 1. 25. esse sentires R V P G B 1-3 K S E 1 2 M 2 II O 2 3 7 8. sentires esse R 6 L W 1 2 M 1 J O 1. esse om. D C. 26. dignissima R V G B L.

XVII. § 36, 1. pythagoras R eod. atr. pythagoras V G. Phýtagoras B. || si diceret R G B 1 2 W 2. 3. quae peruellere R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 2 3 L 1-6 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. quae te peruellere W 1.

fodicantibus: the sentence is quoted by Nonius p. 66 under this word.

et tu...iubes: 'et eleganter ponitur cum interrogatione in uehementioribus clausulis, cum attulimus quae ualde commouere possunt.' See Hand, Tursell. II 492. Cf. i 38, 92.

qui, quod a...extorqueas: this reading, which accounts for the variants, is to be preferred to qui a natura datum auxilium extorqueas, read by Or. and (with extorques instead of extorqueas) by Dav. The subjunctive gives a reason for the surprise and indignation implied in the question, 'though you deprive me of the aid...'

inueterati doloris: i 15, 34 n. on 'mercedem gloriae.'

tarda illa quidem...sed tamen: i 3, 6 n. on 'optimis.'

longinquitas et dies: εν δια δνοιν = longinquitas temporis.

aliquid: i 20, 45 n.

essent: Cic. might have written sunt but sentires exerts attraction of tense and mood, cf. i 5, 9 n. on 'moriendum esset... uiuerent.'

XVII. § 36. Pythagoras...si diceret ...: the protasis includes all clauses down to xpetenda uideatur; the apodosis parem et sequeretur should have followed there; but Cicero, owing to the number of the clauses to which the words si diceret apply, breaks off the thread of the construction and sums up the protasis in another form in the words ad haec bona me si reuocas, upon which the apodosis, pareo, sequor... follows. Cf. Küh., who notes that, where the apodosis thus fails but lurks in another form, we have the figure ἀναπαύδοτον of the grammarians, a figure not uncommon in the letters and philosophical works of Cicero, where the strict rules of grammar are frequently relaxed.

non potuit certe uires frangere. magna uis est in uirtutibus; eas 5 excita, si forte dormiunt; iam tibi aderit princeps fortitudo, quae te animo tanto esse coget ut omnia quae possint homini euenire, contempnas et pro nihilo putes; aderit temperantia, quae est eadem moderatio, a me quidem paulo ante appellata frugalitas, quae te turpiter et nequiter facere nihil patietur. quid est autem 10 nequius aut turpius ecfeminato uiro? ne iustitia quidem sinet te ista facere, cui minimum esse uidetur in hac causa loci, quae tamen ita dicet dupliciter esse te iniustum, cum et alienum adpetas, qui mortalis natus condicionem postules immortalium, et grauitur feras te, quod utendum acceperis, reddidisse.
 15 37. prudentiae uero quid respondebis docenti uirtutem sese

4. non potuit G K12 L1 W2 II O138. non poterit W1. non potuerit D O7 om. C. 6. coget RV P134 G B1-3 K12 S E2 L346 W12 M12 DCIIJ O1-378. cogit L25. cogat L1. cogitet E1 ed. H. 7. contempnas P. contempnas VGE L. contēpnas R K. contem-nas S litt. eras. 9. patietur P2 G W1 O3. patiatur R161016 V P134 B1-3 K12 S E1-3 L2346 W2 M12 DCIIJ O1278.
 f

10. ecfeminato B K. ecfeminato R1 eod. atr. ecfeminato G ead. man.
 effeminato R1016 W1 D. et finato B2. || nec iustitia B. 11. cui
 nimium B. || causa loci V at ras. post c. causa loci II at ci in ras. causa loci
 O2. causa loci S3 O7. causa locus L4 M1 DC. causa loqui R G B12 K12 E12 L2356 W12 M2 O138 ed. H. causa loqui B3

in marg. locus. causa loqui E3. 13. adpetas R G K. appetas V P B. || condicionem R B2 E. conditionem V G B1 KS W1. || immortalium
 V G K. immortalium R B E.

§ 37, 15. quid R1016 VPG B1 K2 L2346 W12 D O18. quod
 R1 eod. atr. qd' O7. quidē B2. || docenti RVG B12 KS E12

W2 M1 DCJ O178. docenti P al. atr. superscr. dicenti R6 B3 W1 M2 O23. dicenti II at prius i in ras.

peruellere: ii 20, 46.

potuerit: potential, 'may have been able.' Bent. and Dav. wrongly followed Ascensius and Victorius in inserting ut before peruellere.

potuerit...non potuit: ii 17, 39 n.

in uirtutibus: Cic. enforces his argument by reference to the four cardinal virtues in turn, as in §§ 14—17 above, and often.

princeps, 'in the first place,' refers to order of treatment not to order of importance.

coget...patietur: Cic. would naturally speak positively on both points and it seems absurd to suppose with Mo. and Küh. that he speaks 'magis dubitanter' in the one place and 'confidentius' in the other. Dav., Mo. and Küh. read coget... patietur; Bouh. and Ern. cogat...patietur; nearly all other modern editors read as in the text. The confusion of a and e in MSS is one of the most common.

a me: Bent. followed by Dav. changed to a te because Pythagoras or Socrates or Plato is supposed to be speaking. But as a parenthetical remark the words are quite natural.

paulo ante: 8, 16.

nequiter, 'in an unprincipled manner.'

cui minimum...: since justice was concerned with our relations towards others and this might seem to be a matter personal to ourselves. Cf. Plut. de Stoic.
 Rep. 7 p. 1034 c ὁ Ζήνων...φησι...τήν... δικαιοσύνην φρόνησιν ἐν ἀπονεμητέοις; Stobaeus, Ecl. ii 59, 9 w.; Phil. Leg.
 Alleg. i 87 p. 84, 2 ἡ δικαιοσύνη... ἀπονέμει τὸ κατ' ἀξίαν ἐν ἐκάστῳ πράγ-ματι.

natus: θηγὸς ὤν. Cf. Fam. iv 5, 4 ad med. 'uisne tu te, Serui, cohibere et meminisse hominem te esse natum?' and other exx. quoted by Dav.

utendum: for the constr. cf. 7, 15 n. on 'fungendum'; for the metaphor i 31, esse contentam, quo modo ad bene uiuendum, sic etiam ad beate? quae si extrinsecus religata pendeat et non et oriatur a se et rursus ad se reuertatur et omnia sua complexa nihil quaerat aliunde, non intellego cur aut uerbis tam uehementer ornanda aut re tantopere expetenda uideatur.' ad haec bona me si reuocas, Epicure, pareo, sequor, uitor te ipso duce, obliuiscor etiam malorum, ut iubes, eoque facilius, quod ea ne in malis quidem ponenda censeo. sed traducis cogitationes meas ad uoluptates. quas? corporis, credo, aut quae propter corpus uel recordatione uel spe cogitentur. num quid est aliud? rectene interpretor sententiam tuam? solent enim isti negare nos intellegere quid dicat Epicurus. 38. hoc dicit, et hoc ille acriculus me audiente

16. contentam R V P K. contemptam B. || sic etiam R V P G B 1-3 K S E 1 2 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. 17. beate V G B K W 2 O 7. beate R. beate P. beata B 2. || extrinsecus G at litt. inter n et s eras. || et non et oriatur V G B 1 2 E 1 2 H Gr. et non oriatur R P 1 4 B 3 K 1 2 S L 6 W 1 2 M 2 D C J O 1-3 7. et non oriatur M 1. ut non horreatur O 8 al. atr. suppl. 18. a se R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 M 2 D C H O 2 3 7 8 Gr. ex se K 2 W 2 J om. O 1. || reuertatur et R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 1 2 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. 19. intellego R V P G B K. 20. tantopere R V P G B K S E. 25. cogitemur G m expunxit et nt superscr. alt. man. 26. intellegere R V B G K.

§ 38, 27. acriculus V c post a paullo nigriore atr. scr., et ras. suspicari potest. acriculus acricul' W 2. agriculus R P 1 4 G K 1 2. agricolus J. agricolus M 1 O 1 8 E 2 in marg. egriculus. agricolus B 2 i.e. u in o mut. egriculus S. egriculus R 16 II. aegriculus B E. egriculus R 7 O 7. graeculus L 3
M 2 O 2. greculus W 1. greculus R 6 P 2 3 L 6 D C O 3. ariolus R 17 L 2. articulus L 5. athticulus L 4.

77 n. on 'usuram.' For the sentiment Mo. compares Eurip. Phoen. 556, quoted in Plut. Cons. ad Apoll. 116 a, τὰ τῶν θεῶν δ' ἔχοντες ἐπιμελούμεθα, ὅταν δὲ χρεῖζωσ', αὐτ' ἀφαιροῦνται πάλιν.

§ 37. uirtutem...ad beate: for the Stoic doctrine τὴν ἀρετὴν αὐτάρκη εἶναι πρὸς εὐδαιμονίαν cf. Diog. L. vii 127, Fin. i 18, 61 and other authorities quoted by von Arnim, Stoic. Vet. Frag. III pp. 13 foll.

quo modo...sic etiam: etiam with intensive force, 'even.' Without this intensive meaning etiam is not added in such correlative expressions as quo modo, quem ad modum, ut or sicut...ita or sic. Cf. Küh. here.

si extrinsecus religata pendeat, 'if she were dependent on externals.' Hei. compares Fam. v 13, i 'laudem sapientiae statuo esse maximam non aliunde pendere nec extrinsecus aut bene aut male uiuendi suspensas habere rationes.' et oriatur: et should not be omitted. The correlatives et...et are often thus used with contrasted expressions which are to be taken together. Cf. i 20, 45; iii 30, 74; Fin. i 17, 55 etc.

malorum...in malis, 'misfortunes... evils,' i.e. evils as popularly understood (real evils.

quas: for the carrying on of the prep. from the antecedent cf. i 39, 93 n. on 'quod tandem tempus?'

credo: i 38, 92 n. on 'opinor.' aut quae...cogitentur, 'or pleasures connected with the body, conjured up by recollection or anticipation.'

propter corpus: Hand, Tursell. IV 613, gives instances from Quintilian of propter = 'in respect of' 'in relation to,' Quintil. iii 8, 18; iv 3, 1; ix 4, 143.

rectene: ii 11, 26 n. on 'uidesne.' solent enim isti negare...: cf. Fin. ii 4, 12.

§ 38. acriculus, 'waspy'; cf. N.D. i 34, 93 'Zeno quidem non eos solum qui tum erant, Apollodorum, Silum, ceteros, figebat maledictis, sed Socratem ipsum, parentem philosophiae, Latino uerbo utens scurram Atticum fuisse dicebat, Chrysippum numquam nisi Chrysippam uocabat.'

Athenis senex Zeno, istorum acutissimus, contendere et magna uoce dicere solebat, eum esse beatum qui praesentibus uoluptatibus frueretur confideretque se fruiturum aut in omni aut in magna parte uitae dolore non interueniente aut, si interueniret, si summus foret, futurum breuem, sin production, plus habiturum iucundi quam mali; haec cogitantem fore beatum, praesertim si et ante perceptis bonis contentus esset <et> nec mortem nec deos extimesceret. habes formam Epicuri uitae beatae uerbis Zenonis expressam, nihil ut possit negari.

28. acutissimus R V P G B K.

32. sin R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2

W I M 2 D C Π O 2 3 8. si K 2 W 2 M I J O I ed. H. si uo O 7.

33. iucundi R V G B K. iocundi R 10 16. || praesertim si et B 3 W I 2 M I 2

D Π O 3 7. praesertim si 4 E 2. praesertim & R *atr. nigr. superscr.*praesertim & V man. ant. superscr. praesertim cū 1 O 8. praesertim si C.

praesertim et P G B 2 K I E. praesertim cum O I. 34. contemptus G in contentus alt. man. mut. || esset nec R I 6 7 10 16 17 V P I-4 G B I-3

K I 2 S E L 2-6 W I 2 M I 2 D C Π J O I-3 7 8 ed. H. esset et nec

corr. Heinius.

me audiente Athenis: Cicero spent 79-77 B.C. in Greece, and the earlier part of that period in Athens, and it was then that he, along with Atticus, heard Zeno and other philosophers.

Zeno: this was Zeno of Sidon, the leading Epicurean philosopher of his day; cf. N.D. i 21, 59 'principe Epicureorum' and 'coryphaeum'; a man of clear and polished style, cf. N.D. ibid. 'non igitur ille, ut plerique, sed isto modo, ut tu, distincte, grauter, ornate'; and great industry, cf. Diog. L. x 25 πολυγράφος ἀνὴρ. See also Zeller, Ph. d. Griech.<sup>3</sup> III 1, 373; Stoics, etc. p. 389.

[eum esse beatum qui... cf. Epicur. Epist. iii ap. Diog. Laert. x 133 (Usener, Epicur. p. 65) ἐπεὶ τίνα νομίζεις εἶναι κρείττονα τοῦ καὶ περὶ θεῶν ὄσια δοξάζοντος καὶ περὶ θανάτου διὰ παντὸς ἀφόβου ἔχοντος καὶ τὸ τῆς φύσεως ἐπιτελογισμένου τέλος καὶ τὸ μὲν τῶν ἀγαθῶν πέρασ ὡς ἔστιν εὐσημπλήρωτόν τε καὶ εὐπόριστον διαλαμβάνοντος, τὸ δὲ τῶν κακῶν ὡς ἡ χρόνους ἢ πόνους ἔχει βραχείς, τὴν δὲ ὑπὸ τιμῶν δεσπότην εἰσαγομένην πάντων διαγελῶντος εἰμαρμένην κ.τ.λ.]

aut in omni aut in magna parte: i 1, 1 Π.

si interueniret, si...foret...sin: si interueniret is the protasis, the other si clause and the sin clause respectively modify the two limbs into which the apodosis is divided. Küh. compares Fam. xv 14, 4 'si quae sunt onera tuorum, si tanta sunt, ut...possis, propera; ...sin maiora, considera...'

cogitantem: for the participle with general reference see exx. in n. on 'licet' i 38, 91.

et nec: et, which is required to correspond to the et before ante and easily fell out after esset, was restored by Hei. Posen Progr. p. 8, who shows that Hand, Tursell. iv 130, misunderstands Kritz on Sall. Cat. 58, 1 and is not supported by his exx. in his view that in neque...neque the former often = et neque, the fact being that in many instances the two words are not correlatives but the former = et non, connecting its clause with the preceding context, and the latter only joins on a negative clause to the clause so connected. Hei. compares Sall. 2, 3 'quod si regum...uirtus...ualeret, aequabilibus...sese res humanae haberet, neque aliud alio ferri, neque mutari ac misceri omnia cerneret'; II, 3 'auaritia...semper infinita, insatiabilis est, neque copia neque inopia minuatur.' The former et is good; in the latter I think neque...neque are correlatives, with asyndeton.

habes...expressam, 'here you have portrayed by Zeno the happy life as conceived by Epicurus.' forma often = 'outline,' 'sketch,' but expressam, ἐξηκασμένην, makes it more substantial, cf. 2, 3 'solida quaedam res et expressa,' and note there; also Off. i 5, 15 'formam quidem ipsam...et tamquam faciem honesti uides'; Fin. ii 15, 48 'habes undique expletam et perfectam...formam honestatis.'

XVIII. 39. Quid ergo? huiusne uitae propositio et cogitatio aut Thyestem leuare poterit aut Aetam, de quo paulo ante dixi, aut Telamonem pulsum patria exulantem atque egentem? in quo haec admiratio fiebat:

5 Hícine est ille Télamon, modo quem glória ad caelum éxtulit, Quem áspectabant, cúus ob os Graii óra obuerte-bánt sua?

40. Quodsi cui, ut ait idem,

10 simul ánimus cum re cóncidit,

XVIII. § 39, 1. huius<sup>ne</sup> uitę V. 2. thyestem R V G K B 23 alii. || aetam G. a&am R ead. man. superscr. ut uid. a&am V. aetā B I. aetam P al. atr. superscr. K ead. atr. superscr. eetā S. aetam II a ex o mut.
oetam R 6 I 6 E 2 L 2-6 M I 2 O 7 8 W I (margin.). ◇etā J. eotam R 17.
oetham R 7 O 3. oetam R 10. eτ,ā E. etiam B 2 D. 3. exulantem R V G B I 2 K E. 4. ammiratio B. 5. hicine B E. hic inest B 2. hicine R 6 I 7 P 2 B 3 S E 2 W I M I 2 D C II O I-3 7 8. haecine
R 1 al. atr. suppl. haecine V G K. heccine W 2 J. || Telamon R V G
B I 2 K E M I D C. thelamon B 3 M 2 O 3 7. 7. aspectabant R V G
B I-3 K E 2 W I 2 M 2 J O 2. exspectabant C. expectabant S E
M I D II O I 3 7 8. || graii B 2 S M 2 D II O 2. grai R V P G B I
E I 2 W 2 J O I 3. graii W I all. i eiecto. grauiora C O 7. gretia M I.
§ 40, 10. cum re concidit M I W I O 2 II at cum re in ras. V at in ras.: cū in litura, re fuerat rem, c post n in litura. re concidit R 6 (cum om.). rē concidit R K 2 E W 2. rem concidit S at in marg. re cōcidit. rem condidit R 7 P I-4 G B I-3 K E 3 L 2-4 6 M 2 D C O 8 Gr. rem condit O I. res condidit O 7. simul rē condidit L 5 J cell. om. ut rem condidit E 2 al. atr. superscr. animus condidit R 17 cell. om. idnem condidit O 3. simul rem

XVIII. § 39. quid ergo: i 25, 60 n. on 'quid enim?'

propositio et cogitatio: ἐν δὲ δυνόων, 'the mental realisation.'

de quo: as Cic. in c. 12, § 26 spoke of both Thyestes and Aetes Bent., followed by Dav., read de quibus, but Cic. is not bound to maintain strict accuracy of detail in dialogues such as this.

Telamonem pulsum...egentem: after Telamon had lost his son Ajax in the Trojan war and banished his other son Teucer, he was deprived of his throne by a stranger and suffered great hardships in exile, but was ultimately restored by Teucer, who returned from Cyprus to prove to his father, by the testimony of Eurysaces, his innocence with regard to the death of Ajax. Cf. Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. pp. 420-1.

pulsum...exulantem atque egentem:

the three participles are not co-ordinate; exulantem atque egentem give his position when pulsus patria and are in apposition to that expression, 'an exile and even in want.'

in quo: cf. v 9, 24 n. on 'in eo libro.'
hicine est ille: Ribbeck l. c. and Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 248 believes that these lines belong to the Eurysaces of Accius. Cicero in Fam. ix 26, 2 applies to his own case the line 'quem aspectabant? ...sua.' Earlier editors (e.g. Dav.) thought that the lines belonged to the Telamo of Ennius.

For the spelling and pronunciation of Graii see Brambach, Neugestalt. pp. 184 foll.; Lindsay, Lat. Lang. p. 53. In Fam. ix 26, 2 the MS reading is grai lora.

§ 40. simul animus cum re concidit: Ribbeck ll. cc. seems right in printing these words as part of the same extract

a grauibus illis antiquis philosophis petenda medicina est, non ab his uoluptariis. quam enim isti bonorum copiam dicunt? fac sane esse summum bonum non dolere (quamquam id non uocatur uoluptas, sed non necesse est nunc omnia); idne est quo 15 traducti luctum leuemus? sit sane summum malum dolere; in eo igitur qui non est, si malo careat, continuone fruitur summo bono? 41. quid tergiuersamur, Epicure, nec fatemur eam nos

11. medicina est non R 67 V W 1 O 18. medicina est si non R P 1 2 4
 G B K S E 1 2 W 2 D C II J O 3 7. medicina est sed non P 3 B 3 M 2 O 2. medicina est et non M 1. medicina est sm B 2. 13. non dolere (i.e. o in e mut.)
 V G K. non dolere B 1 W 1 D O 7. non dolore B 2. 15. malum dolere (o in e mut.) V G K. malum dolere E eod. atr. malum dolere B 1 3 E 2 W 1 2 D O 7. malum dolore B 2.

as the lines given above from the Eurysaces of Accius. For the expression Bent. compares Ter. Eun. 241 'simul consilium cum re amisti?'

antiquis: sc. Pythagoras, Socrates, Plato; compare § 36 above.

non: when the non-clause stands merely in contrast to the preceding clause non is not preceded by et or ac; compare ii 12, 29 'quasi de uerbo non de re laboretur.' With et or ac a correction is introduced; compare i 7, 13 n. on 'et non eos.' See Hand, Tursell. I 474. The readings et si and sed arise by dittography or quasi-dittography out of the preceding est (e).

uoluptariis: compare ii 7, 18 'Epicurus homo...uoluptarius'; v 31, 88; Fin. i 11, 37; iv 12, 31; v 25, 74; in Pis. 18, 42.

bonorum copiam: compare v 33, 94;
 N.D. i 40, 111 'suppeditatio, inquis, bonorum nullo malorum interuentu.
 quorum tandem bonorum? uoluptatum credo...'

summum bonum non dolere: Epicurus recognised two divisions of pleasure, pleasures of repose and pleasures of motion, Diog. L. x 136 ἡδονή ἢ κατὰ κίνησιν καὶ ἡ καταστηματικῆ; Fin. ii 10, 31
 'stante...mouente,' ibid. § 32 'ea quae in motu est...illa stabilis.' But he declared the pleasure of repose of mind to be the higher; Diog. L. x 139 ὁρος τοῦ μεγέθους τῶν ἡδονῶν ἢ παντὸς τοῦ ἀλγούντος ὑπέξαι-ρεσις; also x 121 τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν διχῆ νοεῖσθαι, τὴν τε ἀκροτάτην, οὐα ἐστὶ περὶ τὸν θεόν, ἐπίτασιν οὐκ ἔχουσαν καὶ τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην, ἔχουσαν προσθήκην καὶ ἀφα-ρεσιν ἡδονῶν. Fin. ii 10, 30 'hanc in motu uoluptatem...interdum ita extenuat, ut M'. Curium putes loqui'; i 11, 37 (where see Madv.'s n.) 'maximam uoluptatem illam habemus, quae percipitur omni dolore detracto'; Off. iii 33, 118 'dicunt enim uoluptatis magnitudinem doloris detractioe finire.' Compare iii 20, 47 n. on 'non crescere uoluptatem dolore de-tracto'; Zeller, Stoics, etc. c. xix pp. 446 foll.; Ph. d. Griechen iii. 1<sup>2</sup> pp. 402 foll.

quamquam id non uocatur uoluptas:
 Cic. in the beginning of Fin. ii maintains that the word uoluptas (ἡδονή) is not used by Epicurus in the ordinary sense of the term when he applies it to the pleasure of repose, Fin. ii 3, 7; 4, 11; 5, 16.

sed non necesse est nunc omnia: sc. persequi. Verbs of saying are sometimes omitted in short semi-parenthetical clauses.

idne est quo...leuemus, 'is it (i.e. non dolere) a remedy to which we are to resort in order to mitigate grief?'

in eo: dolere implies dolor and to this in eo refers. Compare Anon. apud Olivetum, quoted by Mo.

si malo careat: Mo. and Küh. take these words as explanatory of in eo...est but they are not necessary for that purpose; they may possibly be a gloss due to an idea that they were so required. If the words are sound the explanation of Hei. seems best: from the Stoic standpoint Cicero could not admit that pain was an evil but he allows the assumption to pass for the sake of argument. Trans.
 'supposing him to be free from evil.' It is more likely that the words are sound and that fruatur should be read; a and i often interchange in MSS.

careat: compare i 36, 88 n. on 'dicitur enim.'

§ 41. tergiuersamur: compare Off. iii 33, 118 (also of the Epicureans) 'non incallide tergiuersantur,' where Beier (quoted here by Küh.) derives the metaphor from those 'qui subinde terga dant ante tubam, memores galeatum sero duelli paenitere,' advancing in a hesitating manner and shrinking from openly declaring themselves as enemies.

dicere uoluptatem quam tu idem, cum os perfricuiſti, ſoles dicere? ſunt haec tua uerba necne? in eo quidem libro qui 20 continet omnem diſciplinam tuam (fungar enim iam interpretis munere, ne quis me putet fingere), dicis haec: nec equidem habeo quod intellegam bonum illud, detrahens eas uoluptates quae ſapore percipiuntur, detrahens eas quae
 25 auditu et cantibus, detrahens eas etiam quae ex formis percipiuntur oculis, ſuauiſ motiones, ſiue quae aliae uoluptates in toto homine gignuntur quolibet ſenſu; nec uero ita dici poſteſt, mentis laetitiam ſolam eſſe in bonis. laetantem enim mentem ita noui: ſpe

§ 41, 18. cum os R V P G. cū nos B O 7. eam nos R 10 16.
 22. intellegam R V G B K. 23. poſt detrahens et ante eas quae auditu habet V in margin. e regione contextus eas q̄ reb; ꝑcipiu N<sup>7</sup> uenereis detrahens antiqui correctoris man. ſcripti. 24. et cantibus R V P G B 1-3 K 12 S E 1-3 W 12 M 12 D C Π J O 2 3 8 om. O 7. 25. ſuauiſ R V G B 12 K W 2. 26. quolibet R 10 16 G B 12 E 2 M 1 W 1 O 3. quo libet V at o in ras. qđ libet E. tuo
 qđ K 1. quol; W 2. quolibet S. quolibet e M 2 O 1.

os perfricuiſti: compare Mart. xi 27, 7 'aut cum perfricuit frontem poſuitque pudorem.'

in eo quidem libro: ſc. in the περί τέλους, a work in 37 books on the summum bonum. Compare Athenaeus vii 280 a κάν τῷ περί τέλους δέ φησιν οὕτω πως· οὐ γάρ ἐγώ γε δύναμαι νοῆσαι τὰ γαθὸν ἀφαιρῶν μὲν τὰς διὰ χυλῶν ἡδονάς, ἀφαιρῶν δὲ τὰς δι' ἀφροδιſίων, ἀφαιρῶν δὲ τὰς δι' ἀκρομαμάτων, ἀφαιρῶν δὲ τὰς διὰ μορφῆς κατ' ὄψιν ἡδέας κινήσεις and xii 546 e; Diog. L. x 6 ἐν δὲ τῷ περί τέλους γράφειν οὕτως· οὐ γάρ ἐγώ γε ἐξω τί νοῆσω τὰ γαθὸν ἀφαιρῶν... διὰ μορφῶν, almoſt as in Athen. l. c. See Uſener, Epicurea § 67.

The ſame paſſage is referred to in Athenaeus vii 278 f.; Fin. ii 3, 7 'Epicurus... quippe qui teſtificetur, ne intellegere quidem ſe poſſe, ubi ſit aut quod ſit ullum bonum praeter illud, quod cibo et potione et aurium delectatione et obſcena uoluptate capiatur.'

nec... habeo quod = mihi deeſt aliquid quod Küh.

bonum illud = τὰ γαθὸν, the ſubject of Epicurus' enquiry. Sff. Schlenger's change to bonum ullum 'from Eliens. I' is unneceſſary.

auditu et cantibus: a double translation of the Gk δι' ἀκρομαμάτων. Niſſen's conj. auditu e cantibus is adopted by T. S. Hei. and Schiche and noticed by Ml. with the comment 'ueriſimiliter.'

quae ex formis... motiones = τὰς διὰ μορφῆς κατ' ὄψιν ἡδέας κινήσεις of Athenaeus l. c. Uſener, Epicurea § 67, thinks that the true reading here is 'deträhens eas quae... detrahens eas quae auditu e cantibus' comparing 20, 46 'ſaporem, inquit, et corporum complexum, et ludos atque cantus...' and the apoſiopieſis in 18, 43 end; the lacuna is due to librariorum culpa.

nec uero ita: ita redundantly anticipates the claule mentis... in bonis. Hand, Tuſſell. III p. 483.

laetantem enim: Sff. thought it neceſſary to alter enim to etiam but the contrast is between pleasures of the intellect and pleasures of ſenſe; in the previous claule the emphaſis is on mentis. The argument ſeems a diſtortion of Epicurus' view. According to Epicurus the highest pleaſure conſiſted in ἀραπαξία, ſee above, § 40 n. on 'summum bonum non dolere.' The pleasures of motion were only pleaſant becauſe they gave riſe to a hope that, a diſturbing cauſe being removed by the motion, a ſtate of reſe poſe would enſue.

ita noui: another anticipatory ita but with a reſtriction implied 'only if one has a hope...' For the abſence of a word of limitation cf. ii 19, 44 n. on 'tantum... quantum.'

fore ut... careat: explanatory expansion of ſpe eorum omnium, quae ſupra dixi.

§ 42. norit: cf. noui § 41 above; Fin. ii 3, 8 'uerum hoc loco ſumo uerbiſ hiſ eandem certe uim uoluptatiſ Epicurum noſſe quam ceteroſ,' and Madv.'s n.

eorum omnium, quae supra dixi, fore ut natura iis potens dolore careat. 42. atque haec quidem his uerbis, quiis ut intellegat quam uoluptatem norit Epicurus. deinde paulo infra: saepe quaesiui, inquit, ex iis, qui appellabantur sapientes, quid haberent quod in bonis relinquerent, si illa detraxissent, nisi si uellent uoces inanis fundere; nihil ab iis potui cognoscere. qui si uirtutes ebullire uolent et sapientias, nihil aliud dicent nisi eam uiam, qua efficiantur eae uoluptates quas supra dixi. quae sequuntur in eadem sententia sunt, totusque liber,

29. forte K.      forte G in fore mut. alt. man. || natura iis O 3.      nā iis S.
 natura hiis R 6.      naturalis R V P 134 G B 23 K 1 E L 4 M 2. naturalis B 1.      natu K 2.      naturali R 17 P 2 L 356 W 12 D C J O 127.      naturali II litt. post i eras.      naturalibus R 7 E 2 L 2 O 8.
 uel natura uel M 1. || potiens G L 25 W 2.      patiens L 6.      potens O 8. potius R 17 P 2 M 1 D C J.      pocius K 2 W 1.
 § 42, 31. intellegat R V G B K.      32. ex iis M 2.      ex his R V P B K
 W 12 O 3. || appellabantur B 3 K D II O 3.      <sup>p</sup>apellabantur G alt. man.
superscr.      appellatur K 2.      33. quod in bonis W 1 D C O 12.      <sup>q</sup>d in bonis II.      quid in bonis B 1 K 2 S E 12 W 2 M 2 J O 38.      quid in bonis K 1 at in et s atr. nigr. script.      q, i bonis M 1.      quid in boni G B 2.      quod in boni V i.e. in o mut.      quid in boni R alio atr. corr.      quid in bono O 7.
†bonis
 quid bono B 3.      quid homini P. || relinquerint G in e alt. man. mut.
 34. detraxissent nisi si si G tertium si expunx. et conf. alt. man. || uellent E 2
 W 1 M 1 II O 7.      uollent S.      uolunt E.      uolent R V P G B 13 K
 W 2 M 2 D (non ut Küh.) J O 1-38.      uolunt B 2.      nolent C. || inanis
 R V G B K E W 2.      inanes B 23.      35. ab his R G B K.      37. uiam R 16
 P 1-4 G B 1-3 S E 12 W 2 M 12 D C J O 1-38.      uia W 1 II.
 uiam V.      uiam K litt. eras.      uitam O 7. || quae G alt. man. corr. || efficiantur haec K 1.

uoces inanis fundere: cf. v 26, 73 ‘inanis sonos fundere.’

uirtutes...sapientias: the plur. disparages their endless harping upon the words uirtus and sapientia. Cf. i 2, 3 n. on ‘poetas.’

ebullire, ‘however pompously they may persist in prating of virtue and wisdom.’ Nonius 26 s.v. ebullire quotes this passage with the reading uolens and lower down nisi eam uim... Dav. proposed uolent for uolent and Bent. held that either si...uolent or nisi...uolent must be read. But uolent is sound. The meaning is much the same as if Cic. had written si maxime...uolent. ebullire = ‘to talk pompously of,’ lit. ‘to bubble over with,’ ‘to splutter about,’ cf. Fin. v 27, 80 where Epicurus’ word is turned against himself. Bent. was sure that Cic. was translating Gk παφλάζειν. Dav. remarks that the Epicureans held that for all other philosophers the virtues κόμποι κενoi ψοφοῦσιν ἀντ’ ὀνειράτων (Alexis ap. Athen. viii p. 336) and compares Lucian, Timon § 117 ἀρετὴν τινα καὶ ἀσώματα καὶ λήρους μεγάλην τῇ φωνῇ ξυνειρόντων and Diog. L. x 7 where Epic. himself taunts them with καύχῃσιν σοφιστικῆν.

nisi eam uiam: Epicurus held that virtue was not to be sought for its own sake but only because it conducted to happiness of life, cf. Diog. L. x 138; Epicurus περὶ τέλους in Athenaeus xii 546 f. τιμητέον τὸ καλὸν καὶ τὰς ἀρετὰς καὶ τὰ τοιοῦτότροπα εἰν ἠθροῦν παρασκευάζη· εἰν δὲ μὴ παρασκευάζη, χαίρειν εἰστέον. Fin. i 13, 42 foll. and Madvig’s n.

in eadem sententia: eiusdem sententiae, cf. i 39, 94 n.

qui est de summo bono, refertus est et uerbis et sententiis 40 talibus. 43. ad hancine igitur uitam Telamonem illum reuocabis ut leues aegritudinem, et, si quem tuorum adfluctum maerore uideris, huic acupenserem potius quam aliquem Socraticum libellum dabis? hydraulici hortabere ut audiat uoces potius quam Platonis? expones, quae spectet, florida et uaria? fasciculum ad 45 naris admouebis? incendes odores et sertis redimiri iubebis et rosa? si uero aliquid etiam —, tum plane luctum omnem abs-tuleris.

39. refertus est et E 2 II O 8.
 est (et om.) S W 2 M 1 D C.

refertus<sup>z</sup> et V atr. ant. suppl. refertus refertus et R 16 P 134 G B 23 K 12

E 3 L 4-6 W 1 M 2 J O 2. reflectus et O 7. referctus et O 13. talibus R 17 V G B 1-3 K S E 12 W 12 J O 178.
 et sententiis C D.

refertur et E 1 L 3 R 7. refert R 17.
 effectus ut L 2. || et uerbis et sententiis talibus et uerbis

§ 43, 40. hancine R V G B K.

hancine R 10 16 W 1 D C O 3 8 7.

h
 ancine P. hanc ne O 1. hāc ne W 2.
 R V P G K. adfluctum E.

hanc me B 2. 41. adfluctum afflictum R 10 16 B 1 L 2-6 C.

42. accipenserem R P G B 1-3 K 1 E 2 W 12 M 2 D C II J O 1-3.

accipenserem V. accipiensere E. accipiensere M 1. accipiens rem O 7.

accipenserem O 8 Nonius p. 550.

43. hydralif V d fort. mut. f alio atr. incule.

hyΔpaAI R K E. hTΔrali G. hyAPAAI P. hydrali B Gr. hyarali R 17

S W 2 D C O 7. hy arali B 2. κυθάρas M 2 B 3. αὐλῶν W 1.

aulon R 6. om. M 1. 44. expones R 6 W 1 O 1. expones II at s in ras.

exponet O 2. exponens R 117 P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 12 S E M 12 C O 3

ed. H. exponēs R 7 E 2 D. expone<sup>nsq</sup>: V al. atr. corr. exponensq;

R 10 16 O 7. expōnes L 5. expōnes ponēs O 8. expoitioēs W 2.

expositiones J B 3 marg. || quae spectet R 6 17 V P 4 G. quae spect & R 1

i.e. quae in q; al. atr. corr. que spectat K 1 O 1. quae expectat R 10 16

P 12 B 1 S D J O 3. Q̄ expectat W 2. que expetet O 8. quae expetat P 3.

45. naris R V G B 12 K. || et sertis R 10 16 V P G K 1 B 1-3 S W 12

D C II O 2 78. || iubebis R V P G. uidebis R 16. uidebus O 2.

liber qui est de: cf. i 11, 24 n.

§ 43. acupenserem: this spelling seems supported by the MSS in the extract from Lucilius Fin. ii 8, 24 accubans aere A, accubant aere E. The readings are similar in § 25, and in 28, 91 A has accupem se re me non and BE have accupenserem mene non. Cf. Kl. prooem. xii. Ml. and Schiche here and Marx in Lucilius 1240 'acupensere cum decimano' adopt the same spelling. Athenaeus vii 294 f. has τὸν ἀκκικήσιον. Keller and Holder in Hor. Sat. ii 2, 47 have acupensere supported by their MSS there. Pliny N.H. ix 17, 27 says of this fish 'apud antiquos piscium nobilissimus habitus... nullo nunc in honore est.'

hydraulici: the water organ, invented by Ctesibius of Alexandria, who lived in the reign of the second Euergetes, Ptolemy Physcon, 170—116 B.C. (Athen.

iv 174 d). It is described by his pupil Hero of Alexandria, Pneumat. i 42 (vol. i pp. 192 sqq. ed. Schmidt). Athen. iv 174 b—f; xi 497 d: Vitruvius x 8 p. 261.

We may probably, with Bouh., infer from the use of Gk letters in several of the best MSS that the word was not yet established in Latin: in Athen. l. c. it is ἡ ὑδραυλις.

et sertis: et can only be retained to connect what follows with incendes odores, as et...et cannot naturally be correlatives here. Hei. brackets et, F.A.W. Bai. and others eject, and they are very possibly right, for the two short sentences incendes odores? and sertis...rosa? correspond better to the short sentences that precede.

si uero aliquid etiam: Jeep, Progr. Guelf. 1865 p. 13, conj. etiam amorum plane, which Ml. thinks probable. But

XIX. 44. Haec Epicuro confitenda sunt aut ea, quae modo expressa ad uerbum dixi, tollenda de libro uel totus liber potius abiciendus; est enim confertus uoluptatibus. quaerendum igitur, quem ad modum aegritudine priuemus eum qui ita dicat:

5 ...pol míhi fortuna mágis nunc defit quám genus.
 Námque regnum súppetebat mi, út scias, quanto é loco, Quántis opibus, quíbus de rebus lápsa fortuna óccidat.

XIX. § 44, 1. aut ea R V P K. a<sup>2</sup> ea R 16. ut ea G ut in aut alt. man. mut. aút ea R 10. 3. abiciendus R V G B 1 2 K E 1 3 J O 1. abiciendus R 7 P 1 4 B 3 S E 2 L 2 6 W 2 M 1 2 D C O 3 7 8 ed. H. abiciendus R 6 L 4 W 1 I I O 2. || confertus R V P B 1 2 K 1 2 W 1 2 D II O 2 7 8. confertis G alt. man. superscr. conferctus O 3. 4. priuemus B 1 3 K 1 E 2 W 1 2 D C II O 1-3 7 8. priuem<sup>o</sup> K 2. priuemur V atr. uiridi superscr. R atr. nigro superscr. priuemur G B 2. 5. mihi R V B. i m R 10 P K I. m<sup>o</sup> R 16. || quam genus R V P B 1 2 K 1 W 1 D O 1 3 7 8. qđ genus G at qđ in quā alt. man. mut. 9. occidat R 6 B 3 W 1 M 2 O 1-3. accidat R V P 4 G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 D C II J O 7 8. accidat P al. atr. suppl.

the aposiopesis seems natural; cf. Ursinus in Mo. 'Tullius uerecundissime... quae turpia erant, notauit, τὰ ἀφροδίσια, quo uirpiorem redderet Epicurum ob impudentiam.' Camerarius cft. Fin. ii 10, 29 'eam autem [uoluptatem] ita persequitur: quae palato percipiatur, quae auribus; cetera addit quae si appelles, honos praefandus sit.' Orelli (ed. Oxon.) compares Menander Κυβερνήται: τάργυριον εἶναι, μειράκιόν, σοι φαίνεται οὐ τῶν ἀναγκαίων καθ' ἡμέραν μόνον τιμὴν παρασχεῖν δυνατόν, ἄρτων, ἀλφίτων, ὄξους, ἐλαίου, μείζονος δ' ἄλλου τινός.

(Meineke Fragg. Com. Gr. iv 156.)

The senses are being taken in turn: taste, hearing, sight, smell have been dealt with in succession; touch remains, cf. 20, 46 'corporum complexum.' [For aliquid as a euphemism for τὰ ἀφροδίσια see Friedrich's note on Catullus lxiv 145, who quotes, besides this passage, Juv. x 207, Prop. ii 22, 11, Ov. Her. xv 153, Cic. Fam. ix 22, 4.]

absteriseris: i 13, 30 n. on 'sustuleris.'

XIX. § 44. aut contrasts confitenda and tollenda; uel corrects tollenda.

pol mihi fortuna: these lines are from the same poet as the lines ex opibus s... and quid petam pr... below: Ribbeck and Vahlen believe them to belong to the Thyestes of Ennius: Ribb. Röm. Trag. p. 201; Scaen. Poes. Frag. i 69 Vahlen, Ennian. Poes. Rell.<sup>2</sup> p. 186. The metre is trochaic tetram. catalectic.

magis: for s final in O.L. poetry cf. i 5, 10 n.: so quibus below.

defit = deficit, chiefly in O.L. poetry; once in Livy (ix 11, 6).

genus, 'birth' not 'my children' as Hei. takes it. Thyestes, returning from exile, appears in rags (cf. Arist. Ach. 433 τῶν Θεοσετίων ῥακῶν) and reveals himself, as Ribb. conjectures, to some secret partisans, using the words in the text.

rebus, 'power.'

occidat: this must be read here instead of accidat of the best MSS. The two words frequently interchange. In i 35, 85 occidisset is plainly right against the best MSS, but there the reading of inferior MSS is reinforced by that of V<sup>2</sup>, while here V<sup>2</sup> is silent. Passages cited by some edd. in support of accidat here are not parallel, e.g. 'quo accidam' below, and the opening lines of Ennius' Medea Exul 'utinam ne in nemore Pelio securibus | caesa accidisset abiecta ad terram trabes' quoted by Priscian vii 8, 41, Varro L.L. vii 33 and by Cic. in several places, for which see Mayor on N.D. iii 31, 75. In these passages that to which the fall takes place is denoted; accido means 'to fall to,' and no good instance of the word meaning merely 'to fall' has been put forward.

10 quid? huic calix mulsi impingendus est, ut plorare desinat, aut aliquid eius modi? ecce tibi ex altera parte ab eodem poëta:

Ex ópibus summis ópis egens, Hectór, tuæ.
huic subuenire debemus; quaerit enim auxilium:

Quíd petam praésidi aut éxsequar quóue nunc

15 Aúxilio exili aút fuga fréta sim?

Árce et urbe órba sum. quo áccidam? quo ápplicem?

Cuí nec arae pátriæ domi stant, fráctæ et disiectaé iacent,

20 Fána flamma déflagrata, tósti alti stant párietes Déformati atque ábiete crispa....

10. impingendus R P G B 2 K S. inpingendus V B 1 E. 12. haector tuæ R V G K. hectorne S. hec tortue B 2. hec tortue E. 13. quaerit R G. querit R 10 16 V B 2 K E. 14. praesidii R G. presidii V B S. psidii B 3 E. presidii B 2 K D O 1 3 7 8. || exequar R V G K S E O 1. exsequar B 1. 15. exilii R V P 1 4 G B 1-3 S E 1 L 2-6 W 1 2 D
O 1-3 7 8. exillii K. || fuga R 1 6 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2
W 1 2 M 1 2 D H J O 2 3 7 8 ed. H. fuge R 1 7 O 1. 16. accidam S at spatio post i relicto et ras. fuisse uidetur. accedam R 1 6 1 7 V P 1-4 G

B 1-3 K 1 2 E 1 2 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 2 3 7 8 ed. H. cedam<sup>ac</sup>
O 1. 20. tosti alti H L 4. tosti alii R 1 6 7 10 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2 3 5 6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D O 1-3 7 8. toti alii D C. tosti alii R 1 6.
21. abiete R 1 V P K. abiecte G at c expunx. alt. man. abiecte R 10 16
L 6. abiecta O 7.

In support of fortuna occidat Sff. well quotes Hor. Carm. iv 4, 70 foll. 'occidit, occidit | spes omnis et fortuna nostri | nominis Hasdrubale interempto.'

impingendus, 'must we thrust a cup of mead into his hands?'

Ex opibus....: an iambic trimeter. This and the three extracts following are from the Andromacha Aechmalotis of Ennius, cf. Vahlen Enn. Poes. Rell.<sup>2</sup> pp. 131 ff., Ribb. Röm. Trag. p. 137, Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. I pp. 24-6.

In her distress Andromache misses the protection and help of Hector. Vahl. l.c. quotes Eur. Andr. 523 ὦ πόσις πόσις εἶθε σὰν χεῖρα καὶ δόρυ σύμμαχον κτησαίμαν, Πριάμον παῖ and Tro. 587 μόλοις, ὦ πόσις, μοι σᾶς δάμαρτος ἄλκαρ: see also ibid. p. cciii.

The paronomasia ópibus...ópis is characteristic of O. L., cf. urbe orba below.

Quid petam praesidi: the first three lines are cretic tetrameters as Bentley first discovered. Cicero in Or. iii 47, 183 quotes 'quid petam praesidi, aut exsequar quoue nunc' as examples of cetics.

In auxilio and abiete i is treated as a consonant before the following vowel.

There is hiatus after auxilio and exili. domi has the final syllable treated as short. T. S. and Schiche read auxiliod after Ribbeck. Ml. marks the passage as corrupt.

accidam: as suppliant, Gk προσπίπτω, προσπίτνω.

quo applicem = quo me applicem. This intrans. use of transitive verbs is specially common with verbs of motion, Küh. Gram. II p. 67. Cf. i 44, 107 n. on 'recipiat.'

quo = cui patrono. This is better than to see in the words a metaphor from bringing a ship to land. The meaning more naturally follows upon that of quo accidam. For the ius applicationis see Or. i 39, 177 'si se ad aliquem quasi patronum applicauisset' and Wilkins' notes and references.

cui nec arae...: the metre is trochaic tetrameter catalectic.

deflagrata: the verb is usually intrans. but cf. Cat. 4, 6, 12 'in cinere deflagrati imperii.'

crispa, 'warped,' 'shrivelled,' by the action of fire.

scitis quae sequantur, et illa in primis:

O pater, o patria, o Priami domus, Saeptum áltisono cardíne templum!
 Vidi égo te astante ope bárbarica Tectís caelatis, láqueatis, Auro, ébore instructam régifice.

45. o poëtam egregium! quamquam ab his cantoribus Euphorionis contemnitur. sentit omnia repentina et necopinata

22. scitis RV P14 G B12 K12 S E12 W12 M1 II J O178. scis B3 L6 M2 C O23. <sup>1' scitis</sup> scis D al. atr. superscr. || et illud in primis

R6717 B3 E23 L2-46 W1 M1 DCII O1-3. et illud primis V at d in ras. ut uid. & illud imprimis M2. et illū in primis K2 W2 ed. H. et illū in primis L5 J. et illū primis B2 E. et illum primis R P14 G

BK O7. et illum pmis S at in marg. illud impmis. et illum u'sum in primis O8. et illa in primis corr. Tregder. 25. astante II at linea super e erasa. adstante V ras. post e. abstante M1. adstantem R1 PG B3 K1 O23. adstantem R6. adstantē B1 E1 M2. asstantē B2. astantem S E2 L56 C O18. astantē R17 K2 W12 DJ O7.
 27. regifice R17 B3 W1 M12 O12. regifice S at m eraso. regifice II at fuerat regificem. regificem B1 K1. regificem R7 GC O37. regificē RV B2 K2 E1 W2 D. regificam E2. regificā O8. regis sedem R6.

§ 45, 28. egregium R1016 V W2. aegregium R1 P. aegrium G in aegregium alt. man. mut. || euphorionis RG B1-3 K1 W12 D O237.
 euphorioneis V at e ante i ex i fort. mut. euphorionis O1. euforionis O8.
 29. contempnitur G. || et necopinata R V P G B1-3 K1 S E1 W1 M12
 DCJ O1-378. et ne opinata R1016 E2. et inopinata II.
 11 f opiata W2.

illa in: illum of RGPS<sup>1</sup> differs from this reading only by u for a.

O pater: Andromache's father Eetion, king of Thebe in Cilicia, slain by Achilles. II. vi 416. The metre of this and the next four lines is anapaestic dimeter. Virgil imitated this passage in Aen. ii 241 'O patria, o diuom domus Ilium, et incluta bello | moenia Dardanidum,' where Servius notes 'versus Ennianus.'

templum: cf. i 21, 48 n.; Varro L.L. vii 2, 6—8 'templum tribus modis dicitur: ab natura, ab auspicando, ab similitudine. (ab) natura in caelo; ab auspiciis in terra; ab similitudine sub terra...in terris dictum templum locus augurii aut auspicii causa quibusdam conceptis uerbis finitus.' The home was consecrated to the worship of the Lares and Penates. Cf. Plaut. Trin. 39 foll. and Brix' n.

astante...laqueatis: quoted also in i 35, 85 where see notes.

regifice: cf. i 28, 69 n. on 'laetificae.'

§ 45. his cantoribus Euphorionis, 'the present-day writers of jingles in Euphorion's style.' Euphorion of Chalcis, born about 274 B.C., became, late in life, librarian to Antiochus the Great. Some of his poems were translated into Latin verse by Cornelius Gallus of Forum Julii (69—26 B.C.); cf. edd. on Virg. Ecl. 10, 50. Cicero who preferred the national and older writers of both Greece and Rome disparages the Roman Alexandrianism which had come into fashion within a few years of the date of the Tusculan Disputations. Some of the Greek Alexandrian poets tended to sacrifice clearness of thought to music of expression, and this tendency in their Roman imitators is referred to in cantoribus here. The obscurity of Euphorion's style is noticed in Diu. ii 64, 132.

For the Roman Alexandrianism and its causes see Mommsen R.H. vol. v pp. 465 foll. (E.T.).

exaggeratis: cf. v 18, 51 exaggerantem (extenuantem).

regiis: rightly read by Dav. with inferior MSS for regis of the rest. For the confusion between regiis and regis cf. the reading of V in iv 1, 1. Wes. em. II esse grauiora. exaggeratis igitur regiis opibus, quae uidebantur sempiternae fore, quid adiungit?

Haec ómnia uidi inflám mari,

Priamó ui uitam euítari,

Iouis áram sanguine túrpari.

46. praeclarum carmen! est enim et rebus et uerbis et modis lugubre. eripiamus huic aegritudinem. quo modo? conlocemus in culcita plumea, psaltriam adducamus, hedychri incendamus scutellam, dulciculae potionis aliquid uideamus et cibi. haec

30. regiis G K<sub>2</sub> W<sub>12</sub> J O I. regis R 1 6 7 17 V P 1-4 B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 2 M 1 2 D C Π O 2 3 7 8. 34. sanguine R 6 7 17 P G B 1 3 K 1 E 2 W 1 M 2 D C O 1-3. sangúte M 1 W 2 II O 8. sanguine R 1 eod. atr. sanguinē B 2 E 1. sanguinem V.

§ 46, 35. carmen R V P. carnem G in carmen alt. man. mut. 36. lugubræ
P G (a conf. alt. man.) || conlocemus R V G B K E. collocemus B 2 3 W 1

O 7. 37. culcita V G B 1 2 K E. culcita R al. atr. P al. atr. culcita II.

culcitra R 6 B 3 K 2 E 2 L 6 W 1 M 1 2 D O 1-3 7 8. culcit<sup>a</sup> W 2 C.

culcita S. || adducamus P B 1-3 K E 2 W 1 M 1 2 D C O 2. aducamus
R V G alt. man. superscr. aducamus O 7. || post adducamus habent demus
R 6 7 17 P 2 B 3 K 2 E 2 3 L 2-4 M 1 D C O 1 3 7 8. damus R P 4

G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 L 5 W 2 M 2 J. dtmus V a in e mut. damus

P al. atr. superscr. || hedyçum R eod. atr. hedyçum V. hedyçrum
B K 1 E. hedyçum P 1 4 C D. hedicum K 2 E 2 W 1 2 II O 1 Gr.

hedricū B 2 J. edricū S eod. ut uid. atr. hedricum O 8. hedricum P 2.

edricum B 3 E 3 M 2 L 6 edricum P 3 e post lacunam. aedricum G.

hedricū O 7. hedicum O 3. hedericā M 1. cedricum O 2. hedricum
R 1 7 om. R 6. hedychri corr. Maduigijs. || incendamus R 1 6 7 17 V P 1-4

G B 1-3 K 1 E 1 2 L 6 W 2 M 2 D C J O 1 3 7 8. intendamus M 1.

intēdamus S. || post incendamus habent demus R 6 W 1 O 2 et superscr. P 3. II.

incendamus dtmus L 6. 38. scutellam R V P 1-3 G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 2
W 1 2 M 2 D C J O 1-3 7 8. scutelam R 6. scultellam P 4 M 1 II. ||

uideamus R 1 10 16 17 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 1 2 W 2 M 2 D C Π J O 1-3 7. puideamus S at p extra lineam et atr. nigriore script. prouideamus l'uideamus

R 6 W 1 M 1. addamus O 8 al. atr. superscr. || cibi R V P. cybi G. ubi R 10 16.

p. 54 compares variants in Rep. ii §§ 29-31. It is more natural for Andromache to magnify the wealth of the Kings of Troy than the wealth of the King (Priam). If it seemed likely to last for ever it must have been long established.

Haec omnia...turpari: cf. i 35, 85 and notes there.

§ 46. modis, 'melody,' refers to the lyric parts of the play.

lugubre, 'tragic.' The Andromache Aechmalotis presented a combination of tragic incidents grouped round the central point of the slaying of Astyanax, the last male of Priam's line, by flinging him from the walls of captured Troy in spite of the passionate resistance of his mother Andromache. See Ribbeck, Röm. Trag. pp. 136 and 141.

huic: sc. Andromachae.

hedychri incendamus scutellam, dulciculae potionis aliquid uideamus et cibi: this is the emendation of Madvig, adopted by all recent editors. Beroaldus read cedrum incendamus, quoting Aen. vii 13 and Od. v 60, and Camerarius, Man. and Lamb. approved, though Pet. Victorius had returned to hedyçrum with some misgiving 'quod inter unguenta potius quam odoramenta hedyçrum a medicis recensetur.' Dioscorides i 58 καὶ τὸ καλούμενον δὲ ἡδύχρουν, σκευαζόμενον δὲ tandem bona sunt quibus aegritudines grauissimae detrahantur; tu enim paulo ante ne intellegere quidem te alia ulla dicebas. reuocari igitur oportere a maerore ad cogitationem bonorum conueniret mihi cum Epicuro, si, quid esset bonum, conueniret.

XX. Dicit aliquis: quid ergo? tu Epicurum existimas ista uoluisse, aut libidinosas eius fuisse sententias? ego uero minime; uideo enim ab eo dici multa seuerē, multa prae-

39. grauissimae G. grauissimę V. grauissime R K. grauissime E. ||

detrahantur V m an ne incert. 40. intellegere R V G B K. intellegere P e in i mut. || te quidem R V P 12 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 W 2 M 12 D C II J O 13 7 8. || alia ulla D C. alia ulla V at litt. ante u eras. et 1 ante a mut. alia multa R P 24 G B 1 K 12 E 12 L 25 J O 18 ed. H.

alia multa P al. atr. superscr. alia multa R 7 17 B 2 W 2 O 7. alia multa II al. atr. corr. alia multa S in marg. bona alia. bona R 6 P 3 B 3 E 3 L 3 6 W 1 M 12 O 2 3. multa alia L 4. 41. oportere a II at e in ras.

et fuerat oportet ea. oportet ea R 1 10 P 4 G B 1 2 K 1. oportet ea V atr. uiridi suppl. oportet & | ea P al. atr. corr. oportet a E 1 3 ras. inter t et a. oportet a P 2 3 B 3 L 3 6 M 2 D C O 2 3. oportet eum L 4 W 1 O 1. oportet eū L 5 J ed. H. oportet eū K 2 M 1. oportet eū a O 8. oportet te a R 17 L 2. oportet te ea E 2. oportere cum R 6. oportet R 7. oppōta R 16. a merore oportet ad O 7. || maerore R. merore V. merore G E. merorē J. merorem K 2 M 1. moerorem R 6. morore R 10. morere R 16. 42. esset R V P K. esse G at t alt. man. add.

XX. 1. dicit G i in e mut. alt. man. || existimas L 3 O 1. existimabas R 7 L 2 6. existimabas R 16 17 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 1-3 L 4 5 W 12 M 2 D C II J O 2 3 7 8 ed. H. tu extima epicurum M 1. 2. libidinosas R V G B K. libidonosas P. 3. minime R V G B K.

ἐν Κῶ, τῆς αὐτῆς ἐχεται δυνάμειω τε καὶ σκευασίας τῷ ἀμαρακίῳ· εὐωδέστερον δὲ τυγχάνει. Dav. read adducamus, hedychrum incendamus, demus scutellam dulciculae potionis: Orelli adducamus, hedychrum intendamus, scutellam dulciculae potionis: intendamus governing both accusatives; Mo. and Küh. adducamus, demus hedychrum, intendamus scutellam dulciculae potionis. But scutella is evidently not a cup but a shallow vessel such as a censor, cf. scutra. It seems necessary therefore to adopt the corr. of Madv. and to assume that damus of MSS (demus V<sup>2</sup>P<sup>2</sup>) arose by dittography from the end of incendamus, and that, as the word made no sense there, it was transferred to precede hedychri which was at the same time altered to hedychrum.

aliquid uideamus = prouideamus. This use is chiefly colloquial but well established. Editors compare iv 17, 38 'ut semper uideat sedem sibi ac locum sine molestia atque angore uiuendi'; Att. v 1, 3 'antecesserat Statius, ut prandium nobis uideret'; xiv 21, 4 'talaria uideamus'; Fam. vii 20, 2 'ualebis meaque negotia uidebis'; Priscian iii 5, 30 'Cic.

in iii Tusculanarum: Dulciculae potionis aliquid uideamus' (an extract which lends some support to Madvig's corr.). Similarly ὀρᾶν in Gk: Theocr. xv 2 ὄρη δίφρον, Εὐνόβα, αὐτᾶ· Soph. Ajax 1165 σπεύσον κολῆν κἀπεῖν τῷ ἰδεῖν τῶδ'.

ne intellegere quidem te: for the order of words cf. § 47 'ne suspicari quidem se.'

XX. dicit aliquis: as often, introducing the supposed objection of an opponent. For the mood see Roby Gram. II Introd. CI foll.

existimas: the fut. read by Küh. with little MS support is very unnatural. Nearly all modern editors adopt existimas. For the error in MSS cf. 31, 75 appellatur codd. opt. pro appellatur; ii 21, 49 dubitarunt pro dubitant.

libidinosas, 'immoral.'

uideo enim...praeclare: as instances cf. Diog. L. x 140 οὐκ ἔστιν ἠδέως ζῆν ἄνευ τοῦ φρονίμωσ καὶ καλῶσ καὶ δικαίωσ, οὐδὲ φρονίμωσ καὶ καλῶσ καὶ δικαίωσ ἄνευ τοῦ ἠδέωσ. ὁτω δὲ μὴ ὑπάρχει ζῆν φρονίμωσ καὶ καλῶσ καὶ δικαίωσ οὐκ ἔστι τοῦτον ἠδέωσ ζῆν· Plutarch, Non posse suauiter uiui secundum Epicurum 1097 a τὸ εὖ clare. itaque, ut saepe dixi, de acumine agitur eius, non de 5 moribus; quamvis spernat uoluptates eas quas modo laudauit, ego tamen meminero, quod uideatur ei summum bonum. non enim uerbo solum posuit uoluptatem, sed explanauit quid diceret.

saporem, inquit, et corporum complexum et ludos atque cantus et formas eas quibus oculi iucunde 10 moueantur. num fingo, num mentior? cupio refelli. quid enim laboro, nisi ut ueritas in omni quaestione explicetur? 47. at idem ait non crescere uoluptatem dolore detracto, summamque uoluptatem <esse> nihil dolere. paucis uerbis tria magna

5. spernat W 1. spernaŕt V. sperna t B litt. inter a et t eras. spernant

R B 2 K. sperant G alt. man. superscr. aspnant R 10. aspernaŕ R 16.

6. quid uideatur G S J. 7. quid diceret V S E 1. qd diceret J.

8. complexum R V P G K E. cõplexũ R 16. 9. iucunde R V K.

iũcunde E u in o al. atr. mut. iucunde G in iocunde alt. man. mut. iocũde S.

§ 47, 11. ad idem V G ad in alt. man. mut. 12. detracto G alt. man. corr. || summamque uoluptatem nihil dolere R V P 14 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 W 12
M 12 D C II O 2 3 7 8. pro summamque habent summaque K 1 et summam

O 8: pro dolore habent dolore B 2 et dolore E 1. summamque uoluptatem non dolere O 1. post summamque habet V in marg. eē man. ant. adscr. uoluptatem esse corr. Scyffertius.

ποιεῖν ἡδὺν ἐστι τοῦ εὖ πάσχειν. Similar instances are referred to in the 'Epicuri et Metrodori honestas quasdam exclamations' of Tac. Dial. 31. Epicurus taught that pain was to be endured for the sake of greater pleasure and pleasure to be foregone that greater pain might be avoided, cf. v 33, 95. Wisdom, self-control, justice and courage were all recognised by him as contributing to happiness of life. The virtues and pleasure grow together inseparably, Diog. L. x 132 συμπεφύκασιν... αἱ ἀρεταὶ τῷ ζῆν ἡδέως; Fin. i 16, 50. Seneca, who is much given to quoting the moral precepts of Epicurus, declares his teaching to be pure and severe but undeservedly misunderstood, de Vit. Beat. 13, 1; cf. also Ep. 33, 2. For the attitude of Epicurus towards pleasure and pain see Usener's Epicurea, §§ 440—449; Zeller, Stoics, etc., pp. 447 foll.

de acumine: cf. ii 19, 44 'homo minime malus uel potius uir optimus' and i 3, 6 n. on 'optimis.'

quamuis = quantumuis, F.A.W.

non enim uerbo...diceret, 'for he did not confine himself to the use of the word pleasure (in stating what the chief good was) but he also made clear what he meant.'

saporem...moueantur: cf. 18, 41 n. and Athenaeus and other Gk sources quoted there.

corporum complexum: τὰς δι' ἀφροδισίων ἡδονάς, cf. Athenaeus and Diog. L. ll. cc.

cupio refelli: cf. ii 2, 5 'nosque ipsos redargui refellique patiamur' and the rest of the section.

§ 47. non crescere uoluptatem dolore detracto: the essential cause of happiness, according to Epicurus, is repose of mind, ἀταραξία. Positive pleasure only increases so long as it removes unsatisfied craving. Beyond that point pleasure is not added to but only varied. Fin. i 11, 38; ii 3, 10; cf. the 18th κυρία δόξα of Epicurus in Diog. L. x 144 οὐκ ἐπαύξεται ἡ ἡδονὴ ἐν τῇ σαρκί, ἐπειδὴν ἀπαξ τὸ κατ' ἐνδειαν ἀλγοῦν ἐξαιρεθῆ, ἀλλὰ μόνον ποικιλλεται. Plutarch, Non posse suau. uiui sec. Epic. 1088 c καὶ πέρασ κοῦδον 'Ἐπίκουρος τὴν παντὸς τοῦ ἀλγοῦντος ὑπεξαίρουσιν ἐπιτέθεικεν, ὡς τῆς φύσεως ἀχρι τοῦ λῦσαι τὸ ἀλγεινὸν αὐξήσεως τὸ ἡδὺν περαιτέρω δὲ προελθεῖν οὐκ ἐώσης κατὰ μέγεθος, ἀλλὰ ποικιλοῦσιν τὴν οὐκ ἀναγκαλοῦσ, ὅταν γοῦν ἐν τῷ μὴ πονεῖν γέννηται, δεχομένης. See Usener, Epicurea, §§ 416 foll.

summamque uoluptatem esse: Sff. inserted esse here where it would be more likely to fall out than after summaque: 'uerisimilius est esse post uoluptatem excidisse (eē post ē) quam post summamque ubi inserunt V<sup>2</sup> Lamb. marg. et nuper Hei. Saepissime fit ut id quod excidit perperam a correctore restituitur.'

peccata. unum, quod secum ipse pugnat; modo enim ne su-15 spicari quidem se quicquam bonum, nisi sensus quasi titillarentur uoluptate; nunc autem summam uoluptatem esse dolore carere.
 potestne magis secum ipse pugnare? alterum peccatum, quod, cum in natura tria sint, unum gaudere, alterum dolere, tertium nec gaudere nec dolere, hic primum et tertium putat idem esse 20 nec distinguit a non dolendo uoluptatem. tertium peccatum commune cum quibusdam, quod, cum uirtus maxime expetatur eiusque adipiscendae causa philosophia quaesita sit, ille a uirtute

15. titillarentur R 6 17 P B 3 K 12 E 12 W 12 M 12 D C H J O 1-3 8. titillarentur R 1. titillarentur V B 2. titillarentur G alt. man. superscr.

tintillarentur O 7. nitillarentur B 1. titillarentur S in marg. titillarent. qua sitit illarent B 2. qua intillarentur O 1. 16. carere om. E 1. carere P.

18. tria sunt G alt. man. mut. 21. commune cum R 1 6 17 V P G B 1-3 K 12 E 12 W 12 M 12 D C O 1-3 7 8. commune cum S fort. eod. atr.

commune est J cum om. tertium peccatum commune habet II in marg. e contra om.

maxime R V G B. maxime K atr. nigriore superscr. expetatur R V K 1 2

W 1 D O 8. expectatur G at c expunx. et conf. alt. man. expectatur

R 10 16 O 7. expectatur P al. atr. superscr. uerba maxime expetat habet V

multa in ras. scripta. 22. uirtute G alt. man. superscr.

summamque... nihil dolere: see 18, 40 n. on 'summum bonum non dolere.' The passage in Diog. L. x. 139 does not contain an assertion that the highest pleasure consists in absence of pain and Torquatus in Fin. i 17, 56, though he emphasises the greatness of the pleasure of non dolere, does not declare it to be the greatest possible.

secum ipse pugnat: Madv. on Fin. i 11, 37 admits that the doctrine of Epicurus with regard to the two divisions of pleasure is set forth in the sources 'breuiter nec constantissime, si cum reliqua doctrina de origine uoluptatis compares'; although Epic. says that pleasures of mind spring from those of the body, Fin. i 17, 55, and only makes them 'greater than those of the body because while the body perceives only present pleasures the mind perceives past and future as well, purely intellectual pleasure seems to have been recognised by him. Cf. his letter to Idomeneus written on his deathbed, Diog. L. x 22. The basis was materialistic rather than corporeal.

modo enim: sc. dicebat §§ 41, 42, 46. Hence the sequence titillarentur which Dav. wrongly altered on Bentley's advice.

quasi marks titillarentur as a translation. Epicurus used the word γαργαλιζω.

Cf. i 12, 27 n., and for titillare Fin. i 11, 39; Lucr. ii 429.

a non dolendo, 'from insensibility,' i 43, 102 n. on 'de nihil sentiendo.'

tertium peccatum: the third fault is practically that he did not adopt the Stoic definition of the chief good. The statement that Epicurus a uirtute summum bonum separauit is not strictly correct, cf. Diog. L. x 140 quoted above on § 46 n. on 'uideo enim...praeclare,' where the virtues are stated to be inseparably connected with pleasure. Cf. also Diog. L. x 132 συμπεφύκασι γὰρ αἱ ἀρεαὶ τῷ ζῆν ἡδέως καὶ τὸ ζῆν ἡδέως τοῦτων ἐστὶν ἀχώριστον. What he denies is that virtue is the end of action. Happiness of life is the end, virtue a means to that end. Cf. Seneca, Ep. 85, 18 'Epicurus quoque iudicat, cum uirtutem habeat, beatum esse, sed ipsam uirtutem non satis esse ad beatam uitam, quia beatum efficit uoluptas quae ex uirtute est, non ipsa uirtus.'

separauit: on the sequence expetatur, quaesita sit, separauit Küh. notes that separauit is not historic perfect but present perfect. But even so the historic sequence is more usual in Cicero, cf. i'1, 1 n. on 'pertinerent...continenterentur.' Cicero may have begun his sentence with separat in view as the ending but on summum bonum separavit. 48. at laudat saepe uirtutem. et quidem C. Gracchus, cum largitiones maximas fecisset et effudisset 25 aerarium, uerbis tamen defendebat aerarium. quid uerba audiam, cum facta uideam? Piso ille Frugi semper contra legem frumentari-uenerat. animum aduertit Gracchus in contione Pisonem stan-tem; quaerit audiente populo Romano, qui sibi constet, cum ea 30 lege frumentum petat, quam dissuaserit. Nolim, inquit, mea

§ 48, 23. at R 16 V P G B 1-3 S W 1 2 J O 1 3 7 8 ed. H. <sup>c</sup> at R al. atr. corr. ac R 10. ad E 1. || laudat saepe R 1 10 16 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. adlaudat saepe E 1. laudat <sup>et</sup> saepe II. 24. c. gracchus V R. c. gracchus E 1. c. gracchus S fort. eod. atr. <sup>c</sup> c. gracchus G alt. man. superscr. || maximas R V G B.
 maximas K 1. || effudisset R 6 P B 1 3 K 2 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J
 O 1-3 7 8. effudisset V. effudisset K 1. effundisset R G B 2 E 1
 (et om.) 26. uideam? Piso G K 2 W 2 D O 1 3 8. uideam Piso R P K 1 B 1-3 S E 1 2 W 1 M 1 2 C II J O 2 7. uideā? .1. piso V at .1.
 in marg. ad init. lineae, habet etiam in marg. al. atr. L. piso. 27. accipiendum R V B. accipiendum G alt. man. superscr. accipiendum E 1 eod. ut uid. atr. accipiendum R 6 7 P B 2 3 K 1 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8.
 28. animum aduertit B 1 E 1 C. animam aduertit R eod. atr. K 1 eod. atr. animam aduertit V P G. animam aduertit B 2. aīaduertit B 3 K 2 D II. aīadu'tit W 2 M 1 J O 8. animaduertit L 2 3 4 6 W 1 M 2 O 1-3. animadu'tit S E 2. || gracchus V. gracc<sup>h</sup>us S. grachus B G alt. man.
 superscr. grachus E 1. || in contione R G B. in contentione E 1 fort. eod. atr.
 29. p. r. pro populo romano G B. 30. dissuaserit R V P K 1 2 L 2 5 6 ed. H. dissuasit O 7. disuaserit E 1. disuaserit L 4. disuaserat G in disuaserit alt. man. mut. dissuaserat L 3 O 1 8. || inquit K 1. inquit G d in t mut.

nearing the end found that that form would give a very inferior rhythm. The clausula sum|num bonum separavit is one of the best possible, Zielinski's 3 d; sum|num bonum separat would not have the proper caesura to be a good instance of 2.

§ 48. at laudat saepe: et saepe of earlier editors is not supported by the MSS. et quidem: this expression admits the fact but ironically refutes the inference intended. See Madv. on Fin. i 10, 35 n. on 'et quidem se textit, ne interiret.' Also i 49, 119 n.

C. Gracchus: the argument is 'It may be urged that Epic. often praises virtue. True, but men's words are not always in harmony with their deeds. C. Gracchus praised economy while squandering the public treasure.' The story of L. Piso only bears upon the argument in so far as it is meant to show on the evidence of a uir grauis et sapiens that the statement made with regard to Gracchus is correct. Cic. brings him in in contrast to Epicurus in Fin. ii 28, 90.

effudisset: of spending other money than one's own, see Furneaux on Tac. Ann. xiv 31, 6. For the historical reference cf. Off. ii 21, 72; p. Sestio 48, 103; Mommsen H.R. III p. 344. [W. Warde Fowler, Social Life at Rome p. 37.]

Piso ille Frugi: Kl. inserted L. before Piso 'e cod. Vaticano' i.e. from V<sup>2</sup>. For this Piso cf. 8, 16 n.

accipiendum: on the fluctuation between e and u in the gerund and gerundive see Brambach, Neugestalt. pp. 106-7; Fleckeisen, Fünffzig Artikeln p. 16; Neue, Formenlehre iii<sup>3</sup> 332 foll.

animum aduertit: for the full form cf. v. 23, 65.

sibi constet: i 5, 9 n. on 'tibi constare.' nolim: present because it is still in Gracchus' power to do otherwise if he chooses.

bona, Gracche, tibi uiritim diuidere libeat, sed, si facias, partem petam. parumne declarauit uir grauis et sapiens lege Sempronia patrimonium publicum dissupari? lege orationes Gracchi, patronum aerarii esse dices. 49. negat Epicurus iucunde posse uiui, nisi cum uirtute uiuatur, negat ullam in sapientem uim esse fortunae, tenuem uictum antefert copioso, negat ullum esse tempus quo sapiens non beatus sit. omnia philosopho digna, sed cum uoluptate pugnantia.—non istam dicit uoluptatem.—dicat quamlibet; nempe eam dicit, in qua uirtutis nulla pars insit. age, si uoluptatem non intellegimus, ne dolorem quidem? nego igitur eius esse, qui dolore summum malum metiatur, mentionem facere uirtutis.

31. bona R V P G K I W I 2 O I 3 7.

bone\ B I i.e. e in a mut.

bone D Gr. gracche V E I D. grache G. || uiritim V G. uirium E I. || libeat R V P G B K I O 8. liceat B 3 W I O I 3. 32. parumne R G.

parū ne P. parum ne V. 33. publicum R V P. puplicum G. || dissupari R V B. dissupari K I atr. nigr. mut. dissupari E I. dissipari P ras. et spat. post si. dissipari G R 6 S J. 34. gracchi V G. grachi E I. § 49, 35. iucunde R V G B. iucunde E I u in o mut. iocunde S. || negat illum G illum in ullam alt. man. mut. 38. philosopho G i exp. et lineam duxit alt. man. 39. quamlibet R V P G K I. quanlibet B O 7.

quam lubet O I. quē libet R 16. || nempeam G alt. man. superscr. 40. intellegimus R V G B K. intelligimus E I S. 41. qui dolore B 3 M 2. qui dolore S. qui dolorē II at linea magna ex parte eras. qui dolorē W I 2 J O 7. qui dolorem V K 2 E 2 M I D C O I - 3 8. qui dolorem B I at d post i eras. quid dolorē E I. quid dolorem R I. quid dolorem G B 2 K I. || summum malum om. O 2. 42. metiatur R I 10 16 V P B I 3 K I 2 E 2 W I M 2 II O I - 3. meciatur G at c in t alt. man. mut.

mentiatur B 2 M I D C O 7. mētiat O 8.

mea bona: the state property in which Piso as a citizen had a share.

lege...dices: i 13, 30 n. on 'tolle... sustuleris.'

orationes Gracchi: these were read in Cicero's day; Brut. 33, 125. Several fragments survive; among these an important fragment (translated in Momms. H.R. III p. 343 n.) is preserved by the Ambrosian scholiast on Cicero.

§ 49. negat Epicurus...uiuatur: cf. v 9, 26; Fin. i 16, 50; 18, 57; Diog. L. x 140 quoted on § 46; ibid. § 132 partly quoted in the same place. Usener, Epicurea §§ 504 foll.

negat ullam...fortunae: cf. v 9, 26; 26, 73; Fin. i 19, 63; ii 27, 89; Diog. L. x 144 (the 15th κυρία δόξα) βραχεία σοφῶ τύχῃ περιεμπλεῖται, τὰ δὲ μέγιστα καὶ κυριώτατα ὁ λογισμὸς διώκηκε καὶ κατὰ τὸν συνεχῆ χρόνον τοῦ βίου διοικεῖ καὶ διοικήσει. Usener §§ 584 foll.

tenuem uictum: cf. v 9, 26; 32, 89;

Fin. ii 28, 90; Diog. L. x 130 τὸ μὲν φυσικὸν πᾶν εὐπρόριστόν ἐστι, τὸ δὲ κενὸν δυσπρόριστον. οἱ τε λιτοὶ χυλοὶ ἴσῃν πολυτελεῖ διαλετῇ τὴν ἡδονὴν προσφέρουσιν ὅταν ἅπαν τὸ ἀλγοῦν κατ' ἐνδειαν ἐξαιρεθῆ· καὶ μάζα καὶ ὕδωρ τὴν ἀκροτάτην ἡδονὴν ἐπειδὴν ἐνδείων τις αὐτὰ προσενέγκῃται... Usener, op. cit. § 469 foll.

negat...beatus sit: cf. Diog. L. x 118 quoted in n. on ii 7, 17. Usener § 601.

omnia philosopho digna: i 43, 102 n. on 'rem non difficilem.' Hei. takes the constr. to be the same as in i 26, 65 'non iusta causa cur Laomedonti tanta fieret iniuria,' where see n.

non istam...: 'he does not understand pleasure in the sense to which you refer.' The argument that follows is more fully stated in Fin. ii 4, 12 foll.; 23, 75 foll.

age, si uoluptatem...: the line of thought is this: 'Epicureans say that we (i.e. non-Epicureans) do not understand what Epicurus means by pleasure; but

XXI. 50. Et queruntur quidam Epicurei, uiri optimi (nam nullum genus est minus malitiosum), me studiose dicere contra Epicurum. ita, credo, de honore aut de dignitate contendimus. mihi summum in animo bonum uidetur, illi autem in corpore, mihi in uirtute, illi in uoluptate. et illi pugnant, et quidem uicinorum fidem inplorant; multi autem sunt qui statim conuolent. ego sum is qui dicam me non laborare; actum habiturum, quod egerint. 51. quid enim? de bello Punico agitur? de quo ipso cum aliud M. Catoni, aliud L. Lentulo uideretur, nulla inter eos con-

XXI. § 50, 1. et queruntur V B 1 2 K 2 W 1 D C O 1 3 7 8. et <sup>u</sup>queruntur E 2 W 2. et queruntur K 1. et quaeruntur R 1 G O 2. et queruntur P al. atr. superscr. et <sup>u</sup>queruntur B 3. et conqueruntur M 2. et con queruntur II con in marg. excurrente. || quidam R 1 6 7 V P 1 3 G B 1-3 K 1 E 1 W 1 2 M 2 D C J O 1-3 7 Gr. qdā M 1. quidem R 1 7 P 2 S E 2
II O 8. quid P 4. || epicure G alt. man. superscr. epicurhei W 1. ||
optimi G K 1. 5. uicinorum R. uicinor<sup>ru</sup> m V charta inter r et m perforata.
ut inorum E 1. 6. inplorant G. implorant R V B K. 7. ego sum hīs K 1. || actum habiturum R V P G. actum abiturum E 1. acnō habiturum J. || quod egerint R G. quid egerint J.

they must at least admit that he means the same thing by pain as we do. Since then he makes pain the measure of the chief evil we must conclude that pleasure not virtue is his chief good.' Neide. Epicureans would no more have admitted that their opponents used the word pain than that they used the word pleasure in their sense of the term. The argument is stated from a narrow Stoic point of view and Cic. tacitly brushes aside Epicurus' known assertions with regard to the intimate connexion between virtue and pleasure, for which see reff. in 20, 46 n. on 'uideo enim praeclare.'

XXI. § 50. et queruntur: et marks indignant surprise, cf. 16, 35 n. on 'et tu...iubes.' Schlenger's alteration to sed is uncalled for.

quidam Epicurei, 'certain Roman Epicureans.' But quidem of inferior MSS may be right.

uiri optimi: i 3, 6 n. on 'optimis.'

malitiosum, 'crafty,' cf. ii 19, 44 'uenit Epicurus, homo minime malus, uel potius uir optimus.'

studiose, 'in the spirit of a partisan.' ita, credo, 'Ha! One would suppose...' Ironical. F.A.W. There is no need for heat where truth is the object of search. For credo cf. i 38, 92 n. on 'opinor.'

et illi pugnant, 'and they actually fight' i.e. although they accuse me of being contentious, they are so themselves. For et cf. et queruntur above.

uicinorum fidem inplorant: Mo. compares the extract from Statius' Synephebi metaphorically applied in N.D. i 6, 13 'pro deum, popularium omnium, omnium adulescentium clamo, postulo, obsecro, oro, ploro atque inploro fidem.'

multi autem sunt: all dogmatic schools would be more or less hostile to the New Academy.

me non laborare, 'that I do not trouble myself.'

actum habiturum, quod egerint, 'that I will acquiese in any arrangement they may make.' Cf. the proverbial actum ne agas which forbids the opposite course. Att. ix 18, 3, Laelius 22, 85; Ter. Phormio 419; Adelphi 232, where Donatus explains it as a metaphor from the law-courts applied where a case once decided is opened up again.

§ 51. quid enim? The argument is 'Excitement is out of place in a philosophical discussion. This is not a question about war, though even such a question can be argued without animosity, as the case of Cato and Lentulus shows.'

de bello Punico: sc. tertio.

M. Catoni: see Mommsen, H.R. III pp. 238 foll.

L. Lentulo: L. Cornelius Lentulus Lupus, consul 156 B.C., evidently acted along with Scipio Nasica in opposing Cato's agitation for the destruction of Carthage.

10 certatio umquam fuit. hi nimis iracunde agunt, praesertim cum ab iis non sane animosa defendatur sententia, pro qua non in senatu, non in contione, non apud exercitum neque ad censores dicere audeant. sed cum istis alias, et eo quidem animo, nullum ut certamen instituam, uerum dicentibus facile cedam; tantum 15 admonebo, si maxime uerum sit ad corpus omnia referre sapientem siue, ut honestius dicam, nihil facere, nisi quod expediat, siue omnia referre ad utilitatem suam, quoniam haec plausibilia non sunt, ut in sinu gaudeant, gloriose loqui desinant.

XXII. 52. Cyrenaicorum restat sententia; qui tum aegritudinem censent existere, si necopinato quid euenerit. est id

§ 51, 10. umquam R V E I. unq. S. 11. ab his G B K. || non satis S.
12. in contione V G B<sub>3</sub> K I E 2 W 2 M I 2 I O I 3. contione O 7 in om.
in concione W I C. in contione R I. in contentione P al. atr. superscr.
in contentione B 2 E I. || neque ad R I 7 P I 4 B I 3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 4-6
W 2 M I 2 I I J O 2 3 8 7. nequae ad G in neque ad alt. man. mut.
neque ad V man. ant. mut. neque apud R 6 L 2 3 D C O I. neque ap W I. || neque accensores B 2. 15. admonebo R V G K W 2. ammonebo B S.

amonebo B 2. || maxime R V G B S E. maxime K I atr. nigriore superscr.
17. siue omnia referre ad utilitatem suam habent R V P G B I-3 K I S E I W I 2
M I 2 D C J O I 7 I I habet facere pro referre. 18. in sinu R 6 B 3 E I W I M 2 D C H O 2 3. in sinu B 2 O 8. in signum P. in signum K I. in sinum R 17 V B I E 2. in signum G g expunx. alt. man. in signu K 2 M I. in signu E 3. in signum R I 7 J O I. insignē O 7.

in sig<sup>m</sup> W 2. || gloriose V P K G. gloriose R. || designant P.
XXII. § 52, 1. cyrenaicorum V. || qui tum R I 6 7 V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2 W I M 2 D I I J O 2 3 7 8 ed. H. que tum K 2 M I O I. q tum C. q tum W 2. 2. censent R I 6 7 V P G B I S E I 2 M 2
C O 7. censet K 2 W 2 M I J O I. cessent R I 7. || existere R V G
B I 2 K I S E I 2 W I. || sineopinato G alt. man. superscr.

praesertim cum, 'and that though,' Madv. on Fin. ii 8, 25; Mayor on Phil.
ii 24, 60.

animosa, 'spirited.' Cf. Fin. ii 22, 74.

ad censores: although Küh. endeavours to draw a distinction it seems to me that apud could also have been used here before censores cf. p. Cluentio 47, 131 'quod si hanc apud eosdem ipsos censores mihi aut alii causam agere licuisset.' Also that ad might have been used before exercitum just as it is before populum in Brut. 20, 80 'cum quidem eo ipso anno contra Ser. Galbam ad populum summa contentione dixisset.'

uerum dicentibus facile cedam: for this attitude of Academic philosophers towards opponents cf. ii 2, 5 n. on 'refellere sine pertinacia.' Cicero was ulius addictus iurare in uerba magistri.

[Cf. de Off. iii 4, 20 nobis enim nostra Academia magnam licentiam dat, ut quodcumque maxime probabile occurrat, id nostro iure liceat defendere.]

siue omnia referre ad utilitatem suam. Bouh. and F.A.W. suspected a gloss. Hei. Posen Progr. p. 2 more correctly notes 'inanem tautologiam habent, quam tamen ipsi Ciceroni tribuere non dubito.'

in sinu gaudeant: a proverbial expression, 'let them disguise their joy'; cf. our phrase 'to laugh in one's sleeve.' Mo. compares Tibull. iv 13, 8 'procul absit gloria uolgi: | qui sapit, in tacito gaudeat ille sinu'; Prop. ii 25, 30 'in tacito cohibe gaudia clausa sinu'; Senec. Ep. 105, 3 'si bona tua non iactaueris, si scieris in sinu gaudere.'

XX. § 52. Cyrenaicorum...sententia: the treatment of the Cyrenaic view, postponed in 15, 32, is here resumed.

quidem magnum, ut supra dixi; etiam Chrysippo ita uideri scio, quod prouisum ante non sit, id ferire uehementius; sed non sunt in hoc omnia. quamquam hostium repens aduentus magis aliquanto conturbat quam exspectatus, et maris subita tempestas quam ante prouisa terret nauigantes uehementius, et eius modi sunt pleraque. sed, cum diligenter necopinatum naturam consideres, nihil aliud reperias nisi omnia uideri subita maiora, et quidem ob duas causas, primum quod, quanta sint, quae accidunt, considerandi spatium non datur, deinde, cum uidetur praecaueri potuisse, si prouisum esset, quasi culpa contractum

3. ut supra dixi R V G. ut sup̄ dixi J. ut p̄dixi S. ut p̄dixi B E. ||

etiam om. B E. || crysippo G E. 4. ferire V i post f et i post r in e mut., i ante r in ras. fieri R I 67 17 P 1-3 G B 1-3 K I S E 12 L 2-6 W I M 2

D C II J O I-3 78 ed. H. fi P 4. fi<sup>l</sup> W 2. fi<sup>o</sup> K 2. fiei<sup>r</sup> M I.

5. aduentus K I. aduetus R V G alt. man. superscr. ad uetus B 2.

6. aliquando V. aliquando R P G K I S E I aliqndo B I. || expectatus R V P G B I 2 K I S. expectatus E I. 7. nauigantes R V G B I 2 K I S E I.

9. reperias R eod. atr. reperias P B I K I E I. reperias E 2. reperias V G. 10. accidunt R G B I 2 K I O I 3. accidunt V u in a mut. eod. ut uid. atr. 11. deinde cum R V P B I-3 K I 2

E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I 2 78. deinde cum S cum in quom mut.

deinde tum G. 12. contratum V.

ut supra dixi: 13, 28; 14, 30.

etiam Chrysippo: the main point, in Chrysippus' eyes, was that the cause should be reccens (πρόσφατος); cf. Galen, l.c. iv p. 391 M., where the definition of annoyance given by Zeno and Chrysippus is stated shortly thus 'λύπη ἐστὶ δόξα πρόσφατος κακοῦ παρουσίας.' See also 23, 55 and 31, 75. For Chrysippus' recommendation of praemeditatio cf. Galen l.c. p. 392 M. where in the words 'διὸ καὶ προενδημεῖν δεῖν φησι τοῖς πράγμασι μήπω τε παροῦσιν ὄντων παροῦσι χρησθῆναι' the subject to φησι is ὁ Χρυσίππος. Cf. Bake, Posid. Rell. p. 204. The objection of v. Arnim, who after printing the passage as Chrysippean in Stoica III 482 (p. 131 ll. 26-7) changed his mind when he came to write his preface (I p. xxii), seems met by A. C. Pearson, Class. Rev. XIX 456 b. See also Pohlenz, Hermes XLI 334.

ferire: Dav. compares 23, 55 'feriunt enim fortasse grauius'; Seneca, Consol. ad Marciam c. 9 'necesse est itaque magis corruamus, qui quasi ex inopinato ferimur'; Ep. 57, 3 'huius quoque ferietur animus, mutabitur color'; also Ep. 108, 11.

non sunt in hoc omnia: cf. Cato M. 3, 8 and often.

aliquanto: the vulgate aliquando is obviously wrong. The effect of the unexpected is always more severe than that of the expected, as Dav. notes. Cf. ii 27, 66 n.

quam ante prouisa terret: Mo. compares Hor. Epist. i 6, 11 'improvisa simul species exterret utrumque.'

et...pleraque, 'and this principle applies in most cases.'

cum...consideres: a conditional relative clause, hence the subjunctive; cf. i 41, 98 n.; 49, 118. The correspondence between the conditional relative forms and those of ordinary protasis, worked out for Greek by Goodwin, Gk Moods and Tenses, §§ 524 foll., applies to Latin also.

deinde, cum: Kl. follows Lamb. in reading quod after deinde but the transition to a main clause is not unusual; cf. ii 26, 64 n. on 'non quo...sed tamen...est.'

deinde...acriorem facit: Cicero does not deal with this second cause in detail.

potuisse, si prouisum esset: in or. recta potuit, si prouisum esset. Madv. 348 e.

malum aegritudinem acriorem facit. 53. quod ita esse dies declarat, quae procedens ita mitigat ut isdem malis manentibus 15 non modo leniatur aegritudo, sed in plerisque tollatur. Karthaginienses multi Romae serui erunt, Macedones rege Perse capto; uidi etiam in Peloponneso, cum essem adulescens, quosdam Corinthios. hi poterant omnes eadem illa de Andromacha deplorare:

Haec ómnia uidi . . . ,

20

sed iam decantauerant fortasse. eo enim erant uoltu, oratione, omni reliquo motu et statu ut eos Argiuos aut Sicyonios diceres, magisque me mouerant Corinthi subito aspectae parietinae quam ipsos Corinthios, quorum animis diuturna cogitatio callum

§ 53, 14. mittigat G priore t expuncto et confosso. || isdem V G K. 15. implerisque G E 1. || Karthaginienses B 1. Kartaginienses R V G B 2 K.

Cartaginienses S. Kartaginenses E 1. Cartaginenses W 1. 16. maciðones

E 1 fort. eod. atr. || perse R G. pse V S E 1. 17. pelo ponnese V eod. ut uid. atr., litt. ante po eras. || adulescens R V P G B 2 K 1. adulescens B 1 S E 1. 18. corinthios V P G B 1 2. chorinthios R K 1. || de andromacha O 1. deandromacha B 1. deantromacha R V G. deandromacha B 2. deanthromacha K 1. 19. deplorasce S. 21. sed iam G. sed etiam R K. || uoltu R V K. uultu B 1 2. uolutu G u prius expunx. et conf. alt. man. 22. argiuos R S. argyuos E 1. || sicyonios G E 1. sycionios R V B S. sicionios K. || diceres V R 10. dicere<sup>f</sup> P al. atr. superscr. dñes R 16. dicere R 1 G K E 1. dicerē B 1. 23. corinthi R. chorinti G. || aspectae V. aspecta R 1 10 16 P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 O 7. aspecte R 17 S marg. aspecti L 2. aspectu B 3 K 2 E 2 L 3-6 W 1 2 M 1 D C O 1 3. || pari & inequā V duarum litt. spatio relicto. pari & inequā B 1. pari & in æ quam P 1. parietine quam R 17 G B 3 II O 3. pariet-inequā E 1. pari-& i nae quam R 1 ante n apparet i uix erasum.

pari & inequā K 1 eod. atr. suppl. parique et inequā O 7. pai J inequā W 2. parique et inequā R 16. pari q̄ & in equā R 10. pari: & inequā M 2 L 5 6. pari equam M 1. parietū ruinae q̄ O 2. parietes q̄ R 7. et in equam B 2. pari om. aspectu tunc quequam E 2 tunc multa in rasura. parti ne quam C. 1 pari. parti q̄ñ D. aspectum pati et me ed. H. 24. corinthios K 1. chorinthios R. chorintios G.

§ 53. dies: cf. 16, 35 'longinquitas et dies.'

quae: for the gender where dies denotes 'period of time' see Küh. Gram. I p. 254; Roby I § 337.

Perse capto: by L. Aemilius Paulus after Pydna in 168 B.C. For the form Perse and its declension in Cicero see Neue, Formenlehre 1<sup>3</sup> p. 517.

uidi...Corinthios: Corinth was taken by Mummius in July 146 B.C. Cicero, born in 106, was in Greece and Asia Minor in 79-77 B.C.; he would thus be able as a young man to see some still surviving Corinthians who had witnessed the capture of the city.

cum essem, 'being a young man at the time.' Cum with the subjunctive here characterises the temporal circumstances under which the action took place. See Gildersleeve and Lodge § 585. Cf. p. Sest. 57, 122 'cum...demonstraret'; 59, 126 'numquam est conspectus, cum ueniret.' de Andromacha: Dobree proposed quae for de but Or. compares Off. iii 21, 82; Rep. i 18, 30.

haec omnia: cf. 19, 45.

25 uetustatis obduxerat. 54. legimus librum Clitomachi, quem ille euersa Karthagine misit consolandi causa ad captiuos ciues suos; in eo est disputatio scripta Carneadis, quam se ait in commentarium rettulisse. cum ita positum esset, uideri fore in aegritudine sapientem patria capta, quae Carneades contra 30 dixerit scripta sunt. tanta igitur calamitatis praesentis adhibetur a philosopho medicina, quanta inueteratae ne desideratur quidem, nec, si aliquot annis post idem ille liber captiuus missus

§ 54, 26. Karthagine R. Kartagine V G B 2 K. carthagine E I. cartagine S. || consolandi R V P G. inconsolandi B I. || ciues R V G B I 2 K I. 27. carneadis R V P G B I 2 S E I W I. 28. commentarium R V G B S.

cōmentarium K I. || r & tulisse R. rettulisse W I. retulisse G. retulisse V P I 4 B I 2 S E I M I J O I 3 7 8. retulisse K I. || uidi G alterum I expunx. et eri superscr. altera fort. man. || forte E I.

30. conduxerit S at u ex i mut. atr. nigr. et in marg. coñ dixerit. 31. quanta inueterate II. quanta inueterata R I 6 1 7 V P I - 4 G B I - 3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 2 - 6 W I 2 M I 2 J O I - 3 7 8 ed. H. quanta inueterata D C. || ne desideratur R P G B 2 3 K I E 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C O I 8. ne desideretur O 2. ne desideratur V al. atr. superscr. ne desideraretur O 3.

nec desideratur B I E I II. nec dederat O 7. nec desideratus S.

32. quidem R V G B I K I E I W I 2 M I. || nec si aliquid G. ne si aliquid E I.

decantauerant: here in the sense of cantare destiterant.

oratione: Man. unnecessarily proposed ornatu; cf. Off. i 29, 102 'quorum omnium uolunt, uoces, motus statusque mutantur.'

Argiuos aut Sicyonios: whose cities no misfortune had befallen.

me: contrasted with ipso Corinthios. parietinae: Dav. quotes Isid. Orig. xv 8 'parietinas dicimus quasi parietum ruinas. sunt enim parietes stantes sine tecto et sine habitantibus.'

Dav. notes 'pari modo Iulius Caesar, Corinthi uisis ruderibus eis τοιαύτην ἦλθε συμπάθειαν καὶ φιλοδοξίαν ὥστε μετὰ πολλῆς σπουδῆς πάλιν αὐτὴν ἀναστήσαι. Verba sunt Diodori Siculi in Excerpt. Peiresc. pag. 345, ed. Par.'

callum...obduxerat: ii 15, 36. uetustatis, subjective gen.

§ 54. Clitomachus, whose real name was Hasdrubal, came to Athens from Carthage, his native city, and there studied under Carneades whom he succeeded as head of the Academy in 129 B.C. Diog. L. iv 67. The present passage shows that he must have left Carthage before its fall in 146 B.C.

For this Consolatio of Clitomachus which is also cited by Hieronymus, ep. 60, c. 5 (ad Heliodorum), 'Platonis, Diogenis, Clitomachi, Carneadis, Posidonii ad sedandos luctus opuscula percurrimus,' see Buresch, Leipziger Studien IX 47 and 58.

commentarium, 'note-book,' ἵπομνήματα. Cf. Diog. L. l.c. διεδέξατο τὸν Καρνεάδην καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ μάλιστα διὰ τῶν συγγραμμάτων ἐφότισεν.

cum ita positum esset, 'the subject of discussion being thus stated.' Hirzel, Untersuchungen III 380 n., observes that the method is shown 'uetus et Socratica' in i 4, 8 is shown by this passage and Fin. ii i, 2 'quod quidem iam fit etiam in Academia. ubi enim is, qui audire uult, ita dixit uoluptas mihi uidetur esse summum bonum, perpetua oratione contra disputatur, etc.' to be the method usually followed in the Sceptic Academy. Cf. also N.D. i 5, 11 quoted in i 4, 8 n.

quae Carneades...: Zeller, Stoics, etc. c. xxiii p. 527.

calamitatis... adhibetur... medicina: see v 1, 1 n. on 'finem faciet...disputationum.'

a philosopho: sc. a Clitomacho. inueteratae: most MSS have inuetatae: the choice lies between inserting in and reading with Sff. inuetatae. Küh. thinks it also possible to take inuetatae as abl. abs., supplying calamitate, esset, uulneribus mederetur, sed cicatricibus. sensim enim et pedetemptim progrediens extenuatur dolor, non quo ipsa res immutari soleat aut possit, sed id quod ratio debuerat usus docet, minora esse ea quae sint uisa maiora.

XXIII. 55. Quid ergo opus est, dicit aliquis, ratione aut omnino consolatione illa, qua solemus uti, cum leuare dolorem maerentium uolumus? hoc enim fere tum habemus in promptu, nihil oportere inopinatum uideri; aut qui tolerabilius feret incommodum, qui cognouerit necesse esse homini tale aliquid accidere? haec enim oratio de ipsa summa mali nihil detrahit, tantum modo adfert, nihil euenisse quod non opinandum fuisset. neque tamen genus id orationis in consolando non ualet, sed id

33. uulneribus R V G B K. uulneribus S E. 34. pedetemptim R V P G B K. pedetemptū B 2. pedetemptim E I. || non quo R I 6 V P G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 M I 2 D C II O 2 3 7 8. non quod O I. non quod J. non quod W I 2. 35. immutari R V G B S E. imitari K. 36. sint R V G S. sunt E I. XXIII. § 55. 1. ratione R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 8. 2. consolatione illa L 4 5 C O 8. consolatione illa L 2. consolatione ulla R I 6 7 17 V P I 4 G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 3 6 W I 2 M I 2 D II J O I-3 7. 3. hoc enim R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2 W I M I 2 D C J O 2 3 8. hec enim H O I 7. h' enim K 2. H enim W 2. || ferre G in fere alt. man. mut. || in promptu R G. 4. aut qui R V P G B I-3 K I E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 II J O I-3 8. atqui D C. aut quid S. aut quod, O 7. 5. cognouerit E 2 W I M I II J O I 2 7. cognouit C. cognouit O 8. cognouit K 2 W 2. cognouerit R V B. cognouerit E. cognouerit G B 2 3 K I M 2 O 3. cognouit D. 7. adfert R V G K. affert B S E. 8. sed id R V P G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 D II J O I-3 7 8. set id C.

comparing 16, 34 aduersis casibus but inueterata in pointed contrast to praesentis would not present the symmetry which we expect from Cicero and which inueteratae gives.

mederetur, 'its relief would have been applied.' The act involves duration, cf. i 12, 27 n. on 'haereret.'

cicatricibus: cf. Sen. de Ira i 16, 7 'nam, ut dicit Zenon, in sapientis quoque animo etiam cum uulnus sanatum est, cicatrix manet. sentiet itaque suspiciones quasdam et umbras affectuum, ipsis quidem carebit.'

non quo...sed...docet: for the transition to a main clause cf. 22, 52 n. on 'deinde cum' and ii 26, 64 n. on 'non quo.'

debuerat: i 49, 116 n. on 'magnum est.' usus docet...maiora: when an evil is fresh it appears exaggerated to our eyes. Time shows it in its true proportions. The same effect is produced by consolation (§ 55) and by philosophic reflexion (praemeditatio § 34).

XXIII. § 55. ergo: sc. if time removes all annoyance.

ratione: 'ratio est i. q. rationum enumeratio' Nissen. A statement of philosophic considerations, such as Clitomachus had put forward, is referred to. Dav. (ed. 2) and Ernesti needlessly substituted oratione.

tolerabilis, 'enduringly.' The adj. has here an active force, = tolerantius, cf. Munro on Lucr. i 11. Dav. compares Fam. xv 20 2 'quo tolerabilis feramus igniculum desiderii tui,' Fin. iii 13, 42 'dolores eosdem tolerabilis patiuntur.'

adfert: Mo. thinks tantum modo = id modo; but if tantum were the object of adfert, modo would be unnecessary, the limitation being implied (ii 19, 44 n. on 'tantum...quantum'). Adferre can be used absolutely, cf. i 29, 70 n., but here it has an acc. and inf. clause as object.

sed id: Sff. changed sed to et thinking that after neque...non there was nothing for sed to correct; but neque...genus id...non ualet = neque genus id ui caret and

haud sciam an plurimum. ergo ista necopinata non habent tantam 10 uim ut aegritudo ex iis omnis oriatur; feriunt enim fortasse grauius, non id efficiunt, ut ea quae accidant maiora uideantur;

9. aut sciam G aut in haud alt. man. mut.      <sup>b</sup> aud sciam E al. atr. superscr. || plurimum R V P G B K.      10. ex iis M 2.      ex iis S linea ante i eras.
 ex hiis D C II O 8.      ex his R V G B 1 3 K 1 E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 O 1 - 3 7. ||
 feriunt R V P J.      <sup>i</sup> ferunt G alt. man. superscr.      ferunt S E R 17.

sed id=immo id naturally follows, cf. Küh. here. The emphatic repetition of id within such a brief space has led some, unnecessarily, to suspect the word. Wes. Em. 1 p. 6 thought that it arose out of sed.

haud sciam an plurimum=fortasse plurimum. Haud sciam an affects a little more diffidence than haud scio an, for which see ii 17, 41 n.

ergo: with ergo Cicero evidently draws together his argument against the Cyrenaics begun in § 52. Compare 'est id quidem magnum...quod prouisum ante non sit id ferire uehementius; sed non sunt in hoc omnia...quanta sint quae accidunt considerandi spatium non datur' of § 52 with 'ista necopinata non habent tantam uim...omnis...feriunt enim...ea quae accidant...quia recentia sunt maiora uidentur' of our present passage.

The passage 'ergo ista...repentina' would come quite naturally immediately after § 52 and the context in §§ 53 foll. would flow naturally from it. The arguments summed up by ergo are all to be found in § 52. The ergo clause, where it stands, is not in connexion with the preceding context, a fact noted by Heine, and it interrupts the argument found in that context. For in that context Cic. asks what is the use of ratio and consolatio and decides that these have their use. After the interrupting clause ergo...repentina he proceeds to state two ways of ascertaining the real dimensions of a seeming evil, with a view, as the context shows, to reasoning with and consoling those suffering from such seeming evils.

The clause ergo...repentina may have originally stood after acriorem facit of § 52; may have dropped out of the archetype, where it should have stood near the head of a page, and been written in the margin at the foot of the page; and thence it may have got into the text where it now stands.

enim: the argument is 'annoyance is not wholly caused by the unexpected: the unexpected has some effect in its production, feriunt enim, etc.'

non id efficiunt...: this passage is rendered difficult by the fact that Cicero has already said that all seeming evils are more severe when repentina (§ 28) or inprouisa (§ 30) and repeats the assertion with reference to the necopinatum in § 59. Hence Bentley conjectured and Dav. read 'nam id efficiunt...'; and Wes. Em. 1 p. 16 adopting Bentley's nam read 'uideantur; sed maiora uidentur, quia recentia sunt, non quia repentina,' comparing variants in iv 26, 56 for non as a v.l. for nam; and Hei. thought it not improbable that Cic. wrote 'non id efficiunt ut ea quae accidant maiora uideantur,' the rest being gloss; and Schiche adopts this reading from Hei., but keeps the rest as in the text and adds a second mala after repentina, an addition which seems to give a very questionable clausula. Turnebus conjectured 'non id efficiunt ut ea quae accidant maiora sint; quia recentia sunt maiora uidentur non quia repentina,' but this reading, though palaeographically probable, yields a defective sense. uidentur might have been substituted by haplography for sint and changed of necessity to uideantur, and quia recentia sunt might have got into the margin, and in replacing it in the text inversion, such as we find in R, might have occurred. But this would give a contrast between sint and uidentur which is nowhere an element in the discussion while the real contrast between recentia and repentina would be less forcibly expressed.

Bouhier adopted the reading which is now seen to be that of some of the best MSS, including V, 'non id efficiunt ut ea quae accidant maiora uideantur; quia recentia sunt maiora uidentur, non quia repentina,' and he is followed by Sff. Or. Bai. T.S. and Ml. Küh. follows Mo. in placing maiora uidentur immediately after maiora uideantur, agreeing in the rest with Bouhier.

The meaning is 'the necopinata do not by reason of their being necopinata make the evil seem greater but by reason of their being recentia.' Here and in § 52 Cicero is in harmony with the Stoic quia recentia sunt, maiora uidentur, non quia repentina. 56. duplex est igitur ratio ueri reperiendi non in iis solum quae mala, sed in iis etiam quae bona uidentur. nam aut ipsius rei natura qualis 15 et quanta sit, quaerimus, ut de paupertate non numquam, cuius onus disputando leuamus docentes quam parua et quam pauca sint quae natura desideret, aut a disputandi subtilitate orationem ad exempla traducimus. hic Socrates commemoratur, hic Diogenes, hic Caecilianum illud :

20 Saepe est etiam sub palliolo sordido sapientia.

12. quia recentia sunt maiora uidentur non quia repentina R 2 6 7 10 16 17

V (habet pro sunt) P 2-4 B 1-3 K 1 (eod. atr. suppl.) S E (habet uidentur al. atr. superscr.) L 2 4 6 M 2 O 2 3 7. maiora uidentur e contextu om. in marg. habent P W 2 quia recentia sunt maiora uidentur e contextu om. in marg. habet G. maiora uidentur om. R 1 K 2 E 2 L 3 5 M 1 DCJ O 1 8. quia recentia sunt uidentur non quia repentina II. qui recentia sunt maiora non quod repentina

W 1 R 1 habet non quia repentina quia recentia sunt et in marg. f̄q̄, non ut Sff. somniauit.

§ 56, 13. est igitur ratio R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 2 M 2 C II O 1-3 8. igitur est ratio W 2 M 1 D J O 7. igitur ratio est W 1. || reperiendi K 1. || non in his B 1. non in his V K. non in his R alio atr. superscr. non in his G

 alt. man. superscr. || sed in his G. 14. nam aut B 3 E 2 W 1 M 1 2 DC II

O 1 3 W 2 in marg. e cont. om. ut B 1 eod. atr. ut uid. ut R V P G B 2
 K 1 E 1 O 8. ut S in marg. aut de. om. J. || naturā E 1. 15. cuius onus

R V P G J. cuius honus K 1. cui onus B 1 E 1 O 7 S marg. cuiq.
 17. subtilitate G. 18. commemoratur R V P G. cōmemoratur B K.

19. caecilianum G K. 20. suppalliolo G.

definition laid down in § 25, 'aegritudo est opinio magni mali praesentis, et quidem recens opinio...' But in §§ 28, 30, and 59 he is not drawing from the same source but probably de suo. [ergo ista: these words seem to me to be not, like the preceding sentence, a comment of Cicero's in reply to the objection, but a continuation of the objector's remarks after the interjection of the comment 'neque tamen ... plurimum.' Translate "What then," I shall be asked, "is the use of appealing to reason or in fact to the style of consolation which we employ when we desire to comfort the sorrows of the mourner? An argument we generally have ready is—nothing ought to take us by surprise. Or, again, how will one bear misfortune in a more reasonable spirit from knowing that something of the kind is the necessary fate of a mortal? Talk like this does not diminish in the least the magnitude of the misfortune: it merely proves that nothing has happened which might not have been expected to happen" (yet for all that this kind of talk has weight in bringing comfort—in fact I am inclined to believe it has very great weight indeed). "I conclude that what takes us by surprise, as you say, is not of such importance as to be the source of all annoyance; surprises do perhaps come with greater force—they do not make our misfortunes seem greater: they seem greater because they are recent, not because they take us by surprise." For this interjecting of a comment or objection in the middle of the statement cf. iv 17, 40; iv 24, 54.]

quia recentia sunt = quod, quanta sint, quae accidunt, considerandi spatium non datur (§ 52).

§ 56. ipsius rei... quanta sit, 'the actual character and magnitude of the affair.'

a disputandi subtilitate, 'from abstract discussion.' Hei. compares N.D. ii 38, 98 'licet enim iam remota subtilitate disputandi oculis...contemplari pulchritudinem.'

Socrates...Diogenes: both examples are cited in v 32, 91-2. Diogenes the Cynic is referred to.

Caecilianum: Caecilius Statius, by birth an Insubrian Gaul, was brought to cum enim paupertatis una eademque sit uis, quidnam dici potest, quam ob rem C. Fabricio tolerabilis ea fuerit, alii negent se ferre posse? 57. huic igitur alteri generi similis est ea ratio consolandi, quae docet humana esse quae acciderint. non enim id solum 25 continet ea disputatio ut cognitionem adferat generis humani, sed significat tolerabilia esse quae et tulerint et ferant ceteri.

XXIV. De paupertate agitur, multi patientes pauperes commemorantur; de contemnendo honore, multi inhonorati proferuntur, et quidem propter id ipsum beatiores, eorumque qui priuatum otium negotiis publicis antetulerunt nominatim uita
5 laudatur, nec siletur illud potentissimi regis anapaestum, qui laudat senem et fortunatum esse dicit quod inglorius sit atque

§ 57, 24. id solum R V P G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M 2 D C I I J

O I-3 7 8. solum M I id om. 25. cognitionem R V P. cogitationem
G alt. man. ita expunct. cogitationem E I. || adferat R V G K. afferat
B P S E. 26. tollerabilia R V G K. || quae tulerint B I et om.

XXIV. 2. commemorantur R V G. cōmemorantur K. || contemnendo R G.
contēnendo B. contempnendo V E. contēpnendo K. 3. eorumque V P E.

eorum que B. eorumque<sup>i</sup> K. eorumque<sup>q</sup> R eod. atr. eorum quae G.

4. nominatim R 6. nominati V P R. nominati B eod. atr. nominati G K E.

5. potentissimi R V G B K. || regis Alexandri O 2. || anapaestum R.

anapestum V P I-4 G B I-3 K I 2 E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J O I-3 7.

anapestum<sup>i</sup> S fort. eod. atr. anapestam O 8. qui laudat R V P I-4 G

B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J O I-3 7. || q̄ laudat O 8.

6. inglorius R 6 I 7 P 3 B I 2 K 2 S E 2 W I II. inglorius V duarum litt. spat. relicto. ingloriosus G o ante u ead. man. expunx. ingloriosus M 2.

ingloriosus K I. ingloriosus R I 7 P I 2 4 B 3 E I W 2 D C O I-3 8.

ingloriosus O 7. ingloriosus M I J.

Rome between 200 and 194 B.C. probably as a prisoner of war, and began life there as a slave. He wrote numerous comedies, many of which were adapted from Menander, cf. i 14, 31; iv 32, 68; hence the reference to the Greek garb (palliolo) in the text. 'Saepe est...' Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. II<sup>2</sup> p. 77.

§ 57. huic alteri generi: sc. docendi ipsius rei naturam.

humana, 'incident to the human lot' ii 27, 65 n.; iii 16, 34 n.

ut cognitionem... humani: 'humanum genus fluxum esse, caducum, inbecillum, quassum, malis obnoxium' Beroaldus.

XXIV. de paupertate agitur: for the ellipse of si cf. ii 12, 28 n. on 'rogo.'

inhonorati, 'who never gained office.'

potentissimi regis: Agamemnon.

anapaestum, 'anapaestic lines,' cf. Fin. ii 6, 18; 'reliquitque Graeci, qui hoc anapaesto citantur.' Cf. the use of iambus in N.D. iii 38, 91 'quem Hippo-nactis iambus laeserat'; Att. xvi 11, 2 'ut Aristophani Archilochi iambus, sic epistula tua longissima quaeque optima uidetur.' Lamb. wished to read anapaesticum, a form which Dav. rejected, comparing ii 16, 37 'anapaestis pedibus' and Or. notes that that form seldom, if ever, occurs in Latin writers before Servius and Sidonius Apollinaris.

The reference is to Eur. Iph. in Aulis 16 foll. AF. ζηλω σέ, γέρον, | ζηλω δ' ἀνδρῶν δς ἀκιδνονον | βλον ἐξεπέρασ' ἀγνώς, ἀκλεής.

regis anapaestum qui: for the relative referring to a dependent genitive, and not to the noun on which that gen. depends, as its antecedent cf. 22, 52 'Cyrenaicorum...sententia qui...'; iv 5, 10 'Platonis discriptionem...qui...'; v 14, 40 'Laconis illud dictum...qui...'. Hence Bentley's emendation quo was unnecessary.

ignobilis ad supremum diem peruenturus. 58. similiter commemorandis exemplis orbitates quoque liberum praedicantur, eorumque qui grauius ferunt luctus aliorum exemplis leniuntur; sic perpersio ceterorum facit, ut ea quae acciderint multo minora quam quanta sint existimata uideantur. ita fit sensim cogitantibus ut, quantum sit eumentita opinio, appareat. atque hoc idem et Telamo ille declarat :

Égo cum genui.....

15 et Theseus :

Futúras mecum cómmentabar míserias

et Anaxagoras: 'Sciebam me genuisse mortalem.' hi enim omnes diu cogitantes de rebus humanis intellegebant eas

7. ad supremum G <sup>P</sup> alt. man. superscr. et supmū E. & supremum B. || p̄euenturus G ead. man.

§ 58, 7. commemorandis R V P G. cōmemorandis K. 8. liberum R P I 4

G B I 2 K I E I 2 S at in marg. liberorū. libe<sup>or</sup>2+ W 2 alio atr. superscr.

libe<sup>or</sup>2+ rū K 2 atr. ant. superscr. liberum O 8 al. atr. superscr. libe<sup>ro</sup>2+ rū II alio atr. superscr. libero<sup>o2+</sup> V at 2+ in ras. neque satis spatii habet. liberorum R 6 7

P 2 3 B 3 W I M I 2 D C O 1-3 7. lib'o2+ R 17 J. 11. minora quam

R G. māōra quam V Δ in ras. minora quanta E I. 12. appareat

R V G B K S E. 13. telamo R V G K E. telamon P. thelamo<sup>N</sup> S eod. atr.

thelamo<sup>n</sup> B fort. eod. atr. Thelamon W I. 14. qum genui S. genui et theseus V P G B I 2 K I O 3. genuisset theseus E I. genui et has eius

S in marg. theseus: post genui habet R tū moriturū sciui et ei rei sustuli manu minorā sed antiqua: idem habet O 7: genui moriturū sciui et ei rei sustuli C.

genui moriturū sciui cett. om. K 2 E 2 W I 2 M I D II J O I 2 8. idem habet S in marg. genui moriturum cett. om. R 7 B 3 M 2. 16. commentabar

R V G B S. cōmentabar K.

§ 58. liberum: both this form and liberorum are found in Cicero's prose. See especially Neue, Formenlehre 1<sup>3</sup> pp. 166-7, 177-8. Many instances of liberum in the Verrines are supported by the MS authority.

praedicantur = commemorantur, cf. 33, 79 'ut enim tulerit quisque eorum... praedicandum est.'

sensim: the punctuation depends upon whether we take sensim with fit or with appareat. Either view seems possible.

opinio: since aegritudo arises cum quid ita uisum sit ut magnum quoddam malum adesse et urgere uideatur, 13, 28.

These references to Telamon, Theseus and Anaxagoras have already been given in §§ 28-30, where see notes. The ref. to Telamon and Anaxagoras are shown by Buresch, Leipziger Studien IX 47-49, to have been employed by Crantor in his περὶ πένθους, and no doubt the ref. to Theseus was also there. Buresch cites Hieronymus, Ep. lx 5 'ubi illud ab infantia studium litterarum, et Anaxagorae ac Telamonis semper laudata sententia: "sciebam me genuisse mortalem?" Legimus Crantorem cuius uolumen ad confouendum dolorem secutus est Cicero.' Owing to the cognate character of the subject Cicero, in several places in the Tusculans, has worked in matter which he had previously made use of in the Consolatio.

rebus humanis, 'the incidents of the human lot.'

nequaquam pro opinione uolgi esse extimescendas. et mihi 20 quidem uidetur idem fere accidere iis, qui ante meditantur, quod iis, quibus medetur dies, nisi quod ratio quaedam sanat illos, hos ipsa natura intellecto eo, quod rem continet, illud malum quod opinatum sit esse maximum nequaquam esse tantum ut uitam beatam possit euertere. 59. hoc igitur efficitur ut ex illo 25 necopinato plaga maior sit, non, ut illi putant, ut, cum duobus pares casus euenerint, is modo aegritudine adficiatur cui ille necopinato casus euenerit. itaque dicuntur non nulli in maerore, cum de hac communi hominum condicione audiissent, ea lege esse nos natos ut nemo in perpetuum esse posset expers mali, 30 grauius etiam tulisse.

XXV. Quocirca Carneades, ut uideo nostrum scribere

19. uolgi R V G B K. uulgi S E. || extimescendas K I W I M I 2 O 2 3.
 if extimescendas R al. man. superscr. atr. ant. existimescendas V G at mes in mis ead. man. mut. estimandas E I al. atr. mut. extumescendas O 7.

estimandas C. estimandas D al. atr. superscr. existi miscendas B 2.

estimandas O 8. 20. his R I (bis). 21. ratione E I fort. eod. atr. ratio V at duarum litt. spatio relicto in ras. ratione quaedam G K. ratione quaedam R.

ratione quaedam B e in a mut. 22. quod rem continet malum L 3 (illud om.).

quod rem continet illud O I (malum om.). quod rem illud continet malum R I 17

P 14 G B I 2 K I E I L 2 5 W 2 O 8 S at in marg. remedium. quod remedium illud continet malum R 6 O 2. quod remedium continet malum P 2 3

B 3 E 3 L 6 M 2 O 3. quod rem illam continet malum E 2 II. quod res illud continet malum W 1 J. quod re illud continet malum R 7. quod 10 illud continet malum M 1. quae rem illud continet malum O 7. quod omne illud continet malum L 4. quod illud continet malum D C. quod remon 3 illud malum K 2 (on 3 extra lineam, continet om.). quod rem continet illud malum corr. Bentleius. 23. maximum R V G B. maximum K. maximum S.

§ 59, 26. adficiatur V G. afficiatur R B K. 27. necopinato R V G K.

nec opinato R 17 B 1 2 E 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1 3 8. nec oppinato R 7.

nec opinatus R 6 W 1. ne oppinato O 7. om. E I. 28. condicione G in condicione alt. man. mut. condicione B K. 29. esse possit B I.

ades
 XXV. 1. carne ades V. carne E I al. atr. superscr.

qui ante meditantur: for Chrysippus' recommendation of praemeditatio cf. 20, 52 n.

quod iis sc. accidere solet.

intellecto ... continet ..., 'since they realize that which is the important point, viz. that...'

opinatum sit: here in passive sense, cf. 11, 24 n. on 'opinati.' opino is frequent in O.L.

§ 59. efficitur ut: i 8, 16 n. 'From all this it follows'...

ut ex illo necopinato.... The point all along here is that the necopinatum is subjective not objective. The cause of annoyance is not the necopinatum but the supposed magnitude of the evil. The evil is supposed to be greater where it is necopinatum, but this is not the only case in which the dimensions of an evil are over-estimated.

illi: sc. Cyrenaiici.

itaque dicuntur...: see M. Pohlenz in Hermes XLI p. 326.

XXV. Carneades: Zeller, Stoics, etc. XXIII pp. 506 foll.

nostrum...Antiochum: When Cicero withdrew to Athens and the East for two years, commencing with 79 B.C., he attended the lectures of various philo-

Antiochum, reprehendere Chrysippum solebat laudantem Euripideum carmen illud:

Mortális nemo est quem non attingát dolor
 5 Morbúsque; multis súnť humandi líberi, Rursúm creandi, mórsque est finita ómnibus, Quae géneri humano angórem nequicquam ád-ferunt.

2. anthiochum R. || reprehendere R G.      rephendere V i.e. r in h mut. et linea supra p ducta.      reprehendere B<sub>13</sub> S W<sub>2</sub> D J O 7.      rephende E 1. reprehende E 2.      reprehendere B<sub>2</sub> K<sub>1</sub> C O<sub>138</sub>. || crysippum R G. crysippum E 1.      4. non attingat R 6<sub>17</sub> L<sub>34</sub> W<sub>1</sub> D.      non ac tingat C.
 non attingit R 10<sub>16</sub> B<sub>1-3</sub> E<sub>23</sub> L<sub>6</sub> M<sub>12</sub> H O<sub>28</sub>.      non ut attingit E 1. non attingit R 7 L<sub>2</sub>.      non attingit O 7.      attingit K<sub>1</sub> eod. atr.      a tingit V
 ras. inter a et t.      <sup>non</sup> attingit P al. atr. superscr.      attingit (non om.) R G K<sub>2</sub> S
 L<sub>5</sub> W<sub>2</sub> J. || post attingit habet R 7 morbusque dolorque.      5. multi sunt humandi R 1<sub>67</sub> 10<sub>16</sub> 17 V P<sub>1-4</sub> G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>1-3</sub> L<sub>2-6</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D C II J O<sub>1-3</sub> 7 8 ed. H.      multis corr. Lambinus.      6. morsqueest R
 eod. atr.      mors que <sup>est</sup> V (f in ras.).      morsque est P.      mors quae est G. || finita V P G B<sub>23</sub> K<sub>1</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>12</sub> O 8 Gr. W<sub>1</sub> s post a eras.      finitas O 13.
 finita R<sub>1</sub>.      <sup>s</sup> finita E 1      finis E 2 C II.      7. generi E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> D C O 13.      g<sup>m</sup> B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub> O 7.      g<sup>n</sup> i O 8.      genere V atr. uiridi superscr.      generi E 1.      genere R G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S J. || nequicquam
 R V G B K S E D J. || adferunt R G K E.      adferunt V.      afferunt B D S E 2.

sophers and at Athens was specially influenced by those of Antiochus of Ascalon, the founder of the fifth Academy, as it is sometimes called; hence nostrum in the text. Cf. Brut. 91, 315. Cicero possibly had a work of Antiochus open before him at this point. Carneades' criticism of the view of Chrysippus is rejected with the words 'mihi uero longe uidetur secus. nam...', in § 60 below, and Pohlenz acutely conjectures in Hermes XLI p. 338 that the refutation also is taken from Antiochus so that mihi uero practically means Antiocho uero.

Euripideum carmen: from Euripides' Hypsipyle, cf. Dind. Poet. Scaen. Graec. Frag. 757. Amphiarus endeavours to console the mother of Archemorus on the premature death of her son. The Greek words are preserved in Stobaeus Ecl. iv 44, 12 (ed. Hense); Plut. Cons. ad Apollon. 110 F.; the first three lines (with one earlier and three later) by Clemens Alex. Strom. iv p. 493 C (ed. Sylb.); the last line by Marcus Anton. vii 40. They run as follows: ἔφην μὲν οὐδέ τις ὄστις οὐκ ἀεὶ ποιεῖ. | θάπτειν τε τέκνα χᾶτερα κτᾶσθαι πάλιν | αὐτοῦς τε θνήσκειν· καὶ τὰδ' ἀχθόνται βροτοὶ | εἰς γῆν φέροντες γῆν· ἀναγκαίως δ' ἔχει | βλον θερίζειν ὥστε κάρπιμον στάχυν.

For a theory to account for the fact that these lines, which as we see were quoted by Chrysippus, occur also in Plutarch's Cons. ad Apollon. and therefore no doubt formed part of Crantor's περὶ πένθους, and to account for the use by Chrysippus and Crantor of much other matter in common see Pohlenz, Hermes XLI p. 354 n.

carmen: i 16, 37 n.
attingat: F.A.W. thinks attingit of MSS old Latin for attingat, but if this were a Latin version of Euripides' words by an early Latin author Cicero would have named him instead of calling it Euripideum carmen. The version is by Cicero himself. Cf. ii 11, 26 for his practice in this matter.

ánita=definita, constituta, cf. Leg. ii 26, 66 'sepulcris nouis finiuit modum'; Caes. B.G. vi 18 'spatia omnis temporis non numero dierum, sed noctium finiunt.' T.S.
quae generi... lit. 'facts which...'

nequicquam: F.A.W. notes that this word is properly used in the sense of frustra only by poets; Or. cites p. Quinct. 25, 79 'et sero et nequicquam pudet' but thinks those words may perhaps be taken from some unknown comic poet or from Ter. Heaut. ii 2, 104 'hodie sero ac nequicquam.'

Reddenda terrae est terra, tum uita omnibus Metenda, ut fruges. sic iubet Necessitas.

- 10 60. negabat genus hoc orationis quicquam omnino ad leuandam aegritudinem pertinere. id enim ipsum dolendum esse dicebat, quod in tam crudelem necessitatem incidissemus; nam illam quidem orationem ex commemoratione alienorum malorum ad maliuolos consolandos esse accommodatam. mihi uero longe 15 uidetur secus. nam et necessitas ferendae condicionis humanae quasi cum deo pugnare prohibet admonetque esse hominem, quae cogitatio magno opere luctum leuat, et enumeratio exemplorum, non ut animum maliuolorum oblectet, adfertur, sed ut ille qui maeret ferendum sibi id censeat quod uideat multos 20 moderate et tranquille tulisse. 61. omnibus enim modis fulciendi

8. terrae est terra R I 10 I 6 V P I 4 G B I 2 K I S E I 2 II O 2.
est terrae terra B 3 K 2 E 3 L 2-6 M 2 D C J O I. est terra terrae W I 2
M I O 7. terra terrae est O 8. terra est terrae O 3. || tum R V P G plerique.
cum L 3 M I. tam K 2.

§ 60, 10. negabat R G B K. ne<sup>a</sup>gebat V. 13. ex commemoratione V com in ras. ex cōmemoratione E I 2 O I. ex quomemoratione P.
ex quomemoratione K I. ex quomemoratione R I. ex quo nemo ratione G.
14. maliuolos R V G B K E. maliuolos S i in e mut. || accomodatam G. accomodatam K. accōdatā E I. 15. condicionis E. conditionis R V P G B K. 16. prohibet L 6. phibet E 3 p eod. atr. at in ras. esse uidetur. phib3 W 2 at ante p indistincte c uideri potest. phibet ed. H. phibet V. cohibet R 6 7 I 7 P I-4 G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 2-5 W I M I 2 D C II J
O I-3 7 8. quohibet R I. || admonet G K. ammonet B I. amonet B 2.
17. magno opere G B 2. magno opere R V. magnopere K eod. atr.
magnopere B S E. 18. maliuolorum R V G B K S E W D. || adfertur
R V G K E. affertur B S. 19. ferendum R V G B I K I W 2 O I. ferendum R 6 7 P I 2 4 B 2 3 K 2 S E I 2 W I M I 2 D C II J O 2 3 7 8.

tum: Sff. conjectured tam and Küh.
nam. But by tum 'further' 'moreover'
Cic. is probably, as suggested by T.S., giving an awkward rendering of dé of the original.

Necessitas: Ἀνάγκη.

§ 60. negabat: sc. Carneades.

mihi: see n. on 'nostrum...Antiochum' § 59 above.

necessitas ferendae condicionis humanae: cf. 16, 34 'meditatio condicionis humanae' and ibid. 'humana humane ferenda.'

quasi cum deo pugnare: cf. Cato M.
2, 5 'quid est enim aliud Gigantum modo bellare cum diis nisi naturae repugnare?'

prohibet: Wes. Em. II p. 55 points out that while prohibere (= procul habere) naturally takes the simple abl. and the simple inf., cohibere (= continere, coercere) cannot take either constr. to express that from which one is restrained, but it has such constructions as manus ab auro, hostem a praedandi licentia cohibere or (Tac. A. ii 24) quem...uix cohibuere quominus...oppeteret, and with the inf. the verb would rather express that which one was constrained to do, than that from which one was restrained.

admonetque esse hominem = ad. nos esse homines. The subject accusative (understood) to esse is indefinite. For the omission of the accus. cf. i 25, 60 n.
'nec me pudet...fateri nescire.'

sunt qui ruunt nec cohaerere possunt propter magnitudinem aegritudinis. ex quo ipsam aegritudinem λύπην Chrysippus quasi solutionem totius hominis appellatam putat; quae tota poterit euelli explicata, ut principio dixi, causa aegritudinis; est enim nulla alia nisi opinio et iudicium magni praesentis atque urgentis mali. itaque et dolor corporis, cuius est morsus acerrimus, perfertur spe proposita boni, et acta aetas honeste ac splendide tantam adfert consolationem, ut eos qui ita uixerint aut non attingat aegritudo aut perleuiter pungat animi dolor.

XXVI. Sed ad hanc opinionem magni mali cum illa etiam opinio accessit, oportere, rectum esse, ad officium pertinere ferre illud aegre quod acciderit, tum denique efficitur illa grauis aegritudinis perturbatio. 62. ex hac opinione sunt illa uaria et detestabilia genera lugendi, paedores, muliebres lacerationes

§ 61, 22. αΨΤΗΝ R I. ΑΨΤΗΝ G. αΨΤΗΝ R 2 10. λυΠΗΝ P. ||
 chrysippus R V G. chrisippus K I R 10 16. crisippus S E. dirisipus R 2.
 23. quasi solutionem R V G B 13 K 12 S E 12 W 12 M 12 D C II J
 O 13 8. quasi et solutioni O 2. quasi sollicitudine O 7. om. P. || appellatam putat G E. appellat amputat R V. appellat amputat K I. appellat amputa B 2. om. P at in marg. appellat amputatq3 in appellatis putat quae mut.
 24. ut principio R G B W 2. ut in principio W 1. aut principio V.
 25. nulla nisi B E alia om. 26. acerrimus S R 10 16. acerrimus R u in i ras. mut. acerrumus G. acerrumus V B K. acerrimus E.
 27. perfertur R 6 B 3 W 1 O 1-37. perferetur V eod. atr. punctis appositis. perferetur R I. perferetur P G B 1 K 12 S E 12 W 2 M 1 D C II J O 8. preferetur B 2. praefertur M 2. 28. adfert R V G K. affert B S E.
 29. attingat R V G B 13 K S E 2 M 2 D II O 38. attingat E. attingat O 7. tangat K 2 W 12 M 1 J.

XXVI. 2. accessit R V P G B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 W 2 M 12 II J O 2 3 7 8. accessit C. accesserit R 6 W 1 D O 1.

§ 62, 5. genera V G B 2. genere R eod. atr. generi P ras. post i. || paedores R V G. pedores R 6 P 13 B K S. pectores E I. pudores P 2 J.

§ 61. fulciendi...ruunt...cohaerere, 'we must prop the resolution of those who are sinking and cannot hold together...' The metaphors are taken from building and are in harmony with the derivation of λύπη that follows. Cf. v 28, 80 'nec enim uirtutes sine beata uita cohaerere possunt'; de Harusp. Resp. 27, 60 'uix haec si undique fulciamus, iam labefacta, ...cohaerebunt.'

λύπη...quasi solutionem: the same derivation is found in Plato, Crat. p. 419C, ἡ τε λύπη ἀπὸ τῆς διαλύσεως τοῦ σώματος ἔοικεν ἐπινομασθῆναι.

Similarly Cleanthes, cf. Stobaeus, Ecl. iv 44, 59 (ed. Hense) ὁ δὲ Κλεάνθης ἔλεγε τὴν λύπην ψυχῆς παράλυσιν. [According to Vaníček (Etym. Wört. pp. 789 sq.) λύπη is derived from a root RAP or RUP

(seen in rapio and strengthened in rumpo) meaning 'to break' or 'to tear.'] ut principio dixi: 10, 23.

aegritudo...animi dolor: Bent. wrote 'quid aliud est aegritudo nisi animi dolor? frustra igitur sententia oneratur et ultra perfectum trahitur.' He therefore proposed 'aut non attingat omnino aut...' and Dav. admitted this to the text. Ernesti omitted aegritudo.

XXVI. accessit: for the perf. indic. cf. ii 2, 5 n. on 'occurrit'; ii 23, 54 n. on 'restiterunt'; ii 24, 58 n. on 'aspeximus.'

ad officium pertinere: this view was specially refuted by Chrysippus, cf. 31, 76.

§ 62. paedores: e.g. putting ashes on one's head.

muliebres: cf. the provision of the genarum, pectoris, feminum, capitis percussiones; hinc ille Agamemno Homericus et idem Accianus

Scindéns dolore idéntidem intonsám comam, in quo facetum illud Bionis, perinde stultissimum regem in luctu
 10 capillum sibi euellere, quasi caluitio maeror leuaretur. 63. sed haec omnia faciunt opinantes ita fieri oportere. itaque et Aeschines in Demosthenem inuehitur quod is septimo die post filiae mortem hostias immolauisset. at quam rhetorice, quam copiose,

6. genarum GK. gene|narum V at N in ras. || feminum R V P 13 G B 13 KS E 12 M 2 DC II O 1278. femorum P 2 W 1 O 3. femini W 2. femurum M 1. feinei J. || agamemno R V G K E. agamemno S. agamemnon W 1 M 2. agamenno B 1. agamennon P ras. post en fort. ex em mut. agamenon E 2 M 1 O 3. agameon W 2.

7. accianus R V P G B K S J. accide E eod. atr. ut uid. 8. identidem R G B K. identidem V. 9. stultissimum R V G B K.

§ 63, 11. aescinnes V i.e. cin in chi al. atr. mut. escinnes P al. atr. mut. aescinnes R G K. eschines S. escines E al. atr. superscr. esci nes B. 12. Demosthenē J. demosthenem W 1 O 13. demostenem R V P G B 2.

demostenē B 3 K 2 E 1 W 2. demonstenem S. demonstenem K 1. demostenen B 1 D. demosten O 7. || quod his V. 13. immolauisset R V G K S E. || rhetorice K S. r&horice V. rethorice G B 12.

rethorice R E. || quam copiose R 6 P 3 B 3 S L 246 W 1 M 12 DC O 1-3 78 ed. H. quam copiose W 2 spat. et ras. ante c. quam 7 copiose R 7. quam ex copiose P 24 J. quam ex copiose V eod. ut uid. atr. E eod. ut uid. atr. quam excopiose R 1 G B 2 K 12 E 2 L 35 II. quas et copiose B 7 fort. mut. et quam copiose R 17. & quam copiose E 3. Fortasse quam etiam copiose.

XII Tables quoted on ii 23, 55 'mulieres genas ne radunto.'

feminum: for the form cf. Giles' Manual of Comp. Phil. § 354.

Homericus: Il. x 14-15 Ἀτὰρ ὄτ' ἐς νῆας τε ἴδοι καὶ λαὸν Ἀχαιῶν, | Πολλὰς ἐκ κεφαλῆς προθελύνουσ ἔλκετο χαλκας.

et idem Accianus: probably in the Nyctegresia of Accius, which was founded upon the tenth book of the Iliad. Ribbeck, R. Trag. p. 364, conjectures that this line was spoken in the prologue by a follower of the king or perhaps by Minerva, in describing the situation and the distress of Agamemnon.

Bionis: Bion the Borysthenite (a pupil of Crates, Theodorus the Cyrenaic (ὁ ἄθεος) and Theophrastus) was celebrated for his biting wit, of which specimens are given by Diog. L. iv 46-57. Cf. Hor. Epp. ii 2, 60 'ille Bioneis sermonibus et sale nigro.'

perinde: i 36, 86 n. on 'proinde.'

§ 63. et Aeschines: a second et-clause should have corresponded, et alii solitudines captant, but instead we have a separate sentence, ex quo euenit..., and owing to the detail with which the first clause is expanded, et is left pendens. F.A.W. thinks et intensive here.

Aeschines: in his speech against Ctesiphon, § 77 *ἐβδόμην δ' ἡμέραν τῆς θυγατρὸς αὐτῷ τετελευτηκυίας πρὶν πενθῆσαι καὶ τὰ νομιζόμενα ποιῆσαι, στεφανωσάμενος καὶ λευκὴν ἐσθῆτα λαβὼν ἐβουθύτει καὶ παρενβμει, τὴν μόνην ὁ δέλαιος καὶ πρώτην αὐτὸν πατέρα προσειπούσαν ἀπολέσας, a passage which is quoted by Plut. Cons. ad. Apollon. 119B-C. Dav. also compares Plut. Vita Demosth. c. xxii where it is stated that Demosthenes' rejoicing was caused by the death of Philip of Macedon.*

inuehitur: the pres. because the speech was extant, cf. i 18, 42 n. on 'uolt.' The secondary sequence immolauisset can follow, cf. iii 15, 32 n. on 'uenisset...'

quam copiose: this is not satisfactory for quam excopiose of the best MSS. Sff. reads quam ingeniose referring this adverb by chiasmus to sententias colligit and rhetorice to uerba contorquet.

quas sententias colligit, quae uerba contorquet! ut licere 15 quiduis rhetori intellegas. quae nemo probaret, nisi insitum illud in animis haberemus, omnis bonos interitu suorum quam grauissime maerere oportere. ex hoc euenit ut in animi dolori-bus alii solitudines captent, ut ait Homerus de Bellerophonte :

Qui miser in campis maerens errabat Aleis

20 Ipse suum cor edens, hominum uestigia uitans.

et Nioba fingitur lapidea propter aeternum, credo, in luctu silentium. Hecubam autem putant propter animi acerbitatem

14. colligit R V G B K S E.	15. rhetori K.	<sup>h</sup> r&hori R eod. atr.	rethori
G B S E.    intellegas R V G B K.	intelligas S E.	16. omnis R V G
B 1 2 K.	omnis E.	omnes S.	17. grauissime R V P G B K.
ex hoc uenit B.	19. aleis II at eis in ras. et fuerat alienis.	alienis R 1 6 7
V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 7 8
ed. H.	habenis R 17.	20. edens R 17 P 2 B 3 E 3 M 1 2 D C II
O 1-3 8.	edens W 2 spat. et ras. ante ed.	edens u <sup>l</sup> euidens P (sic).
e <sup>h</sup> dens W 1.	edans P 3.	euidens S.	euidens V al. atr. corr.
R 1 7 P 4 G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 2 L 5 J O 7.	euidens E 1.    uitans R 6
B 3 K 2 E 2 W 1 M 1 2 II O 1-3.	uitas R 7 17 E 3 W 2 O 8.
uitant V.	uitas R 1 P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 D C O 7.		uetans J.
21. nioba R G.	<sup>niobe</sup> nioba S.	22. haecubam R G K.	hec uerba E 1.

uerba contorquet, 'hurls' (as missiles). For the metaphor Küh. compares iv 36, 77 'intorquentur'; Or. i 57, 242 'a quo cum amentatas hastas acceperit, ipse eas oratoris lacertis uiribusque torquebit'; Brut. 78, 271; Or. 70, 234.

rhetori: F.A.W. says 'significatione Graeca pro oratori' and Hei. takes a similar view. But I know no parallel in Cicero. Küh. seems more correct in explaining the word as emphatic and = dicendi artificii.

de Bellerophonte: Bellerophon grieved thus when he lost the favour of heaven and his children were slain.

Qui miser in campis: Homer, Il. vi 201-2:

ἦτοι ὁ κάπ πεδίων τὸ Ἀλφίων οἶος ἀλατο, δν θυμὸν κατέδων, πάτον ἀνθρώπων ἀλειίνων where a Scholiast notes Ἀλφίων πεδίων τῆς Κιλικίας καλούμενον ἀπὸ τῆς τοῦ Βελλεροφόντου ἀλης, τουτέστι πλάνης. Cf. Herod. vi 95; Strabo xiv p. 676; Etyim. Mag. s.v. Ἀλφίων. Dav.

agn Nioba: since alii...captent preceded we should strictly have had alii aeternum silentium seruent, ut Nioba, quae... in the corresponding clause.

For Niobe, turned into a stone from which tears ever flowed, cf. Scholiast A on Hom. Il. xxiv 602; Pausan. i 21, 5, who says that he himself saw the famous Niobe rock on Mt Sipylus, in Phrygia, which, when one approached it nearly, resembled a woman weeping and bowed down; Soph. Elect. 150 foll.; Ov. Met. vi 310 foll. In this instance also the grief was for children slain.

Niobe, daughter of Tantalus and wife of Amphion, king of Thebes, proud of her six sons and six daughters, declared herself superior to Latona, who had only one son and one daughter. Thereupon Apollo slew all her sons and Diana all her daughters. Dav. notes that Lucian also, de Saltat. § 41, mentions τὴν ἐπὶ τῷ πένθει σιγῆν of Niobe.

propter aeternum: F.A.W. thinks this theory probably due to the Stoic tendency to apply allegory to myths; for this tendency see Zeller, Stoics, etc., c. xiii pp. 346-7.

Hecubam: when her daughter Polyxena was sacrificed by Neoptolemus and her youngest son Polydorus murdered by Polymestor, king of Thrace, Hecuba is said to have torn out the eyes of Polymestor and slain his two sons and then, or subsequently, to have been changed into a dog. Ov. Met. xiii 423-575; Eur. Hec. 1265 (Polymestor speaks) κύων γενήσῃ πύρρ' ἔχουσα δέργματα. Strabo xiii p. 595; Juvenal x 271-2 with Mayor's references.

quandam et rabiem fingi in canem esse conuersam. sunt autem alii quos in luctu cum ipsa solitudine loqui saepe delectat, ut 25 illa apud Ennium nutrix:

Cupido cepit miseram nunc me próloqui Caelo átque terrae Médeai miserias.

XXVII. 64. Haec omnia recta, uera, debita putantes faciunt in dolore, maximeque declaratur hoc quasi officii iudicio fieri, 23. quandam R V hoc loco G K E.

24. alii quos V E 2 W 1 M 2 D II

O 3 8. alii autem quos M I.

alii quo B cod. atr. R al. atr. P al. atr.

alii quo G B 2 K 1 E 1. || delectat R 1 6 7 1 7 V P B 1 3 K 1 2 S E 1 - 3

L 2 3 5 6 W 1 2 M 1 2 II J O 1 2 7 8 ed. H. delectat B 2. delectet G L 4

DC O 3. 27. medeae R V P G K 1 M 2 O 2. medeae B 1 S L 4

W 1 O 3. medeae R 7 1 7 P 2 B 2 3 K 2 E 2 L 2 3 6 W 2 M 1 DC II J

O 1 7 ed H. medeae E 1. medeae R 6. medete L 5. medere O 8.

Medeai corr. Turnebus.

XXVII. § 64, 2. maximeque V G B.

maximeque K.

maximeque

R cod. atr. || declaratur R 1 7 1 7 V P 1 - 4 G B 1 - 3 K 1 S E 2 3 M 1 2

DC II O 1 - 3 8. declarat E W 1 2 O 7. declaratur K 2. declaratur J.

delectantur R 6. || hoc R V P 1 - 4 G B 1 - 3 K 1 S E 1 - 3 L 2 - 4 6 W 1

M 1 2 DC II O 1 - 3 7 8 ed. H. h J. h K 2. h R 1 7. h L 5 W 2. ||

officii R V P G B 2 K.

acerbitatem quandam: quandam intensifies, cf. i 12, 27 n. on 'quandam quasi.'

delectat: although a definite instance is immediately cited the reference here is to a class alii and we should expect the class-subj. to follow. Either Cic. has inaccurately accommodated the constr. to the definite instance that follows or we should read delectet against most (and the best) mss. For the difference between sunt qui, est qui with the subj. and with the indic. cf. Hor. Epp. ii 2, 182 'sunt qui non habeant, est qui non curat habere.'

apud Ennium: in the Medea Exul cf. Ribb. Scaen. Rom. Poës. Frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 46, ll. 216-7; Röm. Trag. p. 150.

In Euripides' Medea which Ennium follows the words are (ll. 56-58):

ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐς τοῦτ' ἐκβέβηκ' ἀλγηδόνος ἄσθ' ἱμερός μ' ὑπῆλθε γῆ τε κούρανῶ λέξαι μολούσῃ δεῦρο δεσποίνης τύχας.

XXVII. § 64. uera=iusta, cf. 29, 73 'rectum quoque et uerum'; Caes. B.G. iv 8, 2 'neque uerum esse, qui suos fines tueri non potuerint, alienos occupare'; Hor. Epp. i 7, 98; i 12, 23.

declaratur hoc: Ml. takes the meaning to be officii iudicio hoc fieri eo declaratur quod... and he explains hoc as=ut haec omnia recta, uera, debita putantes faciant in dolore. As the MS reading thus yields a good sense it does not seem well to depart from it. hoc after haec omnia... is hardly what we should expect from Cicero. Wes. proposed haec and the confusion between hoc and haec in MSS is very common. Ml. thinks hoc no more to be changed into haec than utraque in re into utrisque in rebus in Lael. 17, 64 ex. where in bonis rebus aut in malis preceded. Hei., followed by T.S., reads declaratur haec. For eo supplied in thought before quod Hei. compares Off. i 18, 61 'declaratur autem studium bellicae gloriae, quod status quoque uidemus ornatu fere militari.' Or. Kl. Bai. and Sff. read declaratur hoc, Bai. noting that hoc is to be taken as nom. and that the subj. acc. to fieri is haec omnia. The symbol for ur has been sometimes erroneously inserted in MSS., a good instance being suscitabitur for suscitabit in ii 22, 51; it is still more easily omitted as it seems to have been in cod. Rehdigerianus, a fact upon which Or. lays too much stress.

quasi officii iudicio, 'under the idea that duty demands it.'

quod, si qui forte, cum se in luctu esse uellent, aliquid fecerunt humanius, aut si hilarius locuti sunt, reuocant se rursus ad maestitiam peccatique se insimulant quod dolere intermiserint. pueros uero matres et magistri castigare etiam solent, nec uerbis solum, sed etiam uerberibus, si quid in domestico luctu hilarius ab iis factum est aut dictum, plorare cogunt. quid? ipsa remissio luctus cum est consecuta intellectumque est nihil profici mae-10 rando, nonne res declarat fuisse totum illud uoluntarium?
 65. quid ille Terentianus 'ipse se poeniens,' id est ἐαυτὸν τιμωροῦμενος?

Decréui tantispér me minus iniúriæ,

Chremés, meo gnato fácere, dum fiám miser.

3. cum se in luctu R V P G B I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I D C I I J O I-3 7 8.

cum in luctu B 3 M 2. cum se in luctu K I eod. atr. 8. ab his R G B.

9. intellectūque est V. intellectū<sup>q</sup> est II al. atr. superscr. intellectū est E 2.

intellectaque est R I 6 G B I 2 K I D C O 7. intellecta<sup>q</sup> que E I al. atr. superscr. intellectaque (est om.) R 7 I 7 P B 3 K 2 S E 3 L 3-6 W I 2 M I 2 J O I-3 8. intellectaque (est om.) L 2. 10. nonne res R V P G plerique. nō eres B 2.

§ 65, 11. terentianus V. terentianus R G K. || puniens R 6 P 3 B 3 L 6 M I 2 II ed. H. poeniens R V G O 2. penitens R I 0 P I B I. penitens R 17 P 2 B 2 K I 2 S E I L 2-5 D C J O I 3 7 8. penitens E 2 at p. eraso. penitēs R 7. pñitens P 4. pēitēs W 2. crucians W I. poeniens corr. Gulielmus. || εαυτον τιμωροῦμενος R E. εαυτοντε imωρο|υμενος V. εαυτοντεimωροϋ μενος G. εαυ τον τρωροϋοιμενος K I. 14. Chremes R G B I 2 K E D C O 2. chremes V f. al. man. add. chremeis P eod. atr. chremens O 7. cremes M I 2.

creme S f. post me eras. W I. chreme O 3. omes W 2 al. atr. superscr.

humanus: most editors take this to mean 'with moderation,' cf. ii 27, 65, but I think the idea is rather 'naturally' i.e. in accordance with their feelings. F.A.W. explains 'genio indulgentes.'

castigare: usually of verbal reproof, though not limited to that meaning, cf. Livy xxvi 27, 8 'pridie eum uerberibus castigatum.'

uerbis...uerberibus: for the anno-minatio, cf. Ter. Heaut. 356 'tibi erunt parata uerba, huic homini uerbera' and i 40, 95 n. on 'leuius...leuitati.'

consecuta: 'h.e. ipsa remissio luctus cum est secuta, ita quidem, ut simul intellegatur.' Küh. Cf. i 16, 36 n.

res, 'the fact itself.' The fact that we can abandon grief when we realise that it does no good shows that we had it in our power to avoid giving way to it. This topic is further dealt with in c. 28 init.

§ 65. Terentianus...τιμωροῦμενος: as the Greek name was given to the play by Terence himself and therefore generally known, Bouh. thinks that it should have come first. He suggests that it was omitted by some copyists who did not know Greek and afterwards inserted by others in the wrong place, and he believes that Cic. wrote ille Terentianus ἐαυτὸν τιμωροῦμενος, id est ipse se poeniens. P. Manutius thought that one or other of the two titles should be cut out as a gloss and Fabricius would read ille Ter. ἐαυτὸν τιμωροῦμενος. Or. thinks that Cic. placed the words in the order of the text to indicate that in his opinion Terence would have done better to choose the Latin title. Dav. defends the text with the following parallels v 3, 9 'hos se appellare sapientiae studiosos, id est enim philosophos'; Ac. ii 29, 93 'placet enim Chrysippo...quiescere, id est, quod ab his dicitur, ἡσυχάζειν'; Quint. ii 15, 4 'dicens esse rhetoricen persuadendi opificem, id est πειθοῦς δημιουργόν'; iii 11, 6 'causa quoque ex causa, id est αἰτιον ἐξ αἰτιου, nasci uidetur.' Cf. Madv. on Fin. i 10, 33 n.

15 hic decernit ut miser sit. num quis igitur quicquam decernit inuitus?

Maló quidem me quóuis dignum députem.

malo se dignum deputat, nisi miser sit. uides ergo opinionis esse, non naturae malum. quid, quos res ipsa lugere prohibet?
20 ut apud Homerum cotidiana neces interitusque multorum sedationem maerendi adferunt, apud quem ita dicitur:

Namque nimis multos atque omni luce cadentis Cernimus, ut nemo possit maerore uacare.

Quo magis est aequum tumulis mandare peremptos

25 Firmo animo et luctum lacrimis finire diurnis.

66. ergo in potestate est abicere dolorem, cum uelis, tempori seruientem. an est ullum tempus, quoniam quidem res in nostra

15. numquid<sup>o</sup> K I d in l mut. 17. deputem R I 6 7 V P I 2 G B I-3 K I 2 S W 2 M I 2 D C O I-3 7 8. depute W I om. E 2 II. 18. deputat
R I 6 7 V P 2 G B I-3 K I 2 S E L 3 4 6 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J

O I-3 7 8. deputat P al. atr. superscr. deputet L 2 5. 19. quid quos R V G B 2 K I E I 2 W 2 II J O I 2. quid quod S at quod in quos mut.

quid qd quos P (sic) qd in ras. et al. atr. script. at in spatio suo. quid quos B I. quid quod L 5 M 2 D C O 7. quid qd O 3. quid qd B 3 W I M I O 8. quid qd K 2. 20. cotidiana G. cotidianę R V. cotidiãę E I e in a mut.

cotidiãę B I e in a mut. eod. atr. qtidiane S at q in ras. 21. adferunt
R V G K. afferunt B E S. 22. carentis R I 2 V P 4 G B I K I W 2

O I Gr. carentis P al. atr. O 8 al. atr. carentes R 6 7 10 16 17 P 2 3 B 2 3 K 2 S E I-3 L 2-6 W I M I 2 D C II J O 2 3 7 ed. H. cadentis corr.
Manutius. 25. lacrimis R V P G B K E.

§ 66, 26. abicere R V P G B I 2 K I E W 2 D J O 7 8. abicere S
man. ant. superscr.

decreui... Ter. Heaut. II. 147-8. The speaker is Menedemus who reproaches himself for having driven his son away to foreign service by his harsh treatment.

Chremes: both this form and Chreme are found in Terence. Masc. nouns in -es with gen. in -is usually make vocative in -es in old poetry. Neue, Formenlehre I<sup>3</sup> pp. 447-9.

meo: monosyllabic.

deputat: not in prose use. Cicero merely echoes the Terentian word, and this makes it the more strange that he has not retained the construction which Terence used. Probably we have here another instance of the interchange of a and e in MSS.

apud Homerum: Iliad xix 226-229: λήν γάρ πολλοί καί ἐπήτρημοί ἤματα

πάντα | πίπτουσιν· πότε κέν τις ἀναπνεύσει πόνοιο; | ἀλλὰ χρῆ τὸν μὲν καταθάπτειν ὅς κε θάνῃσι | νηλέα θυμὸν ἔχοντας, ἐπ' ἤματι δακρῦσαντας. With these words Ulysses seeks to calm the grief of Achilles for the death of Patroclus. Dav. notes that Seneca has the same passage in mind in Ep. 63, 2 'duram tibi legem uideor ponere, cum poetarum Graecorum maximus ius flendi dederit in unum dumtaxat diem.'

[cadentis, the conjecture of P. Manutius, is based on the Homeric πίπτουσιν.]

diurnis, 'to limit our grief to the tears of a day,' cf. ἐπ' ἤματι δακρῦσαντας in the Greek.

§ 66. curae et aegritudinis: as et is not in most MSS A. Manutius proposed to eject curae and H. Wolf bracketed the potestate est, cui non ponendae curae et aegritudinis causa seruiamus? constabat eos qui coincidentem uolneribus Cn. Pompeium uidissent, cum in illo ipso acerbissimo miserrimoque spectaculo sibi timerent, quod se classe hostium circumfusos uiderent, nihil aliud tum egisse, nisi ut remiges hortarentur et ut salutem adipiscerentur fuga; posteaquam Tyrum uenissent, tum adflicti lamentarique coepisse. timor igitur ab his aegritudinem potuit repellere, ratio ab sapienti uiro non poterit?

XXVIII. Quid est autem quod plus ualeat ad ponendum dolorem, quam cum est intellectum nil profici et frustra esse susceptum? si igitur deponi potest, etiam non suscipi potest;

28. cui non R G K J. cum non V. || curae & aegritudinis M I D C. curae aegritudinis R I 6 7 17 V P I-4 G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 2-4 6 W I 2 M 2 Π J O I-3 7 8. curae et om. L 5. 29. uolneribus R V G B K. uolneribus E I. mulieribus S marg. uolneribus. || GN R P K G. GN V G ex C mut. al. atr. ut uid. Gn. B 3 W I O 3. CN. M I 2 O I. C. N. B 2 E. cñ S at fort. mut. est. G. H. W 2. gneū E 2. Gneium O 7. 30. acerbissimo miserrimoque R V G B K. 32. aliud tum R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2 W I M I 2 C II O 2 3 8. tum aliud R 6 W 2 J O I. aliud cum O 7. aliud tamen D. 33. adflicti R V G K E. afflictari B S. 34. ab his R V P G B I 3 K I E I 2 W I 2 M I J O 17. ab iis M 2 O 3. ab iis S at ras. ante i. ab hiis D C II O 8. 35. ac sapientia uera R V P G S E L 2-5 J alii. et sapientia uera L 6. ab sapienti uiro corr. Bentleyus.

XXVIII. 2. nil profici R V P G B I 3 E I W 2 M 2 J O 3 7 8. nihil K I W I M I O I 2. nihil S litt. ante h eras. nichil B 2 D C II. nich' E 2.

word, while Bai. suspects aegritudinis as a gloss. But the redundancy is natural in Cicero and et (ε) would easily fall out, ae preceding and following.

constabat: imperf. because at the time when Pompey died this was in the mouth of the people. (F.A.W.) [Plutarch, Pomp. 80 says οἱ δ' ἀπὸ τῶν νεῶν ὡς ἐθέασαντο τὸν φόνον, οἰμωγῆν ἐξάκουστον ἄχρι γῆς ἐκχέαντες ἔφυγον ἀράμενοι τὰς ἀγκύρας κατὰ τάχος].

acerbissimo: i 39, 93 n. on 'acerbius.'

adipiscerentur: with conative force, cf. iv 6, 12.

Tyrum: other accounts make those with Pompey flee to Cyprus: thus Livy, Epit. cxii 'Cornelia uxor et Sex. Pompeius filius Cypron refugerunt'; Lucan, Phars. ix 117 'prima ratem Cypros spumantibus accipit undis.' Hence Wesseling, Var. Obs. I 13, p. 44, proposed Cyprum, an emendation which he afterwards withdrew in his notes on Herodotus, p. 724. And the text is supported by Dio Cassius xlii 49 τὰ τε ἀναθήματα τοῦ ἐν τῇ Τύρῳ Ἡρακλέους πάντα ἀνείλετο διὰ τὴν τε γυναικα καὶ τὸν παῖδα τοῦ Πομπηίου ὑπεδέξαντο δὲ ἔφυγον.

timor igitur potuit...non poterit: the form is more commonly ergo timor...: cf. i 14, 31 n. on 'ergo arbores seret...rem publicam non seret.'

ab sapienti uiro: ac sapientia uera of the MSS is retained by Mo. and Küh. Orelli proposed to cut these words out. Almost all other recent editors adopt Bentley's conj. ab sapienti uiro. Sapientia uera is an odd expression and with that reading we should have ab his (or something awkwardly supplied from ab his) carried on to the second clause, whereas ab sapienti uiro gives a natural antithesis to ab his. An emendation in the margin of the edition of Lambinus and Gothofredus, ratio uera ac sapientia, may be noticed.

XXVIII. nil profici... i.e. eo nil proficere et frustra eum esse susceptum. The discovery would indicate that earlier they had thought that something would be gained, and therefore that their grief was voluntary.

si igitur...: if it can be laid aside by an act of will it can be avoided by an act of will.

nonsuscipi = uitari. F.A.W. notes that non belongs to suscipi and that ne suscipi quidem could not be used here.

uoluntate igitur et iudicio suscipi aegritudinem confitendum est.
 5 67. idque indicatur eorum patientia qui, cum multa sint saepe perpassi, facilius ferunt quicquid accidit, obduruissetque iam sese contra fortunam arbitrantur, ut ille apud Euripidem:

Si míhi nunc tristis príum inluxissét dies,
 Nec tam aérumnoso náuigauissém salo,
 10 Essét dolendi caúsa, ut iniecto éculei Frenó repente táctu exagitantúr nouo; Sed iám subactus míseriis obtórpuí.

defetigatio igitur miseriarum aegritudines cum faciat leniores, intellegi necesse est non rem ipsam causam atque fontem esse idq; itaq; K I eod. atr. 6. ferunt R 6. ferant L 4. ferant R I 7 17

 V P I-4 G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 2 3 5 6 W I 2 M I 2 D C P J
 O I-3 7 8 ed. H. || obduruisset quam R I P I 4 G B K. obduruisset q̄ B 2. obduruisset q̄, iā B I at inter q et ā fuerat u ut uid. obduruisset q̄ E I al. atr. superscr. obduruisset q̄ S marg. q̄ 3 A. obduruisset q̄ L 5 W 2 J. obduruisset q̄ q; R 17 L 4. obduruisset q̄ q; O 2. obduruisset que R 6 V e post qu in ras. obduruisset q; P 2 3 B 3. obduruisset q̄ K 2 E 3 D C O 3. obduruisset quoniam O I. obduruisset quidem O 7. || sese R I 6 7 17 P I-4 G
 B I-3 K I 2 E 2 3 L 2-4 6 W I M I 2 I J O I 3 7 8 ed. H. sese V. se D C O 2. obduruissetque iam corr. Tregder. 7. euripidem R P G B I-3 K M I 2 D O 2 3 7. euripidē E I W I 2. euripidem V. euripidem S.
 8. inluxisset R V G K E. illuxisset S. 9. nauigassem R V G B I-3 K
 L 2-6 W I 2 M I 2 D O 2 8. nauigasse O 3. legauisset O 7.
 10. eculei R V G B I 2 K I E I O 7. equulei W 2. equulo E 2. equis B 3. 12. subactus M I D C ed. H. subactus V B I. subactus
 G S E. subjectus R I 6 7 17 P B 3 K I 2 E 2 L 2-6 W I 2 M 2 I I
 O I-3 7 8. subactis B 2. || optorpui G B I. optorpui R p in b mut.
 13. defetigatio R marg. defetigatio. defetigatio V G B I 2 K I W 2 J. defetigatio E I. defatigatio P S W I M I. 14. intellegi R V G B K. intelligi S E. || ipsam causam atque fontem R 6. ipsam atque causam fontem
 Π al. atr. corr. et superscr. ipsam atque causam fontem R I 7 17 V (at fon in ras.)
 P I-4 G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 3-6 W 2 M I 2 D C J O I 3. ipsam fontem atque causam W I. ipsam atque cam forte O 7. ipsam neque cam fontē O 8. ipsam neque causam fontem L 2. ipsam neque cam frontem O 2.

§ 67. apud Euripidem: the original lines are preserved in Galen, de plac. Hipp. et Plat. iv p. 394 M., where they immediately follow upon the lines ἐγὼ δὲ τοῦτο... of Euripides' Theseus translated in iii 14, 29. Their source is indicated by a fragment of Tzetzes, quoted by Dindorf, Poet. Scen. Graec., Eurip. Frag. 818, from an article by Keil in Rh.

Mus. vi p. 616, to have been Euripides' Phrixus. The Greek lines are εἰ μὲν τὸδ' ἡμᾶρ πρῶτον ἦν κακουμένῳ | καὶ μὴ μακρὰν δὴ διὰ πόνων ἐναυστόλουν | εἰκὸς σφαδάζειν ἦν ἂν ὡς νεόφυγα | πῶλον χαλιῶν ἀρτίως δεδεγμένον· | νῦν δ' ἀμβλύς εἰμι καὶ καταηρηκώς κακῶν.

defetigatio miseriarum: subjective gen. 'the weariness which miseries bring.'

15 maeroris. 68. philosophi summi nequedum tamen sapientiam consecuti nonne intellegunt in summo se malo esse? sunt enim insipientes, neque insipientia ullum maius malum est; neque tamen lugent. quid ita? quia huic generi malorum non adfingitur illa opinio, rectum esse et aequum et ad officium pertinere 20 aegre ferre quod sapiens non sis, quod idem adfingimus huic aegritudini in qua luctus inest, quae omnium maxima est. 69. itaque Aristoteles ueteres philosophos accusans, qui existi-

§ 68, 15. neque dum P 2. neq; η̄νδum V P. neque nondum R I (sic).
nec dū II at ras. inter c et d. nec dum P3 B3 L6 W1. necdum R6 M2. neque nondum R 17 P4 G B I K I S L3 D J O I 3. neq; n̄dū E I linea eod. atr. duct. neque n̄ dū C. neque nō̄ nō B 2. neque n̄̄̄̄ K 2. neque nūdū E 2 ūdū in ras. et al. atr. ut uid. neque nundum O 2.
neque mūdū L 2. n̄dū W 2 at duar. litt. spat. cum rasura praecedente.
atque nōdū O 7 ed. H. nec tñ M 1. 16. intellegunt R V P G B.

intelligunt K. intelligunt S E. 18. non adfingitur G K E. <sup>na</sup> nodfingitur R eod. atr. n̄ af f̄ngitur V at n̄ extra lineam al. atr. et af multa in rasura.
non affingitur B S. 20. adfingimus R V G K E. affingimus B. aff̄ngimus S.
21. maxuma R V G B K. maxima S E J.

§ 69, 22. existumauissent R V G B K.

§ 68. philosophi summi nequedum tamen sapientiam consecuti: a rendering of the Gk οἱ προκόπτοντες, cf. Galen l.c. iv p. 370 M. ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ τοὺς προκόπτοντας μεγάλας βλάβας ὑπὸ τῆς κακίας ὑπολαμβάνοντας παρεῖναι ἔδει καὶ ὑποφέρεσθαι φόβους καὶ λύπαις περιπίπτειν μὴ μετρίαις, ὅπερ οὐδὲ αὐτὸ συμβαίνει; ibid. p. 392 M. ἀναμνήσκων τῶν τε σοφῶν καὶ τῶν προκοπτόντων...οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἐν μεγίστοις ἀγαθοῖς, οἱ δὲ ἐν μεγίστοις κακοῖς ἑαυτοὺς ὑπολαμβάνοντες εἶναι ὁμῶς οὐ γίνονται διὰ τοῦτο ἐν πάθει. The reference is therefore only to Stoic philosophers and, as the wise man was with the Stoics an ideal person never found on earth, their highest philosophers, Zeno, Cleanthes, Chrysippus, were only in a state of progress (προκοπή) towards wisdom. Cf. Zeller, Stoics, etc. xi p. 276. 'Dogma Stoicorum est eos, qui natura doctrinaque longe ad uirtutem processissent, nisi eam plene consecuti essent, summe esse miseros, neque inter eorum uitam et improbissimorum quicquam omnino interesse.' Be- roaldus. For a somewhat similar line of thought cf. ii 12, 28 'quis igitur Epicurum sequitur dolor...?'

quia huic generi: it is indicated in Galen l.c. iv p. 371 M. that Chrysippus said that the σοφοί were free from emotions because they did not suffer from ἀσθένεια τῆς ψυχῆς, where Posidonius in quoting Chrysippus' view for refutation has used σοφοί loosely so as to include the προκόπ-τοντες. Pohlenz l.c. p. 334 shows that the ἀσθένεια τῆς ψυχῆς referred to is the result of liability to the opinion that it is a duty to give way to grief or other emotion. Posidonius himself gives a different reason in Galen v p. 454 M. καὶ μὴν οἱ προκόπτοντες μεγάλα κακὰ δοκοῦντες ἑαυτοῖς παρεῖναι ἢ ἐπιφέρεσθαι οὐ λυποῦνται; φέρονται γὰρ οὐ κατὰ τὸ ἄλογον τῆς ψυχῆς οὕτως, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸ λογικόν.

adfingitur: cf. 33, 80 'qui nihil opini- one adfingat.'

huic aegritudini in qua luctus inest: cf. 26, 62.

quae omnium maxima est: cf. Plut. Cons. ad Apollon. 102 c πολλῶν γὰρ ὄντων ψυχικῶν παθῶν ἢ λύπη τὸ χυλεπώτατον πέφυκεν εἰναι πάντων. Cicero, in his present mood, regards mourning for the dead as the severest form of aegritudo. It was grief for his daughter that specially impelled him to write. Introd. to vol. I p. xv.

§ 69. itaque Aristoteles: Posidonius, who made the emotions movements of the irrational parts of the soul, criticises Chrysippus, who made them judgments or opinions of the rational soul (ἡγεμονικόν), asserting (in Galen, quoted above on § 68) that if it were true that the greatness of an evil or good produced an opinion that one ought to be excited by annoyance or joy, we should expect to see the wise rejoicing with special vehemence because they possess wisdom, a priceless treasure, and the προκόπτοντες grieving stultissimos aut gloriosissimos fuisse; sed se uidere, quod paucis 25 annis magna accessio facta esset, breui tempore philosophiam plane absolutam fore. Theophrastus autem moriens accusasse naturam dicitur, quod ceruis et cornicibus uitam diuturnam, quorum id nihil interesset, hominibus, quorum maxime interfuisset, tam exiguam uitam dedisset; quorum si aetas potuisset 30 esse longinquior, futurum fuisse ut omnibus perfectis artibus omni doctrina hominum uita erudiretur. querebatur igitur se tum, cum illa uidere coepisset, exstingui. quid? ex ceteris philo-sophis nonne optimus et grauissimus quisque confitetur multa

24. stultissimos aut gloriosissimos R V G B K.	26. Theophrastus V S.
Theophrastus E.	28. maxime R V G B. maxime K. querebat <sup>r</sup> B I W I.	31. querebatur M I.
querebat K.	32. extingui R V G B K S E.
33. optimus et grauissimus R V G B.	optimus et grauissimus E. optimus et grauissimus K. optimus et grauissimus S.

most deeply because they lack it. And Hirzel, Untersuchungen, III p. 437, is undoubtedly right in thinking that, in defending the Stoic view, Cicero is answering, not Posidonius, but early opponents of the Stoics, and that the mention of Aristotle and Theophrastus and the polemic directed against the Peripatetics in § 71 indicate that these early opponents were Peripatetics. We may go further. As we see from § 76, 'Chrysippus...debito,' that the refutation 'quid ita? quia huic generi ...' was introduced by Chrysippus, we may infer that the Peripatetic criticism, which Posidonius reproduced, was developed in the time of Zeno or Cleanthes.

We may perhaps suppose that these Peripatetic critics, in stating the Stoic view that lack of perfect wisdom is the greatest of evils, brought in a reference to the statements of Aristotle and Theophrastus contained in the text. An extract from the opinion of these critics was probably stated and refuted by Cicero's source (?Chrysippus) and itaque, which yields no satisfactory meaning in the text, would have been natural if Cicero had given the entire passage upon which he is drawing.

Dav. points out that Lactantius, Diu. Inst. iii 28, had our passage in view. But Lactantius places the words ait eos...fuisse before the words qui...perfectam.

[Hartlich in Leipziger Studien xi 2 p. 267 (1889) gives satisfactory reasons for assuming that the quotation from Aristotle comes from his Προτρεπτικός.]

ueteres philosophos: especially Heraclitus and the Eleatics. Hei.

paucis annis: since Socrates began to teach.

Theophrastus: contrast Sall. Jug. i, 1 'falso queritur de natura sua genus hominum, quod inbecilla atque aevi breuis...' [Seneca de breu. uit. i, 2 attributes this saying to Aristotle: 'inde Aristotelis cum rerum natura exigentis minime conueniens sapienti uiro lis: aetatis illam animalibus tantum indulisse ut quina aut dena saecula educeret, homini in tam multa et magna genito tanto citiorem terminum stare'.]

ceruis: Dav. defends this reading against coruis which had hardly any MS support. He cites an old poet in Stob. Serm. x p. 127 εἰ μὲν ζῆς ἐλάφου ταναῶν χρόνον ἢ ἐ κορώνης, | συγγνώμη πλείστον πλοῦτον ἀγειρομένω; Ov. Met. vii 273; Pede Albinouanus, Eleg. ii i 15 [i.e. Eleg. in Maec. i 115 Bähr. PLM. i p. 132]; Auson. Id. xi 12, xviii 3 [i.e. xxvi 2, 14: xxxii 4 ed. Schenkl]. For ceruis, coruis and cornici see Pliny N.H. vii 48, 153 quoted on i 31, 77.

querebatur igitur: Diog. L. v 2, 41 says that he said, when dying at the age of eighty-five, ἡμεῖς γὰρ ὀπὸτ' ἀρχόμεθα ζῆν, τὸτ' ἀποθνήσκομεν. Dav. compares Hieronymus ad Nepotianum 52, 3 'sapiens ille uir Graeciae Theophrastus (MSS Themistocles) cum expletis centum et septem annis se mori cerneret, dixisse fertur se dolere, quod tunc egrederetur e uita, quando sapere coepisset.'

se ignorare, et multa sibi etiam atque etiam esse discenda?

35 70. neque tamen, cum se in media stultitia, qua nihil est peius, haerere intellegant, aegritudine premuntur; nulla enim admiscetur opinio officiosi doloris. quid, qui non putant lugendum uiris? qualis fuit Q. Maximus efferens filium consularem, qualis L. Paulus duobus paucis diebus amissis filiis, qualis M. Cato

34. multa sibi R P 1-4 B 2 3 E 2 W 1 2 D C J O 1 3 7 8. multa sibi V at a ex i mut. multa sibi II at ras. post a. multa sibi E i i in a mut.

multj sibi B I eod. atr. multi sibi G K. || discenda R V P G B 1-3 K S E 1

W 1 2 M 2 D O 1-3 7 8. dicenda J eod. atr. dicenda E 2 M 1 C II.

§ 70, 35. qua nihil R V P G K 1 W 1. qua nil O 7. quia nihil B S.

36. intellegant R V P G B K. intelligant S E. 37. lugendum R 6 7 17 B 3

K 2 E 2 W 1 M 1 2 D II O 1-3 8. lugend' C. lu gendum V litt. eras.

lugendum W 2 at ras. praeced. et fuerat ut uid. iuged'. iungendum S marg.

lugendum iungendum R 1 B 1 K 1 E 1 J. lungendum G. lugentum O 7.

vugeng- B 2. 38. fuit Q maxumus R. fuit Q. maximus W 1 D C O 2 7.

fuit q. maximus II. fuit q. maxumus V. fuit que maxumus E 1 al. atr.

fuitq; maximus K. fuit quae maxumus G. || efferens B 1 K 1 E 2 W 1 M 2.

efferēs B 2 W 2. effe rens R r eras. efferren V f post e fort. mut.

efferrens G. afferens M 1. 39. lucius paulus P 1 4 K 1 S E 1 2 II.

l. paulus W 1 2 D C O 7. L. Paulus J. lucius pau lus V l eras.

lucius Paullus R. lucius paulus G. || amissis B 1 K 1 E 2 M 1 2.

amisis R V G. amisis B 2 E. || marcus cato G E S.

etiam atque etiam: not in the ordinary sense of 'again and again' but = 'ever more and more.' Hei. compares Fam. vi 22, 1 'haec quamquam nihilo meliora sunt, nunc etiam atque etiam multo desperiora tamen inanis esse meas litteras quam nullas malui.' Emendation is therefore uncalled for and in Sff.'s multi...discendum, multi, though supported by MSS, is awkward and unsymmetrical. Sff. compares Solon's γηράσκω δ' αλεῖ πολλά διδασκόμενος.

§ 70. cum, 'although' i 17, 39 n.

intellegant: the subject is the collective 'optimus...quisque' carried on, but it has been separated into its individual components by the intervention of the word se, cf. Fin. ii 1, 1 'cum uterque me intrueretur seseque ad audiendum significarent paratos'; p. Flacco 41, 104 'quotus enim quisque est qui...sequatur? qui...putet, cum illam uiam sibi uideant expeditiorem ad honores et ad omnia quae concupierunt?'

officiosi, 'demanded by duty' cf. § 68 'ad officium pertinere'; p. Mil. 5, 12 'hos officiosos labores.'

Q. Maximus: Q. Fabius Maximus Cunctator, who recovered Tarentum from Hannibal in 209 B.C., bore with great calmness the loss of his son, who had been consul in 213 B.C.

efferens: Maximus himself pronounced in the forum the laudatio funebris upon his son, cf. Plut. Fab. 24 τὸ δ' ἐγκώμιον... αὐτὸς εἶπε καταστὰς ἐν ἀγορᾷ καὶ γράψας τὸν λόγον ἐξέδωκεν. This laudatio was extant in Cicero's time, cf. Cato M. 4, 12 'est in manibus laudatio, quam cum legimus, quem philosophum non contemnimus?'

Cicero, Fam. iv 6, in acknowledging Sulpicius' letter of condolence upon the death of Tullia, cites the instances of Maximus, Paulus, Gallus and Cato, all of which he also used in his Consolatio; see below.

L. Paulus: L. Aemilius Paulus, conqueror of Perseus, had given two of his four sons in adoption and, of the two that remained, lost one five days before his triumph and the other three days after that event, 168 B.C.: Livy xlv 40, 7. Cf. Val. Max. v 10, 2; Vell. Paterc. i 10; Plut. Paulus 35; Senec. Cons. ad Marc. 13.

M. Cato: M. Porcius Cato Censorius lost a son who was already grown-up and distinguished, cf. Lael. 2, 9 'perfecto et spectato uiro'; Cato M. 23, 84 'pro-

40 praetore designato mortuo filio, quales reliqui quos in Consolatione conlegimus. 71. quid hos aliud placavit, nisi quod luctum et maerorem esse non putabant uiri? ergo id quod alii rectum opinantes aegritudini se solent dedere, id hi turpe putantes aegritudinem reppulerunt. ex quo intellegitur non in natura, 45 sed in opinione esse aegritudinem.

XXIX. Contra dicuntur haec: quis tam demens ut sua uoluntate maereat? natura adfert dolorem, cui quidem Crantor, inquit, uester cedendum putat; premit enim atque instat, nec resisti potest. itaque Oileus ille apud Sophoclem, qui Telamonem 5 antea de Aiace morte consolatus esset, is cum audiuisset de suo fractus est. de cuius commutata mente sic dicitur:

41. conlegimus R G B K E. conlegimus V. collegimus S.

§ 71. hos V S. his J. hos E al. atr. || placavit V S. placavit K I cod. atr. W I fort. cod. atr. placuit E J. 42. esse non putabant R I 6 V P G B I-3 K E I 2 M 2 II O 2 3 7 8. non putabant W I 2 J O I. non putabant esse M I D C. 44. reppulerunt R V P G B K E. repulerunt S M I J. || intelligitur R V G B K. intelligitur S E.

XXIX. 2. adfert R V G K E (hoc loco). affert B S. 3. uester R P 2 4 G B 2 K I E W I D O 3. uir R 7 P B I K 2 E 2 W 2 M I II J O 7. uir V B K. noster R 6 P 3 S M 2 O 2. noster B 3 C O I 8 om. R I 7. || premit enim R B K. 4. itaque oileus V spatio relicto. || sophoclem R G B K S. sophocle V. 5. is cum R V P G B 2 3 K I E I 2 W I M I 2 D C II J

O I-3 8. is cum S. his cum O 7. || audiuisset R V G B I-3 S E I 2 M 2 O 7. audiisset K I cod. atr. audiisset O 2. audiisset P W I 2 M I D C J O 3 8. || de suo R V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 II O 2 3 7. de suo filio R 6 M I D C O 8. de filio R 7 B 3 W I 2 M 2 J O I.

ficiscar...ad Catonem meum...cuius a me corpus est crematum...quem ego meum casum fortiter ferre uisus sum, non quo...'

reliqui quos...: Dav. quotes Hieronymus in Epitaph. Nepotiani p. 21 (ad Heliodorum 60, 5). L. Paulus 'septem diebus inter duorum exsequias filiorum triumphans urbem ingressus est. praetermitto Maximos, Catones, Gallos, Pisones, Brutos, Scaeuolas, Metellos, Scauros, Marios, Crassos, Marcellos atque Aufidios quorum non minor in luctu quam in bellis uirtus fuit et quorum orbitates in Consolationis libro Tullius explicauit.'

in Consolatione: i 26, 65 n.

§ 71. id...id: cf. 8, 18 n. on 'ab eo...ab eo.'

XXIX. dicuntur: by the Peripatetics. natura adfert...: cf. Plut. Cons. ad Apollon. c. 3, 102 C τὸ μὲν οὖν ἀλγεῖν καὶ δάκνυσθαι τελευτήσαντος υἱοῦ φυσικὴν ἔχει τὴν ἀρχὴν τῆς λύπης, καὶ οὐχ ἐφ' ἡμῶν. The words οὐ γὰρ ἔγωγε συμφέρομαι... quoted on 6, 12 follow and Buresch notes

l.c. p. 46 'Ciceronis autem proprium uidetur esse auctoris membra passim discere, cum Plutarchus contra continuo ordine solet exscribere.'

Crantor uester, 'of you Academicians.' Bentley rightly rejected noster noting that the Peripatetics here reproach Cicero, who professed to belong to the Academy, with dissenting from the Academician Crantor.

Oileus: father of the Locrian Ajax.

is: the repetition tends to clearness and emphasises the contrast, cf. 8, 18 n. on 'ab eo...ab eo.' Bake unnecessarily conjectured idem.

de suo: sc. Aiace.

Nec uero: the verses are preserved in Stob. Ecl. iv 49, 7 (ed. Hense) where they are referred to Σοφοκλέους Οἰδίποδι. Grotius thought Οἰδίποδι an error for 'Οἰλεῖ. Küh. Hei. T.S. follow Brunck, Frag. Soph. p. 588 (II p. 180 ed. Lond. 1819) in referring the passage to the Atias Δοκρός, but Welcker Gr. Trag. pp. 162

Nec uero tanta praeditus sapientia

Quisquamst, qui aliorum aerumnam dictis adleuans

Non idem, cum fortuna mutata impetum

10 Conuertat, clade subita frangatur sua,

Vt illa ad alios dicta et praecepta excidant.

haec cum disputant, hoc student efficere, naturae obsisti nullo modo posse, et tamen fatentur grauiiores aegritudines suscipi quam natura cogat. quae est igitur amentia? ut nos quoque 15 idem ab illis requiramus. 72. sed plures sunt causae suscipiendi doloris. primum illa opinio mali, quo uiso atque persuaso aegritudo insequitur necessario; deinde etiam gratum mortuis se

8. aerumnam R G. erumnam V. eruna S. eruina E I. || adleuans R V G B K. alleuans S E. 9. impetum R V G B K S E. 10. conuertat R V P G B K S E W 2 D O 3 8. conuertat & W 1. || clade subita E I. clade subita ut R 6. clade ut subita R 1 7 17 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 7 8. 13. hi tamen R V P 2 G B 1 3 K 1

E 2 3 L 4 W 1 2 J O 1-3 7 ed. H. i tamen P al. atr. superscr. ii tamen R 6 P 3 L 3 6 M 2. ii tamen S at ras. ante prius i. hii tamen R 7 10 16 P 4 K 2 L 2 5 D C H O 8. intamen E I. tñ hii B 2. et tamen corr. Seyffertius. 15. ab aliis R 1 6 7 10 16 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 8 ed. H. om. O 7. ab illis corr. Vrsinus.

and 193 gives the lines to Teucer, 'probabiliter' as Dindorf says. The Greek is τοὺς δ' αὖ μέγιστους καὶ σοφωτάτους φρενὶ | τοιοῦσδ' ἴδοις ἂν οὐδὲς ἐστὶ νῦν ὄδε | καλῶς κακῶς πράσσοντι συμπεραυνέσαι | ὅταν δὲ δαίμων ἀνδρὸς εὐτυχοῦς τὸ πρὶν | πλάστιγγ' ἐρέσῃ τοῦ βλοῦ παλιντροπον | τὰ πολλὰ φροῦδα καὶ καλῶς εἰρημένα.

conuertat: Sff. against the MSS altered to conuertit but the subjunctive is due to an attraction, quite common in similar relative clauses, exercised by the subj. 'frangatur' of the main clause, cf. v 37, 108 'ut, quocumque haec loco suppediteur, ibi beate queant uiuere'; i 5, 9 n. on 'moriendum esset...uiuerent.'

clade subita: ut before subita in the MSS must have arisen, as Küh. suggests, through the eye of a copyist wandering to the following ut.

excidant: sc. de memoria.

efficere: i 8, 16 n. on 'efficies ut.'

et tamen: Seyffert's convincing emendation implies the corruption of et into ei and thence into ii and hi. This lends support to the spelling eīhi. For et tamen and ac tamen joining on something opposed to what preceded Sff. compares Madv. on Fin. ii 27, 85.

idem: since they were represented above as asking quis tam demens...

§ 72. sed plures...: Cicero continues the argument against the Peripatetic view that grief was due to nature by stating three forms of wrong opinion which lead people to grieve.

quo uiso atque persuaso, 'upon the sight of which and conviction with regard to which annoyance necessarily follows.' From a desire for a concise and symmetrical expression persuaso has been attracted to the preceding uiso; strictly Cic. should have written quod cum uisum est (passive), cumque de eo persuasum est (impersonal).

Pohlenz l.c. pp. 332-3 throws light on this passage by showing that Chrysippus made the idea of the magnitude of the evil a necessary element in inducing the insipientes to think that it was a duty to grieve. He quotes Galen, de plac. Hipp. et Plat. p. 370 M. ei γὰρ τὸ μέγεθος τῶν φαινομένων ἀγαθῶν ἢ κακῶν κινεῖ τὸ νομίζειν καθήκον καὶ κατὰ ἀξίαν εἶναι παρόντων αὐτῶν ἢ παραγομένων μηδένα λόγον προσεσθαι, and ibid. p. 392 M. κατὰ γὰρ τὴν γνώμην αὐτοῦ (sc. Χρυσίππου) μᾶλλον μεγάλου κακοῦ...τὴν λύπην εἰρήσθαι ἐδει δόξαν.

gratum mortuis se facere: Beroaldus quotes Seneca [Consol. ad Polyb. 9, 3] 'aut beatus aut nullus est (sc. mortuus); beatum deflere inuidia est; nullum dementia.'

facere, si grauter eos lugeant, arbitrantur. accedit superstitio muliebris quaedam; existumant enim dis immortalibus se facilius 20 satis facturos, si eorum plaga percussi adflictos se et stratos esse fateantur. sed haec inter se quam repugnent plerique non uident. laudant enim eos qui aequo animo moriantur; qui alterius mortem aequo animo ferant eos putant uituperandos. quasi fieri ullo modo possit, quod in amatorio sermone dici solet, 25 ut quisquam plus alterum diligit quam se. 73. praeclarum illud est et, si quaeris, rectum quoque et uerum, ut eos qui nobis carissimi esse debeant aequae ac nosmet ipsos amemus; ut uero plus, fieri nullo pacto potest. ne optandum quidem est in amicitia, ut me ille plus quam se, ego illum plus quam me; perturbatio 30 uitae, si ita sit, atque officiorum omnium consequatur.

§ 72, 19. existumant R V G B K E. existimant P S. || diis R V P G B K E
 W I J O 7. di s S spatio relicto. || immortalibus R V P G K. immortalibus B S. 20. percussi R I 6 V P G E I-3 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 II O 2 3 7. percussi R 7 K 2 D C J. <sup>pculsi</sup>pcussi O 8 al. atr. superscr.
 pertusi O I. || adflictos R V P G K. afflictos S E. || stratos R I IO
 V P G E I 2.

§ 73, 26. carissimi R V G B K. 27. at uero plus R I 6 7 IO 16 17 V P I-4 G B I-3 S E I-3 L 2-6 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O I-3 7 8 ed. H. ad uero plus K I. at uero fī plus K 2. ut uero plus corr. ed. Iuntina. 29. plus quam se ego R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2 L 2 3 4 6 W 2 M 2 D C J O I-3 7 8.

plus quam se <sup>amet</sup>amet ego R 6 W I M I. plus quam se <sup>ago</sup>ago II al. atr. superscr. ||
 illum R G B K M I 2. ullum V. 30. consequatur R V P G B I-3 K S

E 2 W 2 M 2 II O 2 3 7 8. <sup>ar</sup>conseqt E I fort. eod. atr. consequetur W I M I D C J. consequitur O I.

muliebris: cf. N. D. ii 28, 70 'superstitiones paene aniles.'

percussi: besides being the reading of the best MSS this, and not percussi, is in harmony with adflictos and stratos, as Nissen notes.

stratos: Hei. thinks the idea is of persons ad pedes strati 'humbled,' 'self-abased.' The word does not seem to be used metaphorically elsewhere in Cicero and very possibly prostratos of Tischer may be right, the abbreviated suffix being lost, or fractos of Sff., the error being due to confusion of f with s. Ti. compares Or. ii 52, 211 'adflicta et prostrata uirtus maxime luctuosa est'; and Sff. Att. xii 21 extr. 'adflicti et fracti animi'; p. domo 36, 97 'animo nimis fracto esse atque adflicto.'

moriantur...ferant: reported speech or thought.

quasi...solet: 'as if that assertion, so usual in the conversation of lovers, could possibly be true,' cf. Hor. Odes iii 9, 12 and 15.

plus: both plus diligere and magis diligere can be said. The former denotes measure, corresponding to the positive multum; the latter degree, corresponding to the positive ualde. Cf. Madv. on Fin. i 2, 5 n. on 'a quibus tantum.'

§ 73. uerum = iustum: 27, 64 n. on 'uera.' For the constr. uerum est, ut in the sense of fieri debet, ut cf. i 19, 43 n. on 'accedit ut...eueadat' and Küh. on v 21, 62 'ei ne integrum quidem erat, ut.'

[ut uero plus: this correction of the MSS at uero plus is now accepted by all edd. Kl. (as Küh. notes), reading at, printed the sentence as an interrogative.]

plus quam se: sc. amet, from preceding amemus. The insertion of amet by some early editors has little MS authority to support it.

consequatur: i 16, 36 n. on 'consecuti sunt.'

XXX. Sed de hoc alias; nunc illud satis est, non attribuere ad amissionem amicorum miseriam nostram, ne illos plus quam ipsi uelint, si sentiant, plus certe quam nosmet ipsos diligamus. nam quod aiunt plerosque consolationibus nihil leuari adiunguntque consolatores ipsos confiteri se miseros, cum ad eos impetum suum fortuna conuerterit, utrumque dissoluitur. sunt enim ista non naturae uitia, sed culpa. stultitiam autem accusare quamuis copiose licet. nam et qui non leuantur, ipsi ad se miseriam inuitant, et qui suos casus aliter ferunt atque ut auctores aliis ipsi fuerunt, non sunt uitiosiores

XXX. I. attribuere S J. attribueret R cod. atr. V al. atr. G alt. man.
 attribuere B E. adtribuere P K. 3. ipsi uelint R V G. ipsi uelint P e in i mut. ipse uelint K. || plus certequam V spat. et ras. 6. impetum
 R V P G B K. || suum om. D C. || fortuna E<sub>3</sub> L<sub>24</sub> W<sub>1</sub> D C O<sub>78</sub>
 V ant. man. superscr. S marg. ant. man. script. II al. atr. superscr. E<sub>2</sub> al. atr. superscr. om. R P<sub>1-4</sub> G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>12</sub> E L<sub>356</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>12</sub> J O<sub>1-3</sub> ed. H.
pro fortuna habet casus R<sub>7</sub>. || conuerterit R<sub>7</sub> G K E<sub>2</sub> L<sub>2-4</sub> W<sub>1</sub> D O<sub>38</sub>. conuerterit B<sub>3</sub> K<sub>2</sub> L<sub>6</sub> O<sub>12</sub>. 9. ut ut W<sub>2</sub> marg. conuerterit. conuertit O<sub>7</sub>.
 9. ad se miseriam inuitant M<sub>1</sub>. ad miseriam inuitant O<sub>2</sub>. ad miseriam inuitant R<sub>17</sub> V<sub>17</sub> P<sub>124</sub> G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>1-3</sub> L<sub>2-6</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub>
 D C II J O<sub>1378</sub>. alios ad miseriam inuitant R<sub>6</sub> W<sub>1</sub>. 10. ut auctores aliis R V P<sub>1-4</sub> B<sub>13</sub> K<sub>12</sub> E<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> O<sub>1-38</sub>. ut auctores alii II al. atr.
 ut auctores alii W<sub>2</sub>. ut auctores alii B<sub>2</sub> W<sub>1</sub>. ad auctores alii G ad expunx. et ut superscr. alt. man. ut auctores alii J. ut auctores alii S. ut auctores ipsi fere non sunt uitiosiores D C. ut auctore ipsi ferant O<sub>7</sub>.

XXX. non attribuere = non addere.
 nam quod aiunt: for nam in refutation cf. 16, 35 n. The constr. is (id) quod aiunt... (id)que quod adiungunt... for which adiunguntque (hoc) is substituted on the principle stated in ii 25, 61 n. on 'quem...uidi et id dicam.' These antecedents id...id are accusatives of respect and are taken up in utrumque.

Cic. here replies to the Peripatetic objections of § 71.

cum...conuerterit: the case of Oileus is referred to, cf. § 71 'cum fortuna mutata impetum conuertat.'

fortuna: absent from the best MSS (except V<sup>2</sup>) but cannot be omitted though Dav. supposed that miseria could be carried on 'ἀπό κοινού.' Or. suggests that it was omitted by an early Christian copyist who was unwilling to give fortuna the rank of a goddess.

dissoluitur: for dissoluere = refutare or rather argumenti uim infirmare atque infringere = διαλύειν cf. Diu. ii 4, 11; Or. ii 38, 159 Mo.

non naturae uitia, sed culpa: cf. iv 37, 81 'qui autem non natura, sed culpa uitiosi esse dicuntur.' Trans. 'for the fault of the individual, not the nature of the case, is to blame for these results.' The following word stultitiam shows in what culpa, in this case, consists. See 16, 34 n. on 'nisi culpam.' quamuis copiose = tam copiose, quam uis, cf. i 21, 47 n.

ipsi ad se miseriam inuitant: se is inserted after ipsi by the most recent editors, who quote in support of the constr. 34, 82 'quod non natura exoriatur, sed iudicio, sed opinione, sed quadam inuitatione (sc. sua) ad dolendum.' Küh. following Dav. (sed 2) reads as in the text.

aliter...atque ut: 'otherwise than as they had themselves advised others' = alio modo, atque eo modo, quo... Nissen compares Verr. i 46, 119 'quod iste aliter, atque ut edixerat, decreuisset.' Wopkens, Lectt. Tull. p. 118, notes that ut is usually omitted in this expression but that it can be inserted where it does not interfere with clearness of construction. Hand in a note there compares Att. xvi 13 c 'de Antonii itineribus nescio quid aliter audio atque ut ad te scribebam.'

non sunt...plerique, 'only display quam fere plerique qui auari auaros, gloriae cupidos gloriosi reprehendunt. est enim proprium stultitiae aliorum uitia cernere, obliuisci suorum. 74. sed nimirum hoc maximum est experimentum, cum constet aegritudinem uetustate tolli, hanc uim non esse in die positam, sed in cogitatione diuturna. nam si et eadem res est et idem est homo, qui potest quicquam de dolore mutari, si neque de eo propter quod dolet quicquam est mutatum neque de eo qui dolet? cogitatio igitur diuturna nihil esse in re mali dolori medetur, non ipsa diurnitas.

XXXI. Hic mihi adferunt mediocritates. quae si naturales

12. reprehendunt G K.

§ 74, 13. maximum R V G. <sup>† me</sup> maxumū B cod. ut uid. atr. maximum K E. || experimentum R 6 7 17 W I M I O 8. <sup>i</sup> expmendum R V G B<sub>1-3</sub> K I

E 2 3 W 2 M 2 C II O I-3 7. expmēdū E I. expmēdum K 2. expri mendū D ras. interueniente. experimentum ed. H. 14. aegritudinem V. aegritudinem M I. aegritudinē P W I. aegritudinē M 2. aegritudine R G K. aegritudine B 2 E. || tolli R 6 S W I M I DC O I 3 7 8 V at litt. post i eras. tolli et M 2 J. tollit R G B 2 K I 2 E I W 2. 15. diuturna R 6 P 2 3

B I-3 E 2 W I M I 2 C II O I-3. diutna S D. diurna R I 7 17 V P 4 G K I 2 E I W 2 J O 7 8. diurna P marg. diut'na al. atr. || si et eadem R V P I-3 G B I-3 K I S E I W I M 2 DC O 7. et si eadem P 4 K 2 W 2 J O 3 ed. H. et om. E 2 M I II. 18. diuturna weakness similar to that commonly displayed by so many....' The implication is that as misers and men of ambition, who can rebuke avarice and ambition in others, are not miserly or ambitious by natural necessity but by their own choice, so those who give way to grief, though able to console others in grief, grieve not natura sed iudicio.

R 6 7 P 2 B 3 S E I 2 W I M I DC II O I-3 7. diurna B I P al. atr. diutina P 3. diurina M 2. diurna R I 17 V P 4 G K I 2 W 2 J O 8.

XXXI. 1. adferunt R V G K. <sup>† tes</sup> afferunt B S E. || mediocritates V W I. mediocritas P. mediocritas R G K.

§ 74. hoc: defined by cum constet aeg. uet. tolli.

experimentum: though this word, in the sense of documentum, 'proof,' is chiefly post-Augustan, it seems the only possible reading here. expmendum, of most MSS, would seem to involve, as Or. says, the reading maxime, and the meaning hoc maxime cogendi sunt, ut fateantur would not be naturally expressed. Mo. thinks that maximum is not impossible in the sense of hoc quod maximum est with expmendum explained as above.

hanc uim, 'this effect,' the power of making people forget.

in die: i.e. in longa die, in longin- quitate temporis as Bent. notes. Cf. 16, 35 'longinquitas et dies'; 22, 53 'dies declarat, quae procedens ita mitigat...'; 24, 58; iv 17, 39. Hence diuturna, not diurna is the only possible reading; cf. diurnitas below.

si et...et...: expanded below in si neque de eo, propter quod dolet, quicquam est mutatum, neque de eo, qui dolet. Cf. 17, 37 n. on 'et oriatur.'

in re: instead of being opinionis. See 15, 31 n. 'iudico malum illud opinionis esse, non naturae; si enim in re esset, cur...?'

XXXI. adferunt: sc. Peripatetici, cf. 10, 22 n. on 'mediocritates.' Nonius p. 29 quotes this passage inaccurately thus ad haec mihi adferentur mediocritates, quae si...consolatione. With the Peripatetics the proper degree of grief would mark an intermediate state between excessive emotion on the one hand and apathy on the other.

quae si naturales...: Hei. notes that Cicero's criticism is unsatisfactory for it is by their consolation that they seek to sunt, quid opus est consolatione? natura enim ipsa terminabit modum; sin opinabiles, opinio tota tollatur. satis dictum esse arbitror aegritudinem esse opinionem mali praesentis, in qua opinione illud insit ut aegritudinem suscipere oporteat. 75. additur ad hanc definitionem a Zenone recte ut illa opinio praesentis mali sit recens. hoc autem uerbum sic interpretantur ut non tantum illud recens esse uelint quod paulo ante acciderit, sed quam diu in illo opinato malo uis quaedam insit, ut uigeat et habeat quandam uiriditatem, tam diu appellatur recens. ut Artemisia illa, Mausoli, Cariae regis, uxor, quae nobile illud

3. sin opinabiles R G K O 7. sinopinabiles V ras. inter i et n. sim opinabiles E 1.

§ 75, 7. interpretantur R V P G B 1 2 S E M 1 2 D C J O 1 3. interpretantur K 1. interpra<sup>r</sup>nt W 2. interpretatur O 8. interpretatur E 2

W 1 II O 2. int<sup>r</sup>petrat O 7. int<sup>r</sup>plant<sup>r</sup> J. om. B 3. 8. uelint R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S M 2 J O 1-3 8. uelit W 2 O 7. uelit E 2 W 1 M 1 D C II. || paulo R V G. 9. insit ut uigeat R 10 16. insit & uigeat R 1 6 7 17 V P 1-4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 1 2 L 2-5 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 8. insistat uigeat O 7. 10. appellatur R V G B 2 O 1. appellatur K 1

E 1 W 1 D. appellat S at a post l mut. ut uid. || ut artemisia G. ut art<sup>e</sup>misia V i in e mut. ut ar<sup>misia</sup>te misia R. ut ar<sup>misia</sup>te isa<sup>i</sup> E 1 al. atr.

ut artemisia S. 11. mausoli G. mat<sup>v</sup>isoli E 1.

bring people back from the extreme to the proper mean.

terminabit modum = ponet modum. The tendency to combine a verb with an object cognate in meaning is illustrated by Naegelsbach, Stil. § 105, 2, from iv 10, 23 'morbis corporum comparatur (instead of adcommodatur) morborum animi similitudo'; Or. 35, 122 'perorationem concludere' (= facere); d. Part. Orat. 32, 110, 'partitio...distributa est' (= facta est).

aegritudinem esse opinionem...: cf. II, 25.

§ 75. additur...ut: in a few instances, where a condition, proviso or command, and not a mere statement of fact is appended, addo is followed by ut and the subj., not by the acc. and inf., cf. Laelius 18, 65 'addendum eodem est, ut ne criminibus aut inferendis delectetur aut credat oblati'; Livy xxvi 24, 9 'additumque ut...eodem iure amicitiae Elei...essent'; Caes. Bell. Ciu. i 87, 1 'addit ut...restituatur.'

a Zenone: Cf. Galen, de plac. Hipp. et Plat. p. 391 M. ὁ γοῦν ὄρος οὐτὸς φησι [sc. ὁ Ποσειδώνιος], ὁ τῆς λύπης, ὡς περὶ οὐν καὶ ἄλλοι πολλοὶ τῶν παθῶν ὑπὸ τε Ζήνωνος εἰρημένοι καὶ πρὸς τοῦ Χρυσίππου γεγραμμένοι, σαφῶς ἐξελέγχουσι τὴν γνώμην αὐτοῦ. δόξαν γὰρ εἶναι πρόσφατον τοῦ κακὸν αὐτῷ παρεῖναι φησι τὴν λύπην.

recens = πρόσφατος, cf. Galen L. c., where it is stated that Chrysippus defined τὸ πρόσφατον as τὸ ὑπόγυον κατὰ τὸν χρόνον.

hoc autem uerbum sic interpretantur: Galen L. c. gives Posidonius' criticism of Zeno's use of the word πρόσφατος (recens) in this special sense, saying that Chrysippus, on his own view, ought to have defined λύπη as an idea of a great or unbearable evil, not an idea of a recent one. Cf. Stob. Ecl. ii 7, 10 (ed. Wachs.) τὸ δὲ πρόσφατον ἀντὶ τοῦ κινητικοῦ συστολῆς ἀλόγον ἢ ἐπάρσεως.

interpretantur: sc. Zeno et Chrysippus, or Stoicī.

opinato: II, 24 n. on 'opinati.'

quandam uiriditatem: for quidam with metaphors cf. i 12, 27 n. For the metaphor here Lael. 3, 11 'senectus...aufert eam uiriditatem in qua etiam nunc erat Scipio'; Hor. Epod. 13, 4 'dumque uirent genua.'

[Mausoli, Cariae regis: though Strabo xiv p. 656 agrees with Cicero here in calling him king, inscriptions prove that not even during his rebellion against the king of Persia did he bear this title, cf.

Halicarnasi fecit sepulcrum, quam diu uixit, uixit in luctu eodemque etiam confecta contabuit. huic erat illa opinio cotidie recens; quae tum denique non appellatur recens cum uetustate 15 exaruit.

Haec igitur officia sunt consolantium, tollere aegritudinem funditus aut sedare aut detrahere quam plurimum aut suppressere nec pati manare longius aut ad alia traducere. 76. sunt qui unum officium consolantis putent <docere> malum illud

12. alicarnasi R V P G B K S E W D. || sepulcrum G E I. <sup>h</sup> sepulcrum P. sepultūrum R I in c mut. et linea ducta eod. ut uid. atr. sepulchrum V K.

13. cotidie R V P G K E. <sup>o</sup> q̄tidie S. quottidie J. 14. appellatur B 2 L 2 3 5 J. appellabatur R I 6 7 17 V P I-4 G B I 3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 4 6 M 2 D C II marg. e cont. om. O 2 3 7 8. appellaretur O I. appll'at' <sup>ex</sup>

W 2. appellabant M I. reputatur W I. 17. autdetrahere V (sic). || plurimum R V G. plurimum P K E. 18. manare V G S. manere E. || ad alia R V P G E J Gr.

§ 76. 19. consolantis B I W I 2 D II O 3 7. consolantis V at o post s mut.

<sup>v</sup> consolantis R eod. atr. consūlantis K I u in o mut. consulantis G B 2. consula<sup>v</sup>if E I i.e. t in nt mut. et is add. consolationis O I 2. || putent malum R I 7 V P I-3 G B 2 3 K I 2 E 2 3 L 3-6 W 2 M 2 D C II J O I 3 8.

putant malum P 4 S L 2 W I M 2 O 7. <sup>tē</sup> putent malum B I. putāt consolantis malum M I. putent docere malum corr. Lambinus.

Dittenberger, Sylloge Inscr. Graec. 1<sup>3</sup> pp. 226 ff. The testimony of the inscr. is borne out by Aul. Gell. x 18, 2 'Mausolus autem fuit, ut M. Tullius ait, rex terrae Cariae, ut quidam Graecarum historiarum scriptores, prouinciae praefectus, σατράπην Graeci uocant.' In inscr. the name is spelled Μαύσσωλλος. For an account of his career see Curtius, Griech. Gesch. III<sup>3</sup> pp. 466 sqq.]

nobile...sepulcrum: the ruins of this famous tomb, erected on a magnificent scale by Artemisia to the memory of her husband, were discovered by Sir Chas. Newton in 1857, and considerable fragments are now in the British Museum. Cf. Mart. Epigrammaton Liber (Lib. Spect.) 1, 5—6 where it is coupled with other wonders of the world. [See also Michaelis, A Century of Archaeological Discoveries (E.T.) pp. 99 ff.]

[contabuit: cf. Strabo l.c. τὴν ἀρχὴν κατέλιπε τῇ γυναικί...φθίσει δ' ἀποθανούσης διὰ πένθος Ἰδριεὺς ἤρξε.]

exaruit: the reflexion is general. 'And this opinion (i.e. an opinion like this)...?' appellabitur, which Dav. proposed, and Küh., and some others adopted, would require exaruerit to follow.

haec igitur...: with these words Cicero commences to deal with the remedial treatment of aegritudo.

§ 76. putent: the very fact that Cleanthes is cited as an instance shows that a class is referred to here, not certain definite individuals. It is therefore necessary to alter the following verbs abducunt, putant, colligunt, to the subjunctive, not to alter this verb, with Dav. and Küh., to the indicative. Cf. i 9, 18 where MSS have putant...censeant though there is nothing to differentiate the constr. of the one verb from that of the other. Sff. in our passage seeks to justify abducunt, holding that with ut Epicurus the ref., although sunt qui preceded, is limited to Epicurus individually, while ut Epicuro placet would have included the school. He thinks that the mood of abducunt caused the copyists to alter the following verbs putent and colligant.

docere: the insertion, with Lamb. and Dav., of docere, against the MSS (or dicere, but the former is better) is necessary. Most editors follow Or. in imagining that it is not so. Schiche inserts docere after non esse, perhaps rightly, and Ml., though he does not insert the word in his text, has the crit. note 'putent docere Lamb., Bait. ed. Tauchn., fortasse uere.' Or.

20 omnino non esse, ut Cleanthi placet; sunt qui non magnum malum, ut Peripatetici; sunt qui abducant a malis ad bona, ut Epicurus; sunt qui satis putent ostendere nihil inopinati accidisse, <ut Aristippus.> Chrysippus autem caput esse censet in

20. cleanti G. de auti E I. 21. abducunt R V P G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 L 5 W I 2 M I 2 J O 2 3 8. adducunt D C. ducunt O 7 om. O I.
 22. putant R V G B I-3 K I 2 W I 2 M I O 7. || inopinati P B 3 W 2
 M I 2 D C O I 3 7. inopinanti V. inopinanti R G B I S E. inopinant B 2. opinanti K I E 2 W I II. ostendere opinanti accidisse
 O 2 cett. om. || accidisse nihil mali R I 6 7 17 P I-4 G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2
 L 2-6 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 8 Gr. ed. H. accidisse nihil mali V. accidisse nil mali O 7. accidisse mali W I. accidisse, ut Aristippus corr. Orellius.

writes 'sane necessarium non est, cum eius significatio insit in ipso v. consolantis, consolatio enim sine doctrina aliqua praebere nequit.' The fact is that any idea that is to be carried on to the clause malum illud omnino non esse must be found in officium, not in consolantis. If we had had sunt qui unam consolationem putent the ellipse would have been possible with the verbal but, even where we actually have the verbal in 32, 77 erit igitur in consolationibus prima medicina, we have docere expressed in the text. No real parallel for such an ellipse as the MS reading presents can be found. Those put forward by Küh. are inadequate: docere is not supplied to the third clause in 32, 77, but is carried on from the first clause, just quoted above. In 15, 31 dicens is easily supplied from praedicare and in iv 38, 83, sed et aegritudinis et reliquorum animi morborum una sanatio est, omnes opinabiles esse..., una sanatio est is nearly=una sanandi doctrina est and the idea required flows smoothly from the verbal. Dav. wrongly altered ut Peripatetici of the MSS to ut Peripateticis below, but his suggestion that the true reading may be sunt qui unum officium consolantis putant malum illud omnino non esse, ut Cleanthes, persuadere is worth recording.

ut Cleanthi placet: we have no ref. to show why this view is specially attributed to Cleanthes. This passage is not illustrated by ii 25, 60 to which Hei. and T.S. refer, for there the view of Cleanthes is that held by Zeno before him. Cleanthes must have specially employed this view for consolation or some similar purpose and hence been quoted by Cicero's source. He wrote a Προτρεπτικός Diog. L. vii 5, 175 which is probably referred to in Diog. L. vii 1, 91 διδακτὴν τ' εἶναι αὐτὴν, λέγων δὲ τὴν ἀρετὴν, καὶ Χρῆσιππος ἐν τῷ πρώτῳ περὶ τέλους φησὶ καὶ Κλεάνθης καὶ Ποσειδώνιος ἐν τοῖς προτρεπτικοῖς.

ut Peripatetici: sc. putant. For the change from ut Cleanthi placet cf. Ac. ii 39, 124 'ut Platoni placuit...ut Xenocrates.' For the Peripatetic view cf. ii 27, 66 n. on 'aut...tantulum.'

ut Epicurus: cf. 15, 33.

nihil inopinati: for this Cyrenaic view cf. 13, 28; 22, 52.

ut Aristippus: nihil mali must be a gloss upon nihil inopinati, cf. Wes. Em. I p. 10. Dav. rightly argues that, as we have an authority cited for each of the preceding three views, we must have an authority mentioned for this view and he inserts ut Cyrenaici. Or., in notes to F.A.W.'s notes, suggested ut Aristippus which seems better, as Aristippus might easily be missed by a copyist before Chrysippus.

Chrysippus autem... this passage shows that in the Stoic definition of aegritudo we have an addition introduced by Chrysippus in the words in 11, 25 'talis mali, ut in eo rectum uideatur esse angī'; 26, 62 'oportere, rectum esse, ad officium pertinere'; iv 7, 14 'in quo demitti contrahique animo rectum esse uideatur.' This is also indicated by the words with which Posidonius assails Chrysippus' view in Galen op. cit. iv p. 370 Μ. εἰ γὰρ τὸ μέγεθος τῶν φαινομένων ἀγαθῶν ἢ κακῶν κινεῖ τὸ νομίζειν καθήκον καὶ κατὰ ἀξίαν εἶναι παρόντων αὐτῶν ἢ παραγενομένων μηδένα λόγον προσέσθαι περὶ τοῦ ἀλλως δεῖν ὑπ' αὐτῶν κινεῖσθαι. Cf. v. Arnim, Stoica, Introd. p. xxiii; Pohlenz l.c. p. 332.

opinionem...si se...putet: for the constr., which Bent. suspected, Hei. compares i 47, 111 'illa suspicio...si opinamur.'

in Consolatione: Tregder, against the best MSS, omitted these words but Wes.

consolando detrahere illam opinionem maerenti, si se officio 25 fungi putet iusto atque debito. sunt etiam qui haec omnia genera consolandi colligant (alius enim alio modo mouetur), ut fere nos in Consolatione omnia in consolationem unam coniecimus; erat enim in tumore animus, et omnis in eo temptabatur curatio. sed sumendum tempus est non minus in animorum 30 morbis quam in corporum; ut Prometheus ille Aeschyli, cui cum dictum esset:

Atquí, Prometheu, te hóc tenere exístimo, Medéri posse rátionem iracúndiae,

24. moerenti sise W I. merenti si se II at litura post ti. maerentis se G.

maerentis<sup>qd</sup> se V man. ant. superscr. moerentis se O 2. merentis se R P 4 B 1 2 K 1 2 E 1 2 L 2 5 DC J O 7 8 ed. H. merentisse P. merenti se O 3 S at marg. ne se W 2 at s post ti eras. et marg. ne alio atr. moerentis ne se L 3. merentis se E 3 al. atr. superscr. merenti ne se P 2 3 B 3 L 6 M 2. merentis ut se M 1. merentis quod se O 1. merentis ¶ se L 4. 26. colligunt R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 DC II J O 1-3 7 8.

27. nos in consolatione omnia R P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 2 M 1 2 O 2 3. nos in consolatione omnia V. nos in consolatione omnia II. nos in consolationem unam cett. om. W 1 J O 1 8. || nos omnia in consolationem DC. nos in consolationem omnia coniecimus W I marg. unā. nos in consolationem omnia unā cett. om. O 7. 30. aeschylī R V G K. aeschili E I. eschili B 1 S.

32. existimo R V G B K S. 33. posse rationem B 3 S E 1 2 L 4 M 2 C O 2 3 7. posse rationē B 1 D II. posse ratione R 6 7 17 L 2 3 J O 1.

posse rōne L 5 W 1. posse rōē K 2 M 1 O 8. posse rōni B 2. posse rationē rātionē P alio atr. posse ratione rātionē V. posse ratione ratione G alterum expunx. alt. man. posse ratione ratione R. posse rōē rpe W 2.

posse ratione rationē K 1. om. L 6.

Em. II p. 58 points out that they are necessary to mark the time referred to in the following words erat enim in tumore animus.

in tumore: cf. 12, 26 'cum tumor animi resedisset'; and iv 29, 63 where the word is used in the same connection as here.

in eo: sc. in tumore.

sumendum tempus est: tempus here = 'the right time,' cf. tempestiuam (ἐν καιρῷ γε) below. For the connection of this point with Chrysippus' teaching see iv 29, 63 n. on 'quodque uetat Chrysippus...'

Aeschylī: Prom. Vincit. 377 foll. Oceanus speaks: οὐκουν, Προμηθεύ, τοῦτο γιγνώσκεις, ὅτι | ὀργῆς προσούσης εἰσὶν λατοὶ λόγοι; | to which Prometheus replies ἐάν τις ἐν καιρῷ γε μαλθάσση κέαρ | καὶ μὴ σφριγῶντα θυμὸν ἰσχυραίνῃ βίᾳ. Dav. compares Hieron. Ep. 39 (ad Paulam super obitu Blaesillae filiae) 'recens uolnus est, et tactus iste, quo blandior, non tam curat quam exasperat. Attamen quod tempore mitigandum est cur ratione non uincitur?' a passage no doubt derived from Cicero's Consolatio. The extract from the Prom. Vincit. may have been quoted there by Cicero; Hieron. Ep. 66, 1 (ad Pammachium) 'uereor ne...attrectans uolnus pectoris tui, quod tempore et ratione curatum est, commoratione exulcerem.'

cui: cf. v 10, 30 n. on quos.

rationem: H. Stephanus and Lamb. (in ed. 2) proposed mederi posse orationem iracundiae, with synizesis in orationem. But it is not necessary to depart from the MSS.; rationem is more applicable to consolation than oratio and, though the Gk has λόγος, the sing. λόγος would mean rationem as well as orationem, and Cic. gives a free translation.

respondit: as the pres. is usual in quoting from still extant writings (i 18, 42 n.) F.A.W. thought respondet a better reading here. But the words cum dictum esset above show that this constr. has not been adopted here. respondet would be impossible unless cui cum dicitur preceded. Or. compares 18, 39 'in quo haec admiratio fiebat.'

respondit:

35 Siquidem qui tempestiuam medicinam admouens
Non adgraescens uolnus inlidat manu.

XXXII. 77. Erit igitur in consolationibus prima medicina docere aut nullum malum esse aut admodum paruum, altera et de communi condicione uitae et proprie, si quid sit de ipsius qui maereat disputandum, tertia summam esse stultitiam frustra
5 confici maerore, cum intellegas nil posse profici. nam Cleanthes quidem sapientem consolatur, qui consolatione non eget. nihil enim esse malum quod turpe non sit, si lugenti persuaseris, non tu illi luctum, sed stultitiam detraxeris; alienum autem tempus docendi. et tamen non satis mihi uidetur uidisse hoc Cleanthes, 34. respondit R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 3 8 7.

Rñdit W 1. Pfd. W 2. dixit O 2. 35. siquidem qui R P G S E.
& si quidem W 2 q eraso. si quis est qui R 7. siquidem qui V. †
in

36. adgraescens R G K. adgraescens V. aggraescens B. || uolnus

R V P (hoc loco) G B. uolnos K 1. uolnus S E. || inlidat R V P G B 1
K E 1. illidat R 2 S E 2. inclinat B 2. || manu O 3. manus R 1 6 7
V P G B 1 3 S E 1 2 L 2 3 5 6 W 1 M 1 2 D C J O 1 2 7 8 ed. H. manu K 1. manu R 2 10 K 2 W 2 II. mai R 17. māg B 2. maius L 4.

XXXII. § 77, 2. aut multum malum B 1. 3. condicione R G S. condicione V B K E. || proprie R V E 2. propriae G a conf. alt. man.

propriae K. pp̄ E 1. propriae P. 5. intellegas R V G B K.
intelligas S E. || cleantes quidem R V P G K S E. 6. nihil R V P.
nichil R 10 16 E 1 2. nil G. 9. cleanthes R V G.

siquidem qui: qui=quis (ris in the Gk) is archaic and it is strange to find it here as the Latin verses must be by Cicero.

XXXII. § 77. erit igitur...: the constr. is best explained thus: from docere of the first clause, disserere or disputare is carried on (Hei.) by zeugma to the altera clause and docere (or disserere, disputare) to the tertia clause. Ernesti wrongly bracketed disputandum; if this were ejected or, as F.A.W. suggested, altered to disputare, siz would be in no satisfactory constr.

proprie, contrasted with communi, but formally de ipsius corresponds to de communi condicione and hence condicione is easily carried on. Sff. among other changes, which do not seem necessary, inserted fortuna after maereat, comparing vv. ll. § 73 and suggesting that an abbreviation may have caused the loss of that word.

nam: 'I need not mention Cleanthes' method as a fourth remedy, for...' Cleanthes' view is given in § 76 init.

non...luctum sed stultitiam: i.e. you will make him a Stoic philosopher, for no other would recognise the force of that argument. Cicero does not use sapientem in its strictest sense. See note on 'et tamen' below.

detraxeris: i 30, 74 n. on 'excesserit.' alienum autem tempus docendi, 'the occasion is not favourable for imparting instruction,' because those in grief are not inclined to listen to philosophic lore.

et tamen...: the argument is—and indeed Cleanthes does not even console philosophers in all cases, for they may well be in grief at times because they have not yet attained to perfect wisdom and, as Cleanthes would admit that this is a real evil (since the assertion that it is so is one of his leading doctrines), his consolation, which consists in denying that the thing grieved about is an evil, cannot be applied. In 28, 68 it is said that philosophers do not grieve on this point, but Cic. is there thinking of Stoics, and here he is speaking more generally, as the ref. to Alcibiades shows; there, too, he speaks of philosophi summi, while those here referred to might have made but slight progress.

10 suscipi aliquando aegritudinem posse ex eo ipso quod esse sum-mum malum Cleanthes ipse fateatur. quid enim dicemus, cum Socrates Alcibiadi persuasisset, ut accepimus, eum nihil hominis esse, nec quicquam inter Alcibiadem summo loco natum et quemuis baiolum interesse, cum se Alcibiades adflicteret lacri-15 mansque Socrati supplex esset ut sibi uirtutem traderet turpitudinemque depelleret, quid dicemus, Cleanthe? num in illa re quae aegritudine Alcibiadem adficiebat mali nihil fuisse?
 78. quid? illa Lyconis qualia sunt? qui aegritudinem extenuans paruis ait eam rebus moueri, fortunae et corporis incommodis, 20 non animi malis. quid ergo? illud quod Alcibiades dolebat

II. cleanthes R V E. cleantes P G S. || ipse habent
 R V P G B<sub>1-3</sub> K S E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D C II O<sub>178</sub> om. O<sub>3</sub>. || fateatur
 R<sub>167</sub> V P<sub>34</sub> G B<sub>1-3</sub> E<sub>1</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D C O<sub>27</sub>. fatetur R<sub>17</sub>

P<sub>12</sub> E<sub>2</sub> II O<sub>3</sub>. fatebatur W<sub>2</sub> J O<sub>1</sub>. fatebat in fatetur mut. ut uid. O<sub>8</sub>.
 12. persuasisset R G B K. psuasisset V E. 13. alcibiadem R V P G K I
 B<sub>13</sub> S W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub>. alcibiaden B<sub>2</sub> E D. alcibiadē W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub>.
 14. baiolum R V P G B<sub>12</sub> K S E O<sub>7</sub>. baiulum B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>1</sub>. buolū W<sub>2</sub>. || adflicteret R V P G K E. afflicteret B S. 16. cleanthe R P<sub>14</sub> G B<sub>12</sub> K I. acleanthe V. cleante R<sub>6</sub> P<sub>3</sub> B<sub>3</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> D II O<sub>23</sub>. o cleante R<sub>17</sub> W<sub>1</sub> O<sub>8</sub>. deante E<sub>1</sub> alio ut uid. atr.

cleante R<sub>7</sub> al. atr. superscr. rasura post te. cleantes P<sub>2</sub> M<sub>1</sub>. cleantem O<sub>1</sub>.
 om. E<sub>2</sub> O<sub>7</sub>. || num R<sub>67</sub> P<sub>3</sub> B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>8</sub> II at fuerat tum.
 tum R<sub>17</sub> V P<sub>12</sub> G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>12</sub> E<sub>12</sub> L<sub>5</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub> C O<sub>1-3</sub> Gr.
 tū D. tum S marg. num. cum P<sub>4</sub>. 17. aegritudine P. egritudine D O I. aegritudinem R al. atr. corr. aegritudinē V K. aegritudinem G. egritudinem E<sub>2</sub>. egritudinē R<sub>10</sub> I<sub>6</sub> B<sub>2</sub>. || alcibiadem R V P G B<sub>2</sub>
 K S W<sub>1</sub>. alcibiaden B. alcibiadē B<sub>3</sub> E W<sub>2</sub> D O<sub>8</sub>. || adficiebat
 R V G. adfiebat K E. afficiebat P B.

§ 78, 18. lyconis R V K S. liconis P B E. lyanis G. || sunt? qui P E 2
 W<sub>1</sub> II O<sub>7</sub> V at ras. post i. sunt? quia R G. sunt? que O<sub>1</sub>.
 20. non animi malis E<sub>12</sub>. non animi mali R<sub>10</sub> I<sub>6</sub> G B K. || dolebat R G K J. dofebat V (sic). doleat S.

Cleanthes ipse fateatur: Cleanthes has been suspected by many editors and could well be spared, but the repetition has a certain emphasis which may have been intended. fateatur has been changed to fatebatur by Bai. but the conditional seems quite natural.

cum Socrates Alcibiadi persuasisset: Dav. quotes Augustin. C.D. xiv 8 'Alcibiadem ferunt, si me de nomine hominis memoria non fallit, cum sibi beatus uideretur, Socrate disputante et ei quam miser esset, quoniam stultus esset, demonstrante, fleuisse.' This is the only other place where this statement directly occurs and St Augustine very probably took his account from our passage. F.A.W. thinks that the passage is probably taken from some (lost) Socratic dialogue. In Plato, he adds, e.g. in Alcib. I, Alcibiades is indeed humbled, but not to such a degree as to shed tears. Or., accepting this, adds that our passage cannot refer to any expressions of Alcibiades in the Symposium (215 E) since the words quemuis baiolum give a strong individual character to the narrative, which appears to have been literally translated from some Gk original.

hominis: the contrast here is between homo and the lower animals; he had no true reason, no wisdom.

Cleanthe: ii 21, 49 n. on 'Vlixes'; Neue, Formenlehre 1<sup>3</sup> 447.

§ 78. Lyconis: a Peripatetic philosopher from Troas who succeeded Straton as head of the school about 270 B.C. He died in 225 B.C. Cf. Diog. L. v 4, 65.

quid ergo: i 25, 60 n. on 'quid enim?'

non ex animi malis uitisque constabat? ad Epicuri consolationem satis est ante dictum.

XXXIII. 79. Ne illa quidem firmissima consolatio est, quamquam et usitata est et saepe prodest: 'Non tibi hoc soli.' prodest haec quidem, ut dixi, sed nec semper nec omnibus; sunt enim qui respuant; sed refert quo modo adhibeatur. ut enim 5 tulerit quisque eorum, qui sapienter tulerunt, non quo quisque incommodo adfectus sit, praedicandum est. Chrysippi ad ueritatem firmissima est, ad tempus aegritudinis difficilis. magnum opus est probare maerenti illum suo iudicio et quod se ita putet oportere facere maerere. nimirum igitur, ut in causis non sem-10 per utimur eodem statu (sic enim appellamus controuersiarum genera), sed ad tempus, ad controuersiae naturam, ad personam accommodamus, sic in aegritudine lenienda quam quisque curam recipere possit uidendum est.

XXXIII. § 79. 1. ne illa R G B 2 3 W 1 O 1. nec illa B E. <sup>nec</sup> ἢ ἄνευ illa K.
ne ulla R 10 16 S. nulla O 7. <sub>fi</sub> firmissima R V P G B K. 6. adfectus

R V G K. affectus B S. || chryppi V. chrisippi G. crysippi R K E.
7. firmissima R V P G B K. 8. opus R 6 7 P 4 K 2 E 3 W 1 2 M 1 J
O 1 7 8. opus S i.e. n in p mut. opus II at fuerat onus. onus R 1 17 V
P 1-3 G B 1 K 1 E 1 2 M 2 D C O 2 3 Gr. onus B 3 marg. opus.

<sup>ng</sup> B 2 ead. fort. manu. || et quā se V. 12. accōmodamus B linea eod. atr. ducta
R 1 al. atr. accomodamus V G K S. || quam quisque K 2 W 2 D C J O 1 8.
nam quam quisque R 1 10 17 V P 1-3 G B 1 3 K S E 1 2 M 2 Π O 2 3 7.
<sup>a3</sup> nāq quisque W 1 al. atr. superscr. nam quisque B 2. eam quam M 1.

ad: i 4, 7 n. on 'ad id.'

XXXIII. § 79. ne...quidem, 'not... either.'

non tibi hoc soli: this consolation was so ancient and so hackneyed as almost to have become proverbial; hence the jest of Theocritus recorded in Stobaeus, Floril. 124, 34 Θεόκριτος, ἐν περιδείπνῳ τοῦ πενθοῦντος λαμάργως ἐσθλοντος, θάρρει, βέλτιστε, εἶπεν, οὐ σοὶ μόνῳ ταῦτα γέγονεν. Dav. quotes lines of Timocles, preserved in Athenaeus vi 223 c and in Stob. Floril. 124, 19 concluding ἀπαντα γὰρ τὰ μείζον' ἢ πέπονθέ τις ἀπυχήματ' ἄλλοις γεγονότ' ἐννοούμενος τὰς αὐτὸς αὐτοῦ συμφορὰς ῥᾶον φέρει.

ut dixi: 23, 57; 24, 58 and especially 25, 60.

suntenim qui respuant: cf. 25, 59—60. Chrysippi: 31, 76. The nom. consolatio is carried on from above.

ad ueritatem, 'in theory, in abstracto' F.A.W. ad = 'in respect of,' as often with adjectives.

suo iudicio, 'by deliberate choice,' 'by an act of his own will.'

[et: for the copula, which Bent. wished to delete, see iv 27, 59 n.]

statu: cf. Topica 25, 93 foll. where status, Gk στάσις, is defined as 'refutatio accusationis, in qua est depulsio criminis...in quo primum insisit quasi ad repugnandum congressa defensio.' Part. Orat. 29, 102; Quintil. iii 6, 1 foll. In § 21 he says 'nostra opinio semper haec fuit...in eo credere statum causae...in quo maxime res uerteretur'; Cornificius ad Herenn. i 11, 18 foll. makes three constitutiones causae (status) (a) coniecturalis, where the case is a question of fact, e.g. did the accused do the deed with which he is charged? (b) legitima, where the case is one of interpretation, e.g. of the terms of a law or of an ambiguously-worded will, or between conflicting laws. (c) iuridicialis, where the fact is admitted and the question is whether it was right or wrong, e.g. was the act murder or justifiable homicide? Trans. 'we do not always take the same standpoint.'

quam quisque...: many editors, including Kühn. and Mo., retain nam, of best

80. Sed nescio quo pacto ab eo quod erat a te propositum 15 aberravit oratio. tu enim de sapiente quaesieras, cui aut malum uideri nullum potest quod uacet turpitudine aut ita paruum malum ut id obruatur sapientia uixque appareat, qui nihil opin-ione adfingat adsumatque ad aegritudinem, nec id putet esse 20 nihil esse possit. edocuit tamen ratio, ut mihi quidem uidetur, cum hoc ipsum proprie non quaereretur hoc tempore, num quid

§ 80, 17. obruatur R V P G L 2 3 4 6. obseruatur R 10 16 Gr. obpuatur
 S marg. obruat. || apparet R V G B K S E. 18. adfingat R V P G K E. affingat B S. || adsumatque R V G K E. adsumatq; P. assumatque B S.
 19. rectum se R G K. rectum se V <sup>tū</sup> man. ant. superscr. rectum si R 10. ||
 maxime R V G B. maxime K. || prauis V <sup>v</sup> atr. ant. superscr. 21. nū quid K 2 L 2 W 1. nūqd R 7. num qd' O 8. nūq̄ quod V <sup>i</sup> atr. ant. corr.
 nunc quā P. nunc quid O 2. nūc q̄ W 2. nunc q̄ B 2. nunc quā R G B 1 K 1 E J. nunc qd' L 3 5. nunc quod P 2 4 S O 3 7. ne quod P 3 B 3 at aliqd' superscr. L 6 M 2. non quod L 4. non q, M 1.
 ne quidem ullum esset R 6. proprie hoc non turpe quod esset malum D C. tempore quod nichil esset E 2 II.

MSS, before quam, placing a semicolon after leniendā, facimus or faciendum being understood. This reading is possible but not nearly so natural, and there is some MS authority for omitting nam while it seems possible to account for its intrusion. See crit. n.

§ 80. nescio quo pacto: i 11, 24 n. on 'nescio quo modo.' In 4, 7 A. had put forward for discussion the assertion 'uideatur mihi cadere in sapientem aegritudo,' but after section 21 this question is dropped, and Cicero divides his subject into two parts, the setting forth of the cause of annoyance, and the discovery of its cure.

cui aut malum...turpitudine: this is the well-known strict Stoic doctrine. In the qualifying clause aut ita paruum...appareat Cic. is thinking specially of grief for the dead, and his thought is illustrated by Sen. de Ira i 16, 7 quoted in 22, 54 n. on 'cicatricibus.'

adfingat adsumatque...putet: these subjunctives are very difficult. Bake proposed to change all three (and possit also) into indicatives, but it is hardly likely that, apart from interpolation in the archetype, which there is little reason to suspect, all three words would have been corrupted. The two clauses cui aut malum uideri... and qui nihil opinione... read to me like coordinate clauses, and the theory which makes qui=quippe qui, adopted by editors here, is only a makeshift device. Draeger, H.S. § 151, 5 a (i p. 292), rejecting the qui=quippe qui theory, places these subjunctives under instances of attraction in relative clauses. And I think that the preceding subjunctives obruatur and appareat probably are the cause of the error; but if so we have here no ordinary instances of attraction in rel. clauses, for that takes place when the rel. clause is dependent upon the clause containing the verb which is the cause of the attraction, whereas the verbs in the text are in a clause independent of the ut-clause which contains the verbs which exercise the attraction. As an alternative to this theory it might be suggested that Cic. wrote quippe qui, as he would not have expressed himself so ambiguously as the text would make him do, if he meant the qui-clause to depend upon the cui-clause. But if we read quippe qui or take qui as = quippe qui the meaning is unsatisfactory, for that would make this clause give a reason for the sapiens thinking that nothing can be an evil which is free from baseness or that, if anything can, the evil would be slight. It is obvious that if qui=quippe qui it must refer to cui above and could not refer to the ut id obruatur clause alone. I believe that qui is a corruption for quoniam (=  $\overline{qm}$ ), a very slight change, in which case we have a legitimate attraction of the verbs that follow to esset malum, nisi quod idem dici turpe posset, tamen ut uideremus, quicquid esset in aegritudine mali, id non naturale esse, sed uoluntario iudicio et opinionis errore contractum. 81. tractatum est autem a nobis id genus aegritudinis, quod unum est omnium maximum, ut eo sublato reliquorum remedia ne magnopere quaerenda arbitraremur.

XXXIV. Sunt enim certa, quae de paupertate, certa, quae de uita inhonorata et ingloria dici soleant; separatim certae scholae sunt de exsilio, de interitu patriae, de seruitute, de debilitate, de caecitate, de omni casu in quo nomen poni solet calamitatis. haec Graeci in singulas scholas et in singulos libros dispertiunt; opus enim quaerunt; quamquam plenae disputa-

§ 81, 24. tractatum R B 1-3 K 1 O 1 7 8. tractum V S. tractum R 10 16 G O 3. 26. maximum R V G B. maximum K S. || nemagnopere R (hoc loco) V (hoc loco) G B K S E. nec magno opere O 7. 27. arbitraremur R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L 6 W 1 M 1 2 D C II J O 3 8 7. arbitremur L 2-4 W 2 O 1 2.

XXXIV. 3. scolae R G. || exilio R V G B K S E. || debilitate R et V i in e mut. 4. de caecitate de omni R 1 7 V P 1 2 G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 1 2 W 2 M 1 D C J O 1-3 7 8. de caecitate de debilitate de omni W 1.

de caecitate de omni cāū S. de caecitate<sup>et</sup> de omni Π. de caecitate et de omni R 6. de caecitate & omni B 3 M 2. 6. plene L 4. planae G. plane R V P B 1 E 1 W 1. plane R 6 7 10 16 17 P 2-4 B 2 3 K 1 2 S E 2 L 3 5 6 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8 Gr. ed. H. om. L 2. || disputationes

R 7 P 2 3 B 3 E 3 L 2 4 W 1 M 2 C O 3 8. disputationis P al. atr.

superscr. disputationes D al. atr. superscr. disputationis R 1 6 V P 4 G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 L 3 5 6 M 1 II J O 1 2 7. disputationisq; W 2.

disputa<sup>is</sup> K 2 eod. atr.

the verbs obruatur and appareat on which they depend. qui might also have arisen from cum = quom (quō).

For the matter cf. the definition of aegritudo in 11, 25 and nn. there.

num quid: Wes. Em. 1 p. 19 seems right in reading num quid against nearly all MSS and Bai. and Sff. follow him; but quod can be adjectival 'whether there was any evil...'

tamen ut uideremus: tamen repeats the previous tamen for the sake of clearness after the preceding clauses. ut uideremus could have been omitted, the acc. and infin. following upon edocuit; the constr. is as though effecit had preceded.

uoluntario...errore, 'a deliberate act of will and a mistaken idea.'

opinionis errore: gen. of definition. Hei. notes that the same meaning is given in Diu. ii 69, 143 by 'opinio erroris.'

§ 81. id genus aegritudinis: sc. grief for the death of relatives. See also Pohlenz in Hermes xli p. 327 n. 3.

ut...ne: see i 32, 78 n. on 'illud...non dant ut...ne intreat.'

XXXIV. inhonorata, 'unambitious,' a life that avoids the cursor honorum.

certae scholae... see Buresch, Leipz. Stud. ix p. 77, where he compares Seneca, de remediis fortuitorum. [Musonius Rufus wrote a treatise ὅτι οὐ κακὸν ἡ φυχῆ.] scholae: i 4, 7 n.

opus enim quaerunt, 'they make work for themselves.' Editors have found different meanings in this expression, but Livy v 3, 6, quoted by Menkies, seems fairly parallel, 'sic hercule tamquam artifices improbi opus quaerunt; quippe semper aegri aliquid esse in republica uolunt, ut sit ad cuius curationem a uobis adhibeantur.' This somewhat depreciatory remark is qualified by the following clause.

plenae...delectationis, 'very interesting.'

tiones delectationis sunt. 82. et tamen, ut medici toto corpore curando minimae etiam parti, si condoluit, medentur, sic philosophia cum uniuersam aegritudinem sustulit, <sustulit> etiam, si quis error alicunde exstitit, si paupertas momordit, si ignominia pupugit, si quid tenebrarum obfudit exsilium, aut eorum, quae

7. delectationis R V G B<sub>3</sub> K<sub>1</sub> L<sub>4</sub> E<sub>3</sub> O<sub>378</sub> E<sub>2</sub> marg. W<sub>2</sub> marg.

ais delectationis II. <sup>X</sup>delectionis delectationis D al. atr. superscr. delectationisq; K<sub>2</sub> L<sub>3</sub> J O I. delectationes L<sub>26</sub> ed. H. delectationi W I. dilectionis B<sub>2</sub>. om. O<sub>2</sub>. || sunt P I<sub>4</sub> G B I<sub>2</sub> K I S E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub> C II J O I<sub>28</sub> Gr. sint W I. summae V at mae in ras. et al. atr.

§ 82. Ta | m̄ ut medici V at Ta et m̄ extra lineam al. atr. script. 9. aegritudinem sustulit tamen si quis R I 7 17 V (sustulit habet) P I-4 G B I-3 K I<sub>2</sub> S E L<sub>3-6</sub> W I (substulit habet) W<sub>2</sub> M I D O<sub>2378</sub>. aegritudinem sustulit tamen si quis R<sub>6</sub> M<sub>2</sub> J O I. aegritudinem sustulit tum si quis E<sub>2</sub> L<sub>2</sub> C II. aegritudinem sustulit, sustulit etiam corr. Keilii. 10. aliunde R I 2 6 7 10 16 17 V P G B I-3 K I<sub>2</sub> S E I<sub>2</sub> L<sub>2-6</sub> W I<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub> D C II J O I-3 7 8. alicunde corr. Ernestius. || extitit R V G B K S. 11. pupugit P B I<sub>3</sub> K I

E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub> II O I-3 8. pupugit V i in u mut. pupigit R atr. ant. G alt. man. suppl. pupugit E I. pupigit B<sub>2</sub>. pungit W I. pupugnit O 7. || obfudit R G B E S. obfodit K. offudit M I<sub>2</sub> O 7. obtudit J. effudit W I O I. || exsilium V h. l. G h. l. exilium R B K E S. || eorum quae M<sub>2</sub>. eorum que B<sub>3</sub> M I D C O I 7 8 W<sub>2</sub> at cum ras. et spatio post que. eorum q̄ K<sub>2</sub>. eorum quaeque R K. eorum quaeque G. eorum que que V B. eorum queque B<sub>2</sub> E I<sub>2</sub> II. eorum quoq; A S. eorum q̄ q̄ O<sub>2</sub>. eorum quō W I.

§ 82. et tamen: Bouh. suspected tamen and conj. etenim, but the line of thought is 'I have dealt with the most vehement form of annoyance in order that when it is removed we might not think that there is much need to seek out remedies for the remaining forms. For there are remedies put forward for all the different forms of misfortune. But, just as physicians...'

si condoluit: ii 24, 58 n. on 'aspeimus.'

sic philosophia...: the emendation of Keil, sustulit, sustulit etiam for 'sustulit tamen' gives the required antithesis to ut medici...medentur and has been deservedly accepted by recent editors. For the omission of one of the two, where the same word occurs twice in succession, cf. Introd. to vol. I p. xlviij; Madv. on Fin. ii 10 30 'appellauit, appellat'; Ac. ii 3, 9 'potuerint, potuerunt,' et easily fell out after -it in sustulit and iam was easily corrupted into tam=tamen.

Klotz, Quaest. Tull. I 109-113, retains the MS reading. He thinks that the parallel instituted in the previous clause between the physician and the philosopher prepares the reader for carrying on medentur, so that after sustulit we supply medicinam tamen adfert, and he understands the clause et si singularum as a sort of etcetera clause, equivalent to et si singularis rebus opus est singularis consolationibus, but in this we should hardly recognise 'Ciceronem optimum orationis artificem' as Kl., in criticising Orelli, has just declared him to be.

Keil was the first to explain that we have etsi here not et si. Or. retained the reading of the MSS with the exception of etsi which is struck out without accounting for its intrusion. He punctuated as follows: sic, philosophia cum...sustulit, tamen, si...si...si quid exstitit, singularum rerum sunt propriae consolationes. Dav. suggested ei for et, rejecting si as due to dittography from si in singularum. Ern. read sic philosophiae... and ei for etsi, Nissen sic in philosophia. F. A. W. thought that Cic. intended to add similiter medetur, but forgetting this says singularum rerum sunt propriae consolationes. He would omit et si.

uniuersam: ii 1, 4 n. on 'uniuersam.'

alicunde is a necessary emendation for aliunde, the meaning 'from another source' being impossible. In i 23, 53 MSS presented the converse error. alicunde=ex aliqua una re=ex singularis rebus and corresponds, as Wes. notes, to minimae etiam parti, si condoluit, above.

quae modo dixi: in § 81.

modo dixi, si quid exstitit; etsi singularum rerum sunt propriae consolationes, de quibus audies tu quidem, cum uoles. sed ad eundem fontem reuertendum est, aegritudinem omnem procul 15 abesse a sapiente, quod inanis sit, quod frustra suscipiatur, quod non natura exoriatur, sed iudicio, sed opinione, sed quadam inuitatione ad dolendum, cum id decreuerimus ita fieri oportere.
 83. hoc detracto, quod totum est uoluntarium, aegritudo erit sublata illa maerens, morsus tamen et contractiuncula quaedam 20 animi relinquetur. hanc dicant sane naturalem, dum aegritudinis nomen absit grave, taetrum, funestum, quod cum sapientia esse atque, ut ita dicam, habitare nullo modo possit. at quae stirpes

12. siquid exstitit R V G B S E. sicut exstitit K. || 2 si singularum O 7.
 7 si singularum W 2 D O 8. & si singularum O 13. et si singularum R 7
 G B 2 3 K 2 S W I C II J. & si singularum R 1 6 17 P B I K I E 2
 M 2. & sic singularum M I. et singularum V S E I O 2.

§ 83, 18. erit om. B E S margin. illa 19. ita maerens G al. man. superscr. || morsus tamen V P G K S M 2 D C O 12. morsus tam R E I O I.

morsus tñ B 3 E 2 W 1 2 II. morsus O 8. morsus & tñ M I. || contractiunculae R 6 P 1 3 G K I M 2 O 2. contractiunculae R I 10 V E W 1 O 3. contractiuncule R 7 17 B 3 K 2 S E 2 L 2-6 W 2 D C II J O 7 8. contractiunculae P 4 B I. contractiuncule P 2 O I. contractiunculae

R 16. contractiuncule B 2 al. atr. superscr. contractiuncula corr. Bentleyus. || quaedam R 10 V P E. quaedam R a in ae mut. quadam G. qdam E 2. quodam R 16. 21. tetrum G h. l. 22. atque stirpes R G. atq; stirpes R 7 10 V P 1 2 4 B 1 2 K 1 2 S E I-3 L 3 5 W 2 M 1 D C II J O 7 8 ed. H. atq; stirpes B 3 L 4. atq; stirpes W I. atqui stirpes R 6 P 3 M 2 O 1 3. at qui stirpes L 6 O 2. at quae stirpes corr. Bentleyus.

etsi: not uncommon in introducing a correction (κατ'οι) but quamquam is more usual, i 42, 99.

audies: sc. in book iv.

ad eundem fontem: sc. in singulis rebus tractandis. The general principles here cited are the source from which the arguments are to be drawn for each particular case.

[sed...sed...sed: for the anaphora of sed, rare in Cicero but common in later writers, cf. Fin. ii 14, 45 'non sibi se soli natum meminert, sed patriae, sed suis' with Madv.'s note.]

inuitatione: sc. sui, cf. 30, 73 n. on 'ipsi ad se miseriam inuitant.'

§ 83. morsus: may be plur. here as in Off. ii 7, 24 'acriores morsus sunt intermissae libertatis quam retentae.'

contractiuncula, 'dejection.' Against the MSS and Nonius the sing. is rendered necessary by the following hanc, as Bent. rightly held. hanc cannot refer to aegritudo above, as Hand and Wopkens, Lectt. Tull. p. 119, suppose. The examples which they cite do not refute the objection, which they anticipate, that this would make Cicero say that they may pronounce aegritudo natural provided they do not call it aegritudo. Of Bentley's further emendations tantum for tamen is unnecessary, and relinquetur for relinquentur, though very possibly right, is not essential. Sff., thinking that morsus must have something to define it, reads morsus tamen ex contractione quadam animi relinquetur (quadam with some MS support); but Küh. points out that et often has an explanatory force. contractiuncula is only a depreciatory diminutive of contractio, which occurs several times in the sing. in this sense, i 37, 90; iv 6, 14; 31, 66, 67. For the opinion here asserted cf. 22, 54 n. on 'cicatricibus.'

hanc dicant...naturalem: cf. the Peripatetic view 10, 22 n. on 'mediocritates.' The singulars hanc...naturalem are accounted for by Küh. on the ground that contractiuncula is more important than morsus, as the latter are transient while the former is deep-rooted.

atque...habitare: v 24, 69 'sapientis sunt aegritudinis, quam multae, quam amarae! quae ipso trunco euerso omnes eligendae sunt et, si necesse erit, singulis disputationibus. superest enim nobis hoc, cuiusmodi est, otium. sed ratio una omnium est aegritudinis, plura nomina. nam et inuidere aegritudinis est et aemulari et obtrectare et misereri

23. quae trunco V ipso om. 24. eligendae R G L 4. eligendae R 10
B K E. eligende R 7 16 17 P 4 B 2 L 5 W 2 J O 7 8. elig<sup>de</sup> K 2. eligendi D C. eligendae V eod. atr. eligende P. elidendae R 6 P 3 M 2 O 2. elidende P 2 B 3 S E 2 3 L 2 6 M 1 II O 1 3 ed. H. eliendae L 3. euellende W 1. 25. cuiusmodi R 1 G. cuiusmodi P 4 K 1. cuiusmodi B 2 L 5. cuiusmodi B 1. cuiusmodi V P al. atr. superscr. et punctis appositis. cuiusmodi P 2 K 2 E 2 D J E 1 al. atr. suppl. cuiusmodi
W 2 eod. atr. ut uid. cuiusmodi P 3 S L 3 6 M 2 C II O 1-3. cuiusmodo R 6. cuiusmodi L 4. cuiusmodi R 17. huiusmodi R 7 L 2. huiusmodi O 7 8. eiusmodi B 3 W 1 M 1 ed. H.

animum cum his habitantem pernoctantemque curis.' F. A. W. compares συνοικεῖν, συνείναι.

at quae: Wopkens, Lectt. Tull. I p. 115, reads 'atqui stirpes sunt aegritudinis quam multae! quam amarae!' which is Latin but atque of the MSS points to at quae not atqui as the true reading and the expression so obtained is better. The variant is very common.

eligendae: Nonius 290 M. has 'diligat, diuidit. Plautus in Curculione [l. 453]: clipeatus, elephantum ubi machaera diligit. Titinius Proelia: pernam totam diligit.' MSS in Curculio 453 read desiccat and Goetz and Schoell (after Gronov.) dissiccat. But Paulus ex Fest. iv 52 (Müller, p. 69) has 'dirigere apud Plautum inuenitur pro discidere (discindere corr. Scal.).' Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. II<sup>2</sup> LIX—LXI, thinks diligit may have its ordinary sense in the passage of Titinius and suggests eciendae as the correct reading here as in the MSS in Diu. ii 72, 149 'superstitionis stirpes omnes eciendae.' The MS reading eligendae in our passage is supported by C. F. W. Müller, Prosod. 490 and Madv. Em. Liv. 155 and Advers. ii 205. Madv. would read eligendae in Diu. ii 72, 149 (after Manutius); electos in Liv. vii 39, 6 with Gronov. and Gebh.; electis in de leg. agr. ii 33, 91 'neruis urbis omnibus electis' where MSS read ectis.

Nonius 278 M. quotes from Lucilius, Bk xxix 'concedat homini id quod uelit, deleniat, | corrupat prorsum ac neruos omnis eligat' and Non. p. 301 says eligere = defetigare, quoting the same line.

It is very possible that 'neruos omnis uirtuti eligunt' should be read in ii 11, 27 where elidunt of the MSS is rather strangely used.

Against Ribbeck's statement that legere and sublegere are used without any idea of violence MI. Ann. crit. to our passage cites Senec. Cons. ad Marc. 22, 3 'lacerationes medicorum ossa uiuis legentium'; de proud. 3, 2; de benef. v 24, 3. All these are cases of the removal of bones by surgeons. We may add Quintil. vi 1, 30 'lecta e uulneribus ossa.' The surgeon would hardly be violent, it may be remarked, but neither need the philosopher. But euellere, the word used in the same connexion in 6, 13, implies violence. Dav. refers to Varro, R.R. i 47. MI. would read in N.D. ii 60, 151 'nos e terrae cauernis ferrum eligimus' for MSS elicimus (where see Mayor's n.), and would follow the MSS in N.D. ii 64, 161 'multa ex earum corporibus remedia morbis et uulneribus eligamus,' and he thinks that in Fin. ii 35, 119 eligerem of MSS may be right as against Gruter's elicere. The evidence seems to indicate uses of lego, eligo, etc., from a root different from that found in the sense of 'gather,' though the latter meaning would suit our present passage, where we may translate 'The roots must be weeded out,' i.e. 'picked out.' The surgeon also picks out the bones that he extracts.

hoc...otium = huius rei otium, 'the necessary leisure' i 19, 45 n. on 'haec pulchritudo.' [But see v 41, 121 n.]

cuiusmodi: this form, which was always used instead of the cumbersome cuiuscuiusmodi, is recognised by Priscian and is common in Cicero. Neue cites thirteen instances, the word going in every case with esse. Formenlehre II<sup>3</sup> 513.

et angi, lugere, maerere, aerumna adfici, lamentari, sollicitari, dolere, in molestia esse, adfictari, desperare. 84. haec omnia 30 definiunt Stoici, eaque uerba, quae dixi, singularum rerum sunt, non, ut uidentur, easdem res significant, sed aliquid differunt, quod alio loco fortasse tractabimus. haec sunt illae fibrae stirpium, quas initio dixi, persequendae et omnes eligendae, ne 35 negat? quid autem praeclarum non idem arduum? sed tamen id se effecturam philosophia profitetur, nos modo curationem eius recipiamus. uerum haec quidem hactenus, cetera, quotienscumque uoletis, et hoc loco et aliis parata uobis erunt.

28. et angi R V P G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 8. om. O 7. || adfici R V P G K E. affici B S. 29. adfictari R V P G K E. afflictari B S.

§ 84, 32. haec sunt R I 6 P G K. hęc V B E. hęc R 7 P 2 4 B 2 K 2 W 2 D C II J O 7 8. hęc S marg. hęc. hęc O 3. hęc E 2 at c eras. hęc P 3 W 1 M 2 O 2. hęc B 3 M I O I ed. H. 33. quas initio R G.

qs in initio E I eod. atr. quas in initio V. || eligendae G L 3. eligendę B I K I. eligendę B 2 D C J O 7 W 2 at marg. d alio atr. eligendę V eod. atr.

eligendę E I. elegandę K 2. eligendae R al. atr. superscr. elidendae R 6 P 3 M 2 O 2. elidendę R 10 S O 3. elidendę R 7 P 2 4 B 3 E 2 3

L 6 M I II O I ed. H. elidendę W I. eligandę P al. atr. corr.

eligandas superscr. O 8. erudiendas L 2. exstirpandas L 4. eruendas R 17. 34. unquam ulla R V P G B K S E D II J O I 7 8. ulla unquam O 2 3 ed. H. unquam C ulla om. ne ulla possit unquam W I. || existere R V G B K S E.

37. quidem haec R V P G E I 2 L 3-6. || haec om. L 2. || hactenus R 6 G E 2. h actenus R K. actenus R 2 E I. || caetera G h. l.

§ 84. alio loco: iv c. 8.

haec: for this fem. form cf. i II, 22 n. and Neue, Formenl. II<sup>3</sup> 417-8.

initio dixi: 6, 13.

persequendae et...: cf. Hieronymus, Ep. 132 (133) (ad Ctesiphontem), in it. 'omnium haereticorum uenena complecti, quae de philosophorum et maxime Pythagorae et Zenonis principis Stoicorum fonte manarunt. illi enim quae Graeci appellant πάθη, nos perturbationes possumus dicere: aegritudinem uidelicet et gaudium, spem et metum, quorum duo praesentia, duo futura sunt, asserunt exstirpari posse de mentibus et nullam fibram radicemque uitiorum in homine omnino residere, meditatione et assidua exercitatione uirtutum,' quoted by v. Arnim, Stoica III § 447, who adds 'cf. dial. adu. Pelag. ii 6 (ubi Chrysippum quoque nominat).'

quid autem...arduum: proverbial, cf. Plato, Rep. iv 435 c ἴσως γάρ, ὃ Σώκρατες, τὸ λεγόμενον ἀληθές, ὅτι χαλεπὰ τὰ καλά. Camerarius quotes Hesiod, Works and Days 288 μακρὸς δὲ καὶ ὄρθιος ὄμιος ἐς αὐτήν (sc. τὴν ἀρετήν).

haec quidem: Küh. endeavours to justify uerum quidem haec of the MSS, taking uerum quidem as = ἀλλά γε and comparing quamquam quidem and καίτοι γε, but it would be hard to illustrate this use of uerum quidem. For the formula F.A.W. compares καὶ ταῦτα μὲν τοιαῦτα, and Mo. καὶ ταῦτα μὲν δὴ ταῦτα.

hoc loco: sc. in Academia, 3, 7; ii 3, 9 n.

M. TVLLI CICERONIS
TVSCVLANARVM DISPVTATIONVM
LIBER QVARTVS

I. 1. Cum multis locis nostrorum hominum ingenia uirtutesque, Brute, soleo mirari, tum maxime in iis studiis quae sero admodum expetita in hanc ciuitatem e Graecia transtulerunt. nam cum a primo urbis ortu regiis institutis, partim etiam
5 legibus auspicia, caerimoniae, comitia, prouocationes, patrum consilium, equitum peditumque discriptio, tota res militaris diuinitus esset constituta, tum progressio admirabilis incredibilisque cursus ad omnem excellentiam factus est dominatu regio re publica liberata. nec uero hic locus est, ut de moribus institutis-

I. § 1, 2. mirari R I 6 7 V P I 4 G B I -3 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O I 2 7 8. admirari O 3. || maxime R V G B K. || in iis S ras. inter n et i. in his R V P G B E. 4. regiis G B I K I 2 W I 2 O I -3 7 8. <sup>i</sup> graegiis R. regis V. 5. caerimoniae R G. caerimonie V. cerimonie S. cerimonie E. 6. discriptio R V G K E. descriptio P B I 2 S W I. S. re p. B 3 W I M 2 H O I 3 W 2 at s eraso E 2 at re in ras. spatio unius litt. relicto. re pu O 7. r. p. K 2 M I. resp. R V P G B I 2 K I E J O 2 8. R. p. D C.

multis locis: 'in many respects,' cf. Lael. 13, 47 'specie quidem blanda, sed reapse multis locis repudianda,' where Sff., who deduces this use from that of locus as a verbum proprium in rhetoric (τόπος), quotes Cat. iv 10, 22 and other exx. See i 24, 57 n.

iis: Sff. notes that his of MSS would refer to philosophy, the subject of the Tusculans, whereas 2 § 5 shows that that is not the ref. here. Cf. i 3, 5 n. on 'qui his' for the confusion between his and iis in MSS.

prouocationes: appeal to the people existed under the kings: but the king might grant or refuse it as he pleased. This continued to be the rule under the republic, as against dictators, but the lex Valeria de prouocatione of 509 B.C. made the right absolute as against the ordinary magistrates. Mommsen, H.R. I 82, 95, 192, 320 (E.T.). Dav. compares Sen. Ep. 108, 31 where Cic. Rep. [ii 31, 54] is referred to; Livy viii 33; Val. Max. viii 1, 1.

Instances were rare under the kings and Hei. is probably right in referring the plural here to separate decisions upon questions of prouocatio.

consilium: a term often applied to the senate which was originally the board of advisers of the early kings. [Liv. xxvi 16, 10; Cic. Diuin. i 2, 4; Sen. de Ira iii 2, 4.]

equitum peditumque discriptio: the Servian constitution, which was in origin a military reform.

diuinitus: not sensu stricto but = 'excellently,' cf. Fam. i 9, 12 'quae sunt apud Platonem nostrum scripta diuinitus'; 'multa a Crasso diuinitus dicta ferebantur,' Or. iii 1, 4.

disciplina ac temperatione, 'constitution and organization,' i 10, 21 n.

sex libris..de re publica: part of the sixth book, the Somnium Scipionis, has been preserved in Macrobius' Commentarium in Somn. Scip. in two books. What we have of the remainder of the work was discovered by Mai in a Vatican palimpsest and published at Rome in 1822.

10 que maiorum et disciplina ac temperatione ciuitatis loquamur; aliis haec locis satis adcurate a nobis dicta sunt maximeque in iis sex libris, quos de re publica scripsimus. 2. hoc autem loco consideranti mihi studia doctrinae multa sane occurrunt cur ea quoque accessita aliunde neque solum expetita, sed etiam con-

15 seruata et culta, uideantur. erat enim illis paene in conspectu praestanti sapientia et nobilitate Pythagoras, qui fuit in Italia temporibus isdem quibus L. Brutus patriam liberauit, praeclarus auctor nobilitatis tuae. Pythagorae autem doctrina cum longe lateque flueret, permanuisse mihi uidetur in hanc ciuitatem,

20 idque cum coniectura probabile est, tum quibusdam etiam uestigiis indicatur. quis enim est qui putet, cum floreret in Italia Graecia potentissimis et maximis urbibus, ea quae magna dicta

11. accurate R V G B K S. || maximeque V G B K. maximeque R eod. atr. || in his sex R G B K. 12. publica G p in b mut. alt. man.

§ 2, 14. accessita R V P G B 1 2 K E J Gr. S at in accersita mut. accersita B 3 E 2 W 1 M 1 2 D II O 1-3 8. accersita O 7. accessita W 2. ex'cita C. 16. et nobilitate R V P G K S E J. || pythagoras B K.

pythagoras G eod. atr. 17. isdem R V G B 1 2 K E J. isdem P al. atr. superscr. isdem W 1 M 2 C O 3 S at ras. antecedente. isdem O 8. hisdem E 2 M 1 O 2. hisdem II. 18. pythagorae G. pythagorae B S. Pythagore R V. Phitagore E. 21. quis enim est R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 D C II O 3. quis est enim B 3 M 2 J O 1 2 7 8. 22. Graeciae G K. graeciae R. grectae V B S. grectae E. || potentissimis et maximis R V. potentissimis et maximis G. potentissimis et maximis P al. atr. corr. potentissimis et maximis B K.

§ 2. multa sane occurrunt cur: cf. i 21, 49 'nec tamen mihi sane quicquam occurrit cur...' The arguments with which Cicero supports his view are neither forcible nor forcibly expressed.

nobilitate: non generis sed famae ac nominis, Sff., who compares i 16, 38, where auctoritate bears much the same force. The conjecture of Madv. 'praestanti sapientiae nobilitate' is therefore rightly rejected.

temporibus isdem quibus...: cf. i 16, 38 n. on 'Superbo regnante' and following note. Also Zeller, Pre-Soc. Phil. i 325 n. 1 'The usual opinion now is that Pythagoras was born about the 49th Olympiad, that he came to Italy about the 59th or 60th, and died in the 69th. This is no doubt approximately correct...'

auctor, 'founder of your illustrious family.' For this statement cf. Brut. 14, 53; Phil. ii 11, 26. Niebuhr, R.H. i pp. 522 foll. (E.T.) conjectures that the early Brutus, the exactor regum, was a plebeian; but, even if he was a patrician, that circumstance would not in itself refute the assertion in the text. Dionys. Halic. v 18, if correct, would decide the matter, as he asserts that Brutus left γενεάν οὐτ' ἀρρενα οὔτε θήλειαν. This statement, however, was not unchallenged in antiquity: thus Plut. Brut. i says that Posidonius asserted that a son under age survived. On the other hand false genealogies and accounts of ad plebem transitiones were rife, cf. Brut. 16, 62; Dion. Halic. vi 70; the Bruti had many motives for claiming this descent; and the opponents of Caesar were very ready to accept the theory, as is shown by the writing on walls and on the base of the early Brutus' statue during the conspiracy a little later on.

nobilitatis: sc. generis. For the repetition of the word in a different sense within a very short interval Küh. refers to Sff. on Laelius 12, 40 p. 268 (turpis... turpis) where many exx. are collected.

longe lateque flueret: according to Diog. L. viii 14 pupils flocked to him not only from the Gk cities of Italy but also from native communities, including even Romans.

Graecia... magna: for Magna Graecia cf. i 16, 38 n. on 'magnam illam Graeciam.'

est, in iisque primum ipsius Pythagorae, deinde postea Pythagoreorum, tantum nomen esset, nostrorum hominum ad eorum 25 doctissimas uoces aures clausas fuisse? 3. quin etiam arbitror propter Pythagoreorum admirationem Numam quoque regem Pythagoreum a posterioribus existimatum. nam cum Pythagorae disciplinam et instituta cognoscerent regisque eius aequitatem et sapientiam a maioribus suis accepissent, aetates autem et 30 tempora ignorarent propter uetustatem, eum, qui sapientia excelleret, Pythagorae auditorem crediderunt fuisse.

II. Et de coniectura quidem hactenus. uestigia autem Pythagoreorum quamquam multa colligi possunt, paucis tamen utemur,

23. in hisque R G J. || pythagoraeorum V. pythagorae eorum G e conf. et punctis not. alt. man. 25. doctissimas R V P G B K. || aures R V G B I 2 K S E W I.

§ 3, 26. admirationem G B 2 K I W I. ammirationem B I.
 27. Pythagoreum R G J V at spat. et ras. post m. pythagororum K.
 28. instituta W I D C O 2 ed. H. constituta R V P G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 3 L 2 3 4 6 W 2 M I 2 II J O I 3 7 8. cōstituta E 2 at cō in ras.

29. aetates V P G. aetas E I. λ & αf R I. etates B 2.
 31. crediderunt fuisse R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2 M I 2 D C II O 2 3 ed. H. fuisse crediderunt R 6 K 2 W I J O I 8. fuisse credunt W 2. om. O 7.

II. 2. colligi R V G B K S E.

ea quae...dicta est = eam dico, quae dicta est.

§ 3. Pythagoreorum: objective genitive.

Numam...Pythagoreum: the theory that Numa was either a pupil or at least a follower of Pythagoras (Schwegler, Rom. Hist. I 560-4; Plut. Q. Rom. 10) is put forward in de R.P. ii 15, 28 and refuted by a reference to chronology, in which we find a translation of a reflexion of Polybius (vi 59, 2) and in the immediately preceding context Cicero has the words 'sequamur enim potissimum Polybium nostrum, quo nemo fuit in exquirendis temporibus diligentior.' Hence Niebuhr, H.R. I 238, rightly observes that 'The discourse on the early history of Rome which Cicero puts in the mouth of Scipio is entirely taken from Polybius.' Polybius' criticism has been repeated by many subsequent writers, e.g. Cic. de R.P., l.c.; Or. ii 37, 154; Livy i 18, 2; xl 29, 8; Dionys. Halic. ii 59, 1.

Rejecting the story, Mo. on de R.P. l.c. traces the error to the following causes: (a) one Pythagoras of Sparta was victor in the Olympiad in which Numa gained the throne; (b) Pythagoras settled in Italy, where Numa reigned; (c) there seemed to be a parallel between the wisdom and legislation of the two leaders; and Seeley, Livy i, Introd. p. 40, accounts for its origin by the theory that, when Numa's intercourse with Egeria ceased to be believed, some other explanation of his wisdom was sought and hence arose the theory of his being a pupil of Pythagoras, the only Gk philosopher who was well-known to the Italians. See also Momms. R.H. II 91.

instituta: Klotz in Add. p. 152 points out that constituta cannot be defended by such passages as Att. vi 1, 2 'quod quaedam a se constituta rescinderem,' and ibid. 'cogitabam eius multa inique constituta et acta tollere' for constituta is a participle in those places. Klotz is probably right in thinking that the error is due to an abbreviation īstituta (gstituta).

aetates...et tempora, 'their periods and dates.'

II. uestigia...Pythagoreorum: the first sure indication of knowledge of Pythagoras at Rome is found in the setting up of statues to that philosopher and Alcibiades in cornibus comitii at Rome by order of the senate in obedience to the Delphic oracle in the time of the Samnite wars, cf. Pliny, N.H. xxxv 12, 2-6; Plut. Numa 8; another is afforded by the story of the Gk books said to have been found in 181 B.C. on the Janiculum in a box labelled as containing writings quoniam non id agitur hoc tempore. nam cum carminibus soliti illi esse dicantur et praecepta quaedam occultius tradere et mentes suas a cogitationum intentione cantu fidibusque ad tranquillitatem traducere, grauissimus auctor in Originibus dixit Cato morem apud maiores hunc epularum fuisse ut deinceps, qui accubarent, canerent ad tibiam clarorum uirorum laudes atque uirtutes. ex quo perspicuum est et cantus tum fuisse discriptos uocum sonis et carmina. 4. quamquam id quidem etiam

6. grauissimus R V P G B. grauissimus K.

8. ad tibiam R V G S.

α tibia E. tibia B. 9. descriptos uocum L 2. rescripto f-uo cum V. rescriptos R 1 6 7 17 P 1 2 4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L 3-6 W 1 2 M 2 D C II J O 1-3 8 ed. H. rescriptos O 7. perscriptos M 1. discriptos
corr. Seyffertus.

of Numa, these writings being referred to by Piso Censorius and Valerius Antias as Pythagorean, cf. Livy xl 29; Pliny N.H. xiii 13, 85-7; the criticism of Polybius, referred to in the n. on 'Numam...Pythagoreum,' above, shows that the story was current in the time of the younger Scipio and this is also indicated by the statement of Plutarch, Quaest. Rom. 10, 76, that Castor referred Roman customs to Pythagoras τὰ Ῥωμαϊκὰ τοῖς Πυθαγορικοῖς συνοικεῖων. Cf. Dav. here and Rh. Mus. LVII p. 236. Mommsen I p. 271 finds indications of Pythagorean influence in the Roman calendar.

carminibus: 'By applying mathematics to music the Pythagoreans became the founders of the scientific theory of sound... The practical importance of music, however, was quite as great among them; it was cultivated partly as a means of moral education, partly in connexion with the art of medicine.' Zeller, Pre-Soc. Phil. I 348. And ibid. n. 2, 'The Harmony of the Pythagoreans presupposes a diligent study of music,' cf. p. 431. For the χρυσᾶ ἔπη formerly ascribed with little reason to Pythagoras and the ἱερὸς λόγος, both mentioned here by Hei. in his n., see Zeller, l. c. p. 311 n. 2.

occultius: cf. Porphy. Vit. Pyth. 41 ἔλεγε δὲ τινα καὶ μουσικῶν τρόπον συμβολικῶς, ἃ δὴ ἐπιπλέων Ἀριστοτέλης ἀνεγράψεν and Zeller, l. c. p. 351 and n. 2. Also Diog. L. viii 15 ἐλεγόν τε καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι Πυθαγόρειοι μὴ εἶναι πρὸς πάντα πάντα ῥητά, ὡς φησὶν Ἀριστοτέλους ἐν δεκάτῃ παιδευτικῶν νόμων. The Pythagorean silence became proverbial. R. and P.<sup>8</sup> § 55 a distinguish between the disciplinary test of silence imposed on learners in their first five years and the mysterious silence observed by all throughout their life with regard to certain observances and doctrines. For the question of esoteric and exoteric doctrines see Zeller, l. c. pp. 342, 356.

mentes suas...traducere: so Porph. Vit. Pyth. 32 says that Pythagoras began the day by calming his mind with the strains of the lyre and singing paeans. See also Quintil. ix 4, 12.

in Originibus: cf. i 2, 3 n. Brutus 19, 75; Hor. Odes iv 15, 29 foll.; Val. Max. ii 1, 10; Varro de uita pop. Rom. in Nonius, s.u. assa p. 76 M. See also Sellar, Rom. Poets of the Republic, pp. 37-8. [Ribbeck, Gesch. der Röm. Dicht. I 8.] The reasoning, as Hei. observes, is remarkable: the Pythagoreans had maxims in metrical form and calmed their minds by singing to the lyre; the early Romans sang in turn at banquets the deeds of heroes to the flute; therefore the early Romans were acquainted with the Pythagorean doctrine.

discriptos: Turnebus, Advers. vii c. 17, defends rescriptos of the MSS, comparing ἀναγράφειν, and Dav. takes the same view. Küh. says 'cantus uocum sonis rescribere est cantus scribendo (h.e. notis signisue) reuocare uel redigere ad aptos (acutos et graues) uocum sonos, quod nos uocamus komponiren, tonsetzen.' But illustrations of this use are wanting. J. Fr. Gronovius, on Livy vii 2, 7, and other early scholars conjectured descriptos, which Wes. Em. III i supports and Bai. adopts. But Sff. points out that the meaning is not cantus ex uocum sonis signalos or notatos but c. ex u. s. dispositos. discripto is the better reading in Liv. vii 2, 7 and no substitution is more common in MSS than that of describere for discribere; see variants in i 17, 38 and numerous exx. collected by Bücheler in duodecim tabulae declarant, condi iam tum solitum esse carmen; quod ne liceret fieri ad alterius iniuriam lege sanxerunt. nec uero illud non eruditorum temporum argumentum est, quod et deorum puluinaribus et epulis magistratum fides praecinunt, 15 quod proprium eius fuit, de qua loquor, disciplinae. mihi quidem etiam Appii Caeci carmen, quod ualde Panaetius laudat epistula quadam, quae est ad Q. Tuberonem, Pythagoreum uidetur.

§ 4, 11. duodecim R V P G B 1-3 K E 1 2 W 1 O 1 3. XII S D O 7 8 ed. H. 12. longe sanxerunt K. 14. praecinunt G. præcinunt V litt. eras.

praecinunt R. praecinunt E. 16. appii R V G B K S. appii E. || epistola V P G. aepistola R. || in non habent R V P G B 1-3 K S E 2 W 1 2. II J O 2 3 7.

in epistola O 1. in epistola C O 8. in epistola E 1. 17. ad Q. W 1 2 M 1 2

D C O 1 2 7. Q superscr. B 3 II. Q om. S E 2 O 3. atque V.

atque E 1. atque B 1 2 K marg. atque R G. || pythagoreum W 1 O 1.

pythagoreum P al. atr. superscr. pythagoreorum R V P 4 G S J. phitagoreo 24. E 1. pythagoreo 24. E 2 similiter desinentia habent K 1 2 B 2 3 W 2 M 1 2

D C II O 3 7. pictagoreum O 8. pythagore eorum B 1 at e ante o ex parte eras.

Rh. Mus. xiii pp. 598 foll. 'Melodies composed in accordance with the notes of the voice and poetry existed even in that day.'

sonis: Pantagathus proposed notis but Or., against F.A.W., who quoted this corr. with approval, points out that sonis denotes the higher and lower notae, with their appropriate signs, comparing comporre, cantare un suono of early Italian writers. For the abl. see Madv. Gram. § 254 obs. 5.

§ 4. duodecim tabulae: cf. de R. P. iv 10, 12 preserved in Augustin. Ciu. Dei ii 9 'Cicero...in libris quos de re publica scripsit, ubi Scipio disputans ait... "nos-trae...contra XII tabulae, cum perpaucas res capite sanxissent, in his hanc quoque sancendam putauerunt, si quis occentauiisset siue carmen condidisset, quod infamiam faceret flagitiumue alteri.'" Hor. Sat. ii 1, 80 foll. and probably Ep. ii 1, 152. Küh. and some others claim to give the exact words of the fragment, but these can only be inferred by conjecture from the reff. found in Latin writers. Cf. for this and for the remaining authorities Dirksen, Zwölf-Tafel Fragmente, on table VIII fr. 1.

iam tum: there is an interval of more than 220 years between the death of Numa and the decemviral legislation, though ballad poetry, which is no doubt the kind referred to in the law, may well have existed in the time of the early kings.

nec uero..., 'and indeed we are not without a proof of the culture of those times in the fact that...'

deorum puluinaribus: i.e. at the feasts of the gods on the occasion of a lectisternium, for which see Livy v 13, 6; Fowler, Roman Festivals 180 f. puluinaribus and epulis are ablatives of time like comitiis, ludis, gladiatoribus. See Madv. Gr. § 276 obs. 2.

[fides Gk. σφίδη 'gut': for the employment of the lyre in ritual see Mommsen's note R.H. i 293 (E.T.).]

proprium: Zeller, Pre-Soc. Phil. 1 348 n. 2.

Appii Caeci carmen: a poem which evidently consisted of oracular maxims of practical wisdom, a specimen of which is preserved in the de re publica oratio i, 1 formerly attributed to Sallust 'fabrum esse suae quemque fortunae'; another is given by Priscian viii 4, 18 (Krehl); another by Festus in stuprum p. 317 Ml. Goettling on Hesiod p. xxxi ed. 2 compares the style to that of Hesiod and finds Pythagoras indebted to the latter poet, cf. Mommsen, R.H. ii 100. [Ribbeck, Gesch. der Röm. Dicht. i 14.]

Appius Claudius, censor 312 B.C., lived at a time when Pythagoras was known at Rome; he was a man of original genius and open mind and might have taken an interest in Pythagorean views; but the three maxims preserved from him seem to be just what one might expect a Roman of his day to develop.

multa etiam sunt in nostris institutis ducta ab illis; quae praetereone ea quae peperisse ipsi putamur aliunde didicisse uideamur.

20 5. sed ut ad propositum redeat oratio, quam breui tempore quot et quanti poëtae, qui autem oratores exstiterunt! facile ut appareat nostros omnia consequi potuisse, simul ut uelle coepissent.

III. Sed de ceteris studiis alio loco et dicemus, si usus fuerit, et saepe diximus. sapientiae studium uetus id quidem in nostris, sed tamen ante Laelii aetatem et Scipionis non reperio quos appellare possim nominatim. quibus adulescentibus 5 Stoicum Diogenem et Academicum Carneadem uideo ad sena-

18. multa R 10 16 E 2. multa R 1. multae G. multæ E 1. multe R 2. 19. peperisse R 10 S E 2 W 1 O 2. peperisse E 1. peperisse P al. atr. corr. pperisse V G K. perperisse R B 2. pperisse B 1. || putamur R V P G B 1 2 S E 1 W 1 O 2 3. putemur R 6 P 4 B 3 K 2 E 2 W 2 M 2 D II J O 1 8. || aliunde didicisse uideamur post putamur uel putemur habent R 2 6 10 16 P 2 S W 1 M 1 O 1-3 V manu antiqua superscr.

§ 5, 20. Ⓢpositum G alt. man. superscr. 21. extiterunt R V G B K S E. || appreat R V G B K S E D. 22. nostros omnia consequi potuisse R 2 6 10 16 P 2 S W 1 O 3 7. post nostros habent aliunde didicisse uideamur uel uideantur omnia R 1 17 P 1 4 G B 1-3 K 2 E 2 3 W 2 II J O 8. licet ante aliunde habent II E 2. pro uideantur habent uideantur; R 7 M 1. ut appareant nostros aliud didicisse uideantur M 2. nostros et aliunde didicisse et omnia O 1.

nostros alium de dardidis uideantur omnia V. || simul ut uelle V. † &
III. 3. laelii R G. lelii V S E. 5. diogenem R V P G B 2 K. diogenē R 10 16 B 3 K 2 S E W 1 2 M 2 D O 2 7. diogenem R 2 B E 2 C O 3. dyogenem M 1. dyogenē II. || achademicum G. || carneadem R V P G K S. carneadē B 2 E W 1 2 O 7.

Panaetius: i 18, 42 n.

epistula... ad Q. Tuberonom: cf. Fin. iv 9, 23 'Panaetius, cum ad Q. Tuberonom de dolore patiendo scriberet'; Ac. ii 44, 135.

Q. Tubero, son of the sister of Africanus the younger, was a Stoic in theory and practice [see the story of his peruersa sapientia in p. Mur. 36, 75].

Pythagoreum: Küh. endeavours to defend Pythagoreorum of most MSS, imagining the genitive to denote 'derived from Pythagoreans.'

peperisse: most editors read repperisse but Or. Mo. Hei. and Sff. seem justified in reading peperisse which is nearer the MSS and justified by numerous examples. Dav. compares Or. 32, 114; Wopkens, ed. Hand, p. 121 Fin. iii 1, 3; Or. ii 34, 146; N.D. ii 29, 74; Leg. ii 14, 36; Fam. iv 13, 7; Sff. adds Off. ii 2, 8. repperisse ipsi would be a more complete contrast to aliunde didicisse but peperisse ipsi gives a very good contrast too.

§ 5. autem: continues, with intensive force; cf. v 20, 57 'qua pulchritudine urbem, quibus autem opibus praeditam seruitute oppressam tenuit ciuitatem!' Hand, Tursell. i p. 568.

simul ut: much rarer than simul ac but supported by the MSS here and in Ac. ii 16, 51; 2 in Verr. i 26, 67; Or. ii 5, 21; Phil. iii 1, 2; Fin. ii 11, 33 where see Madvig's n. Reid in a good note on Ac. ii 16, 51 adds Planc. 6, 14 where Madv. suspected the reading.

III. uetus id quidem... sed tamen... i 3, 6 n.

adulescentibus: Cic. uses the same expression with ref. to Laelius in Fin. ii 8, 24, where Madv. shews that the word is not to be taken strictly, as Africanus Minor was born in 185 or 184 B.C. and Laelius was older still.

Stoicum Diogenem: Diogenes Babylonius, born at Seleucia in Babylonia, pupil of Chrysippus and teacher of Antipater of Tarsus. For the form Diogenem see Neue, Formenl. 1<sup>3</sup> 474 (where there is a misprint in the citation of this passage).

Carneades, born at Cyrene in 215 B.C., founder of the New Academy. The third member of this famous legation, the tum ab Atheniensibus missos esse legatos, qui cum rei publicae nullam umquam partem attigissent essetque eorum alter Cyrenaeus, alter Babylonius, numquam profecto scholis essent excitati neque ad illud munus electi, nisi in quibusdam principibus temporibus illis fuissent studia doctrinae. qui cum cetera litteris mandarent, alii ius ciuile, alii orationes suas, alii monumenta maiorum, hanc amplissimam omnium artium, bene uiuendi disciplinam, uita magis quam litteris persecuti sunt. 6. itaque illius uerae elegantisque philosophiae, quae ducta a Socrate in Peripateticis adhuc permansit et idem alio modo dicentibus Stoicis,

6. misos K.                      7. attigissent R V P G B I 2 K S E J.                      || cyreneus R.
 cyreneus G B K.                      cireneus R 2.                      8. babylonius R V G.                      babylonius K. babilonius B E.                      || scolis R V G B K S E.                      9. munus R G K.                      <sup>legatois</sup> munus V al. atr. superscr.                      <sup>ii</sup> minus B eod. atr.                      11. monumenta B 2 K S. moni menta B E u in i ras. mut.                      <sup>v</sup> monomenta R eod. atr.                      mo nom ta V. monomenta G.                      12. amplissimam R V P G B K.
 § 6, 14. Socratae G.

Peripatetic Critolaus, is left unmentioned here and in Plutarch, Cato M. 22, 1. The date, 155 B.C., marks an epoch in the attitude of the Roman nobility towards Greek philosophy. An earlier trace of the new influence is indicated by the S.C. of 161 B.C., which banished Gk philosophy and teachers of rhetoric from Rome. The residence of the thousand Achaeans in Italy, from 168 B.C. onwards, no doubt helped to prepare the way for the effect produced by the embassy. For the circumstances that gave occasion for the sending of the legation see Momms. H.R. iv 199. The Athenians had plundered Oropus and, when condemned by the Sicyonians, whom the Romans had appointed arbitrators, to pay a fine of 500 talents, appealed to Rome. The senate reduced the fine to 100 talents.

uideo: of a fact learned from history, cf. 37, 79 and 22, 50 with Kühner's n.

numquam profecto...nisi...: the argument is inconclusive. The Athenians had at that time no statesmen properly so called. The sending of philosophers and rhetoricians as envoys even in the earlier period is illustrated by T.S.

scholis...excitati = e scholis, in quibus uitam umbratilem agebant, protracti. Küh.

temporibus illis: abl. of time. Küh. thinks that the words have the meaning of ut temporibus illis, comparing Or. ii 23, 98. But this meaning is not required here, while the ref. to the date is natural.

ius ciuile: e.g. Sex. Aelius Paetus Catus, for whom see i 9, 18 n.; also Appius Claudius Caecus, of § 4 (cf. Teuffel I § 90) and others in Teuffel I § 125.

orationes suas: e.g. Cato the Censor, who was the first Roman who wrote out and published his speeches. Cf. i, 2 3 n.

monumenta maiorum: especially Cato's Origines.

bene uiuendi disciplinam..., 'they set forth in their lives rather than in their writings a correct system of moral philosophy.'

§ 6. elegantis, 'logically precise,' 'thorough.' A contrast to that of the Epicureans, cf. i 22, 55 n. on 'tam elegantior.'

idem alio modo dicentibus Stoicis: cf. Leg. i 13, 38 'eis omnibus, siue in Academia uetere cum Speusippo, Xenocrate, Polemone manserunt, siue Aristotelem et Theophrastum, cum illis congruentes re, genere docendi paulum diferentes, secuti sunt, siue, ut Zenoni uisum est, rebus non commutatis immutauerunt uocabula...' See also v 12, 34 n. on 'ignobilis uerborum opifex.' The assertion involved in the text is strictly true with reference to the department of logic alone. For this see Zeller, Stoics, etc., p. 118. For Stoic obligations and differences in physics and ethics see ibid. pp. 374 foll.

cum Academici eorum controuersias disceptarent, nulla fere sunt aut pauca admodum Latina monumenta siue propter magnitudinem rerum occupationemque hominum, siue etiam quod imperitis ea probari posse non arbitrabantur, cum interim illis 20 silentibus C. Amafinius exstitit dicens, cuius libris editis commota multitudo contulit se ad eam potissimum disciplinam, siue quod erat cognitu perfacilis, siue quod inuitabantur inlecebris blandis uoluptatis, siue etiam, quia nihil erat prolatum melius, illud, quod erat, tenebant. 7. post Amafinium autem multi eiusdem 25 aemuli rationis multa cum scripsissent, Italiam totam occu-

16. academici R G K. <sup>h</sup> academici V. 17. aut pauca R 67 K 2 W 1.
 at pauca O 8. ac pauca R 17 V P 4 G B 13 K S E 12 W 2 M 12

D C II J O 1-3. <sup>c</sup> apauca P cod. atr. ut uid. ex pauca B 2. || monumenta G K.
 monumta R V. monimenta B S E. 18. hominum W 1 O 2. omnium R V G B 13 K 12 S E 1-3 L 2 3 5 W 2 M 12 D C II O 13 ed. H. om̄m L 4 6 O 7. oim B 2 O 8. 19. imperitis R V G K. 20. c. amafinius B 12 S E 12 M 1 D II O 8. II at a post m ex i al. atr. mut.

<sup>a</sup> c. amifinius R cod. atr. c. amifinius V G K. <sup>c.</sup> amifinius W 2. amifinius J.
 c. amafinius M 2. c. amafinius W 1. amafinius O 7. c. amaphanium O 3.
 c. amacinius O 1. || extitit R V G B K S E. || dicens R V G. docens S at o
ex i al. atr. mut. 21. ad eam V G B 12 E 2 II O 2. S marg. eandem.

ad eandem P B 3 K W 12 M 2 D C J O 13. <sup>n</sup> adeadem R al. atr. superscr.
 adeadem M 1 O 7. ad eandae E. || potissimum R V G B K.
 22. inuitabantur R 17 W 1. inuitabatur R 167 V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1-3 L 2-6 M 2 D C II O 1 3 7 8 ed. H. inuitebatur M 1. imitabatur
 W 2 O 2. mutabatur K 2. nuitabatur J. || inlecebris R V P G K.
 illecebris S E. || blandis R V P G B 1-3 K 12 S E 1 L 3-6 W 2 M 2
 C II O 2 3 8. blandę W 1. blande E 2 L 2 M 1 O 17 ed. H. et blandis D. blandiciis J. 23. erat prolatum R V P G B K plerique.
 erat probatū B 2.

§ 7, 24. amafinium R V P G B K S E 12 M 2 D C II O 8. amifinium
 W 2 J O 1. amafinium O 7. anafinium W 1. amaphanium O 3.

cum Academici... disceptarent: the reference is to the philosophers of the new Academy, who, being committed to no positive doctrines, could act impartially as arbitrators, cf. v 41, 120 'quorum (sc. Peripateticorum et Stoicorum) controuersiam solebat tamquam honorarius arbiter iudicare Carneades. nam....'

C. Amafinius: what is known about this writer, who first introduced the Epicurean philosophy to Latin readers, is found here and in Ac. i 2, 5-6 and Fam. xv 19. See Reid, Introd. to Ac. p. 21.

dicens, 'with plenty to say'; contrasted with illis silentibus.

ad eam... disciplinam sc. Epicuream, that being the system which Amafinius adopted. eam, which will be seen from the vv. ll. above to have more MS support than it was previously known to have, is rightly regarded by Sff. as demanded by potissimum.

cognitu perfacilis: Fin. i 8, 27.

inuitabantur... tenebant: collective substantives in the singular, when they refer to persons, seldom take a plural verb in Cicero or Caesar, frequently in Livy. contulit, the verb in direct connexion with the collective noun, is in the singular, and this is always so in Cicero. Küh. Gr. d. Lat. Spr. II p. 17.

blandis: blandae would be more strictly correct but such use of hypallage is not limited to poetry. Wes. illustrates from Cic. N.D. ii 39, 98 'fontium gelidas perrennitates...speluncarum concauas amplitudines'; iii 27, 69 'spe dubiae salutis.'

§ 7. multi: Rabirius (Ac. i 2, 5) and Catius the Insubrian (Fam. xv 16, 1; 19, 1) seem the only other Latin writers known of.

pauerunt, quodque maximum argumentum est non dici illa subtiliter, quod et tam facile ediscantur et ab indoctis probentur, id illi firmamentum esse disciplinae putant.

IV. Sed defendat quod quisque sentit; sunt enim iudicia libera; nos institutum tenebimus nullisque unius disciplinae legibus adstricti, quibus in philosophia necessario pareamus, quid sit in quaque re maxime probabile, semper requiremus. 5 quod cum saepe alias tum nuper in Tusculano studiose egimus. itaque expositis tridui disputationibus quartus dies hoc libro concluditur. ut enim in inferiorem ambulationem descendimus, quod feceramus idem superioribus diebus, acta res est sic:

8. Dicat, si quis uolt, qua de re disputari uelit.

26. maximum R V P G. maximum B K. 27. sumtiliter G. || quod & tam W 1. quod etiam R 16717 V P G B 1-3 K 1 E L 2 3 5 W 2 M 2 D C J O 1 3 7 8 ed. H. quod et S marg. iam. quod et L 4 6.
q. etiam O 2. qd'x facile etiam K 2. quod et E 2 M 1 II.

IV. 1. quod quisque E 2 W 1 2 D II O 1-3 7 8. quoquisq; V B E. quoquisque R G K S marg. quid quod. quidem quod quisque M 2.
q. quisque M 1. 2. nullisque R 16710 16 17 V P 14 G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. nullis W 2. nHq3 K 2. 3. adstricti R V G K. astricti B S.
R V G K. 5. saepe alias R V P G B K S E plerique. alias sepe D C.
6. disputationibus G in disputationibus alt. man. mut. 7. concluditur R V P G S J.

§ 8. Personarum indicia non habent R G B 1 2 E O 7: S non habebat: M et A in marg. habet V sed semel tantum, M ante dicat et A ante non mihi: M ante dicat et aegritudine et D ante non mihi habet P atr. nigro scripta: M et A habent B 3 W 1 O 3: M et D habent W 2 D C: T et D habet II: B et T habet O 8: Dis. uel Di et M habet O 1: J habet Magister ante aegritudine et Discipulus ante minime, postea M et D.

9. uolt R V G B K. uolt P al. atr. superscr.

aemuli: 'partisans'; cf. p. Mur. 29, 61 'Zeno cuius inuentorum aemuli Stoici nominantur'; Livy i 18, 2; Tac. Hist. iii 81 init.

non...subtiliter, 'of the superficial character of those utterances,' i 17, 41 n.

IV. quod quisque: for the order of words cf. i 4, 7 n. on 'de quo quis.'

nos...tenebimus: on the nature of Cicero's scepticism see Zeller III<sup>2</sup> 1, p. 581.

nullisque: it seems best, with the most recent editors, to retain the MS reading, with which Ml. compares v, 29, 82 'quoniam te nulla uincula impediunt ullius certae disciplinae': 'nam unus per se est unus aliquis aut nullus certus, recteque et usitate dicitur non unus (nec, nullis, etc.) ita, ut contrarium sit sed plures aut uniuersi,' Ml. Bentley supported his conj. nulliusque by ref. to Brutus 59, 216 'nulla re una magis oratorem commendari' to which Sff. adds Rep. ii 39, 65 'nullumque ex eis (ciuitatum generibus) unum esse optimum'; T.D. v 36, 105 'nemo de nobis unus excellat'; Livy ii 6, 3 'eos inter se, quia nemo unus satis dignus regno uisus sit, partes regni rapuisse.'

requiremus: Küh. explains as = 'rursus, non semel, sed iterum et saepius uel etiam atque etiam quaerere.' Perhaps we have rather an instance of the intensive use of re-. That emendation is not required seems evident from N.D. ii 38, 96 'sed adsiduitate cotidiana et consuetudine oculorum adsuescunt animi neque admirantur neque requirunt rationes earum rerum, quas semper uident.'

quartus dies: i.e. quarti diei disputationes.
in inferiorem ambulationem: i.e. in Academiam, cf. ii 3, 9. For ambulationem cf. Or. i 7, 28.

10 Non mihi uidetur omni animi perturbatione posse sapiens uacare.

Aegritudine quidem hesternae disputatione uidebatur, nisi forte temporis causa nobis adsentiebatur.

Minime uero; nam mihi egregie probata est oratio tua.

1 Non igitur existimas cadere in sapientem aegritudinem?

Prorsus non arbitror.

Atqui, si ista perturbare animum sapientis non potest, nulla poterit. quid enim? metusne conturbet? at earum rerum est absentium metus, quarum praesentium est aegritudo. sublata 20 igitur aegritudine sublatus est metus. restant duae perturbationes, laetitia gestiens et libido; quae si non cadent in sapientem, semper mens erit tranquilla sapientis.

9. Sic prorsus intellego.

25 Vtrum igitur maus? statimne nos uela facere an quasi e portu egredientis paululum remigare?

Quidnam est istuc? non enim intellego.

10. omni animi E 2 W 1 M 1 2 II O 1-3 8. omni perturbatione animi D C. omī animi B. omī ai B 3 O 7. oī ai W 2. omni animi V litt. inter i et a eras. omniā animi R K. omnia animi G. oīa ai B 2.
13. nobis R 6 L 2 W 1 O 8 L 5 at bis in ras. nobis non M 1. noui R 1 17 P 4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 1 3 L 3 6 W 2 M 2 II J O 1 2 S marg. nobis. noui V atr. uiridi linea ducta E 2. non ui L 4. nō R 7 O 7.
non D C. nouis Gr. noui nobis non ed. H. || assentiebatur R 2 10 16 B 3 K 1 S W 1 2 D C II O 1 3 8. asentiebatur B 1 at spatio inter i et e relicto et e ex i (fuerat a) mut. asentibatur E 1. asentiabatur R 1 eod. atr.
asenti abere V i.e. abare in ebare mut. al. atr. assentiabatur P. asentiabatur
B 2. absentiabatur G. absentiabatur O 7. 14. minime R V P G B K. || egregie B. egregie G. egregie R. egregiae V K. 15. existimas R V B G K. 18. et earum R 10 16 P G K 1 2 E 1 3 L 3-6 M 2 C J O 2.
& earum R V B 1-3 W 1 2 O 8 O 1 3 7 8. et earum S marg. etenim. sed earum E 2 L 2 II. non quia earum M 1. at earum corr. edd.
20. aegritudine sublatus R 6 7 V P 4 G B 1 S E 1 2 D C II O 2 7 8 ed. H. aegritudine et sublatus R 1 17 P B 3 K 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 J O 1 3. aegritudine sublata B 2. 21. libido R V P G B K.
§ 9, 23. intellego (bis) R V G B K. intelligo (bis) S E. 25. egredientis R 1 2
G B 1 2 K 1 O 7. egredientes R 10 16. aegridientis V. || paululum
R V P G S E.

§ 8. aegritudine: for this and the other three irrational emotions (πάθη) see iii 10, 23-4 and Introd. p. xxxi.

temporis causa: 'under the pressure of the moment,' 'to suit the occasion.' 'temporibus inseruimus, motus auctoritate mea, ne dubiis tuis taedium mihi exhiberes,' Neide. So Sff. on Lael. 8, 26 explains as = tempori cedens, comparing Fam. iv 9 imit. 'tempori cedere, id est necessitati parere'; Ac. ii 35, 113. Cf.

also Mur. 30, 62 'at temporis causa'; p. Flacc. 15, 36: 16, 37.

ista: sc. perturbatio.

quid enim? 'for, I would ask;' i 25, 60 n.

absentium: cf. iii 11, 25 'metus opinio magni mali inpendentis.'

gestiens: iii 10, 23 n.

§ 9. utrum: the neuter pronoun, the alternative clauses marked by -ne and an following in a separate sentence as in

V. Quia Chrysippus et Stoici cum de animi perturbationibus disputant magnam partem in his partiendis et definiendis occupati sunt, illa eorum perexigua oratio est qua medeantur animis nec eos turbulentos esse patiantur, Peripatetici autem ad placandos animos multa adferunt, spinas partiendi et definiendi praetermittunt. quaerebam igitur, utrum panderem uela orationis statim an eam ante paululum dialecticorum remis propellerem.

Isto modo uero; erit enim hoc totum quod quaero ex utroque perfectius.

10. Est id quidem rectius; sed post requires, si quid fuerit obscurius.

Faciam equidem; tu tamen, ut soles, dices ista ipsa obscura planius quam dicuntur a Graecis.

Enitar equidem, sed intento opus est animo, ne omnia dilabuntur, si unum aliquid effugerit. quoniam, quae Graeci πάθη

V. 2. in his R V G B 1 2 K S E M 1 O 1 3 7. in iis M 2. in hiis D II O 8. 5. adferunt R V G K. afferunt B S. 6. uela orationis S E 2 W 2 M 1 2 II O 2 7. uela orationis V at ue extra lineam et alia man. scr.

panderē orationis B 1 al. atr. ras. post ē. ut orationis E 1 al. atr. superscr.

ut orationis B 2. † orationis K 1. uel orationis R 1 man. ant. sup.
uel orationis G. 7. an ea ante B 1 ras. post ea. ea mante K 1.

§ 10, 13. planus G alt. man. superscr. 15. unum aliquid R 1 6 V G B 1 2 K S E 1-3 II O 7 8. unum aliquod P B 3 W 1 M 1 2 C O 1 2.

unum ad W 2. unum ad K 2. unum aliqd' J. || pathe R V G B K. pathe S margin. παθος.

Fin. ii 19, 60; Diu. ii 58, 120; 63, 129; Ac. ii. 22, 71 and Reid's n. there. Another use, common in Plautus (e.g. Capt. 268, Trin. 306), in which -ne is appended to the first emphatic word after utrum in the question, is also found in Cicero, e.g. iv 27, 59; p. Quint. 30, 92.

uela facere = uela pandere, cf. Verr. ii 5, 34, 88 'uela fieri imperauit.'

remigare: cf. dialecticorum remis below. The metaphor contrasts the smooth and free movement of continuous discourse with the jerky and slower process of dialectic argument.

V. quia: elliptic = haec dixi quia, cf. iii 7, 14 n. on 'quoniam.'

Chrysippus et Stoici = et ceteri Stoici, the views of Chrysippus being far the most influential among the Stoics of Cicero's day. This mode of expression, which is common in Gk and Lat., is illustrated by Dav., who compares Diu. i 53, 121 Dareus et Persae ab Alexandro et Macedonibus; Homer, Il. xix 63

"Ἐκτορι μὲν καὶ Τρωσὶ τὸ κέρδιον, etc., Petron. 2 Pindarus nouemque lyrici.

spinas: cf. spinosum applied to the Stoic style in Fin. iii 1, 3 quoted in n. on i 8, 16; also Fin. iv 3, 6; dumeta Ac. ii 35, 112; N.D. i 24, 68.

dialecticorum remis: 'h.e. an orationem exordiret more dialecticorum a subtiliore disputatione, quae lentius progreditur' Küh. Cf. iii 6, 13 'primo... Stoicorum more agamus.'

isto modo uero: 'As you suggest, by all means.' isto does not express the latter alternative but the method suggested by the person addressed, the mention of alternatives being taken to imply a recommendation of their acceptance. For the affirmative use of uero, not uncommon in replies, cf. ii 11, 26.

ex utroque, 'by an application of both methods.'

§ 10. animo sc. tuo, cf. ii 5, 15.

ne...dilabuntur, 'lest the whole argument be lost if a single stage is missed.' Editors compare Fin. iii 22, 74 where uocant, nobis perturbationes appellari magis placet quam morbos, in his explicandis ueterem illam equidem Pythagorae primum, dein Platonis discriptionem sequar, qui animum in duas partes diuidunt, alteram rationis participem faciunt, alteram expertem; 20 in partice rationis ponunt tranquillitatem, id est placidam quietamque constantiam, in illa altera motus turbidos cum irae, tum cupiditatis, contrarios inimicosque rationi. 11. sit igitur hic fons; utamur tamen in his perturbationibus describendis Stoicorum definitionibus et partitionibus, qui mihi uidentur in hac quaes- 25 tione uersari acutissime.

18. dein R V G B 2 K E 2 O 7.      dein P W 2 J.      deinde B 3
S W 1 M 1 2 II O 1 3.      dehinc C O 8.      dehoc <sup>inc</sup> in platonis E 1.

de hoc in B 1 al. atr. superscr. || discriptionem R V P G K.      discriptione E.
descriptionem B 1-3 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 II J O 1 3 7. || partes R V P G B K S.
19. participem faciunt R 1 10 16 V G B 1-3 S E L 2-6 W 1 2 C J O 1-3 7.

participem facit K ead. atr.      20. ponunt B 3 K 2 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 C II J O 1 3 7 8.      ponunt B u ex a mut.      ponunt V.      ponant E 1. ponant R G B 2 K.      || id ÷ K.      idē B 1 pro id est.      .i. W 2.

21. turbidos cum P 2 L 4 O 1 3.      turbidos cum E 2 at c al. atr.      turbidos tum
R 1 7 V P 1 4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E L 2 3 5 6 W 1 2 M 1 2 C II J

O 7 8 ed. H.      om. D.      22. cupiditatis contra V atr. uiridi. || rationi G K. rationis R.      rationis B.

§ 11, 24. partitionibus K 1.      parti<sup>u</sup>tionibus R 1.      particionibus V G. partionibus R 2 10 16.      25. acutissime R V G B K.

Cato thus refers to the Stoic system: 'admirabilis compositio disciplinae incredibilisque rerum traxit ordo...quid non sic aliud ex alio nequitur, ut si ullam litteram moueris, labent omnia? nec tamen quicquam est, quod moueri possit.'

morbos: cf. iii 4, 7 n. on 'ego poteram morbos.'

Pythagorae primum: this division of the soul seems to have been first attributed to Pythagoras by writers such as Posidonius, cf. Galen, de Plac. Hipp. et Plat. iv p. 425; v p. 478; Plutarch, Plac. Phil. iv 4. A more correct statement of the Pythagorean view is no doubt that of Diog. L. viii 30 τὴν ἀνθρώπου ψυχὴν διηρῆσθαι τριχῆ, εἰς τε νοῦν καὶ φρένας καὶ θυμὸν. νοῦν μὲν οὖν καὶ θυμὸν εἶναι καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις ζῴοις, φρένας δὲ μόνον ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ.

For the Platonic division of the soul into two parts, τὸ λογιστικόν and τὸ ἄλογον, the latter being subdivided into τὸ θυμοειδές and τὸ ἐπιθυμητικόν, see n. on i 10, 20 'Plato triplicem.' The Stoics on the other hand derived all faculties of the soul from the ἡγεμονικόν. Plut. Plac. Phil. iv 21; i 33, 80n. on 'is, contra quem.'

It is observed by editors that Cicero does not make any use of this division in the details that follow, §§ 11—33. For a suggested explanation of the significance of this fact see Introd. pp. xliii ff.

in partice rationis...turbidos: this of course applies only to those (including Posidonius) who adopted the Platonic division of the soul. With the Stoics tranquillitas was a calm state of the ἡγεμονικόν due to the obedience of the passions and desires to reason; perturbatio was a disordered state of the same ἡγεμονικόν due to a false judgment (κρίσις). Cf. Off. i 29, 102 'efficiendum autem est, ut adpetitus rationi oboediant...sintque tranquilli atque omni animi perturbatione careant; ex quo elucebit omnis constantia, omnisque moderatio' (quoted by Hei.).

cum: Küh. would approve of this reading if it had more MS support but thinks tum...tum... may be defended in the usual sense of modo...modo..., but 'both...and' is the natural meaning here and most editors read cum...tum, nothing being more frequent in MSS than the confusion of these two words.

§ 11. fons: the pars rationis expertis is then the source of the perturbationes.

VI. Est igitur Zenonis haec definitio, ut perturbatio sit, quod πάθος ille dicit, auersa a recta ratione contra naturam animi commotio. quidam breuius perturbationem esse adpetitum uehementiorem, sed uehementiorem eum uolunt esse qui longius
 5 discesserit a naturae constantia. partes autem perturbationum uolunt ex duobus opinatis bonis nasci et ex duobus opinatis malis; ita esse quattuor, ex bonis libidinem et laetitiam, ut sit laetitia praesentium bonorum, libido futurorum, ex malis metum et aegritudinem nasci censent, metum futuris, aegri-
 10 tudinem praesentibus; quae enim uenientia metuuntur, eadem adficiunt aegritudine instantia. 12. laetitia autem et libido in bonorum opinione uersantur, cum libido ad id quod uidetur bonum inlecta et inflammata rapiatur, laetitia ut adepta iam aliquid concupitum eferatur et gestiat. natura enim omnes ea quae

VI. 2. πάθος G. πατος R K. || auersa a recta R G B 1-3 K 1 W 2 O 2.

auersa a <sup>a</sup>recta V. auersa a ratione O 1 recta om. auersa a rōne recta W 1.
 auersa recta O 7. 3. commotio R V G. cōmotio K. || adpetitum G. appetitum K. 5. partes R V G B 1 2 K S E. 6. opinatis G prius i in ras.
 8. libido R V G B K. 11. adficiunt R V G K E. afficiunt B 1 2 S C

O 2 3 8 7. <sup>e</sup>afficiunt M 2. efficiunt W 1 2 M 1 II J O 1. om. D. || aegritudine V G O 2. aegritudinem K eod. atr. egritudine B 1-3 E 1 2 M 2 O 3 8. egritudinem P. aegritudinē R 1. egritudinē W 1. egritudinē S J. egritudinem W 2 M 1 C II O 1 7. om. D.

§ 12, 11. libido (bis) R V P G B K. 13. illecta R 6 B 3 E 3 L 6 M 1 2
 O 2 3. iniecta R 1 7 17 V P 1 2 4 G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L 2-5 C II
 O 1 8 ed. H. iniecta W 1 marg. illecta. i recta O 7. om. W 2 D J.
 14. eferatur R V G K. hęc fe/ Ratur E 1. et feratur B 2. efferatur P
 B 1 3 S W 1 2 J O 3 7 8. || natura K 2 S W 1 M 2 O 1-3 8 ed. H.

nata W 2. <sup>v</sup>nā M 1. <sup>a</sup>naturę V. <sup>u</sup>nature R 1 7. naturae R G. naturę B E. nature K E 2 C O 7. natē B 2.

VI. haec definitio, ut... 'Zeno's definition then makes emotion to be...' Zeno in Diog. L. vii 110 defines πάθος (perturbatio) as ἀλογος καὶ παρὰ φύσιν ψυχῆς κίνησις ἢ ὀρμὴ πλεονάζουσα (adpetitum uehementior). Cf. Stobaeus, Ecl. Eth. ii 166; and other ex. in Dav. Hence Salmasius conjectured et contra naturam: but contra naturam = auersa a recta ratione and the definition is repeated in the same words in 21, 47. For the attributive use of the prep. with its case see i 22, 51 n. on 'animum sine corpore.'

uehementiorem...: Hei. compares Chrysippus in Galen, Hipp. et Plat. iv 369 κατὰ τοῦτο δὲ καὶ ὁ πλεονασμὸς τῆς ὀρμῆς εἴρηται διὰ τὸ τὴν καθ' αὐτοὺς καὶ φυσικὴν τῶν ὀρμῶν συμμετρίαν ὑπερβαίνειν.

partes: here used of main divisions (genera). See iii 11, 24 n. on 'genere quattuor, partibus plures.' pars more often denotes a subdivision, cf. 7, 16; 9, 20.

uolunt, 'they maintain,' 'hold,' i 18, 42.

opinatis: iii 11, 24 n.

libidinem = cupiditatem (ἐπιθυμίαν).

futuris...praesentibus: for the non-repetition of the preposition see iii 15, 33 n. on 'in duabus rebus ponit, auocatione...'

uenientia...instantia = futura...praesentia. Mo. compares Or. ii 25, 105; Auct. ad Herenn. ii 5; Quintil. v 10, 42 'praeteritum, instans, futurum.' For the thought Dav. compares Arrian, Epict. iii 26 p. 360 ὦν γὰρ προσδοκωμένων φόβος γίνεται καὶ λύπη παρόντων. [For the partitio cf. S. Paul. Nol. Epp. 39, 6 sunt enim in corpore nostro principalia totidem inceptiua uitiorum spes metus gaudium dolor quibus maxime genus

15 bona uidentur sequuntur fugiuntque contraria. quam ob rem simul obiecta species est cuiuspiam quod bonum uideatur ad id adipiscendum inpellit ipsa natura. id cum constanter prudenterque fit, eius modi adpetitionem Stoici βούλησιν appellant, nos appellemus uoluntatem. eam illi putant in solo esse sapiente, 20 quam sic definiunt: uoluntas est, quae quid cum ratione desiderat. quae autem a ratione auersa incitata est uehementius, ea libido est uel cupiditas effrenata, quae in omnibus stultis inuenitur. 13. itemque cum ita mouemur ut in bono simus aliquo, dupliciter id contingit. nam cum ratione animus mouetur placide 25 atque constanter, tum illud gaudium dicitur; cum autem in-

15. sequuntur B I S E W I M I J O 3 8. secuntur R V P G B 2 3

K E 2 W 2 M 2. 16. species est E 2 C. speci est R eod. atr. superscr. spēs est O 7 8. species B E I est omisso. speci est V t extra lineam excurr. G. specie est B 2. speci ē K 1. species cuiuspiam est B 3 M 2. species iam M 1.

speties est O 3. spes ē W I 2. est species O I. species S fort. ead. man. superscr. om. D. 17. inpellit R V G B K. 18. adpetitionem R V G K. adpetitionem S. || BOYΛHCIN K. boYΛHCin G. 19. appellamus R V P B 1-3 K 1 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 C I I J O I 2 7 8. appellamus G om. D. appellamus corr. Wesenbergius. 20. daefiniunt G. 21. a ratione auersa S. ratione auersa R 16 L 4 5 W 1. ratione aduersa R 1 7 V P G B 1-3 K 1 E I 2 L 2 6 W 2 M I 2 I I J O I-3 7 8. rationi aduersa C. aduersus rationem R 6. om. D. a ratione auersa corr. Orellius. 22. effrenata R V G B 1-3 K 1 S E W 2 O I 3 8.

turbatur humanum, duobus praesentibus et duobus futuris; praesentibus aegritudine animi uel gaudio, futuris metu uel spe. unde cauendum est ne dum aliud ex his uitium fugimus, incurramus contrarium.] 12. simul = simul atque, cf. Fin. iii 6, 21; Ac. ii 27, 86.

adipiscendum: iii 27, 66 n.

βούλησιν: with specialised force, = 'reasonable wish.' βούλησις is one of the three εὐπάθειαι (constantiae) treated of in this chapter. Cf. Diog. L. vii 116 εἶναι δὲ καὶ εὐπαθείας φασὶ τρεῖς, χαρὰν, εὐλάβειαν, βούλησιν· καὶ τὴν μὲν χαρὰν ἐναντίαν εἶναι τῇ ἡδονῇ, οὕσαν εὐλογον ἔπαρσιν· τὴν δ' εὐλάβειαν τῷ φόβῳ, οὕσαν εὐλογον ἔκκλισιν· φοβηθήσεσθαι μὲν γὰρ τὸν σοφὸν οὐδαμῶς, εὐλαβηθήσεσθαι δὲ τῇ δ' ἐπιθυμίᾳ ἐναντίαν φασὶν εἶναι τὴν βούλησιν, οὕσαν εὐλογον ὄρεξιν.

appellemus: the necessary em. of Wes. Em. I p. 18, who supports the subj. by a long list of parallel passages, e.g. § 13 below, appelletur, nominetur; 12, 28 dicitur, Bentley's corr., supported by the following nominetur and habeat. appellemus is also read in Fin. iii 6, 20, after Bentley, where see Madvig's n. Meaning as well as usage condemn appellamus in our passage, as the indic. would mean that the word uoluntas was commonly used in Latin in the sense expressed by the Stoic technical term βούλησις. Where we have gaudium dicitur in § 13 below the expression is compressed for (a Stoicis) χαρὰ, id est, gaudium dicitur.

a ratione auersa: ratione aduersa of the MSS may be good Latin, though Wes. thinks Cic. would rather have written aduersante, inuita or repugnante; but we must take this passage along with § 13 'metus (a) ratione auersa cautio' where the insertion of a is the natural emendation, supported by 9, 22 'auersa a praescriptione rationis'; 15, 34 'motus auersi a ratione'; 6, 11 and 21, 47 'auersa a ratione...commotio,' instances cited by Orelli.

§ 13. nam cum ratione: Dav. on Bentley's conj. read nam cum cum ratione; Sff. shows that Cic. avoided this combination and reads nam cum ratione animus cum mouetur... But Küh. notes that with passives the simple abl. is perfectly correct, comparing 38, 83, 'a te ratione propositum'; Off. i 2, 7 'omnis quae ratione suscipitur de aliqua re institutio.'

gaudium: χαρὰ; see notes above on βούλησιν and 'appellemus.'

aniter et effuse animus exsultat, tum illa laetitia gestiens uel nimia dici potest, quam ita definiunt: sine ratione animi elationem. quoniamque, ut bona natura adpetimus, sic a malis natura declinamus, quae declinatio cum ratione fiet, cautio appelletur, eaque intellegatur in solo esse sapiente; quae autem sine ratione et cum exanimatione humili atque fracta, nominetur metus; est igitur metus a ratione auersa cautio. 14. Praesentis autem mali sapientis adfectio nulla est, stulti autem aegri-

§ 13, 26. exultat R V P G B I 2 K S E. 28. quoniamq; C. quōque K I (i.e. quoniamque cf. infra § 14 ubi K I habet quō aegritudini nulla). qm̄que K 2

W 2 J O 7 8. qm̄ om. que II O I. quoniam que E I al. atr. superscr. quoniam (qm̄) quae R G E 2 M 2 O 2. quoniam que B I W I. Qm̄ que V
atr. nigro punctis appos. quāq; B 2. quomodoq; O 3. qmodoque P.

qm̄<sup>ut</sup> que<sup>fut</sup> aut S. || adpetimus V G. ap̄p̄imus R eod. atr. d in p mut.
appetimus R 2 B K. 29. declinatio si cum ratione R V P G B I 3 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 C II J O 1-3 7 8. declinatio fiet cell. om. B 2. om. D. declinatio cum ratione corr. Bentleius. || appelletur R G B I 2 K 2 C II

O 2 3 7 8. appelletur V. appellatur B 3 K I W I 2 O I. 30. intellegatur

R G B K. intellegatur V. intelligatur S. 32. metus ratione auersa R V P G B I-3 K I 2 E I M 2 J W I marg. e contextu om. metus ratione aduersa R 6 7 S E 2 W 2 II O 3 7 8. metus auersa ratione O 2. metus rationi aduersa C O I. metus aduersa ratione M I. metus a ratione auersa Gr. ed. H. om. D.

§ 14, 33. adfectio R V G K E. affectio P B S. || stulti autem R 6 O I.
stult<sup>a</sup> S i.e. a in i man. recenti mut. stulta autem R V P I 2 4 G B I-3

K I 2 E I 2 L 2-6 W I 2 M I 2 C J O 2 3 8 7. stulti. II. om. D.

quae declinatio cum ... : editors generally, except Mo. and Küh., follow Bentley in ejecting si before cum. This gives a straightforward constr. if quae declinatio be taken in the sense of ea declinatio, quae... Küh., retaining si, finds here an instance of the figure anantapodoton, as in iii 17, 36 (n. on 'Pythagoras...si diceret') 'qua apodosis cum parenthesi coaluit.'

cautio: εὐλάβεια, see note above on βούλησιω.

quae autem = ea autem quae...

§ 14. praesentis...aegritudo est: exception has been taken (a) to the double genitive mali sapientis adfectio; (b) to the change of number stulti aegritudo est...adficiuntur; (c) to the repetition of autem. Hence the following conjectures: praesentibus autem malis, Dav. in ed. 2 and Sff.; sapienti...stultis autem Bent. followed by Dav. and Lall.; stultorum omitting autem Dav. in ed. 2; stultorum tum Sff.

Wopkens, Lectt. Tull. I 122, finds all three objections groundless. Instances of such double genitives are not uncommon, cf. ii 15 35 functio quaedam uel animi uel corporis grauioris operis; iv 17, 40, etc. The transition from singular to plural, or plural to singular, provided it does not take place within a single clause, is Ciceronian, cf. 31, 65 'perturbationem... omnes eas...'; Fin. ii 19, 61 with Madvig's n.; Ac. ii 7, 22; N.D. i 38, 106; Diu. i 33, 72. See 3, 6 n. on 'inuitantur...tenebant.'

The repetition of autem within such short space would not necessarily condemn the word here but the contrast between the sapiens and the stultus requires asyndeton, as pointed out by T.S. autem may possibly be a copyist's repetition of the preceding autem and stulti (mss stulta) may be the correct reading. But it is more likely to have arisen from the end of stultorum, perhaps contracted, stultorū becoming stulta ū.

eaque: Bake's corr. for ea qua of the mss, which would seem to distinguish this aegritudo from some other species of aegritudo. Interchanges of que quae and tudo est, eaque adficiuntur in malis opinatis animosque demittunt 35 et contrahunt rationi non obtemperantes. itaque haec prima definitio est, ut aegritudo sit animi adversante ratione contractio. sic quattuor perturbationes sunt, tres constantiae, quoniam aegri-tudini nulla constantia opponitur.

VII. Sed omnes perturbationes iudicio censent fieri et opinione. itaque eas definiunt pressius, ut intellegatur non modo quam uitiosae, sed etiam quam in nostra sint potestate. est ergo aegritudo opinio recens mali praesentis, in quo demitti contra-5 hique animo rectum esse uideatur, laetitia opinio recens boni praesentis, in quo efferri rectum esse uideatur, metus opinio impendentis mali, quod intolerabile esse uideatur, libido opinio

34. ea q<sup>3</sup> O 7. ea qu<sup>e</sup> E 1. ea quae G. ea qua R 1 6 16 V P 1 4 B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 2 L 2-6 W 1 M 1 2 C Π J O 1-3 8 ed. H. ea q<sup>a</sup> E 3.
 ea q<sup>1</sup> W 2. om. D. eaque corr. Bakius. || adficiuntur R V G K E.
 afficiuntur B S. 35. obtemperantes G K. optemperantes B 1. || definitio
 G K. difinitio V. 37. tres constantie V atr. uiridi superscr.
 VII. 2. intellegatur R V G B K. 3. ergo R V G B 1 2 J O 1 8.
 ergo E 1. g W 2 O 7. igitur W 1 O 3. 5. animo B 1. || laetitia.....intolerabile esse uidetur e contextu om. G in marg. inferiore add. alt. man.
 6. efferri R G. etferri E. hęc ferri V. et ferri K atr. nigro mut. efferri B 1-3 K 2 S W 1 2 J O 7 8. 7. impendentis R V G S. impndentis E. || libido hic et infra B 1. libido G at u in i mut. ead. man.
 libido K 1 at infra libido atr. nigro superscr. libido hic et infra R 1 at i ex u ras. mut. libido V P.

qua are very common in MSS. Cf. variants in iv 13, 31 (ea quae for eaque); iv 18, 41 omnino quaeque for omninoque quae.

aegritudo...contractio: Dav. gives the Greek definition from Stobaeus, Ecl. Eth. ii 90, 14 W. λύπην δ' εἶναι συστολήν ψυχῆς ἀπειθῆ λόγῳ, upon which follow the words αἴτιον δ' αὐτῆς τὸ δοξάζειν πρόσφατον κακὸν παρῆναι, ἐφ' ᾧ καθήκει συστῆλλεσθαι, which serve to illustrate the beginning of c. 7. Diog. L. vii 111 and Andronicus Rhodius περὶ παθῶν p. 523 I p. 11 (Kreuttner) pronounce λύπην τὸ be συστολή ἀλογος. Cf. i 37, 90 n. on 'animi contractio'; iii 34, 83 n. on 'contractiun-cula.'

constantiae: εὐπάθειαι, cf. 6, 12 n. on βούλησιν.

VII. iudicio: Zeller, Stoics, etc., c. x
 pp. 228 foll.; iii 13, 28 n. on 'opinionem mali aegritudinem esse natura.'

pressius, 'more exactly.' Fin. iv 10, 24; Ac. ii 9, 29 and Reid's n.

est ergo aegritudo...: see n. on 'aegritudo...contractio' above.

in quo...rectum esse uideatur: iii 31, 76 n. on 'Chrysippus autem.'

laetitia: cf. Andronicus, περὶ παθῶν I p. 11 (Kreuttner) p. 523 ἡδονὴ δὲ ἀλογος ἔπαρσις, ἣ δόξα πρόσφατος ἀγαθοῦ παρου-σίας, ἐφ' ᾧ οἴονται δεῖν ἐπαίρεσθαι.

metus: Andronicus, l.c. φόβος δὲ ἀλογος ἔκκλισις, ἣ φυγῆ ἀπὸ προσδοκωμένου δεινοῦ. Stobaeus, Ecl. Eth. ii 90, 11 W. φόβον δ' εἶναι ἔκκλιση ἀπειθῆ λόγῳ, αἴτιον δ' αὐτοῦ τὸ δοξάζειν κακὸν ἐπιφέρεισθαι τῆς δόξης τὸ κινητικὸν πρόσφατον ἐχούσης τοῦ ὄντως αὐτὸ φευκτὸν εἶναι.

libido: Andronicus, l.c. ἐπιθυμία δὲ ἀλογος ὄρεξις, ἣ διωξις προσδοκωμένου ἀγαθοῦ.

On comparing Galen, Hipp. et Plat.
 iv p. 366, where Chrysippus is represented as departing from the view of the παλαιοί, τὴν λύπην ὀριζόμενος δόξαν πρόσφατον κακοῦ παρουσίας, τὸν δὲ φόβον προσδοκίαν κακοῦ, τὴν δ' ἡδονὴν δόξαν πρόσφατον ἀγαθοῦ παρουσίας, we see that all the definitions given here by Cicero are Chrysippean.

uenturi boni, quod sit ex usu iam praesens esse atque adesse.
 15. sed quae iudicia quasque opiniones perturbationum esse 10 dixi, non in eis perturbationes solum positas esse dicunt, uerum illa etiam quae efficiuntur perturbationibus, ut aegritudo quasi morsum aliquem doloris efficiat, metus recessum quendam animi et fugam, laetitia profusam hilaritatem, libido effrenatam adpetentiam. opinationem autem, quam in omnis definitiones 15 superiores inclusimus, uolunt esse inbecillam adsensionem.

§ 15, 10. eis RVG B 12 K W 1 II O 127. 11. efficiuntur RVG B K S. ||
 quas | in morsum V i extra lineam et al. atr. script. 13. effrenatam R 67 P B S
 W 1 O 18. effrenatā R 1 K 1. effrenata V G B 2. effrena E. || adpetentiam R G B 2 K E. appetentiam R 2 16 V P B 1 S. appetentiā
 R 10. 14. opinationem RVG B 1-3 K S E 12 L 3-6 W 12 M 2 D C II J O 1278 Gr. ed. H. oppinationem M 1. opinionem L 2 O 3. oppinionem K 2. || omnis RVG K E. omīs B 1 W 2. omnes P.
 15. inbecillam RVG B 12 K 1 E 1 M 1 O 7. ibecillā J. inbecillum S. inbecillam R 2 10 16 P B 3 K 2 E 2 W 2 M 2 D C O 138.
 ibecillum II. ibecillē W 1. || adsensionem R V P G K E. assensionem R 2
 B 1 S W 1.

[praesens...adesse: cf. Fin. i 17, 55 ‘nam corpore nihil nisi praesens et quod adest sentire possumus,’ where Madv.
 notes that adesse is temporal not local in its signification as here and that the combination of praesens and adesse is for the sake of emphasis.]

§ 15. sed quae iudicia...: in Galen, Hipp. et Plat. v 1 p. 429, we read that Χρυσίππος μὲν οὖν ἐν τῷ πρώτῳ περὶ παθῶν ἀποδεικνύει πειράται κρίσεις τινὰς εἶναι τοῦ λογιστικοῦ τὰ πάθη, Ζήνων δὲ οὐ τὰς κρίσεις αὐτὰς ἀλλὰ τὰς ἐπιγινομένας αὐταῖς συστολάς καὶ διαχύσεις ἐπάρσεις τε καὶ πτώσεις τῆς ψυχῆς ἐνβμίξεν εἶναι τὰ πάθη. The difference here indicated was really less than it would at first appear to be. Chrysippus, in asserting that the πάθη were decisions of the reason, did not exclude the elation or dejection or other excitement that follow upon such decisions.
 This is clear from Galen, l.c. iv p. 367, where we find that Chrysippus made λύπη α μείωσις and ἡδονή α ἔπαρσις and from the same work iv 5 p. 392, whence we see that the maxim that every πάθος is πτοία and every πτοία πάθος (Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii 88 W.) belonged to Chrysippus. It was no doubt with a view to strengthening, against opponents who maintained the triple division of the soul, the Stoic doctrine, which made emotion due to a change taking place in the ἡγεμονικόν, that Chrysippus insisted on giving prominence to the intellectual origin of emotion. Conversely, Posidonius, later on, made the πάθη neither judgments nor consequences of judgments but movements of the irrational parts of the soul, i.e. of Plato's ἐπιθυμητικόν and θυμοειδές.

The source, which Cicero followed in our passage, evidently set forth views derived from Chrysippus and contained a definite statement of the qualification of Chrysippus' dogmatic assertion, a qualification which, as may be seen above, can be inferred from other statements which he is known to have made.

We might have expected sed non in eis iudiciis etisque opinionibus... For the attraction of iudicia from the main clause into the body and construction of the subordinate clause cf. Off. iii 22, 87 ‘quas ciuitates L. Sulla...liberauisset, ut eae rursus uectigales essent.’ The converse attraction from the subord. to the main clause, for which cf. i 24, 56 n. on ‘nam sanguinem,’ is more common.

opinationem: a word coined by Cic. to express the act of opining.

inbecillam adsensionem: for adsensio = συγκατάθεσις see Reid on Ac. ii 12, 37
 ‘de adsensione atque adprobatione, quam Graeci συγκατάθεσιν uocant.’ Cf. also Ac. i 11, 42 ‘errorem autem...et opina-tionem et suspicionem et uno nomine omnia, quae essent aliena firmæ et constantis adsensionis, a uirtute sapientiaque remouebat (Zeno).’

16. Sed singulis perturbationibus partes eiusdem generis plures subiciuntur, ut aegritudini inuidia (utendum est enim docendi causa uerbo minus usitato, quoniam inuidia non in eo qui inuidet solum dicitur, sed etiam in eo cui inuidetur), aemulatio, obtrectatio, misericordia, angor, luctus, maeror, aerumna, dolor, lamentatio, sollicitudo, molestia, adfflictatio, desperatio, et si quae sunt de genere eodem. sub metum autem subiecta sunt pigritia, pudor, terror, timor, pauor, exanimatio, conturbatio, formido, uoluptati maleuolentia laetans malo alieno, delectatio, iactatio et similia, libidini ira, excandescencia, odium, inimicitia, discordia, indigentia, desiderium et cetera eius modi.

Haec autem definiunt hoc modo: inuidentiam esse dicunt aegritudinem susceptam propter alterius res secundas, quae nihil noceant inuidenti.

VIII. 17. Nam si qui doleat eius rebus secundis a quo ipse

§ 16, 17. subiciuntur R V G B 1 2 K E W 2 D J O 3 7 8. subijciuntur

S i. e. i in ij mut. 21. adfflictatio V G E. adfflectatio R eod. atr. K eod. atr. afflictatio B S. 22. sub metum R G B K S M 2 II O 8. sub metu R 7 17 P B 2 3 E I 2 M I D C. submetu linea supra u ut uid. eras. V W 2. sub metu K 2 W I J O 1-3 7. 24. uoluptati E 2 W I M 2 D C H O 2 3 7 8.

uolup K 2. uoluptati W 2 at s eras. uoluptati B 3 al. atr. superscr. uoluptatis R V P G B I 2 K E I O I. om. M I. || maleuolentia R V G B K. maliuolentia S E. || laetans R. letans V P G. 25. libidini R B 1-3 K I 2 W I M I D O I 3 7 8. libidini W 2 at s eras. libini G. libidini V atr. uiridi superscr.

VIII. § 17, 1. si qui V P G B E. si quis B 3 K 2 S E 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. si quid R. si qui K I d eras. om. B 2.

§ 16. inuidentia: iii 9, 20 n. ut aegritudini... inuidetur quoted by Nonius, s.uu. inuidia et inuidentia p. 443, M.

sub metum... subiecta sunt: but above perturbationibus... subiciuntur and below uoluptati... libidini. Both constructions are used with subicere, see Madvig's full n. on Fin. ii 15, 48; the abl. sub metu, only found here in inferior MSS, is not used. The departure from symmetry of constr. led Lamb. to alter sub metum to metui, but Cicero's rule is not so rigid, cf. Wopkens, Lectt. Tull. II 226 ed. Hand, where among other instances is quoted T. D. iv 11, 25 'ut odium mulierum... ut in hominum uniuersum genus.'

maleuolentia laetans malo alieno: Bent. and Dav. bracketed laetans malo alieno as an unnecessary gloss and have been followed by T. S. Hei. Bai. and Wes. Em. I 23. But the passage is cited in Nonius (who read laetans not laetans)

p. 16 M. and the objection that an explanatory addition is out of place in an enumeration of subdivisions does not seem fatal, or this may rather be a circumlocutory rendering of the Gk ἐπιχαίρεκακία. The added words are necessary to express the idea of ἐπιχαίρεκακία and they also, as Nissen observes, serve to show why maleuolentia is placed under uoluptas rather than under libido.

et similia: and below et cetera. similia and cetera, not being units in the series, are sometimes tacked on by et, as summing up the series (iii 2, 3 n. on 'et inhaerescunt'), cf. iv 31, 66 'honores, diuitiae, uoluptates, cetera'; Fin. v 12, 35 'et reliquae'; v 13, 36 'et reliquas'; but even with these words asyndeton is more usual. See Madv. on Fin. iv 20, 56; Küh. on T. D. v 14, 41.

indigentia, 'insatiate desire,' a meaning specially given to the word by Cic., its usual meaning being 'need.'

laedatur, non recte dicatur inuidere, ut si Hectori Agamemno; qui autem, cui alterius comoda nihil noceant, tamen eum doleat iis frui, is inuideat profecto. aemulatio autem dupliciter illa 5 quidem dicitur, ut et in laude et in uitio nomen hoc sit; nam et imitatio uirtutis aemulatio dicitur (sed ea nihil hoc loco utimur; est enim laudis), et est aemulatio aegritudo, si eo quod concupierit alius potiatur, ipse careat. 18. obtrectatio autem est, ea quam intellegi ζηλοτυπίαν uolo, aegritudo ex eo, quod alter
 10 quoque potiatur eo quod ipse concupierit. misericordia est aegritudo ex miseria alterius iniuria laborantis; nemo enim

2. dicitur R V P G B 13 K 1 S E 12 W 1 M 12 DC O 2378. dicitur W 2 J O 1. d f K 2. || haectori R G K. hēctori B. || agamemno R V G K. agamemno P B E. agamemnō S at linea supra o. al. atr. duct. agamemnon W 1 M 2. agamennon E 2. agamenon M 1 DC II O 3. 3. comoda R G. 4. frui is R 6 P 2 B 3 M 12 O 23. frui s/e is R 1 al. atr. se expunct. et is add. frui se P marg. is frui is W 2 se post frui eras. et is al. atr. script. frui sē V B 1. frui se R 2 17 P 4 G B 2 K 2 W 1 J O 18. fruisse R 10 16 S marg. is man. ant. adscript. fuisse K 1 E 1. frui se hiis R 7. frui hic E 2. II. frui si O 7. hiis doleat is C. hiis doleat hiis D. || inuideat R V P G K S E 12 M 12 DC. inuidet P 2 O 3. nichil uideat J. 7. laudis est aemulatio G et om. 8. obtrectatio R V G K S. optrectatio B E. 9. intellegi R V G B. intellēgi K. intelligi S E. || zeloptyian R V P G B 1. zeliptian B 2. zeliptian E. zeloptyiam K. zelotipiam S. zelotippiam M 1. 10. quod ipse R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 2 W 1 M 12 DC II J O 1-3. q'ipse W 2 O 7. q, O 8. || concupierit R V. concupierit G S. cupierit J.

quae nihil noceant inuidenti: an addition to the definition made by Cicero, cf. Diog. L. vii 111 φθόνον δὲ λύπην ἐπ' ἀλλοτρίοις ἀγαθοῖς. [Cicero's 'addition' is really implied (by exclusion) in the form of the definition quoted from Chrysippus by Plut. de St. repug. 25 p. 1046 B λύπη ἐστὶν ἐπ' ἀλλοτρίοις ἀγαθοῖς ὡς δῆποτε βουλομένων ταπεινοῦν τοὺς πλησίον, ὅπως ὑπερέχουσιν αὐτοί.]

VIII. § 17. ut si Hectori Agamemno sc. inuidere dicatur. For the form Agamemno see Neue I<sup>3</sup> pp. 246—250.

in laude...in uitio: for this use of the prepositional clause cf. i 39, 94 n. on 'in eadem breuitate.'

est aemulatio: cf. Stobaeus, Ecl. Eth. ii p. 92 W. ζῆλος δὲ λύπη ἐπὶ τῷ ἕτερον ἐπιθυγάνειν, ὡν αὐτὸς ἐπιθυμεί, αὐτὸν δὲ μὴ λέγεσθαι δὲ καὶ ἐτέρως ζῆλον μακαρισμὸν ἐνδοεὺς καὶ ἐτι ἄλλως μίμησιν ὡς ἂν κρείττους. Diog. L. vii 111 ζῆλον δὲ λύπην ἐπὶ τῷ ἄλλῳ παρεῖναι ὡν αὐτὸς ἐπιθυμεί. Cf. 26, 56 below.

concupierit: the subject is aemulans implied in aemulatio. Küh. compares § 18 'quod ipse concupierit' sc. obtrectans implied in obtrectatio; 9, 20 'sine emolumento suo' where suo is to be referred to alicuius gaudentis implied in uoluptas; 11, 26 'iudicatio se scire quod nesciat,' where iudicatio implies an alicuius iudicans; 20, 46 'ipsum illud aemulari, obtrectare non esse inutile, cum aut se non idem uideat consecutum...'

§ 18. obtrectatio, 'jealous detraction.' Cf. below 26, 56 'obtrectantis autem angi alieno bono, quod id etiam alius habeat'; Diog. L. vii 111 ζηλοτυπίαν δὲ λύπην ἐπὶ τῷ καὶ ἄλλῳ παρεῖναι, ἃ καὶ αὐτὸς ἔχει. Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii 92 W.; Andronicus Rhodius, p. 524, as quoted and emended by Dav., ζηλοτυπία δὲ ἐστὶ λύπη ἐπὶ τῷ καὶ ἄλλῳ ὑπάρχειν, ἃ καὶ ἡμῖν ὑπάρχει. quoque and etiam in Cicero's definitions represent ἃ καὶ αὐτὸς ἔχει in the Greek. [The repetition of concupierit, if sound, goes a long way towards abolishing the distinction between aemulatio and obtrectatio: for the second concupierit Cic. should have written habeat, ἔχει of the Gk.]

ipse: for the ref. cf. § 17 n. on 'concupierit.'

miseriordia: Diog. L. l.c. ἔλεον μὲν οὖν εἶναι λύπην ὡς ἐπὶ ἀναξίως κακοπαθοῦντι.

parricidae aut proditoris supplicio misericordia commouetur; angor aegritudo premens, luctus aegritudo ex eius qui carus fuerit interitu acerbo, maeror aegritudo flebilis, aerumna 15 aegritudo laboriosa, dolor aegritudo crucians, lamentatio aegritudo cum eiulatu, sollicitudo aegritudo cum cogitatione, molestia aegritudo permanens, adflictatio aegritudo cum uexatione corporis, desperatio aegritudo sine ulla rerum expectatione meliorum. quae autem subiecta sunt sub metum, ea sic 20 definiunt: pigritiam metum consequentis laboris, 19 . . . . . terrorem metum concutientem, ex quo fit ut pudorem rubor,

§ 18, 12. ut proditoris B. ut proditoris E. 13. angor aegritudo
 R V P G B K plerique. angor est aegritudo W 1. angor <sup>est</sup> aegritudo II. || premens V B 2 K O 3. praemens R G. p̄mens P. p̄mens B 1 W 2.
 14. maeror R G. meror R 2 10 16 V B. 15. crutians G. 17. adflictatio R P G K. afflictatio B 1-3 S E 2 W 1 M 1 2 D C II J O 2 8. afflic<sup>ta</sup>ctio E 1 al. atr. superscr. afflic<sup>ta</sup>ctio W 2 (sic). adflictio V. afflictio O 1. afflitio O 7. applicatio O 3. 18. expectatione R V P G B K.
 19. sub metum R V G K 1 E 1 L 2 5 O 1 2. sub metu P 1 4 B 1 2 S E 2 M 1 D C II O 7 8. sub metu R 1 7 B 3 K 2 L 3 4 6 W 2 M 2 J O 3. metui W 1 sub om.

parricidae: for the spelling see Fleck-eisen, Fünfzig Artikeln, sub uoce [parricida is contracted for patricida: until the time of Ennius it was spelled paricida, v. Lindsay, Latin Language, pp. 371, 3. Walde, Latein. etymol. Wörterb. s.u., derives parrī- not from pater but from the root pasos seen in Gk πηός 'kinsman'].
angor...premens: cf. Diog. L. vii 112 ἀχος δὲ λύπην βαρύνουσαν.

luctus: the definitions of luctus, maeror, lamentatio and desperatio are omitted by Diog. L. vii 111-2; those of lamentatio and desperatio by Stobaeus, Ecl. Eth. ii 91 W.; on the other hand Diog. L. has σύγχυσις, λύπην ἀλογον, ἀποκαίουσιν καὶ κωλύουσιν τὰ πάροντα συνορᾶν, which is wanting in Stobaeus and Cicero. The list of Andronicus Rhodius is much fuller, containing twenty-five species: cf. Stob. l.c. πένθος δὲ λύπην ἐπὶ θανάτῳ ἄρωφ. Andron. περὶ παθῶν 2 (p. 12 Kr.) πένθος δὲ λύπη ἐπὶ ἄρωφ τελευτῇ.

acerbo: i 39, 93 n. on 'acerbius.'

maeror is represented in Stobaeus and Andron. by ἀχος δὲ λύπην ἀφώνιαν ἐμποιοῦσαν.

aerumna and dolor may both be found in ὀδύνη, cf. Diog. L. l.c. ὀδύνην λύπην ἐπίπουνον.

dolor: Andron. l.c. σφακελισμὸς δὲ λύπη σφοδρά.

lamentatio: Andron. has γόος and κλαῦσις.

sollicitudo: cf. Andron. l.c. φροντὶς δὲ λογισμός λυπουμένου.

molestia: ἀνία, cf. Diog. L. l.c. ἀνίαν λύπην ἐκ διαλογισμῶν μένουσαν ἢ ἐπιτεινωμένην.

adflictatio: Diog. L. l.c. ἐνόχλησιν λύπην στενωχωροῦσαν καὶ δυσχωρίαν παρασκευάζουσαν. Stob. l.c. and Andron. l.c. ἄσπην δὲ λύπην μετὰ ῥήπτασμού.

desperatio: cf. Andron. l.c. ἀθυμία δὲ λύπη ἀπελπίζοντος ὧν ἐπιθυμεῖ τυχεῖν.

subiecta sunt sub metum: 7, 16 n.

pigritiam: Diog. L. l.c. and Stobaeus l.c. ὀκνος δὲ φόβος μελλοῦσης ἐνεργείας.

§ 19. terrorem: before this word the definition of pudor (αἰσχύνη) given as a subdivision of φόβος by Diog. L. and Stobaeus must have fallen out, as the words ex quo fit, ut pudorem rubor...consequatur also serve to indicate. Cf. Stob. l.c. ἐκπληξίς δὲ φόβος ἐξ ἀσυνήθους φαντασίας· αἰσχύνη δὲ φόβος ἀδοξίας, and similarly Diog. L. l.c. and Andron. l.c. Hence Sff. conjectures pudorem metum dedecoris accounting for the error on the theory that the copyist's eye strayed from the ending of laboris to that of dedecoris. Wes. Em. III p. 3 sought a participle ending like the following concutientem, e.g. calefacientem: similarly Bai., ed. Tauchn., conj. pudorem metum sanguinem terrorem pallor et tremor et dentium crepitus consequatur, timorem metum mali adpropinquantis, pauorem metum mentem loco mouentem, ex quo illud Ennius:

25 Tým pauor sapiéntiam omnem mi éxanimato ex-péctorat,

exanimationem metum subsequentem et quasi comitem pauoris, conturbationem metum excutientem cogitata, formidinem metum permanentem.

IX. 20. Voluptatis autem partes hoc modo discribunt, ut

§ 19, 23. adpropinquantis R V K. appropinquantis G B S. || pauorem metum K<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>2</sub>. pauorem metū P B<sub>13</sub> E<sub>2</sub> M<sub>1</sub> Π O<sub>7</sub>. pauorem metu R V G B<sub>2</sub> K. 24. loc o K c ex quo ras. mut. || ennius R V P G B<sub>12</sub> K E<sub>1</sub> J Gr. eni<sup>3</sup> W<sub>2</sub>. ennius S. enni<sup>2</sup> Π ii ex ius ras. mut. enni<sup>1</sup> B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D O<sub>17</sub> S. 25. ex anima R V G B<sub>13</sub> K<sub>1</sub> E<sub>1</sub> L<sub>6</sub> O<sub>378</sub>. ex animo O<sub>1</sub>. ex aīo W<sub>1</sub> J. ex aīo P a ex o mut. exanimato Non. i p. 16 M. || expectorat R<sub>6</sub> L<sub>4</sub> W<sub>1</sub> O<sub>1</sub> ed. H. expectoret B<sub>1</sub> Π. expect<sup>a</sup>ret S. expecto<sup>ra</sup>ret O<sub>8</sub>. expect<sup>o</sup>ret K<sub>1</sub> fuerat expectaret. expectaret E<sub>2</sub> marg. expector<sup>a</sup>&. expectaret R P<sub>14</sub> G B<sub>2</sub> K<sub>2</sub> L<sub>5</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D O<sub>7</sub>. expectaret E<sub>1</sub> C. expect<sup>a</sup>& V atr. uiridi superscr. expelleret R<sub>7</sub> 17 L<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub>. expelletur J. expulerat B<sub>3</sub> L<sub>36</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>23</sub>.

IX. § 20, 1. partes R V P G B K.

diffundentem. This line of emendation is supported by the following ex quo fit.

consequatur: i 16 36 n. on 'consecuti sunt.'

timorem: Cic. gives to the species practically the same definition as he gave to the genus, cf. 7, 14 'metus opinio independentis mali.' Diog. L. l.c. has δείμα μὲν οὖν ἐστὶ φόβος δέος ἐμποίων. Stob. l.c. δείμα δὲ φόβος ἐκ λόγου.

pauorem, 'consternation.' In Diog. L. there is only one word, ἐκπληξίς, to correspond to terror and pauor. Andron. and Stob. l.c. have δέος.

tum pauor...expectorat: from the Alcumeo of Ennius, cf. Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 17; Röm. Trag. p. 197. The passage is quoted in Or. iii 38, 154, where expectorat is cited as a coined word, and, more fully, ibid. 58, 218.

exanimato: 'non conuenit inter uiros doctos utrum exanimō coniunctim an ex animo separatim legi debeat: illud Turnebo lib. vii Aduers. c. 17, hoc Lambino in Annot. in lib. iii de Oratore probatur' (Fabricius). Dav. defended ex animo expectorare by ref. to Accius' Phoenissae quoted by Nonius i p. 16 M. but Ribbeck there adopts (1<sup>2</sup> p. 213) N. Faber's conj. exanimum. All recent editors adopt in our passage the reading exanimato from Nonius, l.c., and Or. iii 38, 154.

expectorat: see Wilkins on Or. iii 38, 154.

exanimationem: does not correspond very closely to ἀγωνία, which Diog. L. l.c. defines as φόβος ἀδήλου πράγματος, while Stob. l.c. defines it thus—ἀγωνία δὲ φόβος διαπτώσεως, καὶ ἐτέρως, φόβος ἥττης.

conturbationem, 'agitation,' not a very lucid term to denote a subdivision of perturbatio. Cf. Diog. L. vii 113 θόρυβος δὲ φόβος μετὰ κατεπίξεως φωνῆς. similarly Stob. l.c.

excutientem: cf. Pliny, Epp. i 18, 3 'quae singula excutere mentem mihi post tam triste somnium poterant.'

formidinem: here = 'dread'; cf. Andron. ὀρρωδία δὲ φόβος ἐννοσηθέντος, but more usual in the sense of an intense rather than an enduring fear; this word is not represented in the list of Diog. L. nor in that of Stobaeus. The latter and Andronicus have δεισιδαιμονία, which is not represented in the lists of Cic. or Diogenes.

IX. § 20. uoluptatis: cf. iii 10, 23 'laetitia, quae est uoluptas animi elata et gestiens'; ibid. § 24 'uoluptas gestiens'; 13, 27 'laetitia gestiens'; iv 6, 11 'ex bonis libidinem et laetitiam'; 7, 14 'laetitia.'

maleuolentia sit uoluptas ex malo alterius sine emolumento suo, delectatio uoluptas suaūitate āuditus animum deleniens; et qualis est haec aurium, tales sunt et oculorum et tactionum 5 et odorationum et saporum, quae sunt omnes unius generis ad perfundendum animum tamquam inliquefactae uoluptates. iactatio est uoluptas gestiens et se eferens insolentius. 21. quae autem libidini subiecta sunt, ea sic definiuntur, ut ira sit libido poeniendi eius qui uideatur laesisse iniuria, excandescencia autem
10 sit ira nascens et modo existens, quae θύμωσις Graece dicitur,

2. maleuolentia V G B K.      maleuolentia R cod. atr.      maliuolentia S E. || emolumento R G B.      emolumento V.      emolumento K atr. ant.

4. sunt oculorum et R V P 14 G B 1-3 K 1 S E 12 W 12 M 12 D C H J O 1-3 7 8: lectio sunt et oculorum et ex Nonio uidetur esse eruenda s. u. tactus 1 227 M.

5. perfundendum R G B K.      perfundendum V.      6. inliquefactae R V G B E.      inli que facte K.      illi que facte S.      illi que fctē B 2.

7. efferens R V B K S.      efferens G.

§ 21, 8. libidini R V P G B K.      || definiuntur R V G B 12 K 1 E 2 Π.

definiunt P E 1.      diffiniuntur B 3 W 2 M 12 D C J O 12.      definiuntur O 7.      definiunt W 1.      diffiniunt O 3.      || libido R G K.      lubido B.      || poeniendi

R G B 12 K 1.      poeniendi V o cod. atr. u atr. uiridi superscr.      puniendi B 3

E 12 W 1 M 12 C H J O 17 8.      peitendi S marg.      puonēdi ut uid.

peniēdi P 1 sic.      pariendi O 3.      10. existens R G B K E.      existens S marg.

desi
desistens.      existens V atr. uiridi superscr.      || θγμωσις R V B E.

maleuolentia: Diog. L. vii 114 and Stobaeus, l.c. ἐπιχαιρεκακία δὲ ἡδονὴ ἐπ' ἄλλοτρίοις κακοῖς. Similarly Andron. l.c. [With regard to maleuol. cf. the curious statement attributed to Chrysippus by Plut. de St. repug. 25 p. 1046 B τὴν ἐπιχαιρεκακίαν... ἀνυπαρκτὸν εἶναι φησιν· ἐπεὶ τῶν μὲν ἀστέων οὐδεὶς ἐπ' ἄλλοτρίοις κακοῖς χαίρει, τῶν δὲ φαύλων οὐδεὶς χαίρει τὸ παράπαν.]

suo: cf. 8, 17 n. on 'concupierit.'

delectatio: cf. Diog. L. l.c. κήλησις μὲν οὖν ἐστὶν ἡδονὴ δι' ὧτων κατακηλοῦσα· Andron. περὶ παθῶν 5, p. 19 Kr. κήλησις δὲ ἡδονὴ δι' ἀκοῆς κατακηλοῦσα· ἡ ἡδονὴ ἐκ λόγου τε καὶ μουσικῆς ἢ δι' ἀπάτης γνομένην. Stobaeus has not κήλησις but has γοητεία δὲ ἡδονὴ δι' ὄψεως κατ' ἀπάτην for which Andron. l.c. has γοητεία δὲ ἡδονὴ κατ' ἀπάτην ἢ διὰ μαγείας. Cic. has selected a word which is too wide for κήλησις and then extended it to apply to the other senses, for which the Stoics probably employed separate expressions.

ad perfundendum..., 'to steal over the mind.'

iactatio: this word is not represented in the lists of Diog. L., Stobaeus or Andronicus. Unrepresented in Cic. are τέρψις and διάχνσις of Diog. L., τέρψις in Andron. and ἀσμενισμός in Stob. and Andron.

§ 21. definiuntur: it is not necessary to read definiunt with many early editors and some moderns, e.g. Kl. T.S. The transition from active to passive or vice versa (discrībunt above, distinguunt below) is not uncommon. Sff. compares 11, 26-27 below 'definiunt...definiunt...definitur.' The termination -ur could of course come in by quasi-haplography before ut, but see iii 27, 64 n. on 'declaratur hoc.'

ira: Diog. L. l.c. § 113 ὄργῃ δ' ἐπιθυμία τιμωρίας τοῦ δοκοῦντος ἡδίκηκέναι οὐ προσκρίνεται; Stob. l.c. and Andron. 4 p. 16 Kr. almost the same [cf. Sen. de Ira i 2, 4 'ira est...ut ait Posidonius, cupiditas puniendi eius a quo te inique putes laesum'].

excandescencia...: Nonius p. 103 M. quotes this passage thus: 'excandescencia autem est ira nascens et sine modo existens' for which Mueller reads 'et sine modo aestuans.'

existens: not the same as nascens but = 'apparens et semet ostendens' Dav.

θύμωσις: the Gk sources have θυμός, odium ira inueterata, inimicitia ira ulciscendi tempus obseruans, discordia ira acerbior intimo animo et corde concepta, indigentia libido inexplibilis, desiderium libido eius qui nondum adsit uidendi. <sup>15</sup> distinguunt illud etiam, ut libido sit earum rerum quae dicuntur de quodam aut quibusdam, quae κατηγορήματα dialectici appellant, ut habere diuitias, capere

12. intimo odio et corde R 1 6 7 17 V P 14 B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 L 2-6 W 12 M 1 D II J O 1-3 78. intimo corde et odio G. et intimo corde M 2 margin. odio. intimo ore et corde C. intimo animo et corde corr. Lambinus.
13. libido (ter) R G B K. 14. distinguunt B 12 W 1 M 2. distingunt
R V P G K 1 S E 1 W 2 D II J O 2 3. disiūgūt O 8. || etiam illud
W 2 J. 15. earum rerum R V P 14 G B 1-3 K 1 E 2 W 12 M 12
D C II J O 2 3 7. earum S E 1 rerum om. eorum O 8 rerum om.
16. ΚΑΤΗΓΟΡΗΜΑΤΑ R V G. ΚΑΤΨΟΡΗΜΑΤΑ B E. || dialectici R G B K.
dialectici V E. dyalectici R 16. dialecti R 2.

ὄργη ἐναρχομένη Stob. and Andron. ὄργη ἀρχομένη Diog. L. Or. thinks θύμωσις a Chrysippean word 'ideo nouatum, ne confunderetur haec excandescenciae notio cum θυμῶ Platonis.'

odium: Diog. L. l.c. § 114 μήνις δὲ ἐστὶν ὄργη τις πεπαιωμένη καὶ ἐπίκοτος, ἐπιτηρητικὴ δέ...: Stob. l.c. μήνις δὲ ὄργη εἰς παλαιῶν ἀποθεθεμένη ἢ ἐναποκειμένη: Andron. l.c. almost the same.

inimicitia: Diog. L. has μῖσος as well as μήνις. Stob. l.c. κότος δὲ ὄργη ἐπιτηροῦσα καιρὸν εἰς τιμωρίαν. Andron. l.c. almost the same.

[tempus, 'opportunity' as in iii 31, 76.] discordia: no exact equivalent is given by Diog. L., Stob. or Andron.

intimo animo et corde: animo abbreviated into aio probably combined with the o at the end of intimo to produce the variant odio. The expression intimo odio is impossible and cannot be defended by odio penitus insito de Leg. Agr. ii 6, 14 quoted by Kl.

indigentia: 7, 16 n. Andron. l.c. σπάνις δὲ ἐπιθυμία ἀτελής. Diog. L. l.c. § 113; Stob. l.c. omits.

desiderium: cf. Andron. l.c. πόθος δὲ ἐπιθυμία κατὰ ἔρωτα ἀπόντος; Stob. l.c. ἕμερος δὲ ἐπιθυμία φίλου ἀπόντος ὀμιλίας. Diog. L. omits the equivalent for desiderium. The meaning of desiderium is narrowed by Cicero's definition.

illud, 'they draw the following distinction also...'

ut libido sit...: there are two views with regard to this passage. According to the first view we have a distinction drawn between desiderium and indigentia, ut lib. sit... being = ut desiderium libido sit... This view was supported by P. Manutius, who remarked that distinctions are drawn not between a genus and one of its subordinate species, as between animal and man, but between two species within a genus, as between man and wolf. The view is that Cic. here asserts that the Stoics used desiderium in connexion with a predicate; indigentia with a direct object: e.g. desidero habere pecuniam, desidero capere honores, not desidero pecuniam, honores; and on the other hand indigeo pecuniae, honorum, not indigeo habere pecuniam, honores; desiderium habendi pecuniam but indigentia pecuniae. Cf. Bentley, who adds 'vides ineptias Stoicorum, quos saepe incusat ipse Cicero, tamquam qui usitatum loquendi morem inmutarent et corruperent. Nam ut uerum sit hoc de indigentia, siue τῆ σπάνει, at certe alterum illud desiderium siue πόθος apud optimos utriusque linguae auctores non minus, immo saepius, ad res ipsas refertur quam ad κατηγορήματα.'

According to the second view (Hei. T.S.) libido and indigentia are contrasted, but the latter word is taken in its usual sense, for which see 7, 16 n., and is not a subordinate species of libido.

A further distinction between desiderium and indigentia is more naturally to be expected here, immediately after the definitions of these words, than a distinction between libido and indigentia, and if Cic. really meant to note that indigentia has an ordinary use in which it is not subordinate to libido he has taken a very obscure way of expressing his meaning.

rerum ipsarum sit: ut must naturally be carried on to this clause. est and sit are often confused in MSS, cf. i 17, 41 n. on 'est.' For the repetition of sit cf. i honores, indigentia rerum ipsarum sit, ut honorum, ut pecuniae.

22. omnium autem perturbationum fontem esse dicunt intemperantiam, quae est a tota mente et a recta ratione defectio, 20 sic auersa a praescriptione rationis ut nullo modo adpetitiones animi nec regi nec contineri queant. quemadmodum igitur temperantia sedat adpetitiones et efficit ut eae rectae rationi pareant, conseruatque considerata iudicia mentis, sic huic inimica 25 itaque et aegritudines et metus et reliquae perturbationes omnes gignuntur ex ea.

X. 23. Quemadmodum, cum sanguis corruptus est aut pituita redundat aut bilis, in corpore morbi aegrotationesque nascuntur, sic prauarum opinionum conturbatio et ipsarum inter se repugnancia sanitate spoliat animum morbisque perturbat.

17. indigentia R 7 L 2 W 1 D C ed. H. Indigentia E 2 at Jnd multa in litura et al. atr. script. diligentia V marg. indigentia atr. uiridi. diligentia R 1 17 P 1 4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 3 L 3-6 W 2 M 2 II J O 1-3 7 8. diligentiam R 6. || ipsarum est R V G plerique. ipsarum sit corr. P. Manutius.
 § 22, 18. perturbationum fomitem J. 19. mente et a recta B 3 W 1 M 2
 J O 2 7. mente a recta R 1 17 V P 1 4 G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 2
 M 1 D C O 1 3 8. et al. atr. superscr. habet II. mente ac recta R 7.
 mente etiam recta R 6. 20. aperte scriptioe V. || adpetitiones R V G E. appetitiones B S. apetitiones K. 21. animi nec regi nec R 1 2 10 16 G.

animi regi ne V atr. uiridi superscr. 22. adpetitiones R G K. appetitiones V B. adpeticiones E. || efficit R V G B K. || ut eae V G M 2. ut eae R 2 10 S. ut aeae R I. utae ae K I. ut rectae eae O 2. ut ea B 2. ut hee D II O 8. ut he E 2 at litt. post e eras. ut he B 3 W 2
 M 1 J O 1 7. ut hee B 1 W 1 O 3. ut hec E 1. ut esse R 16. ||
 recte V B 3 O 1 7. 25. reliq; conturbationes G ead. man. superscr.
 26. ex aea G.

X. § 23, 4. morbisque R V G S.

morbique E al. atr. superscr.

25, 60 'quae sit illa uis et unde sit' where Bai. quotes ref. from Wesenberg.

§ 22. intemperantiam: see Zeller, Stoics, etc., c. X p. 232.

a tota mente: the words a recta ratione are redundant and somewhat awkward with a praescriptione rationis following, and the fact that et after mente is absent from all the best MSS lends great support to the theory that they are a gloss on a tota mente.

considerata iudicia mentis as opposed to the inbecilla adsensio upon which the irrational emotions rest, cf. 7, 15.

X. § 23. quemadmodum, cum...: the parallel between the state of the body and that of the soul as regards health and disease was worked out in great detail by the Stoics and especially by Chrysippus. Cf. Cicero's statement below; Diog. L. vii 115; Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii 93 W.; Galen, de Plac. Hipp. et Plat. v p. 432 foll.; Sen. Epp. 75, 11; Zeller, Stoics, etc. c. X p. 235 n. 2. [Cf. also Hartlich, Leipziger Studien xi 2 p. 330.]

pituita: the phlegmatic humour, φλέγμα; cf. Galen περί διαφ. πυρ. ii 6 (vii p. 348 ed. Kühn) ὅστις ἀν ἐν τῷ σώματι χυμὸς ὑγρὸς ἦ καὶ ψυχρὸς ἡμεῖς μὲν τοῦτον ὀνομάζομεν φλέγμα, σὺ δ' εἰ βούλει κάλει σκινδαψόν; de Plac. Hipp. et Plat. viii pp. 686 ff. ed. Müller; Hippocrates περί φύσιος ἀνθρ. 116 (ii p. 357 ed. Kühn).

morbi aegrotationesque: for the distinction between these see 13, 28.

5 ex perturbationibus autem primum morbi conficiuntur, quae uocant illi νοσήματα, eaque quae sunt eis morbis contraria, quae habent ad res certas uitiosam offensionem atque fastidium, deinde aegrotationes, quae appellantur a Stoicis ἀρρωστήματα, hisque item oppositae contrariae offensiones. hoc loco nimium
 10 operae consumitur a Stoicis, maxime a Chrysippo, dum morbis corporum comparatur morborum animi similitudo. qua oratione praetermissa minime necessaria, ea quae rem continent pertractemus. 24. intellegatur igitur perturbationem iactantibus se opinionibus inconstanter et turbide in motu esse semper; cum 15 autem hic feruor concitatioque animi inueterauit et tanquam

6. nosemata G. nōsemāta V. || eis morbis R V P G B 1-3 K I E 2
 M 12 C II O 2. his morbis W 1. 7. uitiosam offensionem R 6 M 12 C O 378. uiciosam offensionem R 17 B 3 D. uitiōsā offensionē B at lineis al. atr. supra duct. uiciosā offensionē II. uitiosa offensione R G B 2 K. uitiosa offensione V atr. uiridi superscr. uiciōsa offensionē E 2. uitiosas offensiones R 7 W 2. uiciosas offensiones W 1. officiosas offensiones O 12. 9. hisque item R V B 2 K E 2 O 13. hisque idem B S. hisque idem G at d in t alt. man. mut. hisque idem E 1. hisq̄ item P al. atr. superscr. hiisque item D. his item B 3 W 12 J. hiis item O 8.
 hisque irem O 7. isque item O 2. || appositae G alt. man. superscr.
 10. maxime R V P B K. maximae G a ante e expunx. alt. man. || a chrysippo R. a chrysippo G. acrisippo E. 11. qua oratione R G. quatione V
 atr. anl. superscr. 12. minime R V B. minimae G a expunx. alt. man.
 § 24, 13. intellegatur R V G B K. intelligatur S E. 14. in motu W 1
 M 12 D O 1378. inmotu S litt. post u eras. i motu W 2 s post u eras.
 inmotus B 1. immotus V. immotus R G. immotos K I atr. nigriore superscr. immotu<sup>n</sup> E 1. i motu E 2. 15. inueterauerit R V G B 1-3 K I E 12 W 2 M 12 C II J O 1378. inuet<sup>a</sup>u'it S D. inueterauerint W 1 O 2. inueterauit corr. Seyffertus.

quae: for the attraction of the gender of the relative cf i 1, 1 n.

νοσήματα: cf. Galen, de Plac. Hipp. et Plat. v p. 439 ἐναργῶς γὰρ...ὁ Χρυσίππος ἀναλογίαν τινὰ βούλεται σώζεσθαι τῶν ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ τοῖς κατὰ τὸ σῶμα καὶ παθῶν πρὸς πάθη καὶ ἀρρωστημάτων πρὸς ἀρρωστήματα καὶ νοσημάτων πρὸς νοσήματα.. καὶ γὰρ τοῦνομα καὶ τὸν λόγον αὐτῶν βούλεται εἶναι τὸν αὐτὸν, εἴ γε δὴ συνώνυμά φησιν ὑπάρχειν αὐτά.

uitiosam offensionem, 'diseased aversion,' as opposed to the εὐλογος ἔκκλισις of Diog. L. vii 116.

aegrotationes...ἀρρωστήματα, chronic ailments of the mind, due to weakness of the will, which cannot resist the attraction of unworthy objects.

comparatur...similitudo = 'adcommo-datur morborum animi similitudo,' cf. iii 31, 74 n. on 'terminabit modum.'

oratione, 'a speech on this point,' ironically referring to 'operae nimium consumitur' above: qua=de eo habita.

§ 24. perturbationem...in motu esse semper. Dav. who thought this statement too obvious to be worth making proposed to read perturbationum...in animo motus e.s.: or (in ed. 2) to omit perturbationem and read inconstantes et turbidos in animo motus esse semper. Wopkens, op. cit. p. 124, defends the reading in the text and he is followed by all recent edd.

inueterauit...insedit. Sff.'s conjecture for the reading of the MSS inueterauerit...insederit. Küh. who keeps the MSS reading here changes existit of the MSS below in uenis medullisque insedit, tum existit et morbus et aegrotatio et offensiones eae quae sunt iis morbis aegrotationibusque contrariae.

XI. Haec, quae dico, cogitatione inter se differunt, re quidem copulata sunt, eaque oriuntur ex libidine et ex laetitia. nam cum est concupita pecunia nec adhibita continuo ratio quasi quaedam Socratica medicina, quae sanaret eam cupiditatem, 5 permanat in uenas et inhaeret in uisceribus illud malum, existitque morbus et aegrotatio, quae auelli inueterata non possunt, eique morbo nomen est auaritia; 25 similiterque ceteri morbi, 16. insederit R V G B 1-3 K I E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 II J O 1 3 7 8. insedit P S D C. insedit R 10. insederit W 1 O 2. insedit

corr. Seyffertus. || existit R 1 6 7 V P 1 4 B 1-3 K S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8. existit G. existat R 17. 17. eae quae G.

eae quae V K. eique B al. atr. superscr. eique E 1 al. atr. superscr.
 heq; W 1. he q; W 2. he quae O 3. hee quae O 8. he que O 17. || eis morbis R V G B 1-3 K S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1 3 7 8.

XI. 2. eaque B 1 3 M 1 O 1. eaque E 1 al. atr. superscr. eaque V.
 ea quae R G M 2 O 2. eaq; W 1 D. ea q; O 7 8. || libidine R V P B K.

libine G alt. man. superscr. || ex laetitia R V P G B 1-3 K E 1 W 2 M 2 D J O 1 3 7. laetitia (ex omisso) S E 2 W 1 M 1 II O 2 8. 4. quae sanaret R V P G B 1-3 K S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8 om. E 1.
 5. existitque R 6 B 1 W 2. existit qui R V E. existit qui G K.

pro quae habent qui B 2 II D C O 3 7. q; M 2. q; O 8.

to existet. Confusion between -it (indic.) and -it (subj. = -erit) is, as Sff. points out, very common in MSS. For the construction cf. ii 24, 58 n. on 'aspeiximus' and for the thought Amm. Marc. xxvii 7, 4 'hanc (sc. iram) enim ulcus esse animi diuturnum interdumque perpetuum prudentes definiunt.'

uenis medullisque: for the metaphor cf. v 9, 27, Cat. i 13, 31 'periculum... residebit et erit inclusum penitus in uenis atque in uisceribus rei publicae.' Lucan ix 741, Sil. Ital. i 59.

XI. Haec: sc. morbi et aegrotationes.

cogitatione: 'though theoretically distinct are yet in reality inseparable': for the contrast implied in quidem cf. i 41, 99 n.

quae sanaret=quae, si adhiberetur, sanaret: the fact that the condition is unreal is implied in the preceding negative. Bentl. conjectured sanet and he is followed by Dav. Bouh. Or. (ed. 1), F.A.W. and Sff. who believe 'imperfecto sanaret contra temporum rationem misere peccatum esse.' The passage in v 13, 39 quoted by Küh. is not parallel: see n. there.

permanat in uenas like a poison: cf. Cluent. 62, 173 'celerius potuit [sc. uenenum] comestum quam epotum in uenas atque in omnis partis corporis permanere'; Epist. Vindiciani ap. Marcell. de medicamentis § 6 (p. 23 ed. Helmr.) 'cum ergo peruenerit ad ea loca uenarum, in quae pocula hausta descendunt'; Lucan ix 614 'noxia serpentum est admixto sanguine pestis.'

auelli: Wopkens (op. cit. p. 125) conj. euelli comparing 26, 57 'sunt enim omnia ista ex errorum orta radicibus, quae euellenda et extrahenda penitus...sunt.' Hand in his note to Wopkens, however, points out by a comparison of Fam. v 12, 5 'qui tum denique sibi auelli iubet spiculum' with Fin. ii 30, 97 'euelli iussit eam, qua erat transfixus, hastam,' that both auelli and euelli can be used in this connection.

morbo: sing. because for practical purposes morbus and aegrotatio are not two affections but one.

ut gloriae cupiditas, ut mulierositas, ut ita appellem eam quae Graece φιλογυνία dicitur, ceterique similiter morbi aegrotationesque nascuntur. quae autem sunt his contraria, ea nasci putantur a metu, ut odium mulierum, quale in μισογύνῃ Atili est, ut in hominum uniuersum genus, quod accepimus de Timone qui μισάνθρωπος appellatur, ut inhospitalitas est, § 25, 8. eam quae M I D C O 2 3 8. eā quae B E linea al. atr. supraduct.

 ea quae R V P G B 2 K S E 2 W 2 J O I. ea q 3 B 3. ea q, M 2.
 9. ΦΙΛΟΓΥΝΙΑ R V. ΦΙΛΟΓΥΝΙΑ G. φιλογυνια W I. φυλογυνια B I.

ΦΙΛΟΤΥΝΙΑ B 2. Φυλοτυμα E I. I I. molierum R eod. atr. || in μισογυνια W I. in missogyno G. in missogino K 2 C. in missogine B 3 E 3 M 2. in missoginio O 3. in missogynia O I. in misso gyno V. in misso gyno R I. in misso gyno D. in misso gyna S o in a nut. in misso gyno P 4. in misso gyno B I O 8. in misso gyno R I 7. in misso gyno W 2 J. in misso gyno P I.

in misso gyno E I. in misso gyno B 2. in misso gyno K I eod. atr. in misso gyno E 2 II. in nuscagyno O 7. gyno M I cett. om. || atili R I 7 I 7 V P 4 G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 L 5 W 2 II O 8. a tili C. atili P I al. atr. superscr. marg. atiliē. a tili E 3. atilia B 3 L 3. atilia M 2 marg.

 at hipolito. atiliē D. atilie M I. atiliem O 7. atile L 2 om. L 4 6

W I O I. 13. qui μισανθρωπος W I. quimisanerωπιος V litt. post c eras.
 quimisanerωπιος R. quimis ανερωπιωεα que P (sic). qui misane ΡΩΙΤΟCΑ G. qui misanerωπιος A K I. qui misanerωπιος B I. quimisa NΘΡΟΙΤΩCΑ E I. qui misanepaitca W 2. qui msane paitoca K 2. || appellatur W I O I 7. appellatur S. appellatur R I 17 V P I 4 G B I-3 K I 2 E I 2 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O 2 3 8.

ceterique similiter morbi: Bentl. conj. ceteri, inquam, similiter morbi, offended by the carelessness of the repetition after similiterque ceteri morbi above: but this is not the only sign of carelessness and hurry in the passage.

in μισογύνῃ Atili: this play of Atilius was perhaps an imitation of Menander: it is not referred to elsewhere; Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. II<sup>2</sup> 32. Cic. calls Atilius in Att. xiv 20, 3 poeta durissimus and quotes in Fin. i 2, 5 the epithet of ferreus scriptor applied to him by Licinius. Volcacius Sedigitus in his 'liber de poetis' quoted by Aul. Gell. xv 24 placed him fifth on his list of comic poets, immediately preceding Terence. Bentl., however, asserting that Cic., who seems to have thought little of him, would have preferred to quote the Gk original, expunges his name here and reads quale misoγύνου Hippolyti est. He finds further confirmation of his view in the fact that in the résumé at the end of § 27 Hippolytus' name is introduced with Timon's in such a way as to suggest that it has occurred before.

in hominum uniuersum genus: Lamb. with an excessive zeal for grammatical symmetry reads hominum uniuersi generis

to correspond with odium mulierum above: but see 7, 16 n. on 'sub metum.'

Timone: Timon, son of Echekratides (Lucian, Tim. 50) lived about the time of the Peloponnesian war (Plut. Ant. 70). He is mentioned by Aristophanes (e.g. Av. 1549, Lysistr. 808) and other comic poets who represent him as δυσμενής και μισάνθρωπος, εκκλιων δε και διωθόμενος άπασαν έντευξιν (Plut. l.c.). An epitaph on him, quoted by Plutarch, was attributed to Callimachus: Τίμων μισάνθρωπος ένοικέω. αλλά παρέλθε | οίμώζειν είπας πολλά παρέλθε μόνον.

qui μισάνθρωπος appellatur: the balance of MSS evidence seems in favour of the singular here; Tr. Kühn. who read μισάνθρωποι appellantur ('men like him being called misanthropes') defend the transition from pl. to sing. by passages like Fin. v 31, 94 'hic si Peripateticus fuisset, permansisset, credo, in sententia, qui dolorem malum dicunt esse': but neither this passage nor that quoted by Madv. ad. loc. 'L. Cantilius, scriba pontificus, quos nunc minores pontifices appellat' Liv. xxii 57, 3 is precisely parallel, as in both cases a word (Peripateticus, scriba) precedes which can be predicated of a number of persons, quae omnes aegrotationes animi ex quodam metu nascuntur 15 earum rerum quas fugiunt et oderunt. 26. definiunt autem animi aegrotationem opinationem uehementem de re non expetenda, tamquam ualde expetenda sit, inhaerentem et penitus insitam. quod autem nascitur ex offensione, ita definiunt: opinionem uehementem de re non fugienda inhaerentem et penitus 20 insitam tamquam fugienda; haec autem opinatio est iudicatio se scire quod nesciat. aegrotationi autem talia quaedam subiecta sunt: auaritia, ambitio, mulierositas, peruicacia, ligurritio, uinulentia, cuppedia, et si qua similia. est autem auaritia opinatio uehemens de pecunia, quasi ualde expetenda 25 sit, inhaerens et penitus insita, similisque est eiusdem generis definitio reliquarum. 27. offensionum autem definitiones sunt eius modi, ut inhospitalitas sit opinio uehemens ualde fugiendum esse hospitem, eaque inhaerens et penitus insita, similiterque definitur et mulierum odium, ut Hippolyti, et, ut Timonis, 30 generis humani.

§ 26, 20. iudicatio R V G B I 2 E 1 O 2 Gr. iudicio K I iudicare R 17
 P I 4 B 3 S E 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C Π J O I 3 7 8 ed. H. iudi K 2 cod. atr. et ead. manu. 23. cuppedia R V B I 2 K E. cup_edia S litt. post p eras. cu pedia G p eras.
 § 27, 29. hippolyti R K. hippolyti B 2. hippoliti B 3 G. h̄ppoliti S cod. atr. hyppoliti V B I E I W I.

whereas here the only antecedent is the proper name; unless one should assume (for which there seems no evidence) a use of the word Timon in Latin such as one finds in Arist. Av. l.c. III. νή τὸν Δι' ἀεὶ δῆτα θεομοσῆς ἔφυσ. IIP. Τιμων καθαρὸς 'a Timon,' pure and simple.

aegrotationes carelessly put for offensiones.

§ 26. definiunt...insitam. This is the definition not of aegrotatio (ἀρρώστημα) but of morbus (νόσημα): cf. Diog. L. vii 115 τὸ γὰρ ἀρρώστημά ἐστι νόσημα μετ' ἀσθενείας, τὸ δὲ νόσημα οἷσιν σφόδρα δοκοῦντος αἰρετοῦ: Stob. Ecl. ii 93, 6 W. νόσημα δ' εἶναι δόξαν ἐπιθυμίας ἐβρῆνηκυῖαν εἰς ἔξιν καὶ ἐνεσκιρωμένην, καθ' ἣν ὑπολαμβάνουσι τὰ μὴ αἰρετὰ σφόδρα αἰρετὰ εἶναι...τὰ δὲ νόσηματα μετ' ἀσθενείας συμβαλίνοντα ἀρρώστηματα καλεῖσθαι. Sen. Epp. 75, 11 'morbus est iudicium in prauo pertinax, tamquam ualde expetenda sint, quae leuiter expetenda sunt.' Cicero has forgotten for the moment the ἀσθένεια which is the distinguishing mark of aegrotatio.

quod...offensione: another instance of careless expression; the definition which follows is that of offensio itself, not of the result of it, cf. Stob. l.c. εἶναι δὲ τινα καὶ ἐναντία τούτοις τοῖς νοσήμασι κατὰ προσκοπήν γιγνόμενα, οἷον μισογυνίαν, μισοῖλιαν, μισανθρωπίαν.

opinatio: cf. 7, 15 n.

iudicatio: 'an act of judgment,' a word coined by Cicero, like opinatio.

se: as if iudicantis not iudicatio had preceded: see Madvig's noteto Fin. i. 20, 67.

auaritia...uinulentia: φιλοχρηματία, φιλοτιμία, λαγνεία, προσπάθεια, γαστριμαργία, οἰνοφλυγία,—all in the list given by Andronicus περὶ παθῶν 4 (p. 16 Kreuttner) of the ἐπιθυμίας εἶδη.

cuppedia: another coinage of Cicero's: perh., as Dav. suggests, a transl. of φιλοψία.

§ 27. offensionum. The offensiones come under the definition of φόβος: cf. Stob. Ecl. ii 90, 7 W. φόβον δ' εἶναι ἐκκλισιν ἀπειθῆ λόγῳ, αἴτιον δ' αὐτοῦ τὸ δοξάζειν κακὸν ἐπιφέρεισθαι, τῆς δόξης τὸ κινητικὸν πρόσφατον ἐχούσης τοῦ ὄντως αὐτὸ φευκτὸν εἶναι: an offensio is a φόβος inseparably attached in the mind to a certain class of objects.

Hippolyti: the son of Theseus, who fell a victim to the wrath of Aphrodite for his

XII. Atque ut ad ualetudinis similitudinem ueniamus eaque conlotione utamur aliquando, sed parcius quam solent Stoici: ut sunt alii ad alios morbos procliuios (itaque dicimus grauedinos quosdam, quosdam torminosos, non quia iam sint, sed quia saepe), sic alii ad metum, alii ad aliam perturbationem; ex quo in aliis anxietas, unde anxii, in aliis iracundia dicitur, quae ab ira differt, estque aliud iracundum esse, aliud iratum, ut differt anxietas ab angore; neque enim omnes anxii qui anguntur aliquando, nec, qui anxii, semper anguntur, ut inter

XII. 1. ualetudinis R 12 V G B 3 K M 2. ualitudinis P B 1 S E M 1. ||

ueniamus L 4 M 1 D C O 8. ueniã E 1 al. atr. superscr. ueniam: R 6 W 1 M 2. ueniam R 12 16 B 3 E 23. ueniam. O 3. ueiam/ W 2. ueniam V G K L 2356 II O 127. ueniã R 7 10 17 P 14 B 12 K 2 S J. 2. conlotione R G B K E. collatione P B 23 S C H J O 2. consolatione V. 3. dicimus R V G B 2 K 1 S W 12 O 12. diximus B 1 E 1. dominis J. || grauedinosos W 1. grauidinosos R V G B 1-3 S E W 2 M 12 C J O 8.

grauidinosos K. grandisinosos O 2. 4. quosdam II al. atr. superscr. quosdam (semel tantum) R 167 17 V P 14 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 1-3 W 2 M 12 D C J O 1-378. quosdam alios W 1. || torminosos V P G B 2 W 1 D O 38. terminosos B 10 in e mut. terminosos R 1 B 3 K 1 E 3 L 6 M 1 II O 12. t'minosos E 2 C. t'miosos K 2. terminosos M 2. t'minos W 3. om. O 7. 5. saepe sint R 167 10 16 17 V P 14 G B 1-3 K 1 marg. K 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 D C H J O 1-378 ed. H. saepe sic Gr. 9. aliquando nec R 7 B 3 K 2 E 2 M 12 D C II O 1-37. aliquando neque R 6. aliquando nec B 1 (sic) n fortasse ex h mut. aliquando <sup>n</sup>hec E 1. aliquando hec B 2. aliquando haec R V G K. aliquando h' J. aliquando hii R 17. aliquando W 1 nec om. nec W 2 aliquando om.

perstent neglect of her rites; ἀναίεται δὲ λέκτρα, κοῦ ψαθεὶ γάμων Eur. Hipp. 14. Aphrodite inspired his stepmother Phaedra with a passion for him; as he was deaf to all her solicitations she denounced him to his father Theseus who prayed for vengeance to Poseidon; as Hippolytus drove along the shore his horses took fright at a bull sent by Poseidon and running off tore him to pieces along the ground.

XII. atque marking a transition as in 13, 30, iii 13, 28.

parcius...Stoici: cf. 10, 23 'hoc loco nimum operae consumitur a Stoicis.'

procliuios: cf. Diog. L. vii 115 καὶ ὡς ἐπὶ τοῦ σώματος εὐεμπρωσία τινὲς λέγονται ὅσον κατάρρους καὶ διάρροια, οὕτω καὶ τῆς ψυχῆς εἰσὶν εὐκαταφορία ὅσον φθονερία, ἐλεημοσύνη, ἐριδες καὶ τὰ παραπλήσια. Cf. Stob. Ecl. ii 93, 1.

grauedinosos: καταρρώδεις 'subject to catarrh' (κατάρρους, destillatio).

quosdam, quosdam: the second quosdam is omitted by nearly all MSS and Dav. defends their reading by ref. to such passages as Liv. iii 37, 8 'et iam ne tergo quidem abstinebatur: uirgis caedi, alii securi subici' Curt. vii 4, 11; but, as Kl. points out, the parallels are not to the point; since words like alii, interdum, etc. are repeated where (as here) par est orationis membrorum ratio, whereas they are used once only when to the general statement is added a clause expressing another fact.

torminosos: δυσεντερικούς 'subject to dysentery' Celsus, de medic. iv 22.

saepe: sc. sint; the subj. is due to the orat. obl.; the sint which follows saepe in so many MSS is due to confusion with sic.

dicitur: Dav. conjectured efficitur; but as Wopkens (op. cit., p. 125) points out dicitur is due to the βραχυλογία so frequent in Cic. He compares N.D. ii 20, 51 'quarum ex disparibus motionibus magnum annum mathematici nominauerunt,' i.e. 'q. e. d. m. conficitur quem mathematici magnum annum nominauerunt'; so here iracundia dicitur is equivalent to motus animi efficitur quae iracundia dicitur.

quae ab ira differt: ira (ὀργή) is a πάθος whereas iracundia (ὀργιλότης) is 10 ebrietatem et ebriositatem interest, aliudque est amatorem esse, aliud amantem. atque haec aliorum ad alios morbos procliuitas late patet; nam pertinet ad omnes perturbationes; in multis etiam uitii apparet, 28 sed nomen res non habet. ergo et inuidi et maliuoli [et liuidi] et timidi et misericordes, quia procliuius 15 ad eas perturbationes, non quia semper, feruntur. haec igitur procliuitas ad suum quodque genus a similitudine corporis aegrotatio dicatur, dum ea intellegatur ad aegrotandum pro-cliuitas. sed haec in bonis rebus, quod alii ad alia bona sunt

10. et ebriositatem interest R6 B3 L6 M2 DC O1 S marg. W2 marg. et ebrium interest M1. interest et ebriositatem II E2. interest et ebriosum W1. uerba et ebriositatem omittunt R117 V P14 G B12 K12 E13
L2-5 J O2 378 ed. H. 12. omnes R VG. om̄s B2. 13. apparet R VG B K S.

§ 28. ergo et inuidi et maliuoli R VG B2 W1 O27. ergo et maliuoli et inuidi K2 O1. ergo inuidi et maliuoli P B3 SE M2 II O38. ergo dicuntur inuidi et maliuoli DC. ergo maliuoli et inuidi J. 14. et liuidi R VG B1-3 K12 S E12 W12 M12 DC II J O1-378 E3 al. atr. superscr. 15. perturbationes non R1717 V P14 G B12 K12 S E12 L2-5 DC J O1-378. perturbationes non W2 marg. It̄ al. atr. inculc. sunt

perturbationes non II al. atr. superscr. perturbationes sunt non R6 B3 L6
W1 M12. || feruntur R117 VPG B12 K12 E W12 M1 DC J

O1-378. <sup>P</sup>feruntur S. ferantur R67 B3 M2. perferuntur E2 II.
17. dicitur R1616 G B12 K1 S L2-4 W2 M12 C II J O1-378. d̄ R71017 V P14 B3 K2 E1-3 L56 W1 D. dicitur corr.
Bentleius. || intellegatur R VG B K. intelligatur SE M1.

reckoned as a εὐεμπρωσία, a constant predisposition to ira.

estque aliud... iratum: cf. Sen. de Ira i 4 'quid esset ira satis explicitum est. quo distet ab iracundia adparet: quo ebrius ab ebrioso et timens a timido. iratus potest non esse iracundus; iracundus potest aliquando iratus non esse.'

amatorem: almost equivalent to scorta- tozem: cf. Donat. ad Ter. Andr. iv 3, 3
'amicus animi est, amator corporis' and Isid. Hispal. Orig. x ad inii. (p. 1067 Gothofred.) 'amicus...quasi animi custos ...amator turpitudinis quia amore torquentur libidinis.'

§ 28. The words et liuidi found in the MSS after maliuoli are probably due to a mistake on the part of the copyist who 'quom pro et timidi praeue et liuidi scrip-sisset, ipse statim correxit' (Küh.).
Heine (Pos. Progr. p. 11) quotes with approval Wesenberg's dictum 'Ciceronem liuendi uerbum et quae inde deriuata sunt de inuidia nunquam usurpare.'

procliuius. Sff.'s correction for pro- cliues of the MSS, which can hardly be defended, either by understanding sunt, which is very doubtful Ciceronian Latin (sunt after perturbationes in many MSS is evidently a correction), or by taking pro- cliues with feruntur on the analogy of phrases like praeceps ferri which, as Sff. points out, are not really parallel. Bent.

conjectured procliue.

suum quodque genus, i.e. procliuitas cuiusque ad suum genus: for this attraction of quisque to the case and gender of suus cf. Liu. xxv 17, 5 'cum tripudiis Hispanorum motibusque armorum et corporum suae cuique genti, adsuētis.' Cic.
N.D. iii 34, 84 'edixisse ut quod quisque ex sacris haberet id ante diem certam in suum quidque fanum referret.' Fin. v.
17, 46 'sed quia cuiusque partis naturae et in corpore et in animo sua quaeque uis sit' with Madv.'s note.

dicatur. Bent.'s correction accepted by all edd. for the MSS dicitur; the subj.
is required here, as is shown by nominetur
below.

aptiores, facilitas nominetur, in malis procliuitas, ut significet lapsionem, in neutris habeat superius nomen.

XIII. Quo modo autem in corpore est morbus, est aegrotatio, est uitium, sic in animo. morbum appellauit totius corporis corruptionem, aegrotationem morbum cum inbecillitate, uitium, 29 cum partes corporis inter se dissident, ex quo prauitas membrorum, distortio, deformitas. itaque illa duo, morbus et aegrotatio, ex totius ualeitudinis corporis conuassatione et perturbatione gignuntur, uitium autem integra ualeitudine ipsum ex se cernitur. sed in animo tantum modo cogitatione possumus morbum ab aegrotatione seiungere; uitiositas autem est habitus aut adfectio in tota uita inconstans et a se ipsa dissentiens. ita fit, ut in altera corruptione opinionum morbus efficiatur et aegrotatio, in altera inconstantia et repugnantia.

XIII. 2. est uitium R 16 Gr. et uitium R 167 10 17 V P 14 G
B 1-3 K 12 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 D C H J O 1-3 78 ed. H.
3. inbecillitate R B 1 K S. inbecillitate G. inbecillitate V B 2 E.

§ 29, 8. sed in animo B al. atr. superscr. 10. adfectio R V G K. affectio B S.

procliuitas: ἐγκαταφορία or ἐνεμπρωσία, cf. Diog. L. vii 115 quoted in 12, 27 n.

lapsionem: a coinage of Cicero's.

neutris, i.e. τοῖς ἀδιαφόροις.

superius nomen, i.e. aegrotatio, not facilitas as some edd. take it. Cic. wishes to keep a distinctive word facilitas to denote the propensity to virtue, and to employ lapsio (ἐνεμπρωσία) only of a tendency to what is distinctly vicious: as a procliuitas towards res indifferentes was reprehensible though the objects might be in themselves indifferent he falls back upon the word aegrotatio to express it.

XIII. § 29. morbus...aegrotatio: cf. the definitions of Diog. L. and Stob. quoted in 11, 26 n.

uitium: the distinction drawn by Cic. between morbus and uitium involves a narrower meaning of uitium than the definitions of the jurists quoted by Aulus Gellius iv 2. Labeo there defines morbus as habitus cuiusque corporis contra naturam qui usum eius facit deteriorem, and proceeds balbus autem et atypus uitiosi magis quam morbosi sunt, et equus mordax aut calcitro uitiosus non morbosus est. In the libri ueterum iuris peritorum the distinction was laid down that uitium was perpetuum whereas morbus eum accessu decessuque sit.

ualeitudinis corporis: for the double genitive cf. ii 15, 35 n.

uitiositas, a translation of κακία in the wider meaning in which it was used (e.g.) by Posidonius (Diog. L. vii 91) as the opposite of ἀρετή: to keep the parallelism which he has set out to establish between the uitia corporis and the uitia animi Cic. should have used uitium as the Stoics did κακία in the narrower meaning which we find (e.g.) in Diog. L. vii 95 ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ τῶν κακιῶν τὸ μὲν εἶναι ἀφροσύνην δειλίαν ἀδικίαν καὶ τὰ παραπλήσια. But he wished to insist upon the essential unity of vice as upon the essential unity of virtue, and, this being so, the references to bodily disease serve only to point an interesting contrast, somewhat at the expense of the lucidity of the argument.

habitus aut adfectio: these two words correspond to ἕξις and διάθεσις without, however, preserving the distinction maintained by the Stoics Diog. L. vii 98 ἐπι τῶν περὶ ψυχῆν ἀγαθῶν τὰ μὲν εἰσιν ἕξεις, τὰ δὲ διαθέσεις... διαθέσεις μὲν αἱ ἀρεταὶ ἕξεις δὲ τὰ ἐπιτηδεύματα.

paris...dissensiones. Bentley's emendation adopted by Müller, Sff., Hei., T. S., Schiche, for the MSS partes...dissentientes: those edd. such as Mo. and Hasper who keep partes must, as Küh.

non enim omne uitium paris habet dissensiones, ut eorum qui non longe a sapientia absunt adfectio est illa quidem discrepans 15 sibi ipsa, dum est insipiens, sed non distorta nec praua. morbi autem et aegrotationes partes sunt uitiositatis, sed perturbationes sintne eiusdem partes quaestio est. 30. uitia enim adfectiones sunt manentes, perturbationes autem mouentes, ut non possint adfectionum manentium partes esse. atque ut in malis attingit 20 animi naturam corporis similitudo, sic in bonis. sunt enim in corpore praecipua, ualetudo, uires, pulchritudo, firmitas, uelocitas, sunt item in animo. ut enim corporis temperatio, cum ea congruunt inter se e quibus constamus, sanitas, sic animi dicitur, cum eius iudicia opinionisque concordant, eaque animi est uirtus, 25 quam alii ipsam temperantiam dicunt esse, alii obtemperantem

13. non enim omne uitium R V P G B K plerique. non enim uitium R 7 E 3. habet enim omne uicium ed. H. || partis habet dissentientis R P G B 12 K 12

E 12 D C J O 7. partis habet dissentientis<sup>N</sup> V at N<sup>is</sup> cod. atr. in ras. et in duarum litt. spatio script. partes habet dissentientes B 3 S M 1. partis habet dissentiens W 2. paris habet dissensiones corr. Bentleius. 16. aegrotationes K i in e mut. egrotationes B. egrotationes D. aegrotationis R G. egrotationis V. egrotationis S.

§ 30, 22. sicut enim corporis C ed. H. sic enim corporis M 1 D. est enim corporis R 7 L 23 J O 18. ē. n. corporis W 1. est enim corporis V at est in marg. ad initium lineae atr. uiridi script. enim corporis R P 14 G B 12 K 1 S E 12 II O 7 Gr. corporis cell. om. R 6 17 K 2 E 3 L 4-6 W 2 M 2 O 2 3. ut enim corporis corr. Camerarius. 25. alii ipsam V K 1 says, interpret partes habet dissentientes in a pregnant sense as equivalent to singulas inter se animi partes habet dissentientes or, with Küh., insert omnes before omne.

E 12 W 12 ed. H. aliam ipsam S. aliam ipsam R P G. || obtemperantem V. optemperantem R 12 P G B.

illa quidem: i 3, 6 n.

§ 30. uitia, i.e. kakia in the narrower sense as contrasted with kakla (uitiositas) the root principle of evil.

mouentes, 'transitory': for the intransitive use of mouere cf. Finn. ii 10, 31, Liu. v 25, 6 praeda quaererum mouentium sit.

attingit ... similitudo, i.e. corporis natura similis est naturae animi: for the expression cf. 10, 23 'morbis corporum comparatur morborum animi similitudo,' II Verr. v 36, 94 'ut ei Lampsaceni periculi similitudo uersaretur ante oculos.'

praecipua. Cic. preferred praepositus or praecipuus to productus as a translation of προηγμένος (Finn. iv 26, 72). Chrysippus and his school classed these bodily advantages under the head of ἀδιάφορα κατ' εἶδος προηγμένα: Posidonius καὶ ταυτὰ φησι τῶν ἀγαθῶν εἶναι (Diog. L. vii 103): Cicero's language here, however, cannot be taken as proving his indebtedness to Posidonius or even sympathy with his views. He merely says, as Chrysippus might have said, that health and strength of body were to the body what sanitas and consistency were to the mind. The difference between Chrysippus and Posidonius turned on the value to be assigned to physical qualities in relation to the mind.

ut enim corporis temperatio: Dav. quotes Stobaeus, Ecl. Eth. p. 168 (ii 7, 5) ὡσπερ γὰρ τὴν τοῦ σώματος ὑγίειαν εὐκρασίαν εἶναι τῶν ἐν τῷ σώματι θερμῶν καὶ ψυχρῶν καὶ ξηρῶν καὶ ὑγρῶν οὕτω καὶ τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ὑγίειαν εὐκρασίαν εἶναι τῶν ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ δογματῶν.

sic animi, sc. sanitas.

ipsam temperantiam, 'nothing more nor less than self control,' i.e. these authorities considered that temperantia, usually regarded as one of the four cardinal virtues, was simply that sanitas animi which was the necessary presupposition in all virtue.

temperantiae praeceptis, et eam subsequentem nec habentem ullam speciem suam, sed, siue hoc siue illud sit, in solo esse sapiente. est autem quaedam animi sanitas quae in insipientem etiam cadat, cum curatione medicorum conturbatio mentis aufer<sup>30</sup> tur. 31. et ut corporis est quaedam apta figura membrorum cum coloris quadam suauitate, eaque dicitur pulchritudo, sic in animo opinionum iudiciorumque aequabilitas et constantia cum firmitate quadam et stabilitate uirtutem subsequens aut uirtutis uim ipsam continens pulchritudo uocatur. itemque uiribus<sup>35</sup> corporis et neruis et efficacitati similes similibus quoque uerbis animi uires nominantur. uelocitas autem corporis celeritas

28. quae insipientem V h. e. i in a ut uid. mut. 29. cum curatione et perturbatione R I 2 10 16 17 V P I 4 G B I 2 K I 2 S E I - 3 L 2 5 6 W 2
 M 2 II J O 7 8 Gr. cum curatione et pcuratione D al. atr. superscr. l' pcuratione cum curatione et procuratione C. cum curatione et prouisione M I. cum curatione et gubernatione L 4 O I. cum curatione W I et in marg. inf.
 eod. atr. et ptractatione. cum curatione et pturbatione R 7. cum curatione cett. om. R 6 L 3 O 2 3. cum curatione et tractatione ed. H. et perturbatione om. Victorious. et pertractatione conl. I. M. Brutus. || conturbatio R I 2 10 16 17
 V P 4 G B I 2 K I S W 2 M I O I 2 7 8. perturbatio R 6 7 P I E 2
 W I M 2 D C II O 3.
 § 31, 31. eaq; B I 2 E I W I 2 M 2 D O I 3 8. eaque O 7. ea q3 S at q3 in lit. ea q3 J. eaque R V. ea q̄ P. eaque K I. ea quae G.
 35. similes similibus quoque M I. similes similibusque R V P G B I 3 K I 2
 L 2 - 6 W I 2 M 2 D C II J O I - 3 7 8. sites|q3 siñb3 uis B 2. similibusque similes om. S E I 2 3. similes similibusq3 quoque ed. H.

speciem, 'never appearing independently,' i.e. it was not an independent virtue but the quality of mind which underlay all virtue, 'without constituting any peculiar kind of itself' (Wolf).

est autem quaedam: the 'soundness of mind' resulting from the harmony of all its parts belongs only to the sapiens; but a special kind of it, though of a lower order, may be seen even in one who is not sapiens when, after a fit of insanity, the faculties are restored to their normal state by medical treatment: the health of mind which the sapiens enjoys is as far above the state of mind of the insipiens as sanity in the ordinary use of the word is above insanity. Sff., through failure to follow the connection, follows Turnebus (Adv. vii 17) in changing sanitas to insanitas and insipientem to sapientem.

§ 31. et ut corporis. Dav. quotes Stob. Ecl. Eth. p. 168 [ii 63, i W.] ὡσπερ τε τὸ κάλλος τοῦ σώματος ἐστι συμμετρία τῶν μελῶν καθεστῶτων αὐτῷ πρὸς ἄλληλά τε καὶ πρὸς τὸ ὅλον, οὕτω καὶ τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς κάλλος ἐστὶ συμμετρία τοῦ λόγου καὶ τῶν μερῶν αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸ ὅλον τε αὐτῆς καὶ πρὸς ἄλλα: for the addition of colour to the conception of beauty cf. Seneca, de Ira ii 1, 2 'post haec omnia, qui maxime oculos rapit, color ultimus perfecto iam corpore adfunditur.' Maximus Tyrius xxv 3 p. 300 H. τὴν χρωμάτων τε καὶ σχημάτων καὶ τῆς ἐν τούτοις ἡδονῆς καὶ ἀηδίας ὁμίλιαν.

uim ipsam, 'the very essence'; there is the same difference of view in the case of pulchritudo animi as in the case of sanitas animi (§ 30): some held that pulchr. animi was a concomitant of virtue, others that virtue and it were one and the same thing. Bent.'s change of ipsam to ipsa is unnecessary.

animi multarum rerum: for the double genitive see ii 15, 35 n. on functio... animi...muneris.

appellatur, quae eadem ingenii etiam laus habetur propter animi multarum rerum breui tempore percursionem.

XIV. Illud animorum corporumque dissimile, quod animi ualentes morbo temptari non possunt, corpora possunt; et corporum offensiones sine culpa accidere possunt, animorum non item, quorum omnes morbi et perturbationes ex aspersione rationis 5 eueniunt; itaque in hominibus solum existunt; nam bestiae simile quiddam faciunt, sed in perturbationes non incidunt. 32. inter acutos autem et inter hebetes interest, quod ingeniosi, ut aes Corinthium in aeruginem, sic illi in morbum et incidunt tardius et recreantur ocius, hebetes non item. nec uero in omnem morbum ac

38. percursionem R6 B3 JDC O18. percussionem V atr. uir.
 S eod. atr. percursionem R1717 G B12 K2 E12 W12 II O37. percursionem M2. perjussionem K1 atr. nigriore.
 XIV. 2. corpora autem G. corpora-possunt K2. || sed corporum R16
 VG B12 K1 S E2 L34 W1 M12 ΠJ O138 ed. H. s3 corporum R7101617 P14 B3 K2 E13 L256 W2 D O2. set corporum C. et corporum corr. Seyffertus. 5. simile quidam R V. simile quidam G.
 § 32, 7. inter ante hebetes omittunt R6 P1 B3 W1 M12 O1-3. || hebetis R6 P14 B12. 8. in aerugine G. inerugine V.

breui tempore: for a temporal ablative qualifying a verbal substantive cf. Liv. xxi 16, 2 tot uno tempore motibus animi.

XIV. animi ualentes... possunt: et: the mind of the philosopher which has been strengthened and perfected by virtue is superior to the assaults of evil (cf. iii 5, 11 'eos enim sanos quoniam intellegi necesse est, quorum mens motu quasi morbo perturbata nullo sit'), since evil can attack the soul only from within, but the body is always open to attacks of disease which come from without and from sources not under its control. et is Sff.'s correction of the mss sed; Madv. and Tregd. omit the words non possunt, corpora and credit Cicero with the inconsistent statement that the philosophic mind is subject to mental disturbance. Bent. inserted ut before corpora. Sff. is evidently right in reading et: the statement in the second sentence is not a correction of, nor in contrast to, the statement in the first: it is the statement of the essential difference between mental and bodily morbi which is the justification for the statement in the first clause. Sed is retained by Heine (Posen Progr. p. 6) who regards it as marking a transition from one idea to another.

bestiae. Dav. quotes Sen. de Ira i 3, 4 'dicendum est feras ira carere et omnia praeter hominem. nam cum sit inimica rationi nusquam tamen nascitur, nisi ubi rationi locus est... § 6 muta animalia humanis adfectibus carent, habent autem similes illis quosdam impulsus.' Stob. Ecl. Eth. p. 175 [ii 6, 9] κατὰ τὸ γένος δὲ ταύτην διττῶς θεωρεῖσθαι τὴν τε ἐν τοῖς λογικοῖς γιγνομένην ὀρμὴν καὶ τὴν ἐν τοῖς ἀλόγοις ζώοις and Galen, de Plac. Hipp. et Plat. iv p. 371 διὰ μὲν οὖν τοῦ ἀπεστράφθαι φάναι τὸν λόγον ἐχώρισε [sc. ὁ Χρῆσιππος] τὴν κατὰ τὸ πάθος ἀλογον κίνησιν τῆς τῶν ἀψύχων τε καὶ τῶν ἀλόγων ζώων: id. v p. 431 τῶν ἄλλων Στωικῶν οἱ γε μέχρι τοσοῦτου φιλονεικίας ἤκουσαν, ὥστ' ἐπειδὴ τῆς λογικῆς δυνάμεως ἐφασαν εἶναι τὰ πάθη, τοῖς ἀλόγοις ζώοις μὴ μετέχειν αὐτῶν συγχωρεῖν.

faciunt, i.e. patiuntur or habent: for this use of facio to supply the place of another verb, cf. v 32, 90 'an Scythes Anacharsis potuit pro nihilo pecuniam ducere, nostrates philosophi facere non poterunt' and i 11, 24 n.

§ 32. aes Corinthium, a mixture of gold, silver and copper: Plin. H. N. xxxiv 2, 3 § 6 refutes the vulgar idea that the mixture was first discovered by accident at the burning of Corinth by Mummium in 146 B.C. as statues of aes Corinthium were known from before that date. Connoisseurs claimed to be able to recognize the true Corinthian bronze by the smell. Mart. ix 59, 11.

illi: cf. 30, 61 n. on ille.

10 perturbationem animus ingeniosi cadit; † non enim multa eferata et immania: quaedam autem humanitatis quoque habent primam speciem, ut misericordia, aegritudo, metus. aegrotationes autem morbique animorum difficiliter euelli posse putantur quam summa 15 uitia, quae uirtutibus sunt contraria. morbis enim manentibus illa tolluntur. 33. habes ea quae de perturbationibus enucleate disputant Stoici, quae λογικά appellant, quia disseruntur sub-20 tilius. ex quibus quoniam tamquam ex scrupulosis cotibus enauigauit oratio, reliquae disputationis cursum teneamus, modo satis illa dilucide dixerimus pro rerum obscuritate.

A. Prorsus satis; sed si quae diligentius erunt cognoscenda, quaeremus alias, nunc uela quae modo dicebas exspectamus et cursum.

10. non enim multa R I 6 7 17 V P 14 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 D C H J O 1-3 7 8. non enim in multa ed. H. non enim cadit i

multa E 3 al. atr. superscr. || eferata R G. efferata V B K 1 W 12 D O 1 3 7. eferata P at ef in marg. adscr. et nec ferata B 2. hec efferata ed. H.

11. immania R V P B K S E. inmania G. in mania B 2 O 7.
 15. sublata esse non possunt R 17 17 V P 14 G B 1-3 K 12 S E 12
 W 12 M 2 D C H J O 1-3 7 8. sublata est non possunt M 1. esse uitia sublata non possunt R 6. sublata esse possunt corr. Lambinus. || quia non tam R V P G B K plerique. qui non tam W 1. quare non tam O 1.

 § 33, 17. logica R V G S D alii. logica unius litt. spat. rel. K 1.

loica E 1 al. atr. superscr. 18. ex scrupulosis R 2 10 16 B 1-3 S E 12 D C H O 1 3 8. ex scrupulosis G ead. man. exscrupulosis P atr. ant. superscr.

exscrupulof, K 2. ex scrupulosis K 1 at in marg. scrupulosis. ex scrupulosis R 1. exscrupulosis V W 1. ex scrupulosis O 7. ex scrupulosis O 2. 21. si quae

G K 1 M 2 O 2 3. si que R V S E. si que B 1. si que R 16 B 2 3 K 2 E 2 D O 7. si que II. si que P C. si que O 8 al atr. superscr.

si qua W 12 J O 1. quia M 1 si om. 22. expectamus R V G.
 ex peçtamus K 1 litt. ante p eras. expectamus B 1.

non enim multa eferata: this, which is the mss. reading, is obviously corrupt. Bentl. proposed in ulla and he is followed by Küh. Hei. Schiche, Sff. Mo. etc. Madv. proposed sunt enim multa. It seems more probable that multa is a corruption of in uitia sc. cadit 'he does not fall into gross and outrageous faults': some noun like uitia seems to be required to which quaedam may be referred. The danger to the ingeniosus proceeds from the more insidious perturbationes which appear as amiable weaknesses.

primam speciem, 'a superficial resemblance to,' lit. 'the beginning of a resemblance.'

putantur: sc. a philosophis.

quia: if this, which is the mss. reading, be retained, the subject to sanantur is morbis, to be supplied out of morbis, which, though awkward, is not impossible, morbis being by its position the most emphatic word in the sentence. Küh. follows Lamb. in inserting hi, with the same distinction between hic and ille as in i 49, 117: Dav. proposed qui and he is followed by Or. Bai. and Sff.

§ 33. enucleate: 'concisely,' see Sandys' n. on Cic. Or. § 28. Conciseness (συντομία), the λέξις αὐτὰ τὰ ἀναγκαῖα περιέχουσα πρὸς δῆλωσιν τοῦ πράγματος, was, acc. to the Stoics, one of the virtues of speech. Diog. L. vii 59.

cursum: 'a straight run,' cf. Att. v 8, 1 'cursum exspectabamus.' For the metaphor cf. Quint. vi 1, 52 'e confrag-

XV. 34. M. Quando, ut aliis locis de uirtute et diximus et saepe dicendum erit (pleraeque enim quaestiones quae ad uitam moresque pertinent a uirtutis fonte ducuntur), quando igitur uirtus est adfectio animi constans conueniensque, laudabiles
5 efficiens eos in quibus est, et ipsa per se sua sponte separata etiam utilitate laudabilis, ex ea proficiscuntur honestae uoluntates, sententiae, actiones omnisque recta ratio, quamquam ipsa uirtus breuissime recta ratio dici potest. huius igitur uirtutis
10 contraria est uitiositas (sic enim malo quam malitiam appellare eam quam Graeci κακίαν appellant; nam malitia certi cuiusdam uitii nomen est, uitiositas omnium); ex qua concitantur perturbationes, quae sunt, ut paulo ante diximus, turbidi animorum concitatioque motus, auersi a ratione et inimicissimi mentis

XV. § 34, 1. et ante aliis habent R V P G B K plerique. om. R 7. ut aliis corr. Manutius. || et ante diximus omittunt R 6 K 2 E 3 L 2 6 O 3 7 superscr. eod. atr. habet W 1. 3. ducuntur R V G M 1 2 O 2. ducit B 2. dicuntur B 1 al. atr. superscr. dicuntur S. dicuntur E 1 J.
8. breuissime R K E. breuissime V. breuissime G prius m expunx. alt. man. breuis summe B 1. 11. concitantur W 1. cogitantur R 1 6 7 1 7
V P 1 2 4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H.

osis atque asperis eucti tota pandere possumus uela'—no doubt a direct imitation of this passage.

XV. § 34. Quando: for quoniam, rare in Cicero: see Mdv.'s n. to Fin. v 8, 21; Charisius p. 86 says 'quando acuta prima syllaba interrogationem temporis significat, sed posteriore acuta quoniam uel quandoquidem.' ut, Manutius' emendation for the MSS. et, has been accepted by Dav. Wes. Kl. Sff. in view of the awkwardness of three et's in close succession. Or., who will not accept this emendation, omits the et before diximus.

uirtutis fonte: 'virtue as their source'; gen. of definition, cf. 'mercedem gloriae' 1 15, 34.

igitur, like ergo, often resumes after a digression, cf. i 7, 14 n.

adfectio animi: adfectio is used here, as in Fin. iii 20, 65, as equivalent to the Gk διάθεσις. The definition of virtue here is the same as that quoted in Stob. Ecl. Eth. p. 167 (ii 60, 5) κοινότερον δὲ τὴν ἀρετὴν διάθεσιν εἶναι φασὶ ψυχῆς συμφωνον αὐτῇ περὶ ὅλον τὸν βίον combined with that of Cleanthes as given by Diog. L. vii 89 τὴν τ' ἀρετὴν διάθεσιν εἶναι ὁμολογούμενην καὶ αὐτὴν δι' αὐτὴν αἰρετὴν, οὐ διὰ τινα φόβον ἢ ἐλπίδα ἢ τι τῶν ξεωθεν·

ἐν αὐτῇ τ' εἶναι τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν, αὐτ' οὖσα ψυχῇ πεποιημένη πρὸς τὴν ὁμολογίαν παντὸς τοῦ βίου.

omnisque recta ratio, 'and right reason in general': recta ratio or absoluta ratio (v 13, 39) is the ὁρθὸς λόγος of the Stoics which objectively is ὁ νόμος ὁ κοινός and subjectively is the state of mind which is in harmony with the law of the universe: this state of mind is essentially virtue itself as Cicero says in the next sentence: cf. Sen. Epp. 113, 2 'uirtus autem nihil aliud est quam animus quodammodo se habens.' For omnis in the sense of omnino cf. i 40, 95 'in omni uirtute'; Stat. Theb. v 364 'raptus ab omni sole dies.'

uirtutis contraria: for the gen. cf. Fin. iv 24, 67, Inu. ii 54, 165.

malitia: so in Fin. iii 11, 39 'quas enim Graeci κακίας appellant uitia malo quam malitias nominare': Cic. defines malitia in N. D. iii 30, 75 to be 'uersuta et fallax nocendi ratio' and this def. agrees with the general use of the word (e.g. Ter. Andr. iv 3, 8): Sall. Iug. 22 'uirtute non malitia P. Scipioni, summo uiro, placuisse' (quoted by TS.) is an instance of the use disowned by Cic.

concitantur = concitando efficiuntur, cf. iii 11, 25 n. on turbantur.

uitaeque tranquillae. inportant enim aegritudines anxias atque 15 acerbas animosque adfligunt et debilitant metu; iidem inflam-mant adpetitione nimia, quam tum cupiditatem, tum libidinem dicimus, inpotentiam quandam animi a temperantia et mode-ratione plurimum dissidentem. 35. quae si quando adepta erit id quod ei fuerit concupitum tum eferetur alacritate, ut 'nihil 20 ei constet quod agat,' ut ille, qui 'uoluptatem animi nimiam summum esse errorem' arbitratur. eorum igitur malorum in una uirtute posita sanatio est.

15. idem R V P G B 12 K E 2 M 1 O 7. iidem W 1 D O 3 8. idē S marg. item. id ē E 1. idest J. i' (i.e. id est) W 2. unde O 1.
 16. quam tum R B 13 S E W 2 M 12 D C O 1-3 7 8. quātū P. quā
 tum W 1 fort. cod. atr. quantum K 1 n in m mut. quantum V G B 2. quamcum E 2. 17. animi a W 2 M 12 D C O 1-3 7 8. Π (marg.). ā a B 3 W 1 O 7 8. aīa B 2. a nimia E 3. anima E 1. anima V B 1. anima R G K. animi E 2.
 § 35, 18. adepta ē R 6. adeptaret<sup>r</sup> J S marg. adeptaretur L 3 O 1.
 ea adeptā retur E 3 at litterae post d al. atr. script. ea demptaretur B 1 K 2 S M 1 D C O 7. eademptaretur R V P G K E. ea d'ptaret<sup>r</sup> W 2. ei adeptaretur O 3. ei demptaret<sup>r</sup> P 4. ea temparetur B 2. ea tēptaretur R 7.
 ea dēpdaretur L 2. eadem piaretur B 3 L 6. eadem piaretur M 2 al. atr. corr. eadem putaretur R 17 O 8. cadere putaretur O 2. adipisceretur W 1. ea adipiscitur L 4. ea depredarentur L 5. om. II at marg. adepta est. piaret ed. H. adepta erit corr. Lambinus. 19. tum fertur alacritate W 1 Gr.
 tum fert alacritate R V P 12 4 G B 12 K 1 O 3 8. tum fert alacritatē B 3 E 2 3 M 1 ed. H. tum fert alacritatem R 6 7 17 L 3 4 M 2 O 1. tūc fert alacri<sup>te</sup> K 2. tum affert alacritatem O 7. fert alacritate E 1 cum om. fert alacritatē S W 2 II marg. O 2 cum om. affert alacritate D C cum om. tum fert cum alacritate L 2 5. feret alacritatem L 6 cum om. tum eferetur alacritate corr. Baiter praeeunte Dausio. || nihil ei R 7 L 2 O 8.
 nihil ē E 1 al. atr. superscr. nihil ei B 1 at i postea inculc. et linea super e ex parte eras. nihil ē K 1. nihil est<sup>se</sup> V atram. uiridi. nihil est R 1 G B 2.
 nihil ēē R 17 P B 3 E 2 3 L 4 5 W 12 O 17. nihil esse R 6 P 2 4 K 2
 L 3 6 M 12 D C H marg. J O 3 ed. H. nihil eius O 2. 20. quod R 6
 L 2 4. qd II marg. qd W 1. qd R 7 P. quid R V G
 B 1-3 K 12 S E 12 L 3 5 6 W 2 M 2 D C J O 1-3 8 ed. H. q' R 17
 M 1 O 7.

§ 35. eferetur: the future (as against the pres. efertur of Küh. and others) is required here by the preceding future perf. adepta erit. Most edd. adopt the compound, as against the simple verb feretur read by Sff. feretur is undoubtedly nearer the best MSS, but on the other hand the meaning required here seems to be not 'will be impelled by,' which Sff. argues for, but 'will be carried away by,' to which 17, 39 'quod aut cupias ardentier aut adeptus eferas te insolenter' furnishes a close parallel. The MSS often confuse efse-(effe-) and fe-.

ille, qui uoluptatem: a quotation from the comic poet Trabea (Ribbeck, Sc. Rom. Poes. Frag. 11<sup>2</sup> 32), which occurs again Fin. ii 4, 13, Fam. ii 9, 2. Bentley shewed that the line was a trochaic tetram. 'ego uoluptatem animi nimiam summum esse errorem arbilror,' though he chose to alter errorem to aegrorem, which would, however, spoil the quotation in Fam. ii 9, 2.

XVI. Quid autem est non miserius solum, sed foedius etiam et deformius quam aegritudine quis adffictus, debilitatus, iacens? cui miseriae proximus est is, qui adpropinquans aliquod malum metuit exanimatusque pendet animi. quam uim mali significantes poëtae impendere apud inferos saxum Tantalos faciunt

Ὅβ scelera animique ínpotentiam ét superbilo-quéntiam.

ea communis poena stultitiae est. omnibus enim quorum mens abhorret a ratione semper aliqui talis terror inpendet. 36. atque ut haec tabificae mentis perturbationes sunt, aegritudinem dico et metum, sic hilariores illae, cupiditas auide semper aliquid expetens et inanis alacritas, id est laetitia gestiens, non multum differunt ab amentia. ex quo intellegitur, qualis ille sit quem

XVI. 2. debilitatus iacens R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 D C O 3 7 Gr. debilitatusque iacens B 3 K 2 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 2 H O 1 8 ed. H. et debilitatus iacens C. debilitateque iacens J O 2. 3. is qui R G K alii. isq; V. 9. aliquid aliis R V P 1 4 G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 1 L 3 5 6 W 2 M 2 J O 1 3 Gr. S at in aliquis aliis mut. et marg. dolor aliis. aliquis aliis O 7. aliquis alius L 4. aliquis illis W 1 ed. H. aliquis om. aliis R 7 E 2 L 2 M 1 D C H O 8. aliquid aliis dolor aliis M 2. aliquis aliis dolor aliis R 6 O 2. aliqui talis corr. Gronouius.

§ 36, 10. haec R G K. hec V B E. hec D C H O 1 7 8 ed. H.

h' P al. atr. superscr. h' B 2. h' W 2 J. h' K 2. h' S at ras. post §. haec M 2 O 2. h' W 1 O 3. he B 3 E 2 M 1. 11. illae G. ille V P K. ille R. || auide V P K. auide R. auidae G.

XVI. quid: the use of the neuter in place of the masculine is very common; it makes the question more emphatic by extending the range of comparison to things as well as persons: nihil is used instead of nemo in the same way, e.g. in N.D. i 33, 93; so quicquid for quisquis in Ovid, Rem. Am. 247.

quis, indefinite: for this use of quis, common after si, ne, nisi, num, etc. see Draeger, Syntax d. Lat. Spr. i § 44.

animi, locative. In Cic. animi is always used with verbs (pendere, angi), never with adjectives. The plural animis is found in the best MSS in i 40, 96 though Ursinus and Bentley alter it to animi. Cf. Draeger, op. cit. i § 206, 5: there seems to have been in early Latin some confusion between the gen. and the locative in such phrases, e.g. desipiebam mentis in Plaut. Epid. 138.

Tantalo: here and in Fin. i 18, 60 Cic. follows, as does Lucretius (iii 980) the version of the punishment of Tantalus adopted by Pind. Ol. i, 90 and Eur. Orest. 5: in i 5, 10 he follows the alternative version of Od. xi 582.

faciunt, 'tell of': for the use of facio with acc. and inf. cf. v 39, 115; N.D. iii 16, 41 'quem Homerus...conueniri facit ab Ulixē,' Virg. Aen. viii 630 'fecerat et uiridi fetam Mauortis in antro | procubuisse lupam': the use of facio (efficio) with this constr. in the sense of 'cause' is very rare in Classical Latin, e.g. Cic. Brut. 38, 142 'tales oratores uideri facit, quales ipsi se uideri uolunt': Draeger, op. cit. i, § 442.

ob scelera: the words are, as Turn. (Adv. vii 18) saw, a quotation from some unknown poet: superbiloquentiam is perhaps a translation of the ἀκθλαστος γλώσσα of Eur. Or. 10. The line is a trochaic tetrameter catalectic.

§ 36. id est: an instance of the explanatory use of the phrase, for which see Reid's n. to Ac. i 2, 8.

tum moderatum...alias constantem: the reading in the text has been shown by Wopkens, Lect. Tull. p. 128, to be quite sound. The reading adopted by Or., modestum et temperantem, is shown to be unsound by a comparison of iii 8, 16 where a clear distinction is drawn between the tum moderatum, alias modestum, <tum> temperantem, alias 15 constantem continentemque dicimus; non numquam haec eadem uocabula ad frugalitatis nomen tamquam ad caput referre uolumus. quod nisi eo nomine uirtutes continerentur, numquam ita peruulgatum illud esset ut iam prouerbii locum obtineret, 'hominem frugi omnia recte facere.' quod idem cum Stoici de 20 sapiente dicunt, nimis admirabiliter nimisque magnifice dicere uidentur.

XVII. 37. Ergo hic, quisquis est, qui moderatione et constantia quietus animo est sibi que ipse placatus, ut nec tabescat molestiis nec frangatur timore nec sitienter quid expetens ardeat desiderio nec alacritate futtili gestiens deliquescat, is est sapiens
 5 quem quaerimus, is est beatus cui nihil humanarum rerum aut

14. modestum temperantem R 17 17 V P 14 G B 1-3 K 12 E 1 L 2-6 W 2 M 12 DCJ O 1-3 78. modestum et temperantem R 6.

et moderatum temperantem II cell. om. moderatum temperantem E 2 cell. om.
 tum modestum alias moderatum temperantem W 1. modestum tum temperantem corr. Handius. 18. ita peruulgatum illud esset R V P G B 1-3 SE M 2 C. illud ita promulgatum esset O 3. || obtineret V. optineret R P G B K. 19. omnia recte R 6 P

 B 13 E 12 W 1 M 12 O 13 8. recte omnia S. omnia recta R V G K 1
 W 2 DCIIJ O 2. omnia rectæ B 2. 20. nimis R 6 7 17 G B 3 K 2 E 2 W 12 M 12 DCIIJ O 1-3 8. nimis V B 1. nimis S at a ante n eras. animis R 12 P 14 B 2 K 1 E. ais O 7.

XVII. § 37, 1. hic R V P G B 12 K 2 S E 12 W 2 M 1 DCIIJ
 O 7 8. is B 3 W 1 M 2 O 1-3. his K 1. 3. expetens B 1-3 W 2
 M 12 DC O 12 8. expe tens V litt. ut uid. eras. ex peçtens K 1. expectens R G. expectans P S E 2 II O 37. exspectans E.

eat
 appetens W 1. || ardeat S W 1 DJ O 13 7 8. ard& V atr. uiridi superscr.
 ardet B 1 marg. ardeat. ardet R G B 2 K 12 E 12. arderet W 2.

4. futtili R 2 6 10 16 B 13 K 2 E 2 W 12 M 12 DCIIJ O 12 8. futtuli V. futtili B 2 E 1. futtuli R G K 1. futuli P. facili O 3.

two words, which Or.'s reading makes practically synonymous: the et arose from a desire to supply the lacuna caused by the accidental omission of tum after modestum. Tum...alias, more usually tum...tum or alias...alias, is found only here.

ad frugalitatis nomen...referre, 'bring under the category of': this wide sense of frugalitas has already been expounded in iii 8, 16. For nomen (apparently a metaphor from book-keeping, originally meaning an 'account') cf. Verr. II 2, 57, 141: 3, 91, 212, pro Planc. 15, 36.

quod nisi: in this phrase (cf. quod si) quod, originally an adverbial relative, has become a mere connecting particle; cf. Att. xiii 10, 1 'quod nisi mihi hoc uenisset in mentem.' The phrase is not found in Caesar or Sallust, and very seldom in Livy. Draeger, op. cit. I § 484a.

Stoici: e.g. Chrysippus, who, acc. to Diog. L. vii 122, held that the wise were ετι και αναμαρτητους, τω απεριπτωτους ειναι αμαρτηματι αβλαβεις τ' ειναι, ου γαρ αλλους βλαπτειν οσθ' αυτους. Archedemus (Diog. L. vii 88) gave it as his definition of virtue παντα τα καθηκοντα επιτελονοντα ζην.

nimis admirabiliter: cf. Chrysippus, ap. Plut. de Stoic. repug. p. 1041 F διο και δια την υπερβολην του τε μεγεθους και του κаллous πλάσμασι δοκοουμεν ομοια λεγειν και ου κατα τον ανθρωπον και την ανθρωπινην φύσιν.

XVII. § 37. tabescat...frangatur...ardeat...deliquescat: for the metaphors cf. Nägelsbach, Lat. Stil. §§ 129 sqq.

intolerabile ad demittendum animum aut nimis laetabile ad efferendum uideri potest. quid enim uideatur ei magnum in rebus humanis cui aeternitas omnis totiusque mundi nota sit magnitudo? nam quid aut in studiis humanis aut in tam exigua breuitate uitae magnum sapienti uideri potest, qui semper animo sic excubat ut ei nihil inprouisum accidere possit, nihil inopinatum, nihil omnino nouum? 38. atque idem ita acrem in omnis partis aciem intendit ut semper uideat sedem sibi ac locum sine molestia atque angore uiuendi, ut, quemcumque casum fortuna inuexerit, hunc apte et quiete ferat; quod qui faciet, non aegritudine solum uacabit sed etiam perturbationibus reliquis omnibus. his autem uacuus animus perfecte atque absolute beatos efficit, idemque concitatus et abstractus ab integra certaue ratione non constantiam solum amittit uerum etiam sanitatem.

6. into lerabile V litt. post o eras. 7. adferendum V atr. uiridi superscr.
 adferendum R B K E. ad ferendum G B 2 K 2 J O I ed. H. ad efferendum E 2 L 2-4 6 W 1 D O 3 7. ad efferendum S at ef extr. marg. alio ut uid. atr.
 ad efferendum O 8 al. atr. superscr. afferendum W 2 ad om. ad deferendum L 5.
 9. nam quid R 1 7 V P 4 G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1-3 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1 2 7 ed. H. num quid P 1. nunquid O 3 K 2 om.
 10. animo sic B 3 K 2 M 1 2 II J O 1-3 7.  $\overline{\text{a}}$  sic W 1 2 D. animo sic R et B s post o eras. animos sic V E. animos sic G K O 8. a $\overline{\text{t}}$ os sic P B 2.
 § 38, 12. idem B 1 3 K 1 E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 8. eidem V. eidem R G B 2. || omnis partis R V G K E. omnis partes B. om̄s partes S. 17. absolute K 1 o in a mut. atr. ant.

ad demittendum = ita ut demittat animum: cf. 38, 82 ‘dolore ad patiendum leuato’; Part. Or. 29, 102 ‘tertius (sc. status) aequi et ueri et recti et humani ad ignoscendum disputatione tractandus est’; pro Font. 18, 40 ‘melioere fortuna ad probra non audienda’ (= ita ut probra non audiat): see Küh. Lat. Gr. I p. 134.

quid enim uideatur ei magnum: for the thought cf. v 25, 71.

nam quid, which is the MSS reading, is defended by Wopkens, Lect. Tull. p. 90, against Bentley’s conjecture num quid: Wopkens regards nam as a mere variant of enim in the preceding question: but Cic. has no objection to repeating enim in consecutive clauses, e.g. Ac. ii 33, 108, and Küh.’s explanation seems preferable: ‘enim antecedentis enuntiationis causam notat; nam habet explicandi uim.’

excubat: the same metaphor is found in Phil. vi 7, 18 ‘consilio quantum potero, labore plus paene quam potero excubabo uigilaboque pro uobis.’ For the whole passage cf. Virg. Aen. vi 103 quoted by Seneca, Ep. 76, 33.

§ 38. acrem: ‘so keen an eye,’ the adj. being not proleptic (TS. and Hei.) but descriptive of a permanent characteristic of the sapiens, who is ‘sure in all his ways,’ ἀλλ’ οὐδὲ παρορᾶν [ἀλλ’] οὐδὲ παρακούειν νομίζουσι τὸν σοφὸν οὐδὲ τὸ σύνολον παραπαλεῖν κατὰ τι τῶν αἰσθητηρίων, Stob. Ecl. Eth. p. 183 (ii 6, 6): for the expression cf. Fin. i 17, 57 ‘acri animo et attento intuemur.’

uideat: not = prouideat ‘is ever on the look out for’ as Küh. and TS. take it, comparing iii 19, 46, but ‘has ever in view,’ almost = uideat paratam sibi (Or.): Cic. wishes to emphasize the confidence and assurance, not the mere hope and expectation, of the Stoic: for the attributive use of the phrase sine... uiuendi cf. Nägelsb. Stil. § 75, 2.

certaue ratione: cf. ii 27, 65 ‘nihil enim potest esse aequabile quod non a certa ratione profisciscatur.’

- 20 Quocirca mollis et enervata putanda est Peripateticorum ratio et oratio, qui perturbari animos necesse dicunt esse, sed adhibent modum quendam quem ultra progredi non oporteat. 39. modum tu adhibes uitio? an uitium nullum est non parere rationi? an ratio parum praecipit nec bonum illud esse quod aut cupias 25 ardentem aut adeptum efferas te insolenter, nec porro malum quo aut oppressus iaceas aut, ne opprimare, mente uix constes? eaque omnia aut nimis tristitia aut nimis laeta errore fieri, qui error stultis extenuetur die, ut cum res eadem maneant, aliter ferant inueterata, aliter recentia, sapientis ne attingat quidem omnino?
30 40. etenim quis erit tandem modus iste? quaeramus enim modum aegritudinis, in qua operae plurimum ponitur. aegre tulisse

20. enervata V. 21. adhibea<sup>N</sup> V a<sup>N</sup> al. atr. script.

§ 39, 24. aut B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>1</sub> J. ut V atr. uiridi superscr. ut R G K E. et 25. efferas R V G K. efferas B<sub>13</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D J O<sub>13</sub> 8.
om. E I. B<sub>2</sub> at incertum utrum et an ec. afferas O<sub>7</sub>. 27. tristitia V stultus B<sub>1</sub> S E<sub>1</sub> 2 M<sub>1</sub> D C O<sub>37</sub>. || extenuetur R V P G B K plerique.
extenuatur M<sub>1</sub> O<sub>1</sub>. || eadem M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>2</sub>. eadem P O<sub>3</sub>. eadem R<sub>7</sub> B<sub>3</sub>
S E<sub>3</sub> M<sub>1</sub>. eadem R<sub>16</sub> V P<sub>4</sub> G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>1</sub> W<sub>12</sub> D C J
O<sub>17</sub> 8 ed. H. eadem I<sub>0</sub> in e al. atr. mut. eodem E<sub>2</sub>. || maneant R<sub>17</sub>
V P<sub>14</sub> G B<sub>23</sub> K<sub>1</sub> E<sub>1-3</sub> M<sub>2</sub> I<sub>0</sub> 2. maneant S M<sub>1</sub> O<sub>3</sub>.
maneant B<sub>1</sub>. maneant R<sub>6</sub> K<sub>2</sub> S W<sub>12</sub> D C J O<sub>17</sub> 8 ed. H. || ferat

R G S. 29. sapientis R.

§ 40, 31. in qua R G K I W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub> J O<sub>18</sub>. in quo R<sub>6</sub> V P<sub>14</sub> B<sub>13</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> D C I<sub>1</sub> O<sub>237</sub>. in quo E<sub>1</sub> ut uid. at in litura.

in q<sub>1</sub> K<sub>2</sub>. inq<sub>1</sub> B<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub>. || operae R<sub>6</sub> M<sub>2</sub>. operę B<sub>1</sub> W<sub>1</sub> O<sub>3</sub>.
opere R V P<sub>14</sub> G K<sub>1</sub> B<sub>3</sub> E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>2</sub> D C I<sub>1</sub> O<sub>1278</sub>. ope B<sub>2</sub>.

Peripateticorum: cf. iii 10, 22, Ac. i 10, 30: 'cumque perturbationes illi (sc. Peripatetici) ex hordine non tollent naturaque et condolere et concupiscere et extimescere et efferri laetitia dicerent, sed eas contraherent in angustumque deducerent....'

ratio et oratio, 'view and assertion': Cic. is fond of this phrase; cf. 28, 60; Off. i 16, 50; Inu. i 8, 2.

quendam: in a disparaging sense, cf. 'opinio quaedam' ii 22, 52; 'magnis quibusdam bonis' i 40, 95 and nn. there.

§ 39. modum tu adhibes uitio?: once a perturbatio is recognized to be a uitium the impossibility of speaking of degrees of mental disturbance follows as a matter of course; cf. Diog. L. vii 120 ἀρέσκει τ' αὐτοῖς ἴσα ἡγεῖσθαι τὰ ἀμαρτήματα... εἰ γὰρ ἀληθὲς ἀληθοῦς μᾶλλον οὐκ ἐστι... οὐδ' ἀμαρτήματα ἀμαρτήματος, and 127 ὡς γὰρ δεῖν φασι ἢ ὀρθὸν εἶναι ξύλον ἢ στρεβλόν, οὕτως ἢ δίκαιον ἢ ἀδίκον οὔτε δὲ δικαιότερον οὐτ' ἀδικώτερον, καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὁμοίως.

The argument is one of the usual Stoic 'chain-arguments': (a) a perturbatio consists in the thought that certain things are evil, (b) reason tells us that these things are not evil, (c) it is a uitium to disobey reason, (d) there are no degrees in uitium; therefore, there are no degrees possible in perturbatio.

an... parum, nearly equivalent to an... non, expecting an affirmative answer, for which see Draeger, Syntax I § 158 B (a).

porro = rursus, ex altera parte: cf. Fin. i 10, 32 'nemo enim ipsam uoluptatem, quia uoluptas sit, aspernatur... neque porro quisquam est qui dolorem ipsum, quia dolor sit, amet.'

ne opprimare, depending upon the idea of fear implied in mente uix constes.

die = longinquitate temporis, cf. iii 16, 35 'longinquitas et dies.'

§ 40. etenim, introducing a further argument; not only is moderation in perturbationes philosophically absurd, but can be shown to be impossible in practice,

P. Rupilius fratris repulsam consulatus scriptum apud Fannium est. sed tamen transisse uidetur modum, quippe qui ob eam causam a uita recesserit; moderatius igitur ferre debuit. quid, si, 35 cum id ferret modice, mors liberorum accessisset? nata esset aegritudo noua. sed ea modica. magna tamen facta esset accessio. quid, si deinde dolores graues corporis, si bonorum amissio, si caecitas, si exsilium? si pro singulis malis aegritudines accederent, summa ea fieret quae non sustineretur.

XVIII. 41. Qui modum igitur uitio quaerit, similiter facit, ut si posse putet eum qui se e Leucata praecipitauerit sustinere

32. p. rutilium R 17 VP K 2 S E 1 2 L 3-6 W 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 7 ed. H. prutilium G K. prutiliū B 2. prutulum B 1.
 P. Rutilum R 6. P. Rutiliū W 1. p. rutilum O 8. p. ruptiliū L 2.
 Rupilius corr. Manutius.

XVIII. § 41. 2. leucata R V P G B 3 K S E 2 W 2 M 1 2 I I J O 1 2. leucate R 7. leucada O 3 7. leucade R 6. leuchata B 1. leucicata B 2. leuata E 1 O 8. λευκοτά W 1. rupe D C.

as may be seen in the case of one of them, aegritudo: enim after quaeramus introduces the example, as in iii 15, 31.

P. Rupilius: i.e. P. Rupilius Lupus, cons. 132 B.C.; Plin. N.H. vii 36 'P. Rupilius morbo leui impeditus nuntiata fratris repulsa in consulatus petitione ilico expirauit.' The date of his death falls between 132 and 129, the date of the death of Scipio, who assisted his brother's candidature. His brother was Lucius Rupilius, praetor in 147 B.C. The brothers were both protégés of Scipio Aemilianus, Lael. 20, 73.

Fannium: i.e. C. Fannius, the historian, son-in-law of C. Laelius and pupil of Panaetius; he was trib. pleb. in 142, praetor between 129 and 125 and consul in 122. Cic. makes the curious mistake in Brut. 26, 99 of supposing that the consul of 122 and the historian were two different people, a mistake perhaps corrected at the time by Atticus (Att. xii 5, 3) and demonstrated by Mommsen (C.I.L. i p. 158). The fragments of his history are collected by Peter (Hist. Rom. rell. i pp. 138-140).

uidetur: the sarcastic tone of this passage is further heightened by the suggestion of a dialogue between Cicero and a Peripatetic which seems to underlie it.

id = fratris repulsam.

sed ea modica: the supposed retort of the Peripatetic, with whom the question is being argued: for the rare use of sed in place of at in a retort see Draeger, Syntax II § 333, 3; Bentley's conj. sit for sed has been adopted by Dav. Hei. T.S.

accessio, 'a serious aggravation of his trouble'; cf. Fin. i 17, 55 'ut enim aequae doleamus, cum corpore dolemus, fieri tamen permagna accessio potest si...': accessio is a word much used by medical writers to denote the onset of a disease e.g. fever; cf. Seneca, de benef. ii 14, 3 'cum accessio illa quae animum inflammabat remiserit.'

summa, 'the final result would be such as to be intolerable'; for summa cf. Off. i 18, 59 'uidere quae reliqui summa fiat'; Fin. iv 24, 67 'ad uirtutis autem summam accedere nihil potest.'

XVIII. § 41. uitio: Reid (Ac. ii 7, 19 n.) thinks that uiti should be read here as 'with fidem facere, modum f., finem f. and many similar expressions, the overwhelmingly prevalent construction in the best writers is alicuius rei not alicui rei'; he cites also 38, 82 'sit iam huius disputationis modus.' A much closer apparent parallel is to be found in § 40 'quaeramus enim modum aegritudinis.' But there seems to be a clear distinction between the two uses: quaerere m. aegritudinis means 'to be in quest of the mean in aegritudo': a purely theoretical search, whereas qu. m. aegritudini = 'a practical endeavour to regulate feeling.' The latter seems to be required by the context here, the former in § 40.

similiter...ut si: this use of ut si is rare before Cicero: it is found after similiter (Off. i 25, 87), similis (Senect. 6, 17), idem (Off. i 14, 42); in Fin. ii 7, 21; iv 12, 31 Madv. reads et si after similiter and similem respectively. For further exx. see Draeger, Synt. II § 518, 2.

se, cum uelit. ut enim id non potest, sic animus perturbatus et incitatus nec cohibere se potest nec, quo loco uult, insistere, 5 omninoque quae crescentia perniciose sunt, eadem sunt uitiosa nascentia; 42 aegritudo autem ceteraeque perturbationes, amplificatae certe, pestiferae sunt; igitur etiam susceptae continuo in magna pestis parte uersantur. etenim ipsae se inpellunt, ubi semel a ratione discessum est, ipsaque sibi imbecillitas indulget 10 in altumque prouehitur imprudens nec reperit locum consistendi. quam ob rem nihil interest utrum moderatas perturbationes adprobent an moderatam iniustitiam, moderatam ignauiam, moderatam intemperantiam; qui enim uitii modum apponit, is partem suscipit uitiorum; quod cum ipsum per se odiosum est,

4. nec quo loco V P.      necqu<sup>o</sup>loco R I ead. atr.      neq<sup>o</sup>loco G.      nec coloco
K I. || uult R h. l. V h. l. G h. l. B h. l. K S E.      5. omninoque quae L 3. omninoq; que R 7 J O I.      oīoq; que W I.      oīoq3 que O 8.      omnino quaeque R 1 6 G L 2 M 2.      omnino queque V S E.      omnino queque B 1. omnino queq; P L 4.      omnino quaeq; O 2.      omnino queq; B 2 3 E 2 L 5 6 D C II O 3 7 ed. H.      omnino quaequae K I.      omnino quecūq; K 2 M I.
§ 42, 8. ipse se G.      se ipse S.      9. inbecillitas G E.      inbecillitas R h. l.
V h. l. B I 2.      inbecillitas K I.      10. imprudens R V G B K. || reperit B 3
E 2 W I 2 P I J O I 8.      reperit S.      repperit B I.      repperit R V P G B 2 K I 2 E I D O 3 7.      12. adprobent R V G K E.      approbent B S.
13. apponit R V G B K S E.

Leucata: mod. Capo Ducato, the promontory to the extreme S. of Leucas (mod. Santa Maura), famous as the spot whence Sappho leaped into the sea when her love had been rejected by Phaon. The comparison is probably suggested here, however, by the renown of Leucata on the stage. There was a temple of Aphrodite on the promontory, said to have been founded by Aeneas.

sustinere se, 'check his fall': for sustinere cf. Ac. ii 29, 94 'ego enim ut agitator callidus priusquam ad finem ueniam equos sustinebo, eoque magis, si locus is quo ferentur equi praeceptis erit.'

potest: sc. feri i 11, 23 n. The passage closely resembles Seneca's argument de Ira I 7, 4 'ut in praeceptis datis corporibus nullum sui arbitrium est nec resistere morariue directae potuerunt...et non licet eo non peruenire quo non ire licuisset, ita animus si in iram, amorem aliosque se proiecit adfectus, non permittitur reprimere impetum.' Pohlenz, Hermes XLI, pp. 339 sqq. makes it probable that Cicero and Seneca followed in this line of argument some common source, possibly Chrysippus.

nascentia: Sen. de Ira i 13, 2 'non est bonum quod incremento malum fit' (quoted by Pohlenz, l.c.).

§ 42. in magna pestis parte uersantur, 'partake largely of the nature of disease': for the expression cf. v 38, 111 'non uersari in oculorum ulla incunditate' and Nägelsbach, Stil. § 109; cf. also Madvig's n. to Fin. ii 14, 47 'in eadem pulchritudine,' and Quintil. ii 10, 11 'in aliqua sine dubio ueritate uersantur.'

prouehitur, a change of metaphor, 'rashly puts farther and farther out to sea': for this force of pro in prouehitur cf. Off. ii 6, 19 'cum prospero flatu fortunae utimur, ad exitus prouehimur optatos.'

adprobent: sc. 'Peripatetici'; cf. Ac. ii 44, 135 'mediocritates illi probabant et in omni permotione naturalem uolebant esse quandam modum.'

partem suscipit, 'espouses the cause of'; cf. Mil. 15, 40 'adulescens nobilissimus rei publicae partem fortissime suscepisset.'

procliui: this and not procliue is the reading of the best MSS here and in Fin. v 28, 84, where see Madv.'s note: the 15 tum eo molestius quia sunt in lubrico incitataque semel procliui labuntur sustinerique nullo modo possunt.

XIX. 43. Quid, quod iidem Peripatetici perturbationes istas, quas nos exstirpandas putamus, non modo naturalis esse dicunt, sed etiam utiliter a natura datas; quorum est talis oratio. primum multis uerbis iracundiam laudant, cotem fortitudinis esse dicunt, 5 multoque et in hostem et in improbum ciuem uehementiores iratorum impetus esse, leuis autem ratiunculas eorum qui ita cogitent: 'Proelium rectum est hoc fieri, conuenit dimicare pro

15. incitataque R V P G B<sub>3</sub>. incitata q<sub>3</sub> B<sub>2</sub> S J. incitata que E I. incitata que B I. || procliui R V P G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>1</sub> E D O<sub>7</sub> Gr. procliue R<sub>7</sub> B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>12</sub> J O I<sub>28</sub>. in procliui C O<sub>3</sub>. in procliue R<sub>6</sub>.
 procliua W I. proclimi S marg. i. procliue procliuis II. procliuius E<sub>2</sub>.
 16. sustinerique V P D O<sub>3</sub>. substinerique W I. sustineri que B<sub>2</sub>.
 sustineri que R. sustineri quae G K. sustinerique se S O I.
 XIX. § 43, 1. idem R V P G B<sub>1-3</sub> K E I<sub>2</sub> M I D C H J O<sub>27</sub>. id' W<sub>2</sub>. iidem ex idem mut. S. iidem M<sub>2</sub> O I<sub>38</sub>. om. W I.
 2. nos extirpandas V P K S. nos exstirpandas B E. non extirpandas R G. || naturalis R V P G B K E. nales S. 4. cotem R V P G. quotem E al. atr. superscr. quotem B. 5. et in improbum B<sub>3</sub> K<sub>2</sub> S W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> D C J O I-3<sub>8</sub>. & improbum V al. atr. superscr. et improbum G B I W I M I. et improbum R I 6 P K E O<sub>7</sub> ed. H. et i pbū B<sub>2</sub>.
 et in probū II. et in probum E<sub>2</sub>. || uehementioris V i in e mut. uehementioris R P G B K S E. 6. leuis R V P B K E. laeuis G. leues B<sub>3</sub> S. 7. praelium G.

same variation between -i and -e is seen in other words: cf. Aul. Gell. x 24, 8 'sane quam consuetum is ueteribus fuerit litteris is plerumque uti indifferenter, sicuti "praefiscine" et "praefiscini," "procliui" et "procliue" atque alia item multa hoc genus uarie dixerunt.' On the other hand Lachm. prefers the form procliue in Lucr. ii. 455.

XIX. § 43. Quid, quod: Draeger, Synt. II § 378, 7.

naturalis = a natura datas: cf. Off. i 25, 89 'iracundiam...utiliter a natura datam'; Ac. ii, 44, 135 'atque illi quidem etiam utiliter a natura dicebant permotiones istas animis nostris datas, metum cauendi causa, misericordiam aegritudinemque clementiae,' where, as here, utiliter = 'for a useful purpose.' In holding this view the Peripatetics merely continued the tradition of the Old Academy.

iracundiam: strictly speaking Cicero should have (as Dav. notes) used ira here in place of iracundia, in accordance with the distinction he has himself drawn in 12, 27: but writing from the Stoic point of view Cicero is entitled as a controversialist to hold that the Peripatetics, in praising ira (θυμὸς), were logically compelled to praise iracundia (ὀργιλδότης), the one necessarily involving the other and all degrees of any vice being equal to each other.

laudant: Arist. Eth. Nic. iv 5 ὁ μὲν οὖν ἐφ' οἷς δεῖ καὶ οἷς δεῖ ὀργιζόμενος ἐπι δὲ καὶ ὡς δεῖ καὶ ὅτε καὶ ὅσον χρόνον ἐπαινεῖται.

cotem fortitudinis: cf. Ac. ii 44, 135 'ipsam iracundiam fortitudinis quasi cotem esse dicebant, recte secusne alias uiderimus;' where Reid quotes Sen. de Ira iii 3, 1 'stat Aristoteles defensor irae et uetat illam nobis exsecari; calcar ait esse uirtutis,' and Philod. περὶ ὀργῆς (ap. Bonitz, Fragm. Arist. 95) ἐνιοὶ τῶν περιπατητικῶν...ἐκτέμνουν τὰ νεύρα τῆς ψυχῆς φασὶ τοὺς τὴν ὀργὴν καὶ τὸν θυμὸν αὐτῆς ἐξαιροῦντας; Dav. quotes Lactant. Div. Inst. vi 19 'Peripatetici...iram cotem dicunt esse uirtutis, tanquam nemo possit aduersus hostes fortiter dimicare nisi fuerit ira concitatus.'

cogitent: for the sequence of tenses cf. iii 16, 32 n.

legibus, pro libertate, pro patria.' haec nullam habent uim nisi ira excanduit fortitudo. nec uero de bellatoribus solum disputant; imperia seueriora nulla esse putant sine aliqua acerbitate iracundiae; oratorem denique non modo accusantem, sed ne defendentem quidem probant sine aculeis iracundiae, quae etiamsi non adsit, tamen uerbis atque motu simulandam arbitrantur, ut auditoris iram oratoris incendat actio. uirum denique uideri negant qui irasci nesciat, eamque, quam lenitatem nos dicimus, uitioso lentitudinis nomine appellant. 44. nec uero solum hanc libidinem laudant (est enim ira, ut modo definiui, ulciscendi libido), sed ipsum illud genus uel libidinis uel cupiditatis ad summam utili-

8. nullam R G K. nullam V u in a mut. 15. nesciat R 6 B 3 S M 12 D C O 7. nesciet R 17 17 V P 14 G B 12 K 12 E 12 L 5 W 12 II J O 1-3 8. nesciant ed. H.

§ 44, 18. libidinis uel R 7 17 V P G B 1-3 S E 12 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7 8. || uel om. R 1 K 1.

habent: for the transition from orat. obl. to orat. rect. cf. ii 26, 62 n. Bentley followed by Dav. changed habent to habere without noticing that the change involved reading excanduerit with some inferior MSS in the next line.

excanduit, 'has the glow of passion': cf. Fam. viii 12, 2 'id postquam rescit, excanduit, et me causam inimicitiarum quaerere clamitauit.' For the perf. in the protasis to denote an antecedent condition cf. Draeger, Synt. II § 548 B.

oratorem: cf. Sen. de Ira ii 17, 1 "Orator," inquit "iratus aliquando melior est," immo imitatus iratum. Nam et histriones in pronuntiando non irati populum mouent, sed iratum bene agentes: et apud iudices itaque et in contione et ubicumque alieni animi ad nostrum arbitrium agendi sunt, modo iram, modo metum, modo misericordiam ut aliis incutiamus, ipsi simulabimus.'

non modo...sed ne...quidem: cf. i 36, 87 n.

quae: for the case of the relative cf. v 10, 30 n. on quos.

actio: Or. 17, 55 'est enim actio quasi corporis quaedam eloquentia cum constet et uoce atque motu'; ib. 25, 86 'modica iactatione corporis, uultu tamen multa conficiens.'

uirum, 'a man at all': uir is generally a term of praise, cf. ii 22, 53 'C. Marius, rusticant uir, sed plane uir.'

lenitatem . . . lentitudinis: to the Stoic πραότης (lenitas) meant ἀρετή καθ' ἑνὸν πρὸς ὄργας γίνονται ἀκίνητοι (Andron. Rhod. περὶ παθ. 526), cf. Stob. Ecl. ii 7, p. 184 c.; to the Peripatetic it meant the golden mean between an excessive tendency to anger and the apathy which refused to be roused by anything. Arist. Eth. Nic. ii 7, 10 ἔστι δὲ καὶ περὶ ὄργην ὑπερβολὴ καὶ ἔλλειψις καὶ μεσότης· σχεδὸν δὲ ἀνωσύμων ὄντων αὐτῶν τὸν μέσον πρῶτον λέγοντες τὴν μεσότητα πράγματα καλέσωμεν: for the Stoic ideal quality the Peripatetic had a name ἀοργησία (Arist. l.c. ὁ δὲ ἔλλειπων ἀοργητός τις, ἢ δὲ ἔλλειψις ἀοργησία) or ἀναληγσία (Arist. l.c.): either School gave the name πραότης to the state of mind which it considered the ideal, but the feelings which the Stoic considered to be right, the Peripatetics considered to be wrong and gave them a uitiosum nomen accordingly. TS. strangely think that Cic. is unfair to the Peripatetics and attributes to them a contempt for πραότης which they did not feel.

uitioso = uitium indicanti.

lentitudinis: Q. Fr. i 1, 38 'te illud admoneo...tibi esse diligentissime linguam continendam, quae quidem mihi uirtus interdum non minor uidetur quam omnino non irasci: nam illud est non solum grauitatis sed nonnunquam etiam lentitudinis.'

§ 44. modo: 12, 27.

uel libidinis uel cupiditatis: since the second uel is omitted in R1, Tregd. bracketed the words uel libidinis uel: their genuineness is defended by Wesenb. Em. ii, 10 who notes that libidinis is required here after libidinem above, and that in § 55 where the Stoic reply to these statements is given, the word occurs twice.

The genitives are gen. of definition, i 15, 34 n.

tatem esse dicunt a natura datum: nihil enim quemquam, nisi 20 quod lubeat, praeclare facere posse. noctu ambulabat in publico Themistocles cum somnum capere non posset, quaerentibusque respondebat Miltiadis tropaeis se e somno suscitari. cui non sunt audita Demosthenis uigiliae? qui dolere se aiebat si quando opificum antelucana uictus esset industria. philosophiae denique 25 ipsius principes numquam in suis studiis tantos progressus sine flagranti cupiditate facere potuissent. ultimas terras lustrasse

20. lubeat R 17 G B 1 K 1 W 1 J O 1. lubeat V at fuerat ut uid.

iubeat. <sup>u eat</sup> lib P al. atr. superscr. lubeat R 6 17 B 3 K 2 E 2 L 5 W 2
 M 1 2 Π O 2 3 7 8. iubeat S marg. lubeat. iubeat P 4 B 2 E 1 D C.
 21. quod somnum R V P B K S E alii. quod sonum G. cum corr. Seyffertus.

22. respondebat R V P G B 2 K 1 E 2 W 1 2 O 1-3 7 8. respondeat E 1.

respondit D C. || Miltiadis M 1 J O 2. militia dis V. mil<sup>i</sup>tiadis B 3 cod. ut uid. atr. militiadis G D. militia dis R B 1 2 E W 2 marg. miltiadis. milciadis R 6 M 2 O 3. miliciadis R 17. melchiadis W 1. meltiadis O 1. mitiadis O 8. miltiatis O 7. miliadi f K 2. miliciam dis E 2. militia ads K 1. || trophaeis R. trophaeis V G. trophis B 1 K 1 E 1 D.
 tropeis K 2. trope isse W 2 marg. trophis. tro phacis E 2. || suscitari B 3

W 1 2 D O 1 7. suscitare V atr. uiridi superscr. P alio atr. superscr.
 B cod. ut. uid. atr. suscitarej E 1. suscitari O 8 e in i mut. suscitare R G B 2 K 1 E 2. suscitare S marg. excitari. excitari O 3. 23. demosthenis B. demostenis S. demostenis R V G K. || dolere V P K 1 W 1 2 D.

dol&re R o in e mut. dolore G B 2 E 1. || agebat K. 25. princēps K
cod. ut uid. atr. || progressus sine V us in lit. et spatio relicto.

nisi quod lubeat = nisi id ad quod faciendum libidine incitetur.

Themistocles: Plut. Them. c. 3, 4 σύννου ὀράσθαι τὰ πολλὰ πρὸς ἑαυτῷ καὶ τὰς νύκτας ἀγρυπνεῖν καὶ τοὺς πότους παρατεῖσθαι τοὺς συνήθει καὶ λέγειν πρὸς τοὺς ἐρωτῶντας καὶ θαυμάζοντας τὴν περὶ τὸν βίον μεταβολὴν ὡς καθέδειν αὐτὸν οὐκ ἔφῃ τὸ τοῦ Μιλτιάδου πρόπαιον. Cf. also Val. Max. viii 14, 1 ext.

cum: Sff.'s emendation for the MSS
quod which probably arose out of quom (for quom omitted after quod cf. Fin ii 26, 82; ib. 31, 101). The subj. after quod can be defended (with Küh.) only on the ground that sententia ex Themistoclis mente profertur: but Döderl.'s objection to this holds good that, if this be so, the words ought to have formed part of Themistocles' reply: he accordingly trans-poses them to stand after respondebat: Baier brackets the clause.

cui: for the dat. of the agent cf. ii 1, 2; Madv. Gr. 250a; Gildersleeve and Lodge § 354.

Demosthenis: cf. Plut. Demosth. c 7; Stob. Ecl. iii 29, 60 Δημοσθένης ὁ Δημοσθένους εἰ ἐμελλε τῆς ὑστεραίας ἔσσεθαι ἐκκλησία, ἀλλὰ ἐκείνός γε διὰ τῆς νυκτὸς ἠγρύπνει πάσης διαφροντίζων δηλονότι καὶ ἐκμανθάνων ταῦτα ἃ ἐμελλεν εἶρεῖν: Hieron.

 Ruf. i 4 p. 495.

dolere: Bentley preferred a reading which he found in a MS of Dav.'s dolere se angebat on the ground that maius est re ipsa dolere quam id prae se ferre.

potuissent: the protasis is contained in sine flagranti studio: cf. i 15, 32
 'nemo unquam sine magna spe immor-talitatis se pro patria offerret ad mortem';
 i 25, 63 n.; v 2, 5.

ultimas terras: Fin. v 19, 50 'quid de Pythagora? quid de Platone aut Democrito loquar? a quibus propter discendi cupiditatem uidemus ultimas terras esse peragratas'; ib. 29, 87 where Plato is said to have visited Egypt to learn numeros et caelestia from the priests and Pythagoras to have visited the Magi in Persia; Plin. N.H. xxx 1, 2 says that Pythagoras, Democritus and Plato went to foreign countries to learn the secrets of the magicians.

Iamblichus, Pythag. uit. iii 13 sqq.,

Pythagoran, Democritum, Platonem accepimus. ubi enim quicquid esset quod disci posset, eo ueniendum iudicauerunt. num putamus haec fieri sine summo cupiditatis ardore potuisse?

XX. 45. Ipsam aegritudinem, quam nos ut taetram et inmanem beluam fugiendam diximus, non sine magna utilitate a natura dicunt constitutam, ut homines castigationibus, reprehensionibus, ignominiiis adfici se in delicto dolerent. inpunitas

27. pythagoran R V K. Pýtagoran P. pythagoran B 2. phythagoran G. phithagoran E. pytagorā B 1. || quicquid R V P I 2 B I 3 K S E I 2
M 2 O 2 3. quiquid G alt. man. superscr. quidquid II. qdqd W 2.

quicqt O 7 quicquam B 2 M I C O I. quicq̄ D O 8. quid R 6 W I.
28. esset quid B I al. atr. corr. || disci E 2 W I D O I 3 8. dici V atr. ant.
superscr. R ead. atr. B al. atr. superscr. dici R 2 I O 1 6 P G K I O 7.

XX. § 45, 1. tetram R V P G h. l. || inmanem R V G E. in manē B 2. immanem B 1 S. 2. fugienda G. 3. omnes R I 6 V G S L 3-5 M I 2 C II O I-3 7. om̄s R I O I 6 P B I 2 K I E I L 2 W I D O 8. omēs R 17 B 3 L 6 J. oīs W 2. ōs E 2. homines corr. Manutius.
4. affici se R 6 7 17 B 3 K 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C J O I-3 8. adficiſſe V E. adficiſſe R G K. afficiſſe B 2. affeciſſe B I S II. om. O 7. || inpunitas G E. impunitas R V B I 2 K S.

says that Pythagoras visited Syria and Egypt ἔρωτι καὶ ὀρέξει θεωρίας and that after twenty years spent in Egypt he was taken as a prisoner to Babylon by Cambyzes where he spent twelve years with the Magi: cf. Porph. Vit. Pyth. 6. For his journey into Egypt both Porphyry and Diog. L. viii 3 rely upon the authority of Antiphon who wrote περὶ τῶν ἐν ἀρετῇ πρωτεύσάντων: the story is also told by Isocr. Bus. 11, 28 and probably is an invention to account for the similarity in many points between Egyptian and Pythagorean beliefs (Herod. ii 81, 123).

The evidence for Democritus' travels is his own statement quoted by Clem. Alex. Strom. i 69 p. 357: ἐγὼ δὲ τῶν κατ' ἐμειω- τὸν ἀνθρώπων γῆν πλείστην ἐπεπλανησάμην ἱστορῶν τὰ μήκιστα... οὐδέλς κώ με παρήλαξεν οὐδ' οἱ Αἰγυπτίων καλεσόμενοι Ἀρπεδονάπται, σὺν τοῖς δ' ἐπὶ πᾶσι ἐπ' ἕτεα πέντε ἐπὶ ξείνης ἐγενήθη. Later writers (ap. Diog. L. ix 35) make his travels extend to Ethiopia, Persia and India.

Plato's journeys to Italy, Sicily and Cyrene seem well established and his journey to Egypt is not improbable. Cf. Ritter and Preller § 308 and Gomperz, Greek Thinkers II pp. 254 ff.

quicquid: Dav. Or. and Bouh. with some MSS and most ancient edd. before Gr. read quid. The use of quicquid for quidque, a survival of the older usage of Plautine Latin, is well attested for Cicero, cf. v 34, 98; Fin. v 9, 24 with Madv.'s note. Küh. denies that the relative force of quicquid is ever wholly obscured in Cic. and explains ubi quicquid esset as equivalent to ubi aliquid esset, quicquid esset, but such an explanation seems rather forced in a passage like Fam. vi 1, 1 'quocunque in loco quisquis est,' and the tradition of the use of quidquid for quidque from Plautus to Lucretius renders any other explanation unlikely.

XX. § 45. beluam: cf. Ac. ii 34, 108 'credoque Clitomacho ita scribentem Herculi quendam laborem exanclatum a Carneade quod ut feram et inmanem beluam sic ex animis nostris adsensionem, id est opinionationem et temeritatem, extraxisset'; Rep. ii 40, 67; Stob. Ecl. Eth. II p. 175 [ii 6, 6] ὑπὸ τῆς σφοδρότητος ἐκφερομένους καθάπερ ὑπὸ τινος ἀπειθοῦς ἔππου. But what is metaphor here was in Stoic theory almost sober earnest: acc. to Chrysippus the passions were not merely σώματα but ζῶα and Plut. sarcastically says that if the Stoic theory be right one might ἀποφαίνειν ἕκαστον ἡμῶν παράδεισον ἢ μάνδραν ἢ δούρειον ἔππου. Plut. de comm. not. c. 45 p. 1084 B.

The comparison of the passions to wild animals becomes a commonplace in later writers; cf. Galen περὶ ψυχῆς παθῶν 5, 26; Maximus Tyrius xxxiv fin. Heins. p. 343; Chariton, Apropdis. vi. 9, 4; S. Basil, de leg. libr. gent. p. 182 d.

ut homines...dolerent = ut homines, castigationibus...adfecti, se in delicto esse dolerent—an illogical brachylogy.

5 enim peccatorum data uidetur iis qui ignominiam et infamiam ferunt sine dolore; morderi est melius conscientia. ex quo est illud e uita ductum ab Afranio. nam cum dissolutus filius :

Heú me miserum!

tum seuerus pater :

<sup>10</sup> Dúm modo doleat áliiquid, doleat quídlubet.

46. reliquas quoque partis aegritudinis utilis esse dicunt, misericordiam ad opem ferendam et hominum indignorum calamitates subleuandas; ipsum illud aemulari, obtrectare non esse inutile, cum aut se non idem uideat consecutum quod alium, aut alium 15 idem quod se; metum uero si qui sustulisset, omnem uitae diligentiam sublatam fore, quae summa esset in iis qui leges, qui

7. euicta V. 8. heu me om. B 1. 10. doleat post aliquid om. B 1. || quidlibet R V G B E 3 M 2 J. quidlibet R 17 P 12 B 3 M 1 D C O 2 3 7. quod lubet R 6 7 W 1 O 1. quodlibet R 2 10 16 S E 2 L 5 II

O 8. <sup>o</sup> quod libet W 2. quid lubet K at fuerat iubet. quid iubet B 2 E.
§ 46, 11. partis R V G B 1 2 K. partes S E. || utilis R V G B 1 2 K E. utiles S. 12. calamitates hominum indignorum R 6 7 17 P B 3 S W 1 M 1 2 D J O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. calamitates hominum indignorum calamitates W 2.
cal. hom. indign. calamitates R G B 2 K 1 E 1 2 V sed linea subter uerb. ult. ducta. B sed s in loco ult. eras. II sed ult. uerb. transuerso calamo not. calam.

hom. indign. hominum calami<sup>tes</sup> K 2. 13. obtrectare G h. l. 15. si qui R B K E D C. si qui<sup>s</sup> V atr. uiridi superscr. si quis R 6 P G B 3 S E 2
W 1 2 M 1 2 II J O 2 3 7 8.

Afranio: L. Afranius, the principal author of fabulae togatae, whose comedies were considered by enthusiasts to equal those of Menander, 'dicitur Afrani toga conuenisse Menandro,' Hor. Epp. ii 1 57; Quintilian (x 1, 100) says 'togatis excellit Afranius: utinam non inquinasset argumenta puerorum foedis amoribus, mores suos fassus.'

filius: sc. dixisset, which early editions before Victorius actually insert in the text after miserum.

Heu me miserum: quoted also in Att. xvi 2, 3 from an unidentified play; the two sentences form a trochaic tetrameter catalectic. For the antithesis between aliquid and quidlibet cf. Ov. Epp. ex Pont. i 1, 4 'excipe, dumque aliquo, quolibet abde loco.'

§ 46. misericordiam: cf. Arist. Rhet. ii 8, 2 with Cope's n.

indignorum: sc. calamitatibus to be supplied out of calamitates. The ellipse of the abl. after indignus is not uncommon. Dav. quotes Plaut. Curc. iv 2, 27; Ov. Met. i 631; iv 138; A.A. iii 708; F. ii 780 etc.: indignus is sometimes equivalent to innocens e.g. in Lucr. ii 1104 'exanimatque indignos inque merentes.' Erasm. Bouh. Niss. with some MSS read indignorum, and Sff. who asserts that indignorum here can only mean 'persons unworthy of pity' reads calamitates hominum indignorum calamitate which, though awkward, comes very near the reading of some of the best MSS.

ipsum illud aemulari: Arist. Rhet. ii 9, 2 καὶ ἀμφω τὰ πάθη [sc. ἔλεος καὶ νέμεσις] ἤθους χρηστοῦ· δεῖ γὰρ ἐπὶ μὲν τοῖς ἀναξίως πράττουσι κακῶς συνάχθεσθαι καὶ ἐλεεῖν, τοῖς δὲ εὖ νεμεσᾶν; Eth. Nic. ii 7, 15 νέμεσις δὲ μεσότης φθόνου καὶ ἐπιχαίρεκακίας... ὁ μὲν γὰρ νεμεσητικὸς λυπεῖται ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀναξίως εὖ πράττουσι.

uideat, sc. aliquis: for the ellipse of an indefinite subj. see 8, 17 n. on concupierit.
alium...se: sc. uideat consecutum: cf. i 17, 39 n. on quod Pythagoram.

metum: Arist. Eth. Nic. iii 6, 3 ἐνια γὰρ καὶ δεῖ φοβεῖσθαι καὶ καλόν, τὸ δὲ μὴ ἀσχρόν, οἷον ἀδοξίαν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ φοβούμενος ἐπιεικῆς καὶ αἰδήμων, ὁ δὲ μὴ φοβούμενος ἀναίσχυρος.

magistratus, qui paupertatem, qui ignominiam, qui mortem, qui dolorem timerent. haec tamen ita disputant ut resecanda esse fateantur, euelli penitus dicant nec posse nec opus esse, et in 20 omnibus fere rebus mediocritatem esse optimam existiment. quae cum exponunt, nihilne tibi uidentur an aliquid dicere?

A. Mihi uero dicere aliquid, itaque exspecto, quid ad ista.

XXI. 47. M. Reperiam fortasse, sed illud ante: uidesne quanta fuerit apud Academicos uerecundia? plane enim dicunt quod ad rem pertineat. Peripateticis respondetur a Stoicis. digladiantur illi per me licet, cui nihil est necesse nisi, ubi sit illud 5 quod ueri simillimum uideatur, anquirere. quid est igitur quod occurrat in hac quaestione, e quo possit attingi aliquid ueri

18. tenerent K r. 19. discant G at s expunx. et conf. ead. ut uid. man. || et in omnibus R V P G K S E plerique. ut in omnibus II at u ante t in ras.

ut Eit in omnibus B 1 al. atr. superscr.

XXI. § 47, 1. reperiam R V P G K. repperiam B. reppiam R 2.
2. achademicos R V G B K S E. 5. anquirere R V P G B 1 2 K E Gr. inquirere R 6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C O 1-3 7 8. inquerere J at ras. ad init. fuisse uidetur. inquirere S unius litt. spatio relicto post n. inquirere B 3 eod. ut

uid. atr. acquirere II E 2. 6. ex quo M 1. e qua B 1 al. atr. superscr.
e qua R 6 P 4 K 2 S E 2 3 L 2 3 5 6 W 1 2 M 2 II J O 1-3 8. de qua

D C. æqua V. equa R 17 B 2 3 E 1. e<sup>ac</sup>q P 1. aequa R G K L 4.
est qua O 7 ed. H. || attingi R V G B K S E.

mortem...dolorem: this is hardly an anti-climax: dolor and mors are the two things quae maxime metuuntur (30, 64), and Cic. adopts, sometimes the order used here (e.g. ii 18, 43 mortis dolorisque contemptio), sometimes the opposite (e.g. ii 17, 41 contra dolorem et mortem disciplina).

haec is to be taken with resecanda esse: for the order of the words cf. Ac. i 2, 8 'ea, quantum potui...feci ut essent nota nostris'; for the tendency in Latin to put a pronoun at the beginning of the clause see Nägelsbach, Stil. § 189, 1.

et has overwhelming MSS authority. Wopkens (op. cit. p. 132) defends ut, the reading of the old edd. and inferior MSS (which is grammatically faultless) by citing instances of the repetition of consecutive ut, e.g. Ac. i 6, 24; 12, 45 etc.

aliquid: cf. i 20, 45 n.

ad ista: sc. habes or dicturus sis, cf. ii 18, 42 'nisi quid uis ad haec'; Nägelsbach, Stil. § 183, 1.

XXI. § 47. Reperiam: sc. quid dicam.

illud: sc. dicendum est, cf. Fin. iv 1, 2 'quare ad ea primum, si uidetur.'

uerecundia: 'moderation' in speech: Beroald. compares Fam. ix 22, 5 'ego seruo et seruabo (sic enim assueui) Platonis uerecundiam'; cf. also Off. i 28, 99 'iustitiae partes sunt non uiolare homines, uerecundiae non offendere'; Q. Fr. iii 1, 3 'Caesar...meam in rogando uerecundiam oburgauit.'

digladiantur: 'fence' διαξίφιζεσθαι; cf. Off. i 9, 28 'de quibus inter se digladiari soleant' and Reid's note to Acad. frag. i 1 (p. 161).

cui: Cicero, as an adherent of the New Academy, held that there was no absolute criterion of truth; the utmost to be attained was the probable; cf. v 11, 33 'quodcunque nostros animos probabilitate percussit, id dicimus'—a point of view which is expounded at length in the Academics: the probabile or ueri simile corresponds to the τὸ εὐλόγον of Arcesilaus; cf. Sext. Emp. Math. vii 158 φησὶν ὁ Ἀρκεσίλαος ὅτι ὁ περὶ πάντων ἐπέχων κανονιὲ τὰς αἰρέσεις καὶ φυγὰς καὶ κοινῶς τὰς πράξεις τῷ εὐλόγῳ, κατὰ τοῦτό τε προερχόμενος τὸ κριτήριον κατορθώσει.

anquirere: ii 10, 25 n.

e quo: either this, the reading of some MSS, accepted by Küh. Kl. Hei. TS. Sff. or quo Bouh.'s conjecture accepted by Ern. Or. W. Mo. must be read in presimile? quo longius mens humana progredi non potest. definitio perturbationis, qua recte Zenonem usum puto. ita enim definit ut perturbatio sit auersa a ratione contra naturam animi 10 commotio, uel breuius, ut perturbatio sit adpetitus uehementior, uehementior autem intellegatur is qui procul absit a naturae constantia. 48. quid ad has definitiones possint dicere? atque haec pleraque sunt prudenter acuteque disserentium, illa

7. qua R P G alii. quæ<sup>a</sup> V. quae K. 9. a ratione R 7 P 4 B 3 E 2

M 1 2 D C II O 2 8 Gr. ed H. ratione B 1 al. atr. superscr. S eod. atr.
 R 1 6 17 V P G B 2 K 1 2 E L 5 W 1 2 J O 1 3 7. 10. adpetitus
 R V G K E. appetitus B S. || uehementior uehementior R 6 7 B 3 E 2
 W 1 M 1 2 II O 1-3 8. uehementior semel tantum habent R 1 17 V P G

B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 W 2 D C J. 11. is R V P G. his B 1. his E 1.
 § 48, 12. possim R 1 6 7 17 V G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 4 6 M 1 2 D C O 3 8. possum L 3 5 W 1 2 H J O 1 2 7 ed. H. possem L 2. possint corr. Bentleius. 13. atque E 2 II. atqui R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 7 8.

ference to Bentley's qua accepted by Dav., the antecedent being obviously quid not quaestione: Sff. probante Küh. notes in fauore de quo, as against quo: 'ipsum attingendi uerbum ductum a cursu maritimo definitionem Zenonis tamquam locum intellegi uult, e quo egressa disputatio ad id, quod uelit (ueri simile), peruenire possit.'

Zenonem: cf. 6, 11 where the same definition (with the addition of recta before ratione) is given, and n. there.

definit ut...sit: 'for by the terms of his definition a perturbatio is...' It is hardly correct to say, as do Küh. TS. Hei., that this expression is a contraction for definit ut dicat...esse..., and the parallels quoted by Küh. are not to the point. Cic. uses both constructions in speaking of a definitio uerbi; cf. with the constr. here Fin. v 26, 76 'percipiendi uis ita definitur a Stoicis ut negent quidquam posse percipi nisi tale uerum quale falsum esse non possit.' In the former case the word is regarded (quite logically) as being made to mean a certain thing by being defined to mean it: this is the idea underlying the expression of Or. i 15, 64 'si quis uniuersam et propriam oratoris uim definire complectique uult, is orator erit qui...'; in the latter case the insertion of dicere etc. or the use of the acc. and inf. (e.g. in Off. i 27, 96) lays stress upon the fact that the definitio is an assertion which may or may not be accepted universally.

§ 48. possint: sc. Peripatetici: possint is Bentley's emendation accepted by Dav. F. A. W. Or. Sff. and most recent editors. Or. says it is the reading of the prima manus in S; Bouh. Ern. and (formerly) Kl. retained possim which, as Bouh. puts it, must imply 'Quid, etiam si contra dicere liberet, aduersus istas definitiones ego possim dicere? prorsus enim sunt rectae.' But the question is (not what reply an Academic like Cicero could give if he wished, but) what reply a Peripatetic could make to the Stoic definition.

atque: Tregd.'s emendation for the reading of the best MSS atqui has been accepted by Wes. Bait. Ml. TS. Hei. Sff. and is actually found in two MSS. The reading atqui is kept by Or. and Küh. Atque is required by the sense: Cic. is adding a general consideration in favour of the Stoic definition: for the use of atqui see Madv.'s note on Fin. i 18, 58.

disserentium: the Stoics, upon whose dialectical superiority Cic. continually lays stress, sometimes rather grudgingly; e.g. Fin. iii 12, 41 'magna contentio quam tractatam a Peripateticis mollius (est enim eorum consuetudo dicendi non satis acuta propter ignorationem dialecticae) Carneades tuus egregia quadam exercitatione in dialecticis summaque eloquentia rem in summum discrimen duxit'; ib. iii, 1, 3 'Stoicorum autem non ignoras quam sit subtile uel spinosum potius disserendi genus'; Brut. 31, 118 'omnes fere Stoici prudentissimi in disserendo'; cf. also Diog. L. vii 47 sq.; ib. 83 καὶ τοιοῦτοι μὲν ἐν τοῖς λογικοῖς οἱ Στωϊκοί, ἵνα μάλιστα κρατύνουσι διαλεκτικὸν μόνον εἶναι τὸν σοφόν.

illa: the rhetorical statements of the Peripatetics. In Fin. iv 3, 5 sqq. Cicero enlarges with enthusiasm upon the 'oratio quidem ex rhetorum pompa: 'ardores animorum cotesque 15 uirtutum.' an uero uir fortis, nisi stomachari coepit, non potest fortis esse? gladiatorium id quidem; quamquam in iis ipsis uidemus saepe constantiam:

Cónloquuntur, cóngrediuntur, quaérunt aliquid, póstulant,
20 ut magis placati quam irati esse uideantur. sed in illo genere sit sane Pacideianus aliquis hoc animo, ut narrat Lucilius:

Occidam illum equidem et uincam, si id quaeritis, inquit.

14. rh&orum K 1.	<sup>h</sup> r&orum R cod. atr.	rethorum V G B S E.
15. coepit R V K 1 W 1.	coeperit O 2.	caepit G. cepit B 1 S.
caeperit M 2.	cepit B 2 E 1 2 C J O 3.	cepit K 2. ceperit B 3 W 2
M 1 D O 1 8.	16. gladiatorium R V P G B K E 1 M 2 Gr.	gladiatorium
B 2 3 K 2 S E 2 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 D C H J O 1-3 7 8.	18. conloquuntur	conlocuntur R V.
G B.	cóloquuntur E 1.	colloquuntur S. quaeruntur V G M 2.	<sup>r</sup> q̄rūt B 2 W 2.	<sup>r</sup> q̄runt R 7 P 1 L 2. q̄runtur P 4.
<sup>r</sup> querunt W 1.	<sup>r</sup> q̄ueruntur R cod. atr.	queruntur R 6 17 B 1 3 K 1 2 S
E 1 2 L 3-6 M 1 D C H J O 2 3 7 8.	cōqueruntur O 1.	quaerunt
corr. Schlenger.	21. pacideianus R 6.	pacidianus R V P G K 1 2 S E 1 2
W 1 D C J O 2 3 7 8.	pacidiamus M 1.	pacidiarius II. pacidianus W 2.
placidianus B 1 M 2 O 1.	placidanus B 2.	23. inquit R G K.
inquit V.

ornata et grauis' which the Peripatetics owned to their study of rhetoric. For rhetorum pompa Ern. compares Or. 13, 42 'uerum haec [eloquentia] ludorum atque pompae' and de Or. ii 22, 94 'sed eorum [oratorum] partim in pompa partim in acie illustres esse uoluerunt,' where, as here, the ref. is to the γένος ἐπιδεικτικόν.

The pompa was the procession which preceded the displays of athletic prowess witnessed at the games and serves as an appropriate metaphor for the mere display of rhetorical power as opposed to its actual exercise in the γένος δικανικόν. For this and similar metaphors see Nägelsbach, Stil. § 136, 4.

iis ipsis: sc. gladiatoribus to be supplied from gladiatorium above: Hei. compares Liv. ii 53, 1 'Veiens bellum exortum, quibus (sc. Veientibus) Sabini arma coniunxerant'; cf. also 33, 70 n. on qui, v 27, 77 in ea gente n.

conloquuntur...postulant: recognized as a trochaic septenarius by Schlenger (Philol. xii p. 288): his view has been accepted by Bait. TS. Ml. Sff. Küh.: edd. before Schlenger regarded the words as Cicero's own, reading queruntur with the majority of the mss. Bentley proposed expostulant, referring to v 5, 14.

The line (from an unidentified poet) describes the parade of indifference and bonhomie which professional etiquette sometimes imposed upon gladiators—non protinus ira nec ictus.

in illo genere, 'in that profession' sc. gladiatorum: cf. Verr. ii 2, 61, 149 genus hoc aratorum.

sane: for sane 'of course,' 'assuredly,' with concessive subj. cf. Fin. ii 23, 76 'sit sane ista uoluptas'; de rep. i 19, 32; Att. vi 1, 7; Amic. 5, 18 with Sff.'s n.

Pacideianus: 'optimus longe | post homines natos gladiator qui fuit unus,' Lucil. ap. Non. iv 64: his great rival was the Sammis, Aeserninus. The spelling in the text adopted by Or. Kl. Ml. Sff. as against 'Pacidianus' (Tr. Ba. Küh.) is confirmed by the Medicean ms of Q. Fr. iii 4, 2 and by Hor. Sat. ii, 7, 97.

Lucilius: in book iv, ll. 153 ff. of Marx's edition I p. 12.

si id quaeritis, 'if you want to know'; this meaning seems more in accordance with Ciceronian usage (e.g. Off. iii 20,

Verum illud credo fore: in os prius accipiam ipse, 25 Quam gladium in stomacho spurci ac pulmonibus sisto.
 Odi hominem, iratus pugno, nec longius quicquam Nobis, quam dextrae gladium dum accommodet alter;
 30 Vsque adeo studio atque odio illius eferor ira.

XXII. 49. At sine hac gladiatoria iracundia uidemus pro-gredientem apud Homerum Aiace[m] multa cum hilaritate, cum depugnaturus esset cum Hectore; cuius, ut arma sumpsit, ingressio laetitiam attulit sociis, terrorem autem hostibus, ut

25. insthomacho G. || furia ac R V P 1 4 G B 1 2. suria a E 1. fura ac S. fura ac R 6 7 P 2 5 K 1 2 E 2 L 3 4 5 II O 1-3 8.
 fi ira ac J. sura ac Urs. 3240 marg. l' una. sura et L 2. supac R 17.
 furia ac P 6 incert. an s. furia atque O 7. furia a D C. una ac P 3 W 1 2
 M 1 2 L 6. stomachos una ac E 3. unam B 3. spurci corr. Seyffertus. || pulmonibusisto G in pulmonibus sisto alt. man. corr. pulmonibus isto V.
 27. ne longius B 1. 28. nobis R 7 B 2 E 3 L 2 5 6 W 1 D O 1 7 ed. H. uobis R 6 1 7 V P G B 3 K 1 E 1 2 L 3 4 W 2 M 1 2 C II J O 2 3 8.
 h vobis R 1 (sic). om. B 1. 30. eferor R V G. eferor K 1 ex eferor nigriore atr. mut. aecerfor B 2. efferor P B 1 3 S J. om. E 1.
 XXII. § 49, 1. at sine R 6 V B 3 S E 2 W 1 M 1 2 C II O 2 8 ed. H. ac sine R P G B 1 2 K 1 W 2 J O 1 7. ac sine D. ut sine O 3.
 3. hectore B h. l. et infra hectorem. haectore G. 4. attulit R V G B S E. attollit K 1.

80; de Or. ii 62, 254) than Küh.'s explanation, 'si id ultis, optatis, flagitatis.'

accipiam: sc. plagam.

spurci: Sff.'s emendation adopted by Küh.: the word is applied in Lucil. ap. Non. p. 393 to Aeserninus: Bentley conjectured furiae and Dav. Furi (i.e. Furi Aesernini, though he offers no proof that Aeserninus was called Furius). Tischer proposed furi (dat.) 'the thief,' a frequent term of general abuse in Comedy; Marx reads furia; other conjectures are fibra (Turn.), hira (Douza), sicam (om. ac Scal.). Or. keeps the vulg. sura, which is defended by Rossbach, Phil. lxiii (1904) p. 100. Further conjectures in Mo. iii exc. xiv pp. 390 ff.

sisto: Küh. compares Virg. Aen. x 323 'intorquens iaculum clamanti sistit in ore.'

nec longius...quam...dum, 'nor can we (i.e. either of us) bear to wait till the other etc.': for the phrase longum est dum 'it is tiresome waiting until,' cf. Fam. xi 27, 1; Verr. ii 4, 18, 39; pro Rab. Post. 12, 35; cf. also Sil. Ital. Pun. xii 381 'longumque coire uidetur | et conferre gradum'; Ter. Andr. 977. This interpretation is better than Küh.'s 'nec diutius pugnam morabimur quam uterque nostrum gladium dextrae adaptauerit'—a meaning which the Latin will hardly bear.

For the scansion of longius and pulmonibus cf. i 5, 10 n.

alter=uterque.

odio: cf. Lucan, Phars. iv 708 'ueluti fatalis arenae | muneribus non ira uetus concurrere cogit | productos; odere pares.'

XXII. § 49. apud Homerum: Il. vii 211 sq. where the phrase μειδιῶν βλοσυροῖσι προσώπασι is Cicero's warrant for the multa cum hilaritate of the text.

esset, impf. since uidemus progredientem is equivalent to progressus est, ut uidemus apud H.

cuius: i.e. Aiacis, the more prominent, though not the nearer, of the two names: for the relative referring to the more remote noun cf. Amicet. 21, 78 'cauendum uero ne etiam in graues inimicitias conuertant se amicitiae, ex quibus iurgia, maledicta, contumeliae gignuntur.'

laetitiam: τὸν δὲ καὶ Ἀργεῖοι μέγ' ἐγῆθεον εισορόωντες, Hom. l.c.

terrorem: Τρώας δὲ τρώμος αἰνὸς ὑπῆλυθε γυῖα ἕκαστον, ibid.

5 ipsum Hectorem, quem ad modum est apud Homerum, toto pectore trementem prouocasse ad pugnam paeniteret. atque hi conlocuti inter se, prius quam manum consererent, leniter et quiete nihil ne in ipsa quidem pugna iracunde rabioseue fecerunt. ego ne Torquatium quidem illum qui hoc cognomen inuenit
 10 iratum existimo Gallo torquem detraxisse, nec Marcellum apud Clastidium ideo fortem fuisse quia nouit iratus. 50. de Africano quidem, quia notior est nobis propter recentem memoriam, uel iurare possum non illum iracundia tum inflammatum fuisse, cum in acie M. Allienium Paelignum scuto protexerit gladiumque

6. paeniteret R G K.      pēniteret B S.      peniteret V P E.      || atque hi R G. q; athi V atr. ant. superscr.      7. conlocuti R V G B K E.      collocuti S.

9. ne torquatium R V G.      re<sup>ne</sup> torquātū E I.      re tor quatū B I.      nec torquatium R 7. || qui hoc cognomen inuenit R 2 6 7 10 17 P B 3 K 2 E 2 3 L 5 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 8 ed. H.      qui hoc cog<sup>ne</sup>noit nom inuenit E I.      qui hoc cognouit nomen inuenit V qui hoc cog<sup>o</sup>noit nom inuenit B I ras. ante nom.

qui hoc cognouit nomen inuenit R G B 2 K I.      10. galla<sup>o</sup>torquē uedetraxisse E I. c1

11. dastidium G ead. man. superscr.

§ 50, 14. in acie R 6 7 V B 3 S E 2 W I M I 2 D II O I 3,      acie O 7.
 in aiāce acie C.      in aciē R P B 2 J ed. H.      in aciem G B K I 2 E I O 8.
 fuisse W 2 marg. cū i acie.      || M. allienium D C M.      Hallienum R 6.
 M. Allieniū W I.      mallienium V.      malienium O 2.      maltienium R 7. massellum B I.      alieniū S marg. M.      allienium R P B K.      alli enniū B 2.

Allieniū J W 2 marg. alienū.      allienium G ead. man. superscr.      allienium O 3. allienium B 3 E 2 II.      allienium E I O 8.      aliēniū K 2.      allicum M 2. alienum M I O I 7.      ad Enniū ed. H.      || paelignum R G.      pae lignū B 2. pe lignū V.      pelignum P B K S E W I D alii.

ipsum Hectorem: Cic. gives what F.A.W. calls 'a somewhat strong version' of Homer's lines "Ἐκτορὶ τ' ἀτῶ θυμὸς ἐνὶ στήθεσσι πάτασεν | ἀλλ' οὐπὼς ἔτι εἶχεν ὑποτρέσαι οὐδ' ἀραδῶνα. Ern.'s remark 'hoc non est apud Homerum, nec ibi repererit ueteres' goes rather far.

prouocasse, 'issued a challenge'; Hom. II. vii 66 ff. where Hector challenges any of the ἀριστῆες Παναχαίων who might care to fight in single combat.

nihil ne...quidem: for ne...quidem with preceding negative cf. i 23, 53; ii 23, 56; Amic. 2, 10; Draeger, Synt. I § 82. It is not easy to see much justification for Cicero's statement that the duel was conducted without heat and anger: Homer (l.c. 256) says σὺν β' ἔπεσον, λείουσιν ἐοικότες ἀμοφάγοισιν ἢ συσι κάπρσιον, though they separate in a courteous fashion.

Torquatium: T. Manlius Torquatius; the story is told in Liv. vii 9 and 10. Aulus Gellius ix 13, 7 sqq. quotes the account given by Claudius Quadrigarius in the first book of his Annals.

inuenit: cf. Fin. i 7, 23 'ita prorsus existimo neque eum Torquatium qui hoc primus cognomen inuenit, aut torquem illum hosti detraxisse'; Off. iii 31, 112, where Beier explains cognomen inuenit as='data hac occasione appellatus est.' For the insertion of the defining or explanatory rel. clause illum qui...inuenit, independent of the oratio obl., see Draeger, Synt. II § 456, 2.

torquem: 'ubi eum euerit, caput praecidit, torquem detraxit eamque sanguinentam sibi in collum imponit.' Claud. Quadr. ap. Gell. l.c.

Marcellum, who won the spolia opima from Viridomarus at Clastidium in 222 B.C. Plut. Marc. 6; Polyb. ii 34.

apud: exx. of apud with geographical names are not uncommon in Cicero. Mo. quotes i 39, 94; Cluent. 7, 21; Diu. i 54, 123; N.D. iii 5, 11; Fin. ii 22, 73; 30, 97; Off. iii 30, 109; Fam. ii 10, 3; Draeger, Synt. I § 253, 5, who notes that this constr. is found only once in Livy (xlii 12), regards it as a colloquial

15 hosti in pectus infixerit. de L. Bruto fortasse dubitarim an propter infinitum odium tyranni ecfrenatius in Arruntem inuaserit; uideo enim utrumque cominus ictu cecidisse contrario. quid igitur huc adhibetis iram? an fortitudo, nisi insanire coepit, impetus suos non habet? quid? Herculem, quem in caelum ista 20 ipsa, quam uos iracundiam esse uultis, sustulit fortitudo, iratumne censes confixisse cum Erymanthio apro aut leone Nemeaeo?

16. ecfrenatius R G. ecfrenatius V atr. ant. superscr. ecfrenatius<sup>c</sup> P. h & frenatius K 1 h atr. nigriore add. effrenatius B 1 K 2 E 2 W 1 2 D O 1 7 8. effrenatus O 3. effrenatus<sup>i</sup> S. || arruntem M 1 C O 3. arruntē R 17 P S E 2 D. arrunte R V G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 J. arrontem B 3 K 2 M 2. aruntem R 6 O 1. aruntē W 1 II. arūtē O 8.
arūte W 2. arontem R 7 O 2. marunte O 7 in om. 17. cominus
R V G B. cōminus K E. cominus S. 18. adhuc G ead. man. || coepit R 1 6 V G B K O 2. cepit S. cepit K 2 E 2 L 5 D O 1. cep C. cep W 2. coepit W 1. cepit P O 7. ceperit B 3 O 3 8. caeperit M 2. 19. herculem R V G. herculē B 1. erculē E al. atr. superscr.
20. uultis R V G K S E. || iratum R 6 7 17 B 2 3 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J
O 1-3 7 8. ratum V. ratum R G K. fratrum E 1. Fr̄m B 1 marg. furentem. 21. erymanthio B. esymanthio E 1. erymathio R ead. ut uid. atr. erymathio G K. erimanthio R 2 W 2 D. erimantho W 1.
erimathio V. herimathio P. || apro aut V P G E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D O 1 3 7 8. apro/a ut R 1 a in marg. scr. apaut B 2. ap<sup>a</sup> ut B 1 al. atr. mut.
E 1 al. atr. mut. || nemeao R V G K E O 8. nemeo B 1. nemeo R 2 10 16
P S E 2 W 1 2 D O 1 ed. H. ne meo B 2.

usage which found its way into literary Latin.

Clastidium: a κλώμη (Plut. l.c.) in Cisalpine Gaul, south of the Po (Liv. xxi 48, 9; xxix 11, 14).

§ 50. quidem, like γε, lends emphasis to the word preceding: the emphasis here serves to contrast the necessarily conjectural statement (existimo) about Torquatus, with the vigorous certainty (uel iurare possum) of the expression about Scipio, cf. ii 17, 41 n. For the constr. de Africano...iurare possum...illum...fuisse, Hei. compares v 20, 57; Or. ii 1, 3, and de L. Bruto...inuaserit below: see also Fin. iii 17, 57 'de bona autem fama... Chrysippus quidem et Diogenes... ne digitum quidem eius causa porrigendum esse dicebant,' quoted by Nägelsbach, Stil. § 100, 2 b.

M. Allienium Paelignum: the fact is otherwise unknown. It is the younger Africanus who is referred to; the memoria of the elder would be no more recens than that of Marcellus.

L. Bruto: Liv. ii 6.

dubitarim an: 'I should be inclined to suspect that,' a polite form of assertion, nearly equivalent to fortasse: haud scio (sciam) an and nescio an which are more usual in Cicero have the same force: see Draeger, Synt. II § 467, 2 d (8), and for the potential perfect subj. ib. § 148 A.

uideo = scriptum uideo, cf. 3, 5: 37, 79; v 33, 93; Ac. ii 5, 13.

cominus...contrario: the expression contrario ictu occurs in Liv. ii 6, 9 and it is possible that Cic. is quoting the actual words of some of the annalists, perhaps Tubero or Piso who seem, according to Soltau's analysis (Livius' Geschichtswerk, pp. 140 ff.), to have been Livy's principal authorities here.

Erymanthio apro, the Erymanthia belua of ii 9, 22, the boar which descending from Erymanthus in Arcadia ravaged Psophis till it was killed by Hercules, Diod. Sic. iv 12, 1.

leone Nemeaeo, the lion sprung from Typhon and Echidna, which inhabited Nemea and was strangled by Hercules, ii 9, 22; Diod. Sic. iv 11, 3.

an etiam Theseus Marathonii tauri cornua comprehendit iratus? uide ne fortitudo minime sit rabiosa sitque iracundia tota leuitatis. neque enim est ulla fortitudo quae rationis est expers.

XXIII. 51. Contemnendae res humanae sunt, neglegenda mors est, patibiles et dolores et labores putandi. haec cum constituta sunt iudicio atque sententia, tum est robusta illa et stabilis fortitudo, nisi forte, quae uehementer, acriter, animose fiunt, iracunde fieri suspicamur. mihi ne Scipio quidem ille pontifex maximus, qui hoc Stoicorum uerum esse declarauit, nunquam priuatum esse sapientem, iratus uidetur fuisse Ti. Graccho tum cum consulem languentem reliquit atque ipse

22. marathonii R V G B I 3 E I. || tauri R 6 P B I 3 E 2 W I 2

M I 2 D J O I 3 7. auri R eod. atr. V eod. atr. E al. atr. superscr. auri G. || marathoni<sup>t</sup> auri K atr. nigriore mut. || comprehendit V G h. l. E. comprehendit R B K S. 24. ulla R V P G B K S plerique. illa W 2.

XXIII. § 51, 1. neglegenda R V G B K E. negligenda P S. 3. sunt B I K 2 S E I W I M 2 D C O 7 8. sint R V P G B 2 3 K I E 2 L 5 W 2 M I I J O 2 3. om. O I. || iudicio R. || sentia K I. 5. mihi ne B I 3 W 2 M I 2 D C J O I 3 8. mihi me E I. mihi me R G K. michi me B 2. minime V S O 7. mimine E 2. uōne W I. 6. pontufex maxumus R V K G. pontifex maxumus B. pontifex maximus P S E. || stoicorum R P

B 2 K I W I M 2 D C I I O I 3 8. stoicorum V G. stoici quorum B I al. atr. superscr. stoici quorum E. stoicum M I. stoyorum B 3 W 2 O 7.

7. tigracho R V G W 2. tygracho B. tygracho E al. atr. superscr.

τῆνgrac cho K I i post t ex parte amoto. 8. reliquit R G K. reliqd V. reliqd P.

Marathonii tauri: 'Theseus taurum, qui fuit Marathone, quem Hercules a Creta ad Eurystheum adduxerat, occidit, ut ait Hyg. Fab. 38' Dav. who refers also to Ov. Met. vii 433; Diod. Sic. iv 13, 4; Plut. Thes. 14.

conprehendit, 'seized and held'; Cat. iii 7, 16 'belli duces captos iam et comprehensos tenetis.'

uide ne: i 34, 83; ii 18, 43; v 36, 103: the polite expression of a strong probability, generally (as here) in the imper. but uideamus and uidendum est are also found (iii 6, 13; Off. i 9, 28); Draeger, Synt. II § 410, 10.

XXIII. § 51. patibiles = tolerabiles, only here in Cic. in this sense; the only other occurrence of the word in Cic. is N.D. iii 12, 29 'omne animal patibilem naturam habeat' where pat. = in quem perpersio cadere potest (Ern. Clav. s.v.). The negative impetibilis is found, Fin. ii 17, 57, contrasted with tolerabilis.

haec cum constituta sunt...tum: 'No sooner are these convictions firmly established than': the indic. sunt, as Ern.

(followed by most edd.) saw, is required here as against sint of the majority of MSS which cannot be defended (with Kl.) as involving a future reference. On cum...tum with ind. in this sense see Draeger, Synt. II § 496 A (1 a).

animose: 'courageously'; see Küh.'s note to iii 21, 51.

Scipio: P. Corn. Scipio Nasica Serapio, continually spoken of by Cicero with praise for his action against Tib. Gracchus, Cat. i 1, 3; Off. i 22, 76. His philosophy did not prevent him from dying of vexation at his virtual exile to Pergamum (Plut. Tib. Gr. 21; Val. Max. v 3, 2).

uerum...declarauit, 'showed the truth of' by his action: Off. i 8, 26; pro Domo 37, 98.

nunquam priuatum esse sapientem: Stob. Ecl. Eth. II 6, 6 (ii p. 594 Gaisf.) ἀστελεις δὲ ἐτι καὶ τὴν ἀρχὴν (leg. ἀρχικὴν) κατανέμουςι [ἤ] ἐπιστᾶσαν καὶ τὰ ταύτης εἶδη...κατὰ τοῦτο δὴ καὶ μόνος ὁ σπουδαῖος ἀρχεῖ καὶ ἐλ μὴ πάντως κατ' ἐνέργειαν, κατὰ διάθεσιν δὲ καὶ πάντως...τῶν δ' ἀφρόνων οὐδεὶς τοιοῦτος· οὔτε γὰρ ἀρχεῖν οὔτε priuatus, ut si consul esset, qui rem publicam saluam esse uellent, se sequi iussit. 52. nescio, ecquid ipsi nos fortiter in re publica fecerimus; si quid fecimus, certe irati non fecimus. an est quicquam similius insaniae quam ira? quam bene Ennius 'initium,' dixit, 'insaniae.' color, uox, oculi, spiritus, inpotentia dictorum ac factorum quam partem habent sanitatis? quid

9. saluam R6 E3 L5 W1 D O13 ed. H. saluā E2 W2 O78. salua R V G. 10. uellent B3 M2 O2. uellet R16717 V P G B12 K12 S E1-3 L5 W12 M1 D C Π J O138. uellet O7.

§ 52. ecquid R6 G B1. et -quid R1. et quid S alia man. mut. etquid B23 E2 L3-6 M2 C Π J O7. et quid W1 D O13.
7 quid R7 W2. hecquid K1 atr. nigriore ec in hec mut. hec quid V E. ñ quid P marg. ecqd. et si quid R17 M1. etiam quid L2 O8.

quid O2. 11. non fecimus R G B1 K1 E2 alii. fecimus V.
12. insaniae B1. insanie R6. insaniam R V G K E. 13. incium V. || inpotentia R V G B K E. impotentia B2 S. 14. ac R V P G B12 K1 S E12 W12 D C Π J O178. atque B3 M2. et M1. aut O23.

ἀρχεσθαι οὐός τ' ἐστὶν ὁ ἀφρων; ibid. p. 586 ἐπόμεινον δὲ τοῦτοις ὑπάρχειν καὶ τὸ πολυτεύεσθαι τὸν σοφόν. Fin. iii 20, 68 'consentaneum est huic naturae ut sapiens uelit gerere et administrare rem publicam.' Plut. de repugn. St. i p. 1033 has some caustic remarks on the difference between Stoic principle and Stoic practice in this respect.

consulem: P. Mucius Scaevola.

languentem, 'lacking in energy': Scipio (according to Plut. Tib. Gr. 19) asked the consul to take measures to ensure the public safety, ἀποκριναμένου δὲ πρῶτος ἐκείνου, βίας μὲν οὐδεμίας ὑπάρχειν οὐδ' ἀναιρήσειν οὐδένα τῶν πολιτῶν ἀκριτον ... ἀναπηδήσας ὁ Νασικῆς κ.τ.λ. Scipio's action was in harmony with the most advanced Stoic principles as expounded in Stob. Ecl. Eth. II 6, 6 (p. 588 Gaisf.) οὐκ ἐπιεικὴ δὲ φασὶν εἶναι τὸν ἀγαθὸν ἄνδρα, τὸν γὰρ ἐπιεικὴ παρατηρικὸν εἶναι τῆς κατ' ἀξίαν κολάσεως, καὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ εἶναι ἐπιεικὴ τε εἶναι καὶ ὑπολαμβάνειν τὰς ἐκ τοῦ νόμου τεταγμένας κολάσεις τοῖς ἀδικοσίως σκληροτέρας εἶναι.

uellet: Wesenberg's correction (Em. i p. 24) (confirmed by three MSS) of the reading uellet of most MSS, which arose probably from a misreading of uellet, and the idea that the relative clause refers to consul immediately preceding. Dav. compares Appian, Bell. Ciu. i, 16 Κορηλιος Σκιπίων ὁ Νασικῆς ἐβόα μέγιστον ἐπεσθαι οἱ τοὺς ἐθέλοντας σώζεσθαι τὴν πατρίδα, and Servius on Aen. vii 614, viii 1, who shows that this was the standing formula for appealing for the assistance of the citizens in a crisis.

§ 52. nescio, ecquid, 'We have, perhaps, shown some courage'—an affirmative formula; for ecquid used as an interrogative particle see Plaut. Men. 163; Mil.
Gl. 1106 'ecquid fortis uisa est'; Trin.
717; Hand, Tursell. ii 352.

an...quicquam: Hand, Tursell. i p.
347, explains the connection to be 'Concedisne me, si quid fortiter fecerim, iratum non fecisse, an putas quicquam similius insaniae esse ira?'

For the thought cf. Sen. de Ira i 1, 2
'quidam itaque ex sapientibus uiris iram dixerunt breuem insaniam'; ib. ii 36, 4
'nulla celerior ad insaniam uia est'; Hor.
Epp. i 2, 62 'ira furor breuis est';
Macrobius, Sat. iv 2 fin.; Themistius,
Or. i p. 7 B ἐγὼ μὲν οἶμαι τὴν ὀργὴν μανίαν ὀλιγοχρόνιον εἶναι.

Ennius: see Vahlen, Enn. Poes. Rell.
p. 233; it is not certain from which work of Ennius the quotation is taken.

color: Seneca lays great stress upon the disturbing physical effects of anger as an argument against indulging the passion; de Ira i 1, 3; ii 35, 3 sq.; iii 4, 2; cf. also Plut. περὶ ὀργῆς. 6 p. 455 F οὕτως ὀρῶν ὑπ' ὀργῆς ἐξισταμένους μάλιστα καὶ μεταβάλλοντας ὄψιν χρῶμα βάδισμα φῶνῃν; Galen περὶ ψυχῆς παθῶν iv 16.

quam partem, 'how little do they comport with sanity': quam almost= quantulam.

quid...foedius: more universal and emphatic than quis...foedior, cf. v 2, 5; de Rep. iii 3, 5 'quid P. Scipione, quid C.
Laelio, quid L. Philo perfectius cogitari potest?'

15 Achille Homericō foediū, quid Agamemnone in iurgio? nam Aiacem quidem ira ad furorem mortemque perduxit. non igitur desiderat fortitudo aduocatam iracundiam; satis est instructa, parata, armata per sese. nam isto modo quidem licet dicere utilem uinulentiam ad fortitudinem, utilem etiam dementiam, 20 quod et insani et ebrii multa faciunt saepe uehementius. semper Ajax fortis, fortissimus tamen in furore.

Nam fácinus fecit máximum, cum Dánais incli-nántibus

Summám rem perfecít, manu suá restituit proélium 25 Insániens.

XXIV. 53. Dicamus igitur utilem insaniam? tracta definitiones fortitudinis, intelleges eam stomacho non egere. fortitudo

18. parata armata R V G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 I I J O 1 2 7 8. armata parata P B 3 W 1 M 2 D C O 3. || isto modo quidem licet R V P G B.
 isto modo licet quidem D C. 19. uinulentiam R G K. uinolentiam P B.
 V om. uerba inter dicere utilem et etiam. 21. ajax R V P G B 1 K W 2 J. alax B 2 E 1. 22. cum in acie facit fecit maximum nam danais M 1.
 24. rem perfecit R 6 7 P 2 B 3 K 2 E 2 3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C I I J
 O 1-3 7 8 ed. H. rem perficit R 1 10 16 17 V P 1 4 G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1. || manu ed. H. manu maius E 2 II. manus R 1 6 7 16 V P 2 G B 1 3 K 1 S L 3-6 W 1 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 7 8. man<sup>9</sup> R 10 17 P 1 4 K 2
 E 1 W 2. mn<sup>9</sup> B 2. monus L 2. || restituit insaniens R V P 1 4
 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C I I J O 1-3 8. restituit insanies
 P 2 O 7. manu sua restituit proelium corr. G. Hermannus. || proelium R 1 6
 V G B K. praelium M 2 O 2. plium (pliu) R 7 P 1 4 B 2 3 K 2 S E 1 2
 W 2 C J O 8. prelium P 2 M 1 II.

XXIV. § 53, 1. definitiones R V G K S at s al. atr. scr. diffinitiones B 2. definitionem E 1 W 1 2. deffinitionem D. definitione B P. diffinitione C II O 2 3. difinitione E 2 at litt. post e eras. O 7.

Achille...Agamemnone: Hom. Il. i 122 sqq.

nam...quidem: a form of praeteritio very common in Cic.; Küh. paraphrases thus 'de Aiakis ira nihil dicam; quam foeda illa fuerit constat inter omnes; nam ira eum ad furorem mortemque conduxit';
 cf. 33, 71; v 7, 20; Off. iii 6, 28 'nam illud quidem absurdum est'; Draeger,
Syntax II § 347, 4 (a).

For the thought Bouh. compares Sen. de Ira ii 36, 5 'Aiacem in mortem egit furor, in furorem ira.'

aduocatam: a legal metaphor 'craves the assistance of'; cf. v 38, 111 'adhibet oculos aduocatos'; Ac. ii 27, 86 'adhibet artem aduocatam.'

isto modo quidem: so Or. Küh. with the best MSS, isto modo being practically equivalent to a single word: Wes. reads isto quidem modo and he is followed by Bait. Sff. Ml. Hei. TS.

Nam facinus: the lines are iambic tetrameters acatalectic: Bentley supposes them to be ex comico quodam producti: they are classed by Ribbeck, Scen. Rom. Poes. Frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 243, among the incertae incertorum fabulae as a fragment of a tragedy. Küh. suggests that they may come from a tragedy of Pacuvius.

manu sua: practically equivalent to 'unaided.' Sff., by omitting sua and making insaniens the last word in the line, renders manu almost otiose.

XXIV. § 53. tracta: sc. animo = considera; cf. v. 25, 70 'haec tractanti animo et noctes et dies cogitanti existit.'

stomachō: the word is metaphorically employed to denote 'ingenium hominis cuiusque aut animus in rebus aut pro-bandis aut fastidiendis' (Ern.) and then by a process of 'deterioration' to denote 'anger'; Dav. quotes Hor. C. i 6, 6; Quint. x 1, 117; Sen. Epp. 112, 3. For the thought Cam. compares Plut. περὶ ἀοργ. 10 p. 458 Ε ἡ δ' ἀνδρεία χολῆς οὐ δεῖται.

est igitur adfectio animi legi summae in perpetiendis rebus obtemperans uel conseruatio stabilis iudicii in eis rebus, quae 5 formidolosae uidentur, subeundis et repellendis uel scientia re-rum formidolosarum contrariarumque aut omnino neglegendarum conseruans earum rerum stabile iudicium uel breuius, ut Chry-sippus (nam superiores definitiones erant Sphaeri, hominis in primis bene definientis, ut putant Stoici; sunt enim omnino 10 omnes fere similes, sed declarant communis notiones, alia magis

3. est igitur R V P G B I-3 K S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J O I 3 7 8. igitur est O 2. || adfectio R V G K E. affectio B S. 4. iudicii R V P G B K.
6. contrariarumque aut R V P I 4 G B I-3 S E 2 W 2 M I 2 D C I I J O I-3 7 8. contrariorumque aut E I. contrariarumque a P R I 6.
contrariarumque haud W I. contrariorumque aut K I. || neglegendarum

R V G B K E. negligendarum P S. 7. conseruans G K. conseruans V

atr. uiridiora mut. et superscr. || chrysippus R G W I O I 2. chrysippus K.
chrisippus V B. crisippus S E I 2. 8. diffinitiones B I. || sphaeri
R V G B K S O I. pheri E I. speri B 2 E 2. supbi P I. superbi O 3.
P phetici M I. asperi W I O 8. 9. sunt enim R V P G B I-3 K I S
E I 2 L 5 W I 2 M I 2 D C J O I-3 7 8. 10. omnis sil'is W 2. || declarant
R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2 L 5 W I 2 M I 2 D C J O I-3 7 8. ||

communis notiones R V B I 3 K E M 2 O 2. communis nationes G ead. man.

superscr. communes notiones S M I. homines communis notiones P I.

adfectio: 13, 29 n.

legi summae: the ὁρθὸς λόγος. Cf. Diog. L. vii 88 διόπερ τέλος γίνεται τὸ ἀκολουθῶν τῆ φύσει ζῆν, ὅπερ ἐστὶ κατὰ τε τὴν αὐτοῦ καὶ κατὰ τὴν τῶν ἄλλων, οὐδὲν ἐνεργούντας ὧν ἀπαγορεύειν εἰσῶθεν ὁ νόμος ὁ κοινὸς ὅσπερ ἐστὶν ὁ ὁρθὸς λόγος διὰ πάντων ἐρχόμενος ὁ αὐτὸς ὧν τῷ Διὶ καθηγεμόνι τούτῳ τῆς τῶν ἄλλων διοικήσεως ὄντι. This first definition of fortitudo, then, is but the definition of virtue in general with the addition of the differentiating words in perpetiendis rebus (περὶ τὰς ὑπομονάς). Lambinus conjectured laboribus for rebus.

scientia: Stob. Ecl. II 59 10 W ἀνδρείαν δὲ [sc. εἶναι] ἐπιστήμην δεινῶν καὶ οὐ δεινῶν καὶ οὐδετέρων: the same definition occurs in Andron. περὶ παθῶν p. 19 Schuch. In Sext. Emp. adu. math. IX 158 τῶν μεταξύ is substituted for οὐδετέρων, a variant which is found also in Clem. Alex. Strom. ii p. 394 D ed. Syll. This definition of courage goes back to the Platonic school; Laches, 195 A ταύτην [sc. ἀνδρείαν] ἔγωγε [sc. φημί] τὴν τῶν δεινῶν καὶ θαρραλέων ἐπιστήμην.

Or. follows a few mss in inserting perferendarum before aut: the word has evidently crept in from Chrysippus' definition lower down. Hei. reads et for aut to bring the translation into more exact correspondence with the original: but Cic. is making two divisions where the Gk makes three, as the difference for practical purposes between οὐ δεινά and οὐδέτερα is infinitesimal.

Sphaeri, a native of the Bosphorus, who after studying under Zeno and Cleanthes, at Athens, went to teach in Alexandria at the invitation of Ptolemy Philopator. He was a great admirer of Heraclitus and left an exposition of his poem. Diogenes L. credits him with the authorship of a large number of treatises. Diog. L. vii 6; ix 1, 15.

sunt: sc. definitiones Stoicorum.

enim: Dav. objected to enim here on the ground that the clause furnished no sufficient reason for the Stoic estimate of Sphaerus and proposed autem. The fact is that the clause does not refer to the definitions of Sphaerus, as all editors assume; it is a second parenthesis, and the enim is explanatory. Cicero has quoted three definitions and is about to add a fourth by Chrysippus: he remarks first that the three preceding defs. were due to Sphaerus, and secondly that while the four definitions were all very much alike yet they brought into relief, in various ways, the communes notiones with regard to courage: the last parenthesis, since it contains Cicero's alia) — quo modo igitur Chrysippus? 'Fortitudo est,' inquit, 'scientia rerum perferendarum uel adfectio animi in patiando ac perferendo summae legi parens sine timore.' quamuis licet insectemur istos, ut Carneades solebat, metuo ne soli philosophi sint. 15 quae enim istarum definitionum non aperit notionem nostram, quam habemus omnes de fortitudine tectam atque inuolutam? qua aperta quis est qui aut bellatori aut imperatori aut oratori quaerat aliquid neque eos existimet sine rabie quicquam fortiter facere posse? 54. quid? Stoici, qui omnis insipientes insanos

11. chrysippus R G K W I O I.                      chrisippus V B.                      crisippus E.
12. adfectio R V G K E.    affectio B S.    14. phylosophi G.
15. diffinitionum B I.    17. qui aut R V P G B 23 K S E 2 W I 2 D J O 1-3 7 8.                      ut E qui om.                      18. existimet R h. l. V h. l. G B K.
§ 54, 19. omnes R V G K.

reason for piling up similar definitions, is appropriately introduced by enim: 'now they are all, as a general rule, pretty much alike, but they, etc.'

declarant: Lamb. conjectured declarat which Tr. adopts; Wes. (Em. iii p. 10 sq.) shows that the conjecture is 'non modo inutilis sed praua': 'Quoniam per omnino ...sed duo illa quae de Sphaeri definitionibus enuntiantur (sunt quidem fere similes, sed communes notiones non aequae bene declarant), inter se opponuntur, necesse est, ut omnes appositio est subiecti in sunt latentis, sic alia non per se ipsum subiectum alterius uerbi esse sed communis subiecti appositionem.'

communes notiones, the ἐννοιαί or προλήψεις possessed by the ordinary person, Top. 7, 31: cf. Diog. L. vii 54 ἔστι δ' ἡ πρόληψις ἐννοια φυσικὴ τῶν καθόλου. The Stoics drew a distinction between ἐννοιαί and προλήψεις, acc. to which ἐννοιαί came δι' ἡμετέρας διδασκαλίας καὶ ἐπιμελείας, while the latter φυσικαί γίνονται (Plut. Plac. iv 11, 1); on Cicero's alleged carelessness (Madv. Fin. iii 6, 21) in the use of these terms see the excellent remarks of Reid, Ac. ii 10, 30 n.

igitur: resuming after a parenthesis: the parenthesis is complicated by an anacoluthon, after which sometimes, as here, an interrogative resumes the construction, e.g. iii 3, 5; Fin. i 7, 23.

quamuis licet, 'carp at them as much as we like, yet....' For the construction cf. N.D. iii 36, 88 'quamuis licet Menti delubra...consecremus' (quoted by Dav.); Lael. 20, 73 'quamuis licet excellas'; Legg. iii 10, 24 and Lucr. vi 601, 620.

Carneades: cf. v 29, 83; N.D. ii 65, 162 'Carneades lubenter in Stoicos inuehebatur'; Diog. L. iv 9, 62. Carneades as an adherent of the New Academy naturally objected to the Stoic dogmatism: he fell foul of the Stoic ethics, especially with regard to their doctrine of the summum bonum, and its necessity for purposes of happiness.

aperit notionem...inuolutam: the ἐννοιαί or προλήψεις are formed in the mind by a gradual, obscure and incomplete process of analogical reasoning upon the premisses supplied by the senses: Ac. ii 10, 30 'mens enim ipsa quae sensuum fons est atque etiam ipse sensus est naturalem uim habet quam intendit ad ea, quibus mouetur. itaque alia uisa sic adripit ut iis statim utatur, alia quasi recondit e quibus memoria oritur: cetera autem similitudinibus construit ex quibus efficiuntur notitiae rerum quas Graeci tum ἐννοιαί tum προλήψεις uocant.' When reason examines these notions and tests them the ἐννοια becomes a κατάληψις, or assured conviction: the statement of this is then a definitio. For inuolutam Küh. compares Or. 33, 116 'inuolutae rei notitia definiendo aperienda est.'

quaerat aliquid, 'supposes anything to be wanting to': aliquid=anything other than the qualities comprised in the definition of imperator, bellator or orator; ira is not included in these, and is therefore not necessary either to make up the character or contribute to the resolution with which its duties are performed. For the expression cf. Brut. 38, 143 'neminem esse qui, horum altero utro patrono, cuiusquam ingenium requireret' ('would feel that any other talent was required').

§ 54. Quid? Stoici...colligunt? Ern., quoted by Küh. with approval, explains this sentence thus: 'esse autem uidetur: hoc efficiunt conclusionibus per induc-

20 esse dicunt, nonne ista colligunt? remoue perturbationes maximeque iracundiam, iam uidebuntur monstra dicere. nunc autem ita disserunt, sic se dicere omnes stultos insanire, ut male olere omne caenum. at non semper. commoue, senties. sic iracundus non semper iratus est; lacesse, iam uidebis furentem. quid? ista 25 bellatrix iracundia, cum domum rediit, qualis est cum uxore, cum liberis, cum familia? an tum quoque est utilis? est igitur aliquid quod perturbata mens melius possit facere quam constans? an quisquam potest sine perturbatione mentis irasci? bene igitur nostri, cum omnia essent in moribus uitia, quod nullum 30 erat iracundia foedius, iracundos solos morosos nominauerunt.

20. colligunt R B E. <sup>l</sup> colligunt K atr. nigr. superscr. colligunt G in conl.
ead. man. mut. colligunt V atr. uiridi superscr. colligunt S C. || maxumeque V K. maxumeq; B. maxume quae R G at quae in que ead. man. mut. maximeque S E. 21. nostra G. 22. omnes R V G. om̄s B K. 23. caenum V G. cenum R B K S E. 27. aliquid quod G K. aliquid qđ R B. aliquid <sup>qđ</sup> V eod. ut uid. atr. 29. morib; B I. morbus V atr. ant. superscr. morbis S al. atr. superscr. morbus R G B 2. morbis R 6 7 17 P I B 3 K I 2 E I-3 L 2-6 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 8. morbis W I. 30. solus V. || morosos R V G B I 2 K I D C O 7. morosos S al. atr. E 2 al. atr. II al. atr. superscr. molosos E I. morbosos R 6 7 17 P B 3 E 3 L 2-4 6 W I 2 M I 2 J O I-3 8. morbos L 5 ed. H.

tionem ut de singulis adscendant ad genus. Huic conueniunt sequentia. Si e numero insanorum eximuntur iracundi, insanire ipsi et monstra dicere uidebuntur, quod pars ea exempta sit, quae foedior etiam ceteris est.' F.A.W. who rightly calls this 'very forced' assumes the loss of a whole clause after colligunt.

No explanation which regards the sentence Stoici...colligunt as designed to carry on Cicero's argument is satisfactory: the remainder of the paragraph down to uidebis furentem is entirely taken up with an attempt to justify and explain the paradox omnes insipientes esse insanos, which must therefore have been introduced as a difficulty or objection. The sentence, then, is to be regarded as the interruption of a supposed antagonist who tries to weaken the argument by a reminder that it proceeds from the school of philosophy which had framed the most absurd of all paradoxes. Cicero proceeds then to reply first by defining insanos to include iracundos and secondly by pointing out that both words are used to denote not an actual but a potential state.

monstra dicere: Mo. quotes Att. iv

7, 1; ix 11, 4: Q. Fr. ii 4, 5, 'qui de Caesare monstra promulgarunt.'

at non semper: at marks an objection, Draeger, Synt. II § 334 (9). Heine wished to transfer at to stand before commoue, unnecessarily since it makes quite good sense and grammar where it is and gives more vigour to the style.

commoue, senties: i 13, 30 n. on tolle. sic iracundus: a point insisted upon by Chrysippus, Plut. de St. repug. c. 27, p. 1046 F.

Quid? ista bellatrix iracundia... The argument is resumed here after the digression on the Stoic paradox.

For the thought, cf. Sen. de Ira iii 35, 1 sq.: Plut. περί ἀοργ. 13, p. 462 B οὐτως οὐτε γάμος οὐτε φίλια μετ' ὀργῆς ἀνεκτόν.

utilis: Sen. de Ira iii 5, 4 'iracundus dominus quot in fugam seruos egit? quot in mortem? quanto plus irascendo quam id erat propter quod irascebatur amisit?'

Bake proposed to delete an...utilis but the words are strictly relevant, as the whole discussion has turned on the point urged by the Peripatetics that the emotions utiliter a natura datas esse.

morosos, 'peevish': Dav. quotes Sen.

XXV. 55. Oratorem uero irasci minime decet, simulare non dedecet. an tibi irasci tum uidemur, cum quid in causis acrius et uehementius dicimus? quid? cum iam rebus transactis et praeteritis orationes scribimus, num irati scribimus?

5 Écquis hoc animaduértit? uincite!

num aut egisse umquam iratum Aesopum aut scripsisse existimas iratum Accium? aguntur ista praeclare, et ab oratore quidem

XXV. § 55, 1. minime R V P G K. || non dedecet R 6 7 17 B 3 W 2 M 2
 II marg. J O 1-38. non dedecet S. non dedecet E 2 al. atr. superscr. non dedecet R P G B 1 K 12 E 1 W 1 M 1 D C O 7. non dicit B 2. minime decet an tibi irasci V cett. om., non ut Küh. 5. et quis R 16 10 16 17 V P G B 1-3 K S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7 8. ecquis corr. Victorius. 6. aesopum R V G. hesopum S. esopū B 1. esoppū E 1. || existimas R 10 V P G B 1-3 S E 2 L 6 M 2 D C II
 O 3 8 ed. H. existimās E u ex a mut. estimas E 3. existimamus R 16 17
 K 12 L 3-5 W 12 M 1 J O 12 7. existimamus R 7 L 2. 7. accium
 R V G K 1 W 1 J O 1. actium P B 13 S O 2. actiū E 1.

de Ira i 4, 2 'inter hos (sc. iracundos) morosum ponas licet, delicatum iracundiae genus' and Don. in Ter. Hec. iv 2, 2 'mores proprie senum dicuntur, unde senectus morosa et morosi homines qui sui cuiusdam moris sunt.' Curt. Gr. Etym. 340 connects morosus with the root found in μῶπος: Vaníček, Etym. Wört. p. 654, adopts the derivation from mores.

XXV. § 55. Oratorem : cf. Sen. de Ira ii 17, 1 "Orator" inquit "iratus aliquando melior est." immo imitatus iratum. nam et histriones in pronuntiando non irati populum mouent, sed iratum bene agentes. et apud iudices itaque et in contione et ubicumque alieni animi ad nostrum arbitrium agendi sunt, modo iram, modo metum... ipsi simulabimus et saepe id quod ueri adfectus non effecissent, efficit imitatio adfectuum.' In de Or. ii 45, 189 Cic. puts the very opposite opinion into the mouth of Antonius: 'non me hercule umquam apud iudices aut dolorem aut misericordiam aut inuidiam aut odium excitare dicendo uolui, quin ipse in commouendis iudicibus iis ipsis sensibus ad quos illos adducere uellem permoueret': cf. also Or. 38, 132.

simulare, sc. se irasci.

orationes scribimus : speeches were not as a general rule, as this passage shows, written out in the form in which they were published until after their delivery : cf. de Sen. 11, 38 where Cato is represented saying 'causarum inlustrium, quascumque defendi, nunc cum maxime conficio orationes.' Occasionally a speech was delivered from manuscript, Planc. 30, 74 'recitetur oratio quae propter rei magnitudinem dicta de scripto est.' The practice enabled the orator to deal in his published speech with arguments which he heard for the first time when he came into court, or to embody points which occurred to him during delivery. Sometimes as in the case of the pro Milone a speech was published which had never been delivered at all. The Romans borrowed this practice from the Greeks.

animaduertit? 'Will no one inflict punishment for this?' Ecquis with the present indic. is quite common with this meaning in Plautus.

This, as Or. and F.A.W. saw, is the right interpretation. Küh. Hei. T.S. follow Neid. in interpreting 'quis hoc facinus uidit.'

The words are taken from the Atrous of Accius (Ribbeck, Sc. Poes. Rom. Frag. 1<sup>2</sup>, p. 166); cf. de Or. iii 58, 217. They form a composite object to egisse.

Aesopum : ii 17, 39: his acting is often referred to by Cicero who seems to have admired it: but his criticisms in other places imply that his method was conspicuous for his abandonment of himself to the feelings of the character he impersonated: Diu. i 37, 80 'uidi in Aesopo... tantum ardorem uoltuum atque motuum ut eum uis quaedam abstraxisse a sensu mentis uideretur,' p. Sest. 56, 120 '[Aesopus] summi poetae ingenium non solum arte sua sed etiam dolore exprimebat.'

melius, si modo est orator, quam ab ullo histrione, sed aguntur leniter et mente tranquilla. libidinem uero laudare cuius est 10 libidinis? Themistoclen mihi et Demosthenen profertis, additis Pythagoran, Democritum, Platonem. quid? uos studia libidinem uocatis? quae uel optimarum rerum, ut ea sunt, quae profertis, sedata tamen et tranquilla esse debent. iam aegritudinem lau-15 philosophorum? at commode dixit Afranius:

Dúm modo doleat áliquid, doleat quídlubet.

dixit enim de adulescente perduto ac dissoluto, nos autem de constanti uiro ac sapienti quaerimus. et quidem ipsam illam iram centurio habeat aut signifer uel ceteri, de quibus dici non necesse 20 est, ne rhetorum aperiamus mysteria. utile est enim uti motu animi, qui uti ratione non potest; nos autem, ut testificor saepe, de sapiente quaerimus.

8. si modo est <sup>orator</sup> melius G ead. man. corr. || histrione B 1. <sup>h</sup> istrione S eod. atr. superscr. istrione R V B 2 K 1 E 1. <sup>i</sup> strione G ead. man. superscr.

9. libidinem R P G K. <sup>di</sup> libidem V (sic) fort. eod. atr. libidinem B 1.

10. libidinis V P. <sup>v</sup> libidinis K 1 atr. nigr. superscr. libidinis R G B 1. || themistoclen D J. themistoden C. themistoclem R V G K S L 6 W 1 O 2. themisthoclem E 1 B 3. temistotem S 1 eod. atr. inculc.
 themistoclē B 1. themistodē B 2 W 2. || demosthenen E 1 J. demostenen
 R V P G K D C. demostenē B 3 O 2. demostenē S. themostenē B 2. || profertis G r post. expunx. et t superscr. alt. man. 11. pythagoran R V G
 B 1 K 1. pithagoran J. phitagoran E 1. pitagoran B 2. || libidinem
 R V P B h. l. libidine G K. 12. optimarum R G B K E. obtimarum V.

14. maxime R V G B. maxime K atr. nigr. superscr. 15. at commode V G. accommode S marg. at B. ad commode R E K. 16. lateat G in doleat
 alt. man. corr. || quidlibet B 3 E 3. quodlibet R 6 K 2 W 1 M 2 J O 1 2.
 quidlibet R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 2 M 1 I O 3 7. quodlibet R 17 L 5
 W 2 D O 8 ed. H. quilibet E 1. quislibet C. 17. adulescente R V G K 1. adolescente P B 1 S E 1 J. 20. rh&orum K 1. <sup>h</sup> r&orum R eod. atr. corr. rethorum G B.

si modo est orator, 'that is, a real orator,' cf. Or. iii 56, 213 'sed haec omnia perinde sunt ut aguntur: actio, inquam, in dicendo una dominatur; sine hac summus orator esse in numero nullo potest.'

Themistoclen: for this and the following names see 19, 44.

unam, cf. i 9, 17 n.

at, 24, 54 n. Cic. had previously (20, 45) quoted this line with approbation as e uita ductum, and he now supposes an objector to retort with it.

enim, 'Yes, for,' admitting and explaining an objection.

et quidem: cf. iii 20, 48; Finn. i 10, 35; Draeger, Synt. II §311, 13.

habeat here has almost the sense of sibi habeat, 'he is welcome to.'

ceteri, 'others of the same class,' 'the rest of their kind,' the infima plebs, whose feelings the orator was justified in arousing.

mysteria, 'the secrets,' Ac. ii 18, 60. The rhetores are represented as possessing secrets of their craft by which they were able to play upon the passions of an audience.

utile...potest: not = utile est eum uti, etc. (as Küh.) but utile est ei, qui...

XXVI. 56. At etiam aemulari utile est, obtrectare, misereri. cur misereare potius quam feras opem, si id facere possis? an sine misericordia liberales esse non possumus? non enim suscipere ipsi aegritudines propter alios debemus, sed alios, si possumus, 5 leuare aegritudine. obtrectare uero alteri aut illa uitiosa aemulatione, quae riuallitati similis est, aemulari quid habet utilitatis, cum sit aemulantis angi alieno bono, quod ipse non habeat, obtrectantis autem angi alieno bono, quod id etiam alius habeat? qui id adprobari possit, aegritudinem suscipere pro experientia, 10 si quid habere uelis? nam solum habere uelle summa dementia est. 57. mediocritates autem malorum quis laudare recte possit?

XXVI. § 56, 1. obtrectare R 6 17 K 2 DC O 2 ed. H. obtrectate M 1. obtrectari R 17 VPG B 1-3 K 1 S E 12 W 1 M 2 II O 1 3 8. abtractari W 2 J. obtractari O 7. 3. possumus R VPG B 1-3 K 12 S W 12 M 12 D II J O 1-3 7 8. possumus C. 5. obtrectare R 16 7 17 VPG B 1 3 K 12 S E 12 W 12 M 2 DC II J O 1 2 7 8 ed. H. optrectare B 2. 7. habeat R G B. abeat V atr. ant. superscr. 9. qui id L 3 O 3 S litt. post qui eras. quid id O 1 7. quid B 3 L 6 M 2. quis id R VPG B 12 E 12 W 1 M 1 DC II O 2 ed. H. quid id K 1 i. e. d in s mut. quid ul' L 5. quid uel id O 8. quis qui J. quis uel K 2 L 2 W 2. || adprobari R G K. approbari VP B 2 3 S E 12 W 2 M 2 II J O 3 8. approbare W 1 M 1 DC O 2 7. approbare B 1 i. e. i in e mut. 10. nam solum R 10 PG B 1-3 E 12 W 1 M 12. non solum R 1 V K.

potest, uti motu animi: the whole discussion has turned upon the utility of emotion to the person who feels it.

XXVI. § 56. at etiam: referring to and developing the objections to the statements of the Peripatetics already mentioned in 20, 46.

At here has, as often, the force of at enim introducing an objection (Draeger, Synt. II § 334, 10): etiam emphasises aemulari and corresponds to the id ipsum of § 46. Sff.'s conjecture at enim (adopted by Ml. T.S.) proceeds from a failure to notice the force of etiam: Bake's at tamen (as Sff. points out, with a ref. to Madv.'s nn. on Finn. ii 27, 86; iii 15, 48) is not even good Latin.

cur misereare: cf. Sen. Clem. ii 6, 3 sq. 'ergo non miserebitur sapiens sed succurret, sed proderit...misericordia uicina est miseriae; habet enim aliquid trahitque ex ea...misericordia uitium est animorum nimis miseria paenitentium.'

aemulatione: see 8, 17 for the two meanings of the word, and i 19, 44 n.

riuallitati: only here in Cic.; in class. Lat. the word always means 'jealousy,' 'rivalry in love; riuallis occurs in Cicero only in Q. Fr. iii 8, 4.

obtrectantis: see 8, 17 n.

qui id adprobari: so Dav. Or. Küh. Sff. Ml. Sch. TS. Hei. Bait. reads quis id

adprobare with B 2. It is more likely, as Sorof notes, that qui was corrupted to quis than that adprobare was corrupted to adprobari.

pro experientia, 'instead of making an attempt' (sc. to gain what you want): so Küh. TS. Hei. Mo. F.A.W. Nissen: Ern. explains 'ut intelligas te habere uelle, ut ea sit argumento cupiditatis tuae.' For experientia cf. ad Fam. x 18, 3 'agam gratias fortunae constantiaeque meae, quae me ad hanc experientiam excitauit.'

nam solum...est: not 'for merely to wish to possess' (sc. instead of making an attempt to get it) 'is the height of madness' which would require nam solum uelle habere, but 'to wish to be the sole possessor of anything is the height of madness': the sentence refers not to aemulatio, but to obtrectatio, which has been defined as the feeling of vexation at seeing someone else enjoy what one has oneself: the nam is elliptic, 'I need not argue the case of obtrectatio, for...'

§ 57. mediocritates: τὰς μεσότηρας of the Peripatetics. The addition of malorum begs the question at issue. The Peripatetics did not admit that the πάθη became evil until they had passed the mean.

quis enim potest, in quo libido cupiditasue sit, non libidinosus et cupidus esse? in quo ira, non iracundus? in quo angor, non anxius? in quo timor, non timidus? libidinosum igitur et iracundum et anxium et timidum censemus esse sapientem? de cuius excellentia multa quidem dici quamuis fuse lateque possunt, sed breuissime illo modo, sapientiam esse rerum diuinarum et humanarum scientiam cognitionemque quae cuiusque rei causa sit. ex quo efficitur ut diuina imitetur, humana omnia

§ 57, 12. libido et infra libidinosus, libidinosum R V P G B K. 14. libidinosum J. || igitur et iracundum R V P G B I<sub>3</sub> K S E I<sub>2</sub> W I M I<sub>2</sub> II O 2 3 7 8. et iracundum B 2 igitur om. igitur et cupidum W 2 J O I. igitur et anxium et iracundum et timidum C. igitur et anx. et irac. et timidum D.

post iracundum habet et cupidum W I. 16. excellentia V eod. atr. R fort. eod. atr. || fuse om. V. || possunt O 3 7. possunt L 4 eod. atr. possunt B I eod. fort. atr. possint R 6 7 17 B 3 L 2 3 5 6 W I M I<sub>2</sub> D C J O I 2 8. possit W 2 II. possit R V P G B 2 K I 2 S E I-3. 17. breuissime R V G B K. || sapientia R B. sapientia<sup>m</sup> V atr. uiridi superscr. sapientem K I. sapientia G.

cupiditasue...et cupidus. There is no necessity to alter the reading either to cupiditasque with Bouh. or to aut cupidus with Dav., as there is no difference between libido and cupiditas: to be possessed by either is to be possessed by both.

libidinosum igitur: the words et cupidum which follow in some MSS. are evidently a mistaken attempt to complete the list of adjectives.

quamuis=quantumuis as in 24, 53; the reading possint of many MSS. is perhaps due partly to the influence of the supposed meaning of quamuis 'although' as well as to the misreading of the contraction for possunt. For fuse lateque cf. Or. 32, 113 'facultatem...fuse lateque dicendi.'

sapientiam...causa sit: for this definition Dav. compares v 3, 7: Off. ii 2, 5 'sapientia autem est...rerum diuinarum et humanarum causarumque quibus eae res continentur scientia'; Orig. in Celsum iii p. 494 ἡ σοφία ἐπιστήμη θείων ἐστὶ καὶ ἀνθρωπίνων πραγμάτων καὶ τῶν τούτων αἰτίων and Sen. Epp. 89, 5 who objects to the last clause in the definition as superfluous, 'quia causae diuinorum humanorumque pars diuinorum sunt.' Cic. employs this shorter form himself in Off. i 43, 153. The definition seems to be due to Pythagoras; see Hobein's n. to Maximus of Tyre, xxvi 1 (p. 308), where many other quotations of it are referred to.

Ern. Clau. Cic. s.v. diuinus points out that of the three divisions of philosophy, dialectics, physics and ethics, res diuinae correspond to physics including natural theology, while under res humanae he classes ethics and dialectics. But why should dialectics be a sub-division of res humanae any more than of res diuinae? Undoubtedly the scientia quae cuiusque rei causa sit is τὸ λογικόν, which including, as it did, the discussion of τὰ κριτήρια τῆς ἀληθείας was necessarily concerned with first causes. Seneca's objection to its being included in the definition of philosophy may be explained partly by his contempt for dialectics, partly by the fact that the causae cuiusque rei though really the province of τὸ λογικόν might very naturally be regarded as falling equally within the province of τὸ φυσικόν and τὸ ἠθικόν respectively. This indeed would seem to have been a view recognized generally by the Stoics for the purposes of instruction; cf. Diog. L. vii 40, who speaking of the threefold division says καὶ οὐθὲν μέρος τοῦ ἑτέρου ἀποκεκρίσθαι, καθὰ τινες αὐτῶν φασιν, ἀλλὰ μεμίχθαι αὐτά· καὶ τὴν παράδοσιν μικτὴν ἐποιοῦν: and Chrysippus quoted by Plut. de Stoic. rep. 9, p. 1035 E οὐ καθάπαξ ἀφεκτέον ἐστὶ τῶν ἄλλων τῶ τὴν λογικὴν ἀναλαμβάνοντι πρώτῃν ἀλλὰ κἀκείνων μεταληπτέον κατὰ τὸ διδόμενον.

quae...sit: the verbal noun cognitio takes the construction of cognoscere; cf. pro Sull. 1, 3 'iudicium qui...uideatur' with Reid's n.

- 20 inferiora uirtute ducat. in hanc tu igitur tamquam in mare quod est uentis subiectum perturbationem cadere tibi dixisti uideri? quid est quod tantam grauitatem constantiamque perturbet? an in prouisum aliquid aut repentinum? quid potest accidere tale ei, cui nihil quod homini euenire possit non praemeditatum sit?
- 25 nam quod aiunt nimia resecari oportere, naturalia relinquere, quid tandem potest esse naturale, quod idem nimium esse possit? sunt enim omnia ista ex errorum orta radicibus, quae euellenda et extrahenda penitus, non circumcidenda nec amputanda sunt.

XXVII. 58. Sed quoniam suspicor te non tam de sapiente quam de te ipso quaerere (illum enim putas omni perturbatione

20. in hanc R V P G B I 3 K I E 2 W I 2. hanc in B 2.
 21. cadere ante tibi e contextu om. R in spat. sub linea eod. atr. inserit.
 23. in prouisum R V G B K E. improuisum S. || aliquid aut R P G B I-3
 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 8. || tale cui II al. atr. superscr. tale et cui P I-5 G B 2 3 S E I L 3 4 6 W I M 2 J O 7 Urs. 3240.
 tale & R I 6 17 V B I K I 2 E 3 L 5 W 2 D O I-3. tali cui M I. tali 4 cui C. tale cui R 7 E 2 L 2 O 8 ed. H. 24. cui quod euenire possit non praemeditatum sit O 2. cui nihil quod homini euenire possit non praemeditatum sit P 2 5 L 3 4 O 3. non (ne) praemeditatum sit om. R I 6 17 V P I 3 4 6 G B I-3 K I 2 E I-3 L 6 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I 7: e contextu om. in marg. habet S: pro non praem. sit habent R 7 L 2 O 8 nouum sit. cui nihil subitum est quod homini euenire possit ed. H. quod homini euenire possit potest esse improuisum aut repentinum L 5. 25. aiunt R G. agunt K. 27. euellenda R V G K. auellenda B I al. atr. superscr. uellenda P. 28. et extrahenda om. V.

in hanc: this which is the mss. reading was altered by Bent. and Dav. (following Manut. Lamb. and others) to hunc: wrongly, for sapientia is the subject of imitetur and ducat and is to be understood in the acc. with hanc. Wopkens, op. cit. p. 92, points out instances of similar quasi-personifications of abstract ideas, e.g. ii 26, 64; v 14, 41; Finn. iv 13, 32.

quid potest accidere... praemeditatum sit? Many editors rejecting the last three words mark this sentence as corrupt: but the reading in the text is accepted by Küh., Wesenberg and Schiche on adequate mss. authority: Sff. reads praemeditatum non sit. The ms. variations point to the three words in question having been omitted at an early period, and Küh. is perhaps right in his conjecture that the omission was due to the similarity of ending possit...sit.

nam quod aiunt, iii 30, 73 n.: for the statement cf. 20, 46.

quid tandem, etc. The argument here is like the better known Stoic argument to prove that pleasure was not to be regarded as a good: εἶναι γὰρ καὶ αἰσχροὺς ἡδονάς, μηδὲν δ' αἰσχροῦ εἶναι ἀγαθόν Diog. L. vii 103.

enim: cf. ii 26, 62 n. on itaque.

errorum: gen. of definition; ex errorum radicibus = ex erroribus qui quasi radices sunt.

euellenda: Bake altered this and the following gerundives to the feminine, taking them to refer to radices; but as Sff. points out quae here, as often, is merely connective and = et ea.

circumcidenda...amputanda: the same combination is found in Ac. ii 45, 138; Finn. i 13, 44; v 14, 39; Or. i 15, 65.

XXVII. In this chapter Cicero begins his discussion of the remedia perturbationum which extends to c. 37: the first three chapters are taken up with the method of treating perturbationes in general: cc. 30-37 deal with the special cases of metus, laetitia, cupiditas and ira.

esse liberum, te uis), uideamus, quanta sint quae a philosophia remedia morbis animorum adhibeantur. est enim quaedam medicina certe, nec tam fuit hominum generi infensa atque inimica natura ut corporibus tot res salutaris, animis nullam inuenerit; de quibus hoc etiam est merita melius, quod corporum adiumenta adhibentur extrinsecus, animorum salus inclusa in his ipsis est. sed quo maior est in iis praestantia et diuinior, eo maiore indigent diligentia. itaque bene adhibita ratio cernit quid optimum sit, neglecta multis implicatur erroribus. 59. ad te igitur mihi iam conuertenda omnis oratio est; simulas enim quaerere te de sapiente, quaeris autem fortasse de te.

Earum igitur perturbationum quas exposui uariae sunt curationes. nam neque omnis aegritudo una ratione sedatur;

XXVII. § 58, 3. sint G L<sub>5</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D O<sub>1</sub> 3 8. sit P W<sub>2</sub> O<sub>2</sub>.

sit V atr. uiridi superscr. B<sub>1</sub> al. atr. superscr. sit R B<sub>2</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E<sub>1</sub> 2 Π om. O 7. || a philosophia L<sub>4</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D C O<sub>1</sub>. philosophia B<sub>1</sub> al. atr. superscr.

 philosophia R V P G B<sub>2</sub> 3 K<sub>1</sub> 2 S E<sub>1</sub> 3 L<sub>2</sub> 3 5 6 M<sub>2</sub> J O<sub>2</sub> 3 8 ed. H.
 ph'ye W<sub>2</sub> O 7. ptię W<sub>1</sub>. queq; phia E<sub>2</sub> Π. 6. salutaris R V G
 B<sub>1</sub> 2 K E. salutare S. || nullam R 6 W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>1</sub>. nullā P<sub>1</sub> B<sub>3</sub>

Π J. nullā B<sub>1</sub> at linea supra a al. atr. duct. nulla V. nulla E fort. eod. atr.
 nullas R 7 17 M<sub>1</sub> D C O<sub>2</sub> 8. nulla R G B<sub>2</sub> K<sub>1</sub> 2 S E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> O<sub>3</sub> 7.
 8. in his V P G B<sub>3</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S M<sub>1</sub> J O<sub>3</sub> 7. in eis R B<sub>1</sub> E. in iis M<sub>2</sub>.
 in hiis D O 8. 9. in eis V P G B<sub>3</sub> K S M<sub>1</sub> C J O<sub>2</sub>. || indigent R 6
 L<sub>3</sub> J O<sub>1</sub>. indigēt W<sub>1</sub>. indignet M<sub>1</sub>. indiget R<sub>1</sub> 7 17 V P G B<sub>1</sub> 3 K<sub>1</sub> 2 S E<sub>1</sub> 3 L<sub>2</sub> 4-6 M<sub>2</sub> D C Π O<sub>2</sub> 3 7 8 ed. H. itil'igēt W<sub>2</sub> marg. indiget al. atr. adscr. 10. optimum R G B K. optimum V S E.
 11. neglecta R V G K. neglecta B. || implicatur R V G B<sub>1</sub> 2 S. implicatur E. implicabitur K.

§ 59, 11. ad te V at in ad mut. 14. earum R 6 7 17 J. earum S E o in a mut. eorum R V G. 15. sedatur R G K E alii. sadatur V.

§ 58. te uis: sc. perturbatione esse liberum.

quanta sint, quae ... remedia, i.e. quanta sint ea remedia, quae, etc. For the constr. Wopkens on N.D. ii 24, 62 (op. cit. p. 218) compares Ac. ii 14, 45; 31, 99; Legg. ii 12, 29.

est enim quaedam medicina: for the thought cf. iii 3, 5 sq.

his ipsis: Bake read in ipsis and he is followed by Bait. and Hei.; his is altered to iis by Mo. Tr. Kl.; Sff. who rightly keeps the MS. reading remarks 'neque enim animorum adiumenta adiumentis corporum, sed ipsi animi, de quibus cum maxime agitur itaque hi uocantur, corporibus...oppositi sunt.'

bene adhibita ratio: cf. 11, 24 'adhibita continuo ratio quasi quaedam Socratica medicina.' Brut. 75, 261: adhibita is appropriate here, being the usual word for applying remedies as in

Off. i 24, 83 '(medici) grauioribus morbis periculosas curationes et ancipites adhibere coguntur' and often. Turn. and Bent. read habita, and Turn. remarks (Adv. vii 18) 'bene haberi dicitur quod diligenter seduloque curatur et colitur, neque negligitur'—which is true; but Cic. wishing to emphasise the fact that ratio is at once the patient, the physician and the remedy in diseases of the soul says "Reason, properly applied, discerns the best course; deprived of proper attention, it becomes involved in mistakes."

§ 59. curationes = rationes medendi: cf. iii 10, 23 where morbi curatio is paralleled by aegritudinis medendi facultas. On the force of verbals in -io see Nagelsb. Stil. § 58.

neque: a clause beginning with neque or et might have been expected in place of the clause beginning est etiam in alia est enim lugenti, alia miseranti aut inuidenti adhibenda medicina. est etiam in omnibus quattuor perturbationibus illa distinctio, utrum ad uniuersam perturbationem, quae est aspernatio rationis aut adpetitus uehementior, an ad singulas, ut ad 20 metum, libidinem, reliquas, melius adhibeatur oratio, et utrum illudne non uideatur aegre ferendum ex quo suscepta sit aegri-

16. miseranti aut inuidenti R P G B 1-3 K I 2 E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J O 2 3 7 8. miseranti alia inuidenti S O I. miseranti aut inuidentiā V.
17. quattuor R V G B E. 18. distinctio G. || aspernatio R G B K S E. a spernatio V litt. inter a et s eras. 19. adpetitus R V G K E. appetitus B S.
20. libidinem R G B J. libidinem K. libidinem V P E. || reliquas R 17 P B 2 E 2 L 2 O 7. reliquas E I. reliquas R G K. reliquasq; V at q; atr. uiridiores scr. reliquas<sub>A</sub> || al. atr. superscr. reliquas B I i ead. atr.
q; al. atr. superscr. reliquasq; R 6 7 B 3 K 2 S L 3-6 W I 2 M 2 J O 1-3 8. et reliquas M I D C. || oratio R I 2 10 16 V P G B 2 K S E I 2 W 2 D J O I. 21. illudne non R V P G B 1 3 K I S E I 2 M 2 I I O 1-3 8. illudne M I non om. illudne nō B 2 (sic). illud nō ne W I.
illud nec ne D C. illud ne nō W 2 al. atr. superscr. illud uideatur ne non O 7. || ferendum R V G B 1 K. ferendum B 2. ferendum R 6 7 17 P B 3 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J O 1-3 7 8.

omnibus: for the anacoluthon cf. iii 3, 5 (where, as here, it is due to an interjected explanation) and Finn. ii 22, 71 with Madv.'s note and his Excursus to Finn. i 7, 23.

miseranti: Cic. has used misereri in § 56 and Lamb. conjectured miserenti here. Fest. p. 123 Müll. lays down the distinction: 'miseratur is qui conqueritur aliena incommoda; miseretur is, qui miserum subleuat,' a distinction which is in flat contradiction to Cicero's usage in § 56. Nonius Marcellus, p. 445 M, says 'miserari et misereri ueteres his sensibus esse uoluerunt ut sit miserari flere et lamentari, misereri miserationem alienis casibus exhibere.' Servius, however (on Aen. i 597) declares 'et miseror et misereror unum significat' quoting in support of his view Aen. ii 144 and iv 370.

in omnibus, 'in dealing with': for this use see Sff.'s note to Lael. 2, 9, who compares Gk ἐν and quotes Off. ii 18, 61; Phil. xiv 3, 9; Or. ii 61, 248; Finn. v 11, 30 hoc cum in amicitiiis...dicitur.

quattuor, i.e. aegritudo, laetitia, metus, libido (7, 14).

illa, 'the following,' as often.

uniuersam, 'as a whole,' cf. uniuersa philosophia ii 2, 4; iii 3, 6.

oratio. Bent. followed by Dav. read curatio, and Bouh. comparing bene adhibita ratio above and edocuit tamen ratio in iii 33, 80 conjectured ratio. Oratio is defended by F.A.W. and Or. who compare § 62 and Phil. xiv 13, 34 'atque utinam...aliqua talis iis adhiberi publice posset oratio qua deponerent maerorem' and is kept by all recent edd.

utrum illudne: cf. 4, 9 n. and Draeger, Synt. I § 158 A (c).

The clause (though connected by et with the preceding) merely restates the same alternative as before in a reverse order, illud...ferendum corresponding to an ad singulas...oratio and an omnium...aegritudo to utrum ad uniuersam...uehementior; the following clause ut...oportere gives an instance of the alternative (following the order of the clause immediately preceding) as applied to a special case.

For illudne non Bentl. read illud necne (comparing 29, 62) which by making illud...aegritudo a disjunctive question destroys the balance of the clauses.

For et connecting two phrases of practically identical meaning Wopkens (op. cit. p. 136) compares Finn. iii 21, 71 'nunquam aequitatem ab utilitate posse seiungi et quidquid aequum iustumque esset id etiam honestum.' Ac. i 4, 17; T.D. iii 33, 79 'suo iudicio et quod se ita putet oportere facere' where Bentl. wished to delete the et.

tudo, an omnium rerum tollenda omnino aegritudo, ut, si quis aegre ferat se pauperem esse, idne disputes, paupertatem malum non esse, an hominem aegre ferre nihil oportere. nimirum hoc 25 melius, ne, si forte de paupertate non persuaseris, sit aegritudini concedendum; aegritudine autem sublata propriis rationibus, quibus heri usi sumus, quodam modo etiam paupertatis malum tollitur.

XXVIII. 60. Sed omnis eius modi perturbatio animi pla-

22. tollenda R 6 P 2 3 6 E 2 M 1 2 II O 2 3 B 3 marg. toleranda.
Urs. 3240 marg., e cont. om. toll'anda R 17 J. tol'anda P 1 W 2. tolleranda R 7 P 4 5 K 2 C O 7 ed. H. tolleranda O 8. toleranda R V G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 W 1 D O 1 Gr. Vict.

XXVIII. § 60, 1. perturbatio epijñ V marg. aī atr. uiridi adscr.

tollenda: this reading, which was also a conjecture of Lambinus, is to be preferred to toleranda of the best MSS. toleranda is impossible in view of the corresponding phrase in the example taken up in the next clause 'hominem aegre ferre nihil oportere.'

ut, 'for example' as in 28, 61; v 24, 69; Diu. ii 69, 142.

concedendum, 'we may have to leave the field free to'; if an unsuccessful attempt be made to prove that paupertas is not an evil, the failure renders it impossible to proceed further and argue that there is nothing which can properly be described as an evil; for concedere = cedere, cf. 29, 63 and the line from Cicero's poem de suis temporibus quoted in Off. i 22, 77 'cedat arma togae concedat laurea laudi.'

heri: in the discussion reported in Book iii.

malum: the phrase paupertatis malum is in the context an easily understood brachylogy for cogitatio paupertatem esse malum. Bent. proposed to read (with Gebh.'s Palatine codex) nomen and in this he is followed by Bouh.: he gives as his reasons 'quippe alienum est ab hac disputatione concedere paupertatem esse malum: deinde si aegritudo omnino sublata sit, non quodammodo sed prorsus omnino paupertatis malum tollitur' and he explains his own reading, 'nam qui nihil desiderat...cur pauper est uocandus?' With regard to the first point Bent. is quite right in his assertion; the only logical conclusion to be drawn with regard to poverty from proving 'hominem aegre ferre nihil oportere' is, not 'paupertatem malum non esse' but, 'hominem aegre ferre paupertatem non oportere'; and this very fact is, pace Bentleii, the justification for quodam modo; once the assertion 'hominem aegre ferre paupertatem non oportere' is established, it becomes increasingly difficult (not logically impossible, but quodam modo impossible) to argue that paupertas is in any real sense malum.

XXVIII. § 60. Sed omnis... 'But granting that all disturbances of this kind may be cleared away by that process of soothing the mind which consists in proving that, etc.:' abluatur is concessive subjunctive; for the concessive use of quidem after ille and is cf. i 3 6 n.: for the metaphor in abluatur cf. iii 18, 43 'tum plane luctum omnem absterseris'; de Sen. i 2 'omnis absterserit senectutis molestias.'

Bent. attacks the reading with his usual vigour 'uix crediderim occultius aut sanatu difficilium mendium in toto Cicerone latitare'; he objects to placatione on the grounds that, first, the phrase perturbatio...abluatur is absurd; one might as well say morbum leuari sanitate; and, secondly, that the word placatio cannot properly be used where res externae are in question: 'placatio enim potius fit cum ipsa intus aegritudo leniatur, utcumque se habeant res externae.' He objects also to the subj. abluatur: his proposed reading is sed cum omnis eiusmodi perturbatio duplici ratione abluatur; he claims for duplici ratione that it gives a proper reference for illa and haec which follow: the emendation is adopted by Lall. and (with haec for duplici) by Nissen. The proposal involves an anacoluthon, illa quidem having no haec to correspond; it is palaeographically highly improbable that duplici ratione should have been corrupted into animi placatione; and the objection to placatio animi is unsound, the phrase being = ratio placandi animi, surely a legitimate description of an argument addressed to an animus perturbatus.

catione abluatur illa quidem, cum doceas nec bonum illud esse, ex quo laetitia aut libido oriatur, nec malum, ex quo aut metus aut aegritudo; uerum tamen haec est certa et propria sanatio, si 5 doceas ipsas perturbationes per se esse uitiosas nec habere quicquam aut naturale aut necessarium, ut ipsam aegritudinem leniri uidemus cum obicimus maerentibus inbecillitatem animi ecfeminiati, cumque eorum grauitatem constantiamque laudamus qui non turbulente humana patiantur. quod quidem solet iis etiam 10 accidere qui illa mala esse censent, ferenda tamen aequo animo arbitrantur. putat aliquis esse uoluptatem bonum, alius autem pecuniam; tamen et ille ab intemperantia et hic ab auaritia auocari potest. illa autem altera ratio et oratio, quae simul et

2. nec bonum B 3 K 2 W 1 M 1 2 O 1-3 8. <sup>nec</sup> et bonum V atr. uiridi
<sup>nec</sup> superscr. 7 bonum W 2 al. atr. superscr. <sup>nec</sup> bonum E 3 al. atr. superscr.
 neque bonum ed. H. <sup>c</sup> n et bonum J. et bonum R P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 D C II O 7. 3. libido R V G B K. 6. aut ipsam V. <sup>ut</sup> ipsa R eod. atr.
 ut ipsa G. 7. obicimus V B 3 K 2 W 1 2 M 2 D C II J O 3 7 8. obicim<sup>9</sup> E 2 at m<sup>9</sup> al. atr. script. obicib; E 1. obicib; M 1 h.e. obicibus in obicimus mut. obicibus R P G B 1 2 K 1. obicimus S O 1 2. obncimus R 6. || merentibus R G B 1 3 E 1. || inbecillitatem E 1. inbecillitatem G ead. man. superscr. imbecillitatem R V B 1 2 K S. || ecfeminati R G B. h,ecfeminati K 1 h, atr. nigriore script. ecfeminati B 2.
 ef
 & feminati V atr. uiridi superscr. ef feminati E 1. effeminati P B 3 S W 1 M 2 C J O 3 7. 8. grauitatem constantiamque V P K. grauitate constantiaque R G. 10. ferenda R V P G B 1 2 S E 1 2 W 1 J. ferendam O 2. ferendum K 1. 11. arbitratur G. || putat K. t puta V atr. uiridi superscr. puta R G. 12. ab auaritia R P G. auaritia V eod. ut uid. atr. 13. et oratio R P G om. V.

cum doceas: cf. for these methods iii 31, 76 sqq.

haec est...si doceas: cf. Draeger, Synt. II § 549b (a), to whose list of instances this should be added.

qui illa...censent, ferenda...arbitrantur, the Peripatetics and the Cyrenaics.

aliquis...alius: Madv. on Finn. iii 19, 63 shows that aliquis...alius is never used in classical Lat. as the equivalent of alius...alius; in this case putat aliquis gives one instance out of many which might be given, and to it another (alius...pecuniam) is added.

illa altera, i.e. 'cum doceas nec bonum illud esse ex quo laetitia aut libido oriatur, nec malum ex quo aut metus aut aegritudo'; though the 'certa et propria sanatio' for perturbationes from the philosophical standpoint is to show that a perturbatio is in itself unnatural and unnecessary, yet the method which, dealing with a particular case, tries to show that the object which gave rise to the perturbatio is not malum or bonum as the case may be, is more useful, since in addition to getting rid of the perturbatio it establishes right views of the object which caused it, a result which the 'certa et propria sanatio' does not aim at. The drawback to the method is that it is seldom successful, and can only be applied in the case of persons of a philosophic mind (uulgus = οἱ πολλοί, a Stoic synonym for οἱ φαῦλοι, the non-philosophic).

For ratio et oratio cf. 17, 38 n.

Bent. objected strongly to uiliior ('nihil uidi tetrius foediusue hac lectione... qui, malum, si non proficit, utilis esse poterit?') and proposed subtilior which has been accepted by Dav. Bouh. Lall.

opinionem falsam tollit et aegritudinem detrahit, est ea quidem 15 utilior, sed raro proficit neque est ad uolgus adhibenda. 61. quaedam autem sunt aegritudines quas leuare illa medicina nullo modo possit, ut, si quis aegre ferat nihil in se esse uirtutis, nihil animi, nihil officii, nihil honestatis, propter mala is quidem an-gatur, sed alia quaedam sit ad eum admouenda curatio, et talis 20 quidem, quae possit esse omnium etiam de ceteris rebus discrepantium philosophorum. inter omnis enim conuenire oportet commotiones animorum a recta ratione auersas esse uitiosas, ut, etiamsi † nec mala sint illa, quae metum aegritudinemue, nec bona,

14. falsam R 2 10 16 P K. falsa R 1 V G. || aegritudinem V K.
 aegritudine R G. 15. utilior R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2
 D C II J O 1-3 7 8. || uolgus R V G B K. uulgus S E.
 § 61, 16. ulla V fuerat illa, i extra lineam atr. uiridi adscr. 18. officii
 R V G B S E. officii K 1. || si quidem agatur G in is q. angatur alt. man. mut.
 20. omnium etiam R 1 6 P G B 1-3 K 1 2 E 2 W 1 2 M 2 D II J O 1 2 7. etiam omnium V E O 8. omnium esse etiam C. etiam esse omnium M 1. esse omnium de ceteris rebus etiam O 3. 21. omnis R V G B K.
 23. nec mala...nec bona R 1 2 6 7 10 16 17 V P 1-5 G B 2 3 K 1 2 S E 2
 L 2-4 6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II O 1-3 7 8 Urs. 3240. nec maēla E 1. nec ma la B 1 duabus litt. eras. etiamsi nec om. L 5. etiamsi nec letitiamue J cett. om. || quae metum R G. quēmetum V.

Ern. Sff.; the MSS. reading is followed by Mo. Or. F.A.W. Küh. Ml. T.S. Hei. Utilior is (it must be granted) ambiguous and may mean either 'productive of benefit to a greater number' (sc. than the rival method) or 'productive of a greater benefit' (sc. than the rival method, to the person with whom both might be successful); the latter is Cicero's meaning here; and though it might have been expressed with less possibility of misunderstanding, the phrase cannot be said to be inaccurate or absurd. Subtilior, at any rate, could not have been used here; Cicero's whole contention has been that the rival method, the certa et propria sanatio, is the more logical method, the one most in accordance with sound philosophy; subtilis as applied to an argument means in Cic. 'precise,' 'accurate,' 'careful' and would not be applied to one which sacrificed logical precision to anything else.

proficit, a medical term. Küh. quotes Cels. v 28, 2 'neque ulla umquam medicina proficit'; Plin. N.H. xxvii 72 'radix aduersatur omnium serpentium generibus....nec alia res celerius proficit.'

§ 61. illa medicina, the argument that the disturbing cause was not malum, since the absence of virtue was the only malum. This is another argument in favour of the certa et propria curatio, the only method which could possibly afford relief in such a case. This particular kind of aegritudo was first it seems brought prominently forward by Posidonius in his criticism of Chrysippus' doctrine of the πάθη, cf. Galen, de Plat. et Hippocr. plac. iv p. 370 M.

ut, 'for example,' 27, 59 n.

nihil in se esse uirtutis: cf. iii 28, 68.

officii, i.e. τοῦ καθήκοντος.

etiam...discrepantium = etiam si...discrepent, 'even while differing on other points.'

ut etiamsi nec. The MSS. read nec mala sint...nec bona, which is defended by Wopkens, op. cit. p. 138, who notes 'sensus est constare inter omnes, tametsi res illas quae perturbationes et commotiones in nobis concitent esse indifferentes concedatur, ipsas tamen commotiones a rebus illis indifferentibus concitatas uitiosas esse.' Hand in his note to Wopkens takes a different view, explaining the passage thus: 'etiamsi perturbationes animi ab ea parte quod nec mala sint quae metum aegritudinemue nec bona quae cupiditatem laetitiamue moueant improbari debeant, tamen ipsa adeo commotio uitiosa est.' Or. in his notes to F.A.W. and Mo. agree with Hand; but it is difficult to see how either this or Wopkens' meaning can be got without violence out of Cicero's Latin.

Küh. who also reads nec...nec translates 'so dass, selbst in dem Falle, dass quae cupiditatem laetitiamue moueant, tamen sit uitiosa ipsa 25 commotio. constantem enim quendam uolumus, sedatum, grauem, humana omnia spernentem illum esse quem magnanimum et

26. prementem uel praementem codd. omnes. spernentem corr. uir doctus apud Lambinum. || illum esse quem R V G K E 2 W I 2 O I 78. illum esse
 quam R 2 B E D. illum esse <sup>a</sup> P. illum esse  $\Psi$  S ras. post  $\Psi$  et marg. quē.

einerseits die Dinge, welche Fürcht oder Kummer einflößen, keine Uebel, andererseits die Dinge, welche Begierde oder Fröhlichkeit erregen, keine Güter sind, dennoch die Gemüthsbewegung an und für sich fehlerhaft ist'; i.e. even supposing the Stoic view to be true yet perturbation is undesirable. As this, the only natural meaning of the Latin words, is the precise opposite of what Cicero might be expected to say in the context, most edd. follow Bent. and Lamb. in altering the negative to the positive: Bent. followed by Ml. Sff. Hei. T.S. Schiche reading uel...uel in place of nec...nec, and Lamb. followed by Fabr. F.A.W. Schz. et...et: the meaning will then be 'even if the objects which give rise to fear or vexation are evils and those which arouse desire or delight are goods yet mental perturbation is in itself undesirable,' i.e. even adopting a view which at first sight might seem to justify perturbatio if anything could, philosophers would yet be agreed that it was in itself vicious. A superficial support is lent to this view by the fact that Cic. has himself earlier in the § adduced a case of aegritudo which required to be cured although the aegritudo was propter mala.

The objection which may be made to all the explanations proposed above is that they do not take sufficiently into account first, that the clause ut, etiamsi... ipsa commotio is the statement (not of a fact or a conclusion but) of a point of view to be adopted by agreement among all philosophers; and secondly that the parties to the agreement adopt a common attitude upon one point, etiam de ceteris rebus discrepantes. This point of agreement is uitiosam esse ipsam commotionem; differences are allowed upon the questions to which the words etiamsi...moueant refer. Yet both those who read et...et (or uel...uel) and those who read nec...nec make the sentence contemplate some one definite point of view (whether that of the Stoics or their opponents) as adopted on these other points as a part of the general agreement.

The clause beginning inter omnes enim conuenire oportet is, as enim shows, explanatory of the preceding talis quidem... philosophorum and Cicero's habit of taking up and developing his own statements in detail makes one expect some clause explanatory of, or expanding, the phrase etiam de ceteris rebus discrepantium; this clause can only be etiamsi...moueant and must of course not contradict de ceteris rebus discrepantium in meaning.

These conditions are satisfied by reading etiam si nec malane sint illa...nec bona quae...moueant, understanding conuenial from conuenire in the preceding clause. Trans. 'There should be, I mean, a general agreement that emotions opposed to right reason are morbid states, so that if there should not be any agreement whether those things which excite fear and vexation are evils or not, or those things good which excite desire and delight, still perturbation is in itself a morbid state.' This is supported by the résumé in the next paragraph, where ut nihil quale sit illud quod perturbet animum [docendum sit] answers to the clause etiamsi...moueant here.

quendam: cf. i 12, 27 n.; Nägelsbach, Stil. 82, 3.

spernentem, an anonymous conjecture for the MSS prementem mentioned (to be rejected) by Lamb. but approved by Bent. and adopted by Mo. Bai. Wes. Ml. TS. Hei. The MSS reading is kept by Lamb. Dav. Or. Küh. Kl. and defended by Wopkens (op. cit. p. 138) and Hand. Bouh. conjectured ferentem.

Dav. wished to give to prementem the sense of calcantem, a meaning which Bent. showed was only possible if pedibus or some similar word was expressed. Premere can be used with words denoting feeling, in the sense of 'repress,' 'control' (Seneca, de Ira iii 6, 1 (quoted by Wopkens); Stat. Theb. 9, 546; Val. Fl. iii 370 etc.), a meaning which is impossible here as humana cannot mean 'human feelings'; nor is it possible to get a satisfactory meaning out of the sense noted by Hand 'premere dicitur de omnibus rebus quae ne exurgant aut euagentur moderatione et temperatione cohibentur,' since the wise man has no control over the accidents of fortune. In silver age fortem uirum dicimus. talis autem nec maerens nec timens nec cupiens nec gestiens esse quisquam potest. eorum enim haec sunt, qui euentus humanos superiores quam suos animos esse <sup>30</sup> ducunt.

XXIX. 62. Quare omnium philosophorum, ut ante dixi, una ratio est medendi, ut nihil, quale sit illud, quod perturbet animum, sed de ipsa sit perturbatione dicendum. itaque primum in ipsa cupiditate, cum id solum agitur ut ea tollatur, non est <sup>5</sup> quaerendum, bonum illud necne sit, quod libidinem moueat, sed libido ipsa tollenda est, ut, siue, quod honestum est, id sit summum bonum, siue uoluptas siue horum utrumque coniunctum siue tria illa genera bonorum, tamen, etiamsi uirtutis ipsius uehementior adpetitus sit, eadem sit omnibus ad deterrendum <sup>10</sup> adhibenda oratio. continet autem omnem sedationem animi

29. qui euentus R I 2 10 16. <sup>i e</sup> quae uentus V atr. uiridi mut. quae uentus G in qui euentus ead. man. mut. <sup>30.</sup> ducunt R 6 L 4 6 M 1 2 O 1 2.

<sup>v</sup> dicunt S cod. atr. B 3 fort. cod. atr. dicunt R I 7 17 V P I 2 4 G B I 2 K I 2 E I -3 L 2 3 5 W I D C II J O 3 7 8 ed. H. dñt W 2.

XXIX. § 62, 1. ut ante R I 2 10 16 G. aut ante V. 3. in ante ipsa

addidit G prima manu. 5. <sup>n</sup> nece G ead. man. || libidinem R V G B.

<sup>v</sup> libidinem K I. libidinem J  marg. e contextu om. 6. libido R V B K
J  marg. e cont. om. libidio G i ante o expunx. alt. man. || ut siue R G K.

<sup>u</sup> ut siue V atr. uiridi superscr. 8. tria illa R I 17 V G B I 2 K I E I 2
II O 2. illa tria R 6 P B 3 K 2 S W I 2 M I 2 D C J O I 3.

ulla tria O 7. || bonarum G. 9. adpetitus R V G K. 10. adhibenda R V P G
B 2 3 K I S E I 2 W 2 M I 2 D C II O I -3 7. adhibita W I.

<sup>en</sup> adhib <sup>en</sup> ða B I  litt. post b eras. et t in d mut. cod. ut uid. atr.

Latin premere bears the sense of 'be superior to,' 'surpass' e.g. Stat. Silu. i 2, 115 'quantum Latonia nymphas uirgo premit,' but there is no evidence, unless the present passage be such, for this meaning in Cicero.

haec : maerere, timere, cupere, gestire.

XXIX. § 62. ante in § 61.

nihil, 'never a word'; like nullus, often used as an emphatic substitute for non.

primum : the parenthesis beginning continet autem disarranges the intended order; the ideas awakened by his quotation lead Cicero on to think first of aegritudo and then of its congener metus and he does not return to cupiditas before § 65.

horum utrumque coniunctum : cf. v 30, 85 'uoluptatem cum honestate Dinomachus et Callipho copulauit'; Off. iii 33, 119 'quo magis reprehendendos Calliphontem et Dinomachum iudico qui se dirempturos controuersiam putauerunt si cum honestate uoluptatem tamquam cum homine pecudem copulauissent;' Fin. ii 11, 34; Ac. ii 42, 131.

tria illa genera : sc. animi, corporis, externa, the view of the Peripatetics and the old Academy; v 30, 85; Fin. l.c.; Ac. l.c.

uirtutis ipsius, 'if even virtue itself should be the object of an immoderate yearning,' as in the case instanced in 28, 61.

deterrendum : not ab iis quae perturbent animum (Küh. Mo.), since to induce terror is hardly a philosophic means of banishing perturbationes, but sc. adpetitum uehementiorem, which is quasi-personified and represented as being frightened away by the calmness of the mind it was about to invade. Unless, indeed, we should read detergendum.

humana in conspectu posita natura; quae quo facilius expressa cernatur, explicanda est oratione communis condicio lexque uitae. 63. itaque non sine causa, cum Orestem fabulam doceret Euripides, primos tris uersus reuocasse dicitur Socrates:

- 15 Neque tām terribilis úlla fando orátio est Nec sors nec ira caelitum inuectúm malum, Quod nón natura humana patiendo écferat.

est autem utilis ad persuadendum ea quae acciderint ferri et

12. conditio R V G B K S.

§ 63, 13. orestem R V G K C.

orestē P E I J.

horestem B 3.

horestē B 1. <sup>o r</sup>arestem S marg. horestis. horestis W I. || dīcēt II i in o mut.
diceret R I 6 7 10 16 17 V P 2 G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 3 L 2-6 W 1 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 7 ed. H. dīet P I E 2. om. W 2. 14. tris R V G B K E
W 1 2 J O 7. tres P B 3 S. 15. fando R I 2 7 10 16 V P G B 2 K I

S O I 3 7 ed. H. fando II at o ex i mut. ut uid. fando B 3. fandi R 6
K 2 E 2 3 W 1 2 M 1 O 2. fanda E I D. fraudi R 17. || oratio E I
D C. ratio R I 6 7 16 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 2 3 W 1 2 M 1 I J O 1-3 7 ed. H. 16. sors R 6 17 P 1 4 B 3 K 2 E 3 W 2 marg. e cont. om.
M 2 O 1 ed. H. fors R 1 7 V B 1 K 1 E 2 W 1 D C II O 2 3 7
Gr. Vict. fons E I. fortis S marg. sors. fors an sors incert. B 2 M I.
sor in fors mut. alt. man. G. om. J. || inuectum O I. inuēctum O 7.
inuentum R I 2 6 7 10 16 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 2 3 ed. H. 17. ecferat R V G K. hęc ferat B I E I.

hec ferat S al. atr. superscr. et ferat B 2. efferat P B 3 W 1 M 2 I J O 2 3 Gr. eferat M I. ferat O I. 18. autem R V P G B 1-3 K plerique.
aut D. at W 2. || eaque G. || acciderint R V P G B K plerique. acciderit O 7. accidunt O 3.

expressa: cf. iii 2, 3 n. on eminentem effigiem.

condicio lexque uitae: cf. iii 16, 34; 24, 59.

§ 63. doceret: the usual phrase for producing a play (lit. instructing the actors in the play), cf. Brut. 18, 72; Hor. A.P. 288.

reuocasse, 'encored': 'proprie dicitur actor reuocari: sed quia id fit ut repetat quae dixerat etiam uersus reuocari dici potest.' Ern.; Boettiger (quoted by Mo.) thinks this could not have occurred at a public performance of the play and must have taken place at the rehearsal.

Neque tam: οὐκ ἔστω οὐδὲν δεινὸν ὦδ' εἰπεῖν ἔπος | οὐδὲ πάθος, οὐδὲ συμφορὰ θεήλατος | ἧς οὐκ ἂν ἄραιτ' ἄχθος ἀνθρώπου φύσις. Eur. Or. 1-3.

fando: a kind of modal abl. 'terrible in the speaking' i.e. 'terrible to speak of.' Draeger, Synt. II § 599 (1); cf. N.D. i 29, 82 'ne fando quidem auditum est'; Pacuuius, Teucer (Ribbeck Scaen. poes. Rom. frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 117 IV) 'nihiline a Troia adportat fando'; Val. Flacc. iv 170 'his fando si nuntius exstitit oris' and Sil.

Ital. x 483 'si Porsena fando | auditus tibi.'

Cicero has (as Fabr. Dav. and Mur. pointed out) mistaken the meaning of the Gk. He seems to have construed the first line οὐκ ἔστω ἔπος οὐδὲν ὦδε δεινὸν εἰπεῖν, whereas in the Schol. ὦδ' ἔπος εἰπεῖν is paraphrased by ἐν συντόμῳ εἰπεῖν (ut uno uerbo complectar): and the meaning of the last line evidently is 'nihil tam tætrum esse cuius grauitati natura humana non sit exposita' (Fabr.)

ecferat: Beroald. explains the word as equivalent to uincere, 'do away with,' 'efferre enim est ad sepulcrum ferre: unde efferrī dicuntur mala quae patiendo uincimus et quasi tumulamus.' Mo. is, however, undoubtedly correct in explaining it by perferre; he quotes in support the words of the uetus poeta (i.e. Attius) in Cic. p. Sest. 48, 102 'nisi labore summa cum cura eferas' (Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 164) and Lucr. i 141.

autem: Dav. conjectured etiam, which was at one time accepted by Or. Wopkens (op. cit. pp. 10 sq.), who compares i 33, 80 hominum autem (where Lamb. proposed posse et oportere enumeratio eorum qui tulerunt. etsi aegritudinis sedatio et hesternā disputatione explicata est et in Consolationis libro, quem in medio (non enim sapientes eramus) maerore et dolore conscripsimus; quodque uetat Chrysippus, ad recentis quasi tumores animi remedium adhibere, id nos fecimus naturaeque uim attulimus ut magnitudini medicinae doloris magnitudo concederet.

XXX. 64. Sed aegritudini, de qua satis est disputatum, finitimus est metus, de quo pauca dicenda sunt. est enim metus, ut aegritudo praesentis, sic ille futuri mali. itaque non nulli aegritudinis partem quandam metum esse dicebant, alii autem metum praemolestiam appellabant, quod est quasi dux conse-

19. post oportere habet V trium litt. spat. in ras. || tulerunt K O 1. tulerunt R eod. atr. tulerunt V. tulerunt G. 22. uetat R 1 2 10 16 G B. uetat V. || chrysippus R V G W 1. chrysippus B 1. crisippus E 1. 23. recentis R V G B K E. recentes B 2 S. 24. uim R G B 1-3 K W 1. cum V. || attulimus R B S E. attullimus G K. adtullimus V.

XXX. § 64, 3. ille B 3 K 2 W 1 2 D J O 1 3 7 B 1 at e ex i mut. illi V. illi R G B 2 K 1 E 1. 5. praemolestiam R 2. praemolestiā R 10 P. praemolestiam R 16. praemolestiā V. praemolestia R G B 1 2 K. praemolestia E 1 (sic). || appellabant R V G K. || quod est R V G B 3 S L 2-6 W 2 M 2 D C H O 1 3 ed. H. quod ē R 6 7 17 P B E 1-3 W 1 M 1 (non ut Küh.) J O 7. quod ε B 2. quod ÷ K 1 2. qui ē O 2.

item); N.D. ii 23, 60; Off. i 4, 11, shows that autem often means much the same as etiam with a slight notion of contrast in addition. Cf. Küh.'s n. on i 18, 42.

etsi: 'still,' cf. i 42, 99 n.

in Consolationis libro: i 26, 65 n.

non enim sapientes eramus. 'Diese leise mit der innigsten Trauer um die geliebte Tochter verbundene Ironie liess sich nicht anmuthiger ausdrücken als durch eine solche, sonst bei Cic. ungewöhnliche, Parenthese zwischen d. Adject. und Subst.' F.A.W.

quodque uetat Chrysippus: cf. Chrysippus' words, quoted by Galen, de plac. Hipp. iv 7 (152) p. 398 Mü. καθ' ὃν λόγον οὐκ ἂν ἀπελπίσαι τις οὕτως τῶν πραγμάτων ἐγγροισιζομένων καὶ τῆς παθητικῆς φλεγμονῆς ἀνεμῆνης τὸν λόγον παρεισδύμενον καὶ οἰοεὶ χώραν λαμβάνοντα παριστάει τὴν τοῦ πάθους ἀλογίαν; cf. also Hieron. Epp. 39, 4 'recens uulnus est et tactus iste quo blandior non tam curat quam exasperat: attamen quod tempore mitigandum est, cur ratione non uincitur?'; Öv. Epp. ex P. i 3, 15 f. tempore ducetur longo fortasse cicatrix | horrent admotas uulnera cruda manus: Seneca, Cons. ad Helu. i 2; de Ira iii 39, 2; Plin. Epp. v. 16, 11; Plut. Consol.

ad Apoll. 1. Chrysippus, carrying out his idea of the close analogy between mind and body, by which πάθη are regarded as diseases, employs the word φλεγμονή (which Cic. seems to replace by tumor) to denote the inflamed and swollen condition of the mind under the influence of grief.

Pohlenz (Hermes xli p. 336) thinks that the idea was due originally to Krantor, since it is found in the beginning of Plutarch's Consol. ad Apoll., which was closely modelled upon Krantor's περὶ πένθους. He compares also Seneca, Cons. ad Helu. i 2; Cons. ad Marc. 4, 2; de Ira iii 39, 2.

Cicero's grief was so violent that he felt justified in attempting a violent remedy.

XXX. § 64. metus: 7, 16 n.

ille: for the redundant pronoun, used to point the distinction between the ut and the sic clause, cf. 30, 61; de Or. ii 30, 130 'qui, ut litterae ad uerbum scribendum sic illi ad causam explicandam statim occurrant' and Reid on Ac. ii 5, 13; Draeger, Synt. d. Lat. Sp. § 37.

praemolestiam: a word apparently coined by Cicero, as it occurs nowhere else. It is perhaps a translation of Plato's προλύπησις; Rep. ix 584 c οὐκοῦν καὶ αἱ quentis molestiae. quibus igitur rationibus instantia feruntur, eisdem contemnuntur sequentia. nam uidendum est in utrisque ne quid humile, summissum, molle, ecfeminatum, fractum abiectumque faciamus. sed quamquam de ipsius metus inconstantia, 10 inbecillitate, leuitate dicendum est, tamen multum prodest ea quae metuuntur ipsa contemnere. itaque siue casu accidit siue consilio, percommode factum est quod eis de rebus quae maxime metuuntur, de morte et de dolore, primo et proximo die disputatum est. quae si probata sunt metu magna ex parte liberati 15 sumus.

XXXI. 65. Ac de malorum opinione hactenus; uideamus nunc de bonorum, id est de laetitia et de cupiditate. mihi quidem in tota ratione ea quae pertinet ad animi perturbationem una res uidetur causam continere, omnis eas esse in nostra 5 potestate, omnis iudicio susceptas, omnis uoluntarias. hic igitur error est eripiendus, haec detrahenda opinio atque, ut in malis

7. contempnuntur et infra contempnere G. 8. ecfeminatum R V G B K. et feminatum B 2 E I. effeminatum P B 3 K 2 S W I J. 10. inbecillitate R V G B 2 K E. imbecillitate B I. ibecillitate S. 11. siue casu R P G B K E 2 W 2 M I 2 D J O I-3. siue causa V. siue caū B 2
W I O 7. 12. maxime R V G B K S E. 13. proximo R G B K.

proximo V S E. || de G alt. man. superscr.

XXXI. § 65, 1. actenus G.

3. pertinet B 3 K 2 W I M 2 O I-3.

† net pertinet B I. ptinēt B 2 W 2 M I D J O 7 ed. H. pertinent R V P G
K I E I 2 C II. || perturbationem G B 2 3 K I E 2 W 2 M I 2 D C
O I 7. perturbatiōē V P B S E I W I II J O 2 3 ed. H. 4. omnis (ter) R V G B I 3 K. om̄s (ter) S B 2. om̄s...om̄s...om̄s E I.

πρὸ μελλόντων τούτων ἐκ προσδοκίας γιγνόμεναι προσηθήσεις τε καὶ προλυπήσεις κατὰ ταῦτὰ ἔχουσι;

est: the MSS reading is retained by Schiche alone among recent edd.: Dav. Ern. Kuh. TS. Sf. F.A.W. Hei. Or. follow Bentley in altering to esset; but there is no reason to assume that Cic. is borrowing the explanation (quod...molestiae) along with the term; quasi does not mark out dux as a translation of an original Gk word, but softens the metaphorical explanation of praemolestia by dux molestiae.

instantia: τὰ ἐνεστώτα, cf. 6, 11 n.

consilio: sc. factum est to be supplied out of accidit.

quae: i.e. ea quae primo et proximo die dicta sunt; the plural is implied in disputatum est.

XXXI. § 65. ac...hactenus: cf. 2, 3 'et de coniectura quidem hactenus,' a formula of transition.

ratione: 'process of reasoning,' 'enquiry,' μέθοδος.

perturbationem: this, which is the MSS reading, was altered unnecessarily by Bentley, followed by Dav. Ern. Or. Tr., to the plural on account of eas following: but the change from singular to plural (from the general to particular cases) is quite common; edd. quote Fin. v 23, 66; Leg. i 14, 40; N.D. i 38, 106 'hoc aeterni fieri in deo...ex quo esse beati atque aeterni intellegantur': the opposite change is seen in Fin. ii 19, 61 'aliquid de uoluptatibus suis cogitabat? ubi uetam caperet aut quando,' where see Madv.'s note.

continere: cf. 10, 24; iii 24, 58.

hic...error: 'this then is the mistake which must be eradicated,' the mistake being the denial of the truth of the preceding statement 'omnes perturbationes esse in nostra potestate.' It is better to assume here that Cic. has expressed himself loosely than to explain hic error as opinatis tolerabilia, sic in bonis sedatiora sunt efficienda ea quae magna et laetabilia ducuntur. atque hoc quidem commune malorum et bonorum, ut, si iam difficile sit persuadere nihil earum rerum quae perturbent animum aut in bonis aut in malis esse habendum, tamen alia ad alium motum curatio sit adhibenda aliaque ratione maleuolus, alia amator, alia rursus anxius, alia timidus corrigendus. 66. atque erat facile sequentem eam rationem quae maxime probatur de bonis et malis negare umquam laetitia adfici posse insipientem, quod nihil umquam haberet boni. sed loquimur nunc more communi. sint sane ista bona quae putantur, honores, diuitiae, uoluptates, cetera, tamen

7. tolerabilia P B I 3 K I S E I 2 W I 2 D C O I-3. tollerabilia
 R eod. atr. tollerabilia R 7 V G B 2 J O 7. tolerabili<sup>a</sup> II al. atr. mut. tolerabiliora M 2. tolleranda M I. 8. dicuntur R I 6 7 10 16 17 V G B I-3 K I 2 S E I-3 L 2-6 W I 2 M I 2 II O I-3 ed. H. dicī P I. dñr J. dicunt D C O 7. ducuntur corr. Wolfius. 9. bonorum et malorum G at signis ordo inuersus. 10. aut in bonis aut in malis R V P G B I-3 K I S E I 2
 W I 2 M 2 J O I-3 7. aut in malis aut in bonis M I D C. 12. maleuolus R G K S. maliuolus V B E.
 § 66, 14. maxime R V B. maxumae G in maxime ead. man. mut.
 v maximae K eod. atr. 15. adfici R V G K. affici B S. 16. sint sane R P G B I-3 K I S E 2 W I 2 M 2 J O 2 3 7. sin sane M I. sunt sane
 V E I D C O I. 17. diuitiae G. || cetera R V P G K E I 2 W 2 J O I 7.
 & cetera B I in ras. superscr. et cetera W I M I. cetera<sup>q3</sup> S. ceteraq' M 2.
 & c ed. H.

'huius rei error, h. e., error in quo homines in hac re uersantur' (Küh.), as haec opinio will then have to be explained as 'huius rei opinio,' which is absurd, unless we take opinio to mean opinio praua which cannot be defended even by the proximity of error.

ut in malis...ducuntur, 'just as in the case of what is looked upon as evil, such things are to be shown to be tolerable, so in the case of what is good, things considered important and pleasurable are to be shown to be less emotional.' Erasm. followed by Dav. altered tolerabilia to tolerabiliora to correspond to sedatiora below: the MSS reading is defended, not very convincingly, by Wopkens (op. cit. p. 299) as a case of enallage graduum, but the exx. he quotes are not to the point. The meaning of the sentence is perfectly intelligible and no laboured explanations are required. As a subject for tolerabilia efficienda sunt Küh. supplies by συνεξευγμένον ea quae grauiā et tristitia ducuntur from ea quae m. et l. d. below; it seems simpler to assume a pronominal subject to be supplied from malis opinatis; in sedatiora Cic. has by a not uncommon figure used a word appropriate to the feelings to describe the objects which excite such feelings; for the meaning of efficere here cf. i 8, 16 n.

amator: 12, 27 n.

§ 66. erat: Roby § 1535.

sequentem: of an indefinite subject i 38, 91 n.; iii 17, 38 n.

eam rationem: sc. Stoicorum.

negare unquam...boni: Cicero has here in his mind a famous paradox of Chrysippus reported by Plut. de St. rep. c. 25 p. 104b B 'τὴν ἐπιχαιρεκακίαν' ἔθρον μὲν ἀνυπαρκτον εἶναι' φησιν. 'ἐπεὶ τῶν μὲν ἀστείων οὐδεὶς ἐπ' ἀλλοτρῶν κακοῖς χαίρει, τῶν δὲ φαύλων οὐδεὶς χαίρει τὸ παράπαν'; since χαρά proceeded only from τὸ ἀγαθόν, and the only ἀγαθόν was ἀρετή, which the insipientes lacked, it followed that they could not enjoy the Stoic χαρά: but it was quite possible for them to enjoy the ἀλογος ἔπαρσις of ἡδονή which was its counterpart. Yet towards the end of the § Cic. clearly distinguishes between gaudere as the word appropriate to the noble, and laetari as appropriate to the ignoble, feeling. He has here carelessly put laetitia for gaudium.

in iis ipsis potiundis exsultans gestiensque laetitia turpis est, ut, si ridere concessum sit, utiuperetur tamen cachinnatio. eodem enim 20 uitio est ecfusio animi in laetitia, quo in dolore contractio, eademque leuitate cupiditas est in appetendo, qua laetitia in fruendo, et, ut nimis adflicti molestia, sic nimis elati laetitia iure iudicantur leues; et, cum inuidere aegritudinis sit, malis autem alienis uoluptatem capere laetitiae, utrumque inmanitate et feritate quadam 25 proponenda castigari solet; atque, ut prouidere decet, timere non

18. potiundis R16717 V B12 K12 E1 W12 M1 DC O12.

potiundus G dus in dis alt. man. mut. potiendis P. potiendis B3 S E2
 M2 II O3 ed. H. pociēdis O7. || exultans R V G B K S E.
 19. cachinnatio R V. chachinnatio G B E. || eodem enim uitio R12 10 16
 V P G B1-3 K1 E12 L26 W12. in eodem uitio C. 20. ecfusio R V G. h,ecfusio K1 at h, atr. nigriore script. hec fusio D. hec fusio E.

h'fusio C. et fusio B2. effusio B1 eod. ut uid. atr. effusio P B3 S W1 M12 J O1-37. 21. appetendo R V G h. l. B K S E. 22. afflicti R67 B3 E2 W1 M12 D C II O237. afflicti E3. afflictio S eod. atr. afflictio P1. adflicto R V G K ed. H. afflictio R17 B12 E1 O1.
 afflictio W2. afflicto J. || molestia R167 V P G B1-3 K1 S E W12
 M12 D C II J O237. molesta R17 O1 ed. H. || animis B1 alio atr. puncto adpos. animis R G B2 K1 E1. animis V. animi S litt. post
mi eras. animi R6 K2 E2 M12 D C II O1-3. ai R717 P B3
 J O7. || iure iudicantur R P G B3 K1 W1 M12 C II J. iudicare iudicantur B2. iure dicantur V S. 24. immanitate R V G B K S. inmanitate E1. 25. confidere decet R16717 V P G B1-3 K12 S E1-3 L2-6 W12 M12 D C II J O1-3 ed. H. uirtus fidei decet O7. prouidere corr. Tregder.

cetera : for the asyndeton cf. iii 34, 81; Off. iii 10, 43 'honores, diuitiae, voluptates, cetera generis eiusdem.'

gestiens, 'impatient,' 'restless': for a good ex. of the force of the word cf. Plaut. Mil. Glor. 1214 'Py. at gestio; PA. at modice decet : moderare animo.'

eodem...uitio : abl. of descr. as eadem leuitate below; Ern. inserted in, unnecessarily; for though Cic. uses elsewhere the phrase in uitio esse (iii 9, 19; Fin. v 11, 31) there is no reason why uitium, any more than leuitas, should not be used as an abl. of description.

ecfusio ... contractio = διάχυσις, σπ-σολή: Mo. compares Lael. 13, 48 'ut et bonis amici quasi diffundatur et incommodis contrahatur': see n. on 6, 14 above, and Plat. Symp. p. 206 D quoted by Küh. Cf. also Seneca, de Const. 9, 3 'ad offensiones rerum hominumque non contrahitur.'

adflicti molestia : is contrasted with elati laetitia in meaning and corresponds to it in construction; to both classes of persons the word leues is applied, as leuitas in Off. i 26, 90 'nam ut aduersas res sic secundas inmoderate ferre leuitatis est': 'notent tirones,' says Ern. (Clav. Cic. s.v. leuitas), 'leuitatem tribui omnibus uehementibus et inanibus cupiditatibus et perturbationibus animi quod in his nulla est constantia, nulla grauitas; unde etiam leues dicuntur, qui iis dediti sunt.' Bentley's corr. molles adopted by Bouh. Dav. F. A. W. Or. neglects this meaning of leues and spoils the symmetry of the clause.

proponenda : instr. abl. 'by setting forth their barbarous and (one may say) savage nature'; quadam modifies the preceding word. For the constr. cf. i 30, 72 n. and Draeger, Syntax ii § 799, 2.

castigari : iii 27, 64 n.

prouidere, Tregder's conj. for the MSS confidere, has been accepted by Wes. Ba. Sff. Küh. T. S. Sch. and undoubtedly supplies the meaning required by the argument, which turns entirely upon the distinction between permissible and non-permissible feelings of an analogous nature, and between the permissible and non-permissible expressions of such mental states; thus ridere is allowable, cachinnatio is not; gaudere is allowable, laetari is not; but confidere is not analogous in the same way to timere, whereas prouidere decet, sic gaudere decet, laetari non decet, quoniam docendi causa a gaudio laetitiam distinguimus; 67 illud iam supra diximus, contractionem animi recte fieri numquam posse, elationem posse. aliter enim Naeuianus ille gaudet Hector:

30 Laétus sum laudári me abs te, páter, a laudató uero,
aliter ille apud Trabeam :

Léna deleníta argento nútum obseruabít meum, Quíd uelim, quid stúdeam; adueniens dígito inpellam iánuam,
35 Fóres patebunt; de ínprouiso Chrýsis ubi me aspéxerit,

§ 67, 28. contractionem G M I D O I 2. contractionē B I 3 S W I 2 J. contractionē V linea supra e atr. uiridi ducta. contractione R B 2 K I E I 2 M 2 O 3. curationem O 7. 29. hector B. haector G. hetor E.
30. a laudato R I 6 I O V P G B I - 3 K I E I 2 W I 2 M 2 D C H J O I - 3 7. laudato M I a om. patria laudato R 7. 33. delenita R V P G K E I 2 Gr.

delinita R 6 7 B I 3 W I M I 2 D C H J O I - 3. delenita S. de lenitate B 2. declinata O 7. 36. inprouiso R V G K E. inprouiso B S. || chrysis R G K.
chris B 2 S. crisis E I. chysis V. || aspexerit R V G B I 2 K S E D O I.

is, the exercise of the εὐλογος ἔκκλησις which is analogous to, but distinct from, fear. Dav.'s conj. cauere adopted by F. A. W. Or. Ml. Hasper, Hei. gives a similar sense and Dav. has no difficulty in proving from 6, 13 above, Sen. Epp. 85 and Aug. C. D. xiv 8 that cautio was a term in recognised use in this sense; but it is hard to see how cauere could have been corrupted into confidere. Lamb. followed by Bentley read diffidere, but the passage quoted by Dav. from Stobaeus (Ecl. p. 183 (II 6, II)) τοῦτοις δ' ἀκολούθως οὐκ ἀπιστεῖν [sc. τὸν σοφόν], τὴν γὰρ ἀπιστίαν εἶναι ψεύδους ὑπόληψιν, τὴν δὲ πίστιν ἀστέιον ὑπάρχειν, εἶναι γὰρ κατάληψιν ἰσχυρὰν βεβαιούσαν τὸ ὑπολαμβάνομενον seems decisive against it. Kl. and Mo. defend the MSS reading, on the ground that Cic. is merely concerned to emphasise the broad distinction between the unruffled placidity of the sapiens and the various morbid emotions (and the expression of them) characteristic of the insipiens, without going too closely into subtle details; and it must be admitted that Cic. is not always so careful of his philosophical vocabulary as to make us absolutely certain that he cannot have expressed himself loosely here.

The corruption, if such it be, is as old as Nonius Marcellus who quotes (de diff. s.v. laetari p. 444 M.) our passage with the reading confidere; Müller in his edn. of Non. Marc. (ii p. 35) suggests that non confidere should be read here.

gaudere: the distinction between gaudere and laetari seems to be observed in Lucan vi 792 and 795.

§ 67. supra: in 6, 14. Cicero's point is that the approach of bonum induces in the mind of the sapiens a feeling of elation which is placida atque constans; whereas the approach of imagined evil, which in the case of the insipiens causes aegritudo, leaves the mind of the sapiens, to whom no external event is an evil, absolutely unmoved.

Naeuianus, 'in Naevius,' cf. iii 26, 62 'Accianus.'

Hector: in the Hector proficiscens, Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. P. Rell. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 8; the line is quoted again by Cic. Fam. v 12, 7; xv 6, 1 and in Sen. Epp. 102, 16.

ille, 'the character in Trabea': the name of the comedy is unknown: the lines are to be found in Ribbeck, op. cit. 11<sup>2</sup> p. 31 and form the largest extant fig. of Trabea. For another quotation from Trabea see 15, 35. These and the preceding lines are trochaic tetrameters catalectic.

digito: Küh. compares Ter. Eun. ii 2, 53 (284) 'uno digitulo foris aperis.'

fores: Bent. followed by Dav. wished to read 'foris (fori)' patebit' here metri

Álacris ob uiam mihi ueniet cóplexum exoptans meum,

40 Míhi se dedet.

quam haec pulchra putet, ipse iam dicet:

Fórtunam ipsam anteibo fortunís meis.

XXXII. 68. Haec laetitia quam turpis sit, satis est diligenter attendentem penitus uidere. et ut turpes sunt, qui eferunt se laetitia tum cum fruuntur Veneriis uoluptatibus, sic flagitiosi, qui eas inflammato animo concupiscunt. totus uero iste, qui uolgo appellatur amor (nec hercule inuenio quo nomine alio possit appellari), tantae leuitatis est ut nihil uideam quod putem conferendum. quem Caecilius

38. complexum R V G B K S. cóplexū P. 40. se dedet R G B I 2

E W 2 M 2 J O 1. se dedit K 1. sedet V D. se <sup>dedet</sup> S cum ras. sed debet M 1. se deceret O 3.

XXXII. § 68, 1. haec laetitia. . . . effe habet V margin. atr. uiridi adscr. e cont. om.; in cont. rüt se, at atr. uiridi scr. 2. attendentem G. adtendentem K. || eferunt B. hecferunt K 1. hęc ferunt P E. haec ferunt G. h<sup>c</sup> ferunt B 2. hec fēr P margin. ef. efferunt R at ef in ras. B 3 S W 2 M 1 2 D J. 3. ueneriis R V G ex correct. alt. fort. man. B K S E M 2 D C J. ueneris R 6 P E 2 W 2 II O 1-3 7. ueneris W 1 at e ante i mut. ueneris

B 2 3 M 1. 5. uolgo R V G B K. uulgo E al. atr. superscr. uulgo S. || appellatur R G B K S E. appellatur V. uocatur J. || hercule R V G K S E. 6. appellari R V G B K S E.

gratia; the second syllable in the line, it is true, must be short, but the law of breuis breuians accounts for the scansion of fores as a pyrrhic.

Fortunam...meis is the completion of the line beginning 'mihi se dedet.' For the play upon words Küh. compares Cornif. ad Herenn. iv 17, 24; p. Sull. 21, 62 'cum comoda colonorum a fortunis Pompeianorum rei publicae fortuna disiunxerit.'

XXXII. § 68. satis...uidere: i.e. 'satis est diligenter attendere ut penitus quis uideat,' an easily intelligible brachylogy. Bent. followed by Dav. and Ern. altered satis to facile. For attendentem, referring to an indefinite subject, cf. 31, 66 n. on 'sequentem.'

Veneriis: for the spelling see Neue, Formenlehre 1<sup>3</sup> pp. 160, 188.

flagitiosi, 'scandalous'; see note on flagitio in 33, 70.

amor: Latin has only one word to translate the two Gk words, φιλία and ἔρως, the former denoting 'friendship,' 'affection,' the latter 'passion'; in 33, 70 Cic. uses 'amor amicitiae' as a translation of φιλία. The distinction between ἔρως and φιλία is observed by Maximus Tyrius xviii 3 (ed. Hobein) πράγμα διττὸν κτλ. while Dio Chrysostom iv 168 R. uses them together in a good sense.

An echo of the Stoic distinction and of Cicero's phraseology is to be found in St Thomas Aquinas, Summa Theol. Sect. Sec. Quaest. xxvi fin. who distinguishes amor amicitiae from amor concupiscentiae.

Caecilius: iii 23, 56 n. The lines in the text are obviously an adaptation of the fragment of Euripides' Auge (Nauck, frag. 269) quoted by Stobaeus, Floril. 63, 11 (p. 387)

Ἔρωτα δ' ὅστις μὴ θεὸν κρίνει μέγαν καὶ τῶν ἀπάντων δαιμόνων ὑπέρατον ἢ σκαίος ἐστὶν ἢ καλῶν ἀπειρος ὦν οὐκ οἶδε τὸν μέγιστον ἀνθρώποις θεόν.

Dav. conjectured that Menander, who constantly imitated Eur. (Quint. x 1 69), may have taken over these lines into his Συναριστώσαι and that Cic. quotes the lines in the text from a translation of this comedy by Caecilius. A fragment of Caecilius' Synaristosae has been preserved by Aul. Gell. xv 15, 2. Ribbeck, however, while he notes the similarity between the present passage and a known fragment ‘déum qui non summúm putet,

Aut stúltum aut rerum esse ínperítum’ existimat,

10 ‘Cui ín manu sit, quem ésse dementém uelit,

Quem sápere, quem sanári, quem in morbum ínici,

Quem cóntra amari, quem éxpeti, quem arcéssier.’

69. o praeclaram emendatricem uitae poëticam! quae amorem flagitii et leuitatis auctorem in concilio deorum conlocandum

9. imperítum R V K. imperium G alt. man. superscr. || existumet R V G K. existimat M I ed. H. existimet R 6 7 17 P B 1-3 K 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 2 D C H J O 1-3 7. 10. cui R V P G B 1-3 K S E 1 2 W 1 2

M 1 2 J O 1 3. cuius D C. cū O 7. quia illi O 2. || demente<sup>m</sup> V atr. uiridi superscr. demente R G. 11. insanire K I atr. nigriore corr. insanire R I 2 6 7 10 V P G B 1-3 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 3 7. sanari corr. Manutius. || ínici R V P G B 1-3 K E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1 3. iniici S W 1. 12. quem R V P G K. quam B E. || accersiri

R 1 2 10 G B K Gr. S marg. accersiri. accersiri V al. atr. superscr. accersiri R 6 P B 2 3 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1 3. accersiri R 1 7. accessiri R 1 6 E 1. accersiri O 7 *fuera*t accersiri. accersiri O 2. accersier corr. Erasmus.

§ 69, 13. amorem M 1. amorē M 2 B at linea atr. nigriore duct. amore R V G. amoref K I f ex parte eras. 14. flagitii R V G B K S E D. || concilio R V G B E. consilio S. || conlocandum R V B K E G ex corr. *alt. man., fuera*t ut uid. conlocari dum. collocandum S.

of Menander’s Συναριστώσαι (ἔρως δὲ τῶν θεῶν | ἰσχὺν ἔχων πλείστην ἐπὶ τοῦτον δέικνυται | διὰ τοῦτον ἐπιορκῶσι τοὺς ἄλλους θεοῦς) does not think the evidence sufficient to warrant him in placing it among the frgg. of Caecilius’ Synaristosae (op. cit. II<sup>2</sup> pp. 68, 76).

existimat: the subject is Caecilius: no doubt the word here in the play was existimo.

cui: Ern. followed by F.A.W. and Ba. reads here cuius which must be scanned as a monosyllable. The change on metrical (or any other) grounds is unnecessary as cui can be scanned as a dissyllable with elision of the second syllable.

sanari: Manutius’ emendation, adopted by Lamb. Bent. Dav. Or. and all recent edd. (except Küh.) for the MSS insanire which, as Bent. shows, introduces confusion into the enumeration: dementem esse is answered by sapere, and sanari by in morbum ínici; the scribe thought that sapere should be followed by its opposite and wrote insanire.

Bentley saw that after this line one had been lost, as is shown by contra in the last line. He supplied the lacuna with ‘quem odio esse, quem contemni, quem excludi foras.’

§ 69. praeclaram: ironical, as in i 21, 49; Lael. 13, 47 ‘o praeclaram sapientiam: solem enim e mundo tollere uidentur, qui amicitiam e uita tollunt.’

emendatricem uitae: cf. ii 11, 27; iii 2, 3 for similar complaints about the poets. Xenophanes was, it seems, the first to set the fashion in this; cf. his lines quoted by Sext. Emp. Math. ix 193 πάντα θεοῖς ἀνέθηκαν “Ομηροῦ θ’ Ἡσιόδου τε | ὕσσα παρ’ ἀνθρώποισιν ὄνειδα καὶ ψόγος ἐστίν | κλέπτει μοιχεύειν τε καὶ ἀλλήλους ἀπατεύειν. Plato’s outburst in the third book of the Republic is well known. It was the attempt to save the poets (and especially Homer) from the charge of teaching immorality that gave rise to the allegoric system of interpretation, which the Stoics seem to have largely adopted in their attempt to fit their theology on to the framework of popular religion. On this question, cf. Decharme, La Critique des traditions religieuses chez les Grecs, pp. 270 ff.

Cicero here, of course, as the following words show, is referring especially to the later Greek poetry, principally comedy, and its imitations in Roman literature, which no ingenuity could defend against his criticism.

in concilio deorum, ‘amongst the num-

15 putet. de comoedia loquor, quae, si haec flagitia non probaremus, nulla esset omnino; quid ait ex tragoedia princeps ille Argonautarum?

Tú me amoris mágis quam honoris séruauisti grátia.

20 quid ergo? hic amor Medeae quanta miseriarum excitauit incendia! atque ea tamen apud alium poëtam patri dicere audet se 'coniugem' habuisse

Illum, Amor quem déderat, qui plus póllet potiorque ést patre.

XXXIII. 70. Sed poëtas ludere sinamus, quorum fabulis in hoc flagitio uersari ipsum uidemus Iouem. ad magistros uirtutis philosophos ueniamus, qui amorem negant stupri esse et in eo 15. nos probaremus R G K S margin. non.

probaremus B non om.

16. ait R I 16 V G K S. <sup>†ait</sup> aut B. aut R 2 10 E. 17. argonautarū V at rū in ras.: post argonautarum habet S in margin. iason man. ant. script.
18. seruasti R V G B 1-3 K S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 2 D C II J O 237
ed. H. seruastri O I. seruauisti ed. Cratand. 21. audet sed V B. audet sed R G K.

XXXIII. § 70, 2. at in ad alt. man. corr. G.

ber of the gods'; for this use of concilio cf. Plaut. Mil. Gl. 249 'sed si ambas uidere in uno miles concilio uolet.'

loquor: for the expression cf. i 15, 34 'loquor de principibus; quid? poetae nonne post mortem nobilitari uolunt?' Fin. v 11, 33.

non: Bentley with some inferior MSS read nos here and altered si above to nési: this would lay an emphasis upon nos 'their readers' or 'their hearers' as distinguished from 'the authors' (poetae) which the context will not bear.

ex tragoedia, 'in tragedy'; the quotation is from Ennius' play Medea exul (Ribbeck, op. cit. 1<sup>2</sup>, p. 49). Jason's words in Euripides are (Med. 530) ὡς ἔρωσ σ' ἠνάγκασε | τόξοις ἀφύκτοις τοῦ μὲν ἐκσῶσαι δέμας.

quid ergo? generally followed (as quid igitur in i 25, 61) by another question, cf. Ac. i 4, 13; ii 29, 92 'quid ergo? istius uiti num nostra culpa est?' Off. iii 18, 73; Fin. v 26, 76, etc.: in Or. ii 14, 60 as here there is no question following.

alium poëtam: Accius, who wrote a Medea, and Pacuuius, who dealt with the story in his Medus, have been suggested. Ribbeck (op. cit. 1<sup>2</sup> 261) classes the fragment among the incerta.

illum...patre: a trochaic tetrameter catalectic.

XXXIII. § 70. sed poetas: so according to the Epicurean Velleius the poets 'ipsa suauitate nocuerunt, qui et ira inflammatis et libidine furentes induxerunt deos,' Cic. N.D. i 16, 42.

ludere, 'to wanton': the word seems here to combine the amatory implication found, e.g. in Ovid (A.A. i 91, ii 389) with the idea of poetic trifling (e.g. Cat. 50, 2 multum lusimus in meis tabellis).

fabulis=μύθοις; had 'dramas' been meant in fabulis would have been required.

flagitio: the original meaning of this word is 'shame,' 'disgrace' (Plaut. Poen. 965, Trin. 1035); the meaning 'disgraceful conduct' is one which arose later and was perhaps developed from phrases like flagitium facere 'to bring disgrace upon'; the adj. flagitiosus always has the meaning 'shameful' 'disgraceful.' See Usener's exhaustive discussion in Rhein. Mus. LVI (1901), pp. 1 ff.

stupri, 'say that love is not a matter of sensuality,' for the gen. cf. Madv. Gr. § 282. This was the Stoic view, reported by Diog. Laert. vii 130, τὸν ἔρωτα...μη εἶναι συνουσίας ἀλλὰ φιλίας.

litigant cum Epicuro non multum, ut opinio mea fert, mentiente.
 5 quis est enim iste amor amicitiae? cur neque deformem adulescentem quisquam amat neque formosum senem? mihi quidem haec in Graecorum gymnasiis nata consuetudo uidetur, in quibus isti liberi et concessi sunt amores. bene ergo Ennius:

Flágiti princípium est nudare ínter ciuiis córpora.
 10 qui ut sint, quod fieri posse uideo, pudici, solliciti tamen et anxii sunt, eoque magis quod se ipsi continent et coërcent.

5. adulescentem R V B 2 K. adulestem G. adolescentem P B 1 S E.
 7. gymnasiis R V G B. gynnasiis S. gmgnasiis E. 9. flagiti E 1. flagiti K 1 atr. nigriore corr. flagiti R V G B 1 2 S E 2 3 D. || ciuis V B K E.
 ciuis R e super i eod. atr. ciues G S. 11. coercent R V G K. cohercent R 2 10 16 P B.

Epicuro : cf. Hermias in Plat. Phaedr. p. 76 [Usener, Epicurea 483] οἱ μὲν γὰρ ὑπέλαβον ἀπλῶς φαῖλον τὸ ἐρᾶν ὡς Ἐπικουροὺς ὀριάμενος αὐτὸν σύντονον ὄρεξιν ἀφροδισίων μετὰ οἴστρου καὶ ἀδημονίας; the same definition is also quoted from Epic. by Alexander Aphrod. and Dionysius Thrax [Usener, l.c.].

amor amicitiae, i.e. φίλα; the genitive is like that in nomen uirtutis, uirtus continentiae and similar phrases, Madv. Gr. § 286.

cur neque...senem : the sneer as Dav. notes is repeated in [Lucian] Amores 23 ψυχῆς γὰρ ἔρωτα πλάττονται καὶ τὸ τοῦ σώματος εὐμορφον αἰδοῦμενοι φιλεῖν, ἀρετῆς καλοῦσιν αὐτοὺς ἐραστάς...τί γὰρ παθόντες ὡς σεμοὶ φίλοσοφοὶ τὸ μὲν ἦδη μακρῷ χρόνῳ δεδωκὸς ἐαυτοῦ πείραν ὀπιόν ἔστιν, ᾧ πολὺὰ προσήκουσα καὶ γῆρας ἀρετὴν μαρτυρεῖ, δι' ὀλιγωρίας παραπέμπετε, πᾶς δὲ ὁ σοφὸς ἔρωσ ἐπὶ τὸ νέον ἐπτόηται;

The Stoics had themselves with characteristic candour noted the apparent inconsistency; Plut. de Comm. not. c. 28 quotes them as saying αἰσχροῦς μὲν γὰρ εἶναι τοὺς νέους, φαῖλους γ' ὄντας καὶ ἀνοήτους, καλοὺς δὲ τοὺς σοφοὺς ἑκείνων δὲ τῶν καλῶν μηδὲνα μὴτ' ἐρᾶσθαι μὴτ' ἀξίεραστον εἶναι. We may infer their explanation from other passages; Diog. Laert. vii 129 quotes Zeno and Chrysippus for the statement ἐρασθήσασθαι δὲ τὸν σοφὸν τῶν νέων τῶν ἐμφαινόντων διὰ τοῦ εἶδους τὴν πρὸς ἀρετὴν εὐφύιαν. This σπουδαῖος ἔρωσ then inferring mental capability for virtue from physical charm (εἶναι δὲ καὶ τὴν ὥραν ἄνθος ἀρετῆς) was attracted to nascent ἀρετῇ with the desire at once to associate with it and to perfect it; as Stobaeus (Ecl. ii 65) puts it the Stoics παραλαμβάνουσιν εἰς τὰς ἀρετάς (τὴν ἐρωτικὴν) considering it to be ἐπιστή-μην νέων θήρας εὐφύων προτρεπτικὴν οὖσαν ἐπὶ τὴν κατ' ἀρετὴν; and Plut. (l.c.) θήρα γὰρ τις, φασίν, ἐστὶν ὁ ἔρωσ, ἀτελοῦς μὲν, εὐφύους δὲ μεираκίου πρὸς ἀρετὴν. In the case of the perfected or nearly perfected σοφοὶ the ἐμφασίς κάλλους does not exist to furnish the occasion, nor the imperfection to furnish the object, for ἔρωσ.

in Graecorum gymnasiis : edd. refer to de Rep. iv 4, 4, Corn. Nep. praef. § 4. See Girard, L'Éducation Athénienne, pp. 40 f. According to Thuc. (i 6) the practice of exercising in a state of nudity was introduced at Olympia shortly before his time and was an invention of the Lacedaemonians: the Schol. to Iliad xxiii 683 says the practice was due to a competitor's περίζωμα becoming loose and tripping him up. It flattered the Roman national pride to assume that their virtues were their own and their vices imported from abroad: so Salvian (de Gub. Dei vii 20, 88) speaking of the uiri molles of Carthage describes them as 'Graecis quam Romanis similiores'; Lucan vii 270 ff.

isti, i.e. adulescentium, cf. for instances of the fact Plut. Demetr. 24; Xen. Eph. iii 2; Parthenius, Erot. c. 7 ad inii.

Ennius : it is not certain from what work of Ennius the quotation is taken; Ribbeck (op. cit. 1<sup>2</sup>, 70) puts it among the uncertain fragments from the tragedies. The line is a trochaic tetrameter catalectic. For the sentiment cf. Off. i 35, 129 scaenicorum quidem more tantam habet uetere disciplina uerecundiam ut in scaenam sine subligaculo prodeat nemo; uerentur enim ne si quo casu euenerit ut corporis partes quaedam aperiantur, aspiciantur non decore. nostro quidem more cum parentibus puberes filii, cum soceris generi non lauuntur. Plut. Cato, c. 20

71. atque, ut muliebris amores omittam, quibus maiorem licentiam natura concessit, quis aut de Ganymedi raptu dubitat quid poëtae uelint, aut non intellegit quid apud Euripidem et loquatur et 15 cupiat Laius? quid denique homines doctissimi et summi poëtae de se ipsis et carminibus edunt et cantibus? fortis uir in sua re publica cognitus quae de iuuenum amore scribit Alcaeus! nam Anacreontis quidem tota poësis est amatoria. maxime uero omnium flagrasse amore Reginum Ibycum ap-20 paret ex scriptis.

XXXIV. Atque horum omnium libidinosos esse amores uidemus. philosophi sumus exorti, et auctore quidem nostro Platone, quem non iniuria Dicaearchus accusat, qui amori auc-

§ 71, 12. adque K. || muliebris R V B 1 K E. muliebris G is ex es ead. man. corr. muliebres B 2 S. 13. ganymedi R. nymedi G<sup>ga</sup>
 alt. man. superscr. ganumedi K. ganymedi E 1. ganymedi† B 1 atr. nigr. superscr. ganymedis V B 3 M 2 O 1. ganymedis S i in y al. atr. mut. ganymedis P B 2 K 2 W 1 2 D J O 3 ed. H. ganymedi M 1. ganymedis II r inter g et a eras. 14. euripidem R G B 1-3 K S. euripidē P E J. euripidem V. 15. quidenique G ead. man. superscr. 16. edunt M 1. edant R 1 6 7 17 V G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2 4-6 W 2 M 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed. H. edeant L 3. edant W 1. 17. scribit R 1 7 17 G B 1 2
 K 1 2 E 1 3 W 1 2 M 1 D C J O 2. scripsit R 6 P B 3 S E 2 M 2
 II O 3 ed. H. scripsit O 7. 19. maxime R V G B K. maxime S E. || reginum R V P G B 1 3 K S E W 1 2 M 2 D C J O 1 2. reginā II.
 regnū B 2. regium O 3. om. M 1. || ibycum R G K. ibycum V.
 hbycum O 1. ibicum B 1 3 W 1 D C. ybicum W 2 J. ibi cum B 2 S
 E 1 O 3. Ibicum II fuerat ibi cum. ibi O 2. || apparet R V G B K E.
 XXXIV. 1. libidinosos R V G B K J. libidinosos B 2 W 1. 3. accusat G.

φῆσιν...τὰ αἰσχρὰ τῶν ῥημάτων...ἐλαβ-εῖσθαι τοῦ παιδὸς παρόντος...συλλοῦσασθαι δὲ μηδέποτε· καὶ τοῦτο κοινὸν εἶκοι· Ῥωμαίων ἔθος εἶναι.

qui, i.e. amantes to be supplied out of amores above.

§ 71. muliebris, i.e. mulierum. For the adj. taking the place of an objective genitive cf. Nägelsbach, Stil. § 20, 3 (a) and exx. quoted there.

Ganymedi: for the form cf. Vlixii i 41, 98 and Neue, Formenlehre 13, pp. 508 ff.

Euripidem: apparently in his Chrysiptus which dealt with the relationship of Laius and Chrysiptus, the son of Pelops; cf. Aelian V.H. xiii 5 ἐρασθῆναι πρῶτον γενναίων παιδικῶν λέγουσι Λάϊον ἀρπάζαντα Χρῦσιππον τὸν Πέλοπος.

carminibus ... cantibus, 'poems ... songs'; for the distinction cf. 2, 3 'ex quo perspicuum est et cantus tum fuisse descriptio uocum sonis et carmina.'

Alcaeus of Mitylene in Lesbos flourished at the beginning of the sixth century B.C.

Cf. Quint. x 1, 63 'Alcaeus in parte operis aureo plectro merito donatur...sed et lusit et in amores descendit, maioribus tamen aptior.'

nam...quidem: 23, 52 n.

Anacreontis: Anacreon of Teos lived through nearly the whole of the sixth century B.C. The poems in the Anthologia Graeca which bear his name are later forgeries, and his works, divided by the Alexandrian critics into five books, are extant only in fragments.

Ibycum. Ibycus of Rhegium flor. c. 544 B.C.: Suidas (s.v. Ἴβυκος) γέγονε δὲ ἐρωτομανέστατος περὶ μεῖράκια. He wrote in the Doric dialect and his poems were divided into seven books, of which only fragments are extant.

XXXIV. Atque marks the transition to a fresh point in the argument, the contrast between the actual facts with regard to amor, and the auctoritas with which philosophers had invested it.

Platone: Cic. is referring probably to passages like Symposium 210 A, Phaedrus toritatem tribueremus. 72. Stoici uero et sapientem amaturum 5 esse dicunt et amorem ipsum ‘conatum amicitiae faciundae ex pulchritudinis specie’ definiunt. qui si quis est in rerum natura sine sollicitudine, sine desiderio, sine cura, sine suspirio, sit sane; uacat enim omni libidine; haec autem de libidine oratio est. sin autem est aliquis amor, ut est certe, qui nihil absit aut non mul-10 tum ab insania, qualis in Leucadia est:

Sí quidem sit quisquám deus,

Cui égo sim curae.

73. at id erat deis omnibus curandum, quem ad modum hic frueretur uoluptate amatoria!

15 Heu me ínfelicem!
 nihil uerius. probe et ille:

§ 72, 5. faciundae R 6 M 2. faciunde B 3 J O 1. faciundae G E 1 O 2. faciendę R V P B 1 W 1 O 3. faciende R 7 17 B 2 K 1 S E 2 M 1

D C II O 7 ed. H. <sup>de</sup> faci K 2. facande W 2. 6. qui si quis R G K. quinquis V. 8. libidine (bis) R V G B K. lubidine J. 12. cui R V P G
 B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed. H.

§ 73, 13. at id R P G B 3 K 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D J O 1 3. ad id V B 2. aditerat E 1. || deis B 3 M 2 O 2. de is litt. ante i eras. V B. dehis R P E 1.
 de his G B 2 K 1 S E 2 W 2 J O 1 7. de hiis K 2 D II. diis W 1 M 1.

14. frueretur R G K alii. <sup>r</sup> frueretur V atr. uiridi superscr.

251 A, and to gossip such as is reported by Diog. Laert. iii 29 who quotes several epigrams ascribed to Plato. Christian controversialists like Tertullian (de An. 54) eagerly repeated the charges. It may be sufficient to quote on the other side the frank acknowledgment of S. Augustine (C. D. ii 14) that in Plato's life ‘no base deed’ could be found.

Nothing is known, except from the reference here, of Dicaearchus' contribution to the indictment of Plato.

§ 72. Stoici: see the passage from Diog. Laert. quoted above.

conatum: Diog. Laert. l. c. εἶναι δὲ τὸν ἔρωτα ἐπιβολὴν φιλοποίας διὰ κάλλος ἐμφαινόμενον.

qui: sc. amor.

in rerum natura, ‘in actual fact’ as opposed to philosophic theory, cf. v 1, 4 ‘nos autem... rerum naturam quam errorem nostrum damnare malumus’; v 37, 107.

sine sollicitudine: Plato applies even to his ideal passion for beauty such phrases as ἀδημονεῖ τε τῇ ἀσπίδι τοῦ πάθους καὶ ἀποροῦσα λυττᾶ καὶ ἐμμανῆς οὐσα οὔτε νυκτὸς δύναται καθεῦθεν οὔτε μεθ’ ἡμέραν οὐδ’ ἂν ἦ μένειν, Phaedr. 251 D.

sin autem: the apodosis (e.g. plane reiciendus est) is omitted after the parenthesis of quotations which occupy the rest of the §. For the anacoluthon cf. 36, 77.

Leucadia, ‘The Maid of Leucas,’ a comedy by Sextus Turpilius, adapted from a comedy by Alexis (or Menander) with the same title. As Ribbeck (Gesch. der röm. Dicht. 1, p. 165) points out, the subject was a favourite with the writers of the Middle and New Comedy. The plot turned upon the hopeless passion inspired by an old man called Phaon to whom Aphrodite in return for a service had given an ointment which made all the women he met fall in love with him. The frgg. of Turpilius' comedy are collected in Ribbeck (Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. 11<sup>2</sup>, pp. 97 ff.); see also Servius on Aen. iii 279.

§ 73. at: ironical; for this use cf. Hand, Turs. 1, pp. 432 ff.

uerius: sc. quam quod dixisti te infelicem esse.

et ille, ‘the other character too makes a sound remark’; for et (= etiam) cf. iii 13, 28 ‘ex hoc et illa iure laudantur’: often in Cicero; Draeger, Syntax II § 312.

Sánusne es, qui témere lamentáre?
hic insanus uidetur etiam suis. at quas tragoedias efficit!

20 Te, Apóllo sancte, fér opem, teque, omnípotens Neptune, ínuoco,

Vosque ádeo, uenti!

mundum totum se ad amorem suum subleuandum conuersurum putat, Venerem unam excludit ut iniquam:

nam quíd ego te appellém, Venus?

25 eam prae libidine negat curare quicquam; quasi uero ipse non propter libidinem tanta flagitia et faciat et dicat.

XXXV. 74. Sic igitur adfecto haec adhibenda curatio est, 17. sanusne es R V P G B 3 K 1 2 S E 2 W 1 2 M 2 II J O 1-3 7.

<sup>res</sup>
sanusne est B. sanusne est B 2 E 1 M 1 D. insanusne est C. || lamentare
R V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 2 II O 1 2 7 ed. H. lamentare<sup>ris</sup>
B 3. lamentari D C. lamtāt M 1. laudare O 3. 18. sic insanus R V G
B 1-3. sicut insanus M 1 D. hic corr. Maduigiús. || at quas V P G.
adquas R K. || efficit W 1 M 2 O 1 7. fecit S. effecit R 1 6 7 17 P
B 1-3 K 1 2 E 1 3 W 2 M 1 D C J O 2 3 ed. H. <sup>ef</sup>affecit V atr. uiridi superscr. fecit II al. atr. suppl. feffecit G f ante ef expunx. alt. man.
fecit E 2. 19. et apollo R 1 10 V P B K 1 2 E 1-3 L 2-6 O 1 7. om. ed. H. et apollo sanctae G p post a et a ante e expunx. alt. man. te Apollo corr. edd. || teque V P K 2 E 2 W 1 O 1 7. tequea R G K. teque a B 1. teque ea E 1. 24. appellem V G K S. 25. libidine R G B K J. libidine V S E W 1. 26. libidinem R G B K J. libidinem V E W 1.
XXXV. § 74, 1. adfecto R V G K E. affecto B S.

hic, 'our friend'; hic is Madv.'s conjecture, adopted by nearly all recent edd. (except Küh.) for the mss. sic.

tragoedias: cf. Or. i 51, 219 'neque uero istis tragoediis tuis...perturbor,' ib. 53, 228; ii 51, 205. A similar use of τραγωδία is found in Gk. Hyperid. iii 26 (ed. Blass), ἐὰν δ' ἐπὶ τοῦ γεγενημένου ἔωμεν, τὰς τραγωδίας αὐτῆς καὶ τὰς κατηγορίας ἀφηρηκότες ἐσόμεθα.

Te, Apollo: an iambic tetrameter acatalectic.

sancte = ἀγνέ, a ritual epithet of Apollo. omnípotens: 'cum...omnipotens Iouis epitheton sit, non Neptuni, omnipotens uidetur restituendum esse, quae est optima huius dei propter potestatem eius in fluuios appellatio' Rossbach (Philol. LXIII N.F. p. 100), who is possibly right.

adeo, 'too': for this use Hei. quotes Enn. Medea 237 (Ribb.) 'Iuppiter, tuque adeo, summe Sol': cf. Hand, Tursell. I 145.

flagitia...dicat: 'is guilty of such improper conduct and language.' flagitium is used here in the later sense of 'improper act,' cf. Augustin. de doctr. christ. 3, 16 'quod autem agit indomita cupiditas ad corrumpendum animum et corpus suum, flagitium uocatur' (quoted by Usener, Rhein. Mus. LVI 5 n.). Mo. quotes also N.D. iii 38, 91 'utrum poetae Stoicos deprauarint an Stoici poetis dederint auctoritatem non facile dixerim; portenta enim ab utrisque et flagitia dicuntur.'

XXXV. § 74. haec...ut: Madv. Gr. § 374.

et: a second et might have been expected to follow, but the construction is changed, and instead of a clause et abducatur dependent upon ut we have abducendus etiam est. Or. proposed to get rid of the anacoluthon by reading ei, unnecessarily.

ut et illud quod cupiat ostendatur quam leue, quam contemnendum, quam nihili sit omnino, quam facile uel aliunde uel alio modo perfici uel omnino neglegi possit. abducendus etiam est non numquam ad alia studia, sollicitudines, curas, negotia, loci denique mutatione tamquam aegroti non conualescentes saepe curandus est; 75 etiam nouo quidam amore ueterem amorem

2. ut et illud R V P G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>1</sub> J O<sub>127</sub> ed. H. ut et id B<sub>3</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>3</sub>. et ut illud Π E<sub>2</sub>. ut et ostenda qm̄ leue sit illud C. ut et ostendat qm̄ leue sit illud D. || ostendatur E<sub>2</sub> M<sub>1</sub> Π. ostendat R<sub>16717</sub> V P G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>1</sub> W<sub>12</sub> D O<sub>137</sub>. ostenda C. || contemnendum R V. contēnēdum S p eras. contempnendum G. continendum E<sub>1</sub>. 3. nihili R G B K M<sub>1</sub>. nichili R<sub>7</sub> K<sub>2</sub> E<sub>2</sub> Π. nichili P. nihil R<sub>6</sub> V S M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>1-3</sub>. nichil R<sub>17</sub> B<sub>2</sub> C O<sub>7</sub>. quam nihili om. W<sub>12</sub> J. || uel aliunde uel R<sub>17</sub> V P B<sub>13</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D J O<sub>1-37</sub> ed. H. uell aliunde uel G uidetur fuisse uel habende uel: 1 ante a eras. et u superscr. ead. man. i ex corr. alterius man. uel aliunde et B<sub>2</sub>. om. C. 4. neglegi R V G B K E. neglegi S. || etiam est R V P G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>2</sub> II J O<sub>12</sub>. est etiam W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D C O<sub>7</sub>. etiam om. O<sub>3</sub>. 5. luci V. 6. aegroti non R V G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D C J O<sub>1-37</sub>. § 75, 7. quidam R<sub>17</sub> P G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>1</sub> D C. quidam V (sic). quidam M<sub>2</sub>. quidē E<sub>1</sub>. quidem O<sub>7</sub>. quidē E<sub>2</sub>. quid O<sub>2</sub>. quidē S marg. quodam. quodam R<sub>6</sub> K<sub>2</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>1</sub> J O<sub>13</sub>. quodē Π o alio ut uid. atr. mut.

cupiat: subj. because dependent upon another subj., ostendatur; Roby, § 1778.

ostendatur: this correction of Dav.'s (confirmed by three MSS.) has been accepted by most recent edd.; ostendat the reading of the majority of the MSS. is retained by Or. who supplies as subject is qui curaturus est implied in curatio; Bouh. with one MS. reads ostendas, comparing nolis and omittas in § 75.

uel aliunde uel alio modo, 'attained from some other quarter or in some other way.' There is no necessity either (with Hei.) to reject uel alio modo as a gloss or (with T.S.) to assume that adripi (cf. Or. i 59, 252) has dropped out after aliunde.

ad alia studia: Mo. compares Ov. de rem Am. 151 sqq. sunt fora, sunt leges, sunt quos tuearis amici: | uade per urbanae splendida castra togae. | uel tu sanguinei iuuenalia munera Martis | suscipe; deliciae iam tibi terga dabunt.

loci...mutatione: cf Sen. de Tranqu. 17, 8 'aliquando uectatio iterque et mutata regio uigorem dabunt.'

aegroti non conualescentes, 'patients who are not recovering their strength' (sc. by other methods of treatment). Ern. deleted non, referring to Celsus, de Med.

iv 32 (25) 'ex quocumque autem morbo quis conualescit, si tarde confirmatur... debet...loca, caelum, cibos saepe mutare.' Ern. took conualescere as equivalent to melius se habere coepisse as in N.D. ii 4, 12 'ne aegri quidem quia non omnes conualescunt, idcirco ars nulla medicinae est,' and if this were its only meaning we should have to follow him in deleting non; but the word can be used of the whole process of convalescence up to complete recovery, as is seen by the phrase of Celsus a few lines lower down 'cum uero ex toto conualuerit' and Sen. de Ira ii 19, 4 'senes difficiles et queruli sunt, ut aegri et conualescentes'; Cic. pro Sulla 27, 76 'ut...conualescere aliquando et sanari ciuitas posset'; Liv. v 5, 12 'qui curari se fortiter passus extemplo conualescere possit.' Bei. proposed modo in place of non, but no change is required.

§ 75. nouo...amore: Mo. quotes Nonnus, Dionys. xi 356 ἄλλω λῦσον ἔρωτι τεῶν σπινθῆρας ἐρώτων | ..... παλαιότεροιο γὰρ αἰεὶ | φάρμακόν ἐστιν ἔρωτος ἔρωσ νέος.

clauo clauum: the Gk form of the proverb is ἦλω τὸν ἦλον ἐκκρούειν οἱ πάτταλον πατᾶλω ἐκκρούειν. Cf. Arist.

tamquam clauo clauum eiciendum putant; maxime autem ad-monendus est quantus sit furor amoris. omnibus enim ex animi 10 perturbationibus est profecto nulla uehementior, ut, si iam ipsa illa accusare nolis, supra dico et corruptelas et adulteria, incesta denique, quorum omnium accusabilis est turpitude, — sed ut haec omittas, perturbatio ipsa mentis in amore foeda per se est.
 76. nam ut illa praeteream quae sunt furoris, haec ipsa per sese 15 quam habent leuitatem, quae uidentur esse mediocria,

Iniúriæ,

Suspiciones, inimicitiae, indútiæ,

Bellúm, pax rursum! incérta haec si tu póstules

Ratióne certa fácere, nihilo plús agas,

20 Quam sí des operam, ut cúm ratione insánias.

haec inconstantia mutabilitasque mentis quem non ipsa prauitate deterreat? est etiam illud, quod in omni perturbatione dicitur, demonstrandum, nullam esse nisi opinabilem, nisi iudicio susceptam, nisi uoluntariam. etenim si naturalis amor esset,

8. clauo R G B W I 2 alii. claua V. || eiciendum R I 6 7 17 V P G
 B I 3 K I 2 E I 2 W I 2 M I D C J O 7. eýciendum S i in ü mut. ||
 maxime R V G B K. maxime S E. || admonendus quantus R I 6 7 V P G
 B I -3 K I 2 S E I W I 2 M I 2 J O I -3 7. ammonendus quantus E 2

C II. amouendus quantus D. est inseruit Bailer. 12. ut hec comitas V
 atr. uiridi corr.

§ 76, 14. futurus K. || per sese G K. pesse V. 15. mediocra E I.
 mediocra G. 17. suspiciones R K S G at c in t alt. man. mut. suspiciones E.
 18. sit u B litt. post u eras. sit ut V. sit ut E. sit ut S. sit ut R G K.
 22. est enim illud R V P G B I -3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O I -3 7. etiam corr. Manutius.

Pol. viii 1314a, 5 και χρήσιμοι οι πονηροί εις τα πονηρά. ἤλω γὰρ ὁ ἦλος, ὡσπερ ἡ παροιμία.

ex: for ex in place of the partitive gen.
 cf. Nägelsbach, Stil. § 124, 5.

ut, si iam...per se est, another anacoluthon, again due to a parenthesis. Mo. thinks that ut can be taken here as equivalent to uelut, 'zum Beispiel.' For si iam = etiam si, cf. 31, 65.

corruptelas: cf. Lact. Inst. Diu. vi 19, 'utuntur libidine ad capiendas tantum uoluptates: hinc supra, hinc adulteria, hinc corruptelae omnes exstiterunt.'

accusabilis est, 'furnishes ground for accusation'; accusabilis is ἀπαξ εἰρημένον in Cicero: it is found again in Salvianus (de Gubern. Dei, viii 1, 3).

§ 76. furoris: 'which fall under the head of insanity'; the illa are supra, corruptelae and adulteria, which are only committed when the mind has fallen so much under the dominion of passion as to be no longer master of its own actions.

haec ipsa, 'even the following'; in this sense illa would be more usual than haec, but it has just been used in the sense of 'the former.'

iniuriæ: Ter. Eun. i 1, 14 sqq. Dav. compares Hor. Sat. ii 3, 260 sqq.

suspiciones: for the lengthening of the second syllable cf. Enn. 266, 281; Afran.
 317 (Ribbeck).

postules, 'expect': for this meaning cf. Plaut. Men. 443 'sed ego inscitus qui domino me postulem moderarier.'

ratione certa...cum ratione, 'on a fixed principle...with all your wits about you': cum ratione insanire is, as the Schol. Bemb. notes, an oxymoron.

est etiam introducing a further consideration: etiam is the conjecture of Manutius (adopted by Tr. Ba. Sf. T.S. etc.) for the mss enim, retained by Küh.

25 et amarent omnes et semper amarent et idem amarent, neque alium pudor, alium cogitatio, alium satietas deterreret.

XXXVI. 77. Ira uero, quae quam diu perturbat animum dubitationem insaniae non habet, cuius impulsu existit etiam inter fratres tale iurgium :

A. Quis homo te exsuperáuit usquam géntium 5 inpúdentia?

M. Quis áutem malitiá te?

nosti quae sequuntur; alternis enim uersibus intorquentur inter fratres grauissimae contumeliae, ut facile appareat Atrai filios esse, eius qui meditatur poenam in fratrem nouam:

25. Post et amarent omnes habent et amarentur et semper R 16 L 2 ed. H. et amarentur omnes et semper R 17. amarentur omnes et semper K 2. post amarent om. omnes L 5. 26. satietas R G B K. sacietas V.

XXXVI. § 77, 1. ira uero quae R V at ae in ras. G B K E 1 W 1 M 2 O 2 3. ira uero quae B 2 3 S E 2 M 1 D C II J O 1 7. ira uero q̄ P. ira uero q̄ W 2. 2. impulsu V G B 2 E. impulsu R P B K. || existit R V G B K S E. 4. exsuperauit R G B K E 2 M 2. || unquam R V P G K E 2 M 1 D ed. H. unquam B 1-3 K 2 S L 3-6 W 1 C II J O 1-3 7. unquam E 1 W 2. nūq̄ L 2. usquam corr. Bentleyius. 5. inpudentia R V G K E J. inprudencia B 2 S. impudentia B. 6. quis autem R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E L 2-6 M 2 C II J O 1-3 ed. H. quis autem E 2 W 1 M 1 D O 7. quis aut' R 17. quis aut R 6 7. quis at W 2. 7. sequuntur B 1 2 S W 1 2 M 1 D C II J alii.

secuntur R V P G B 3 K. 8. grauissimae R V G K. gratissimę E. gratissimę B. || appareat R V G B K E. 9. meditatur R G. mediat<sup>t</sup>ur V atr. uiridi superscr.

cogitatio, 'reflexion,' perhaps suggested by the context of the passage quoted from the Eunuchus, e.g. i 1, 19 'et quod nunc tute tecum iratus cogitas,' etc.

XXXVI. § 77. ira uero: another anacoluthon: the apodosis (deferred by the digression in this and the subsequent paragraph) would have been (as we see from the beginning of § 79) something like quomodo utilis esse dici potest?

Dav. following Lamb. and Man. avoided the anacoluthon by omitting quae, and he is followed by Tr. and Kl. Bntl. proposed in addition to change quam to cum.

dubitationem...habet: cf. i 49, 119 n.; Off. iii 2, 9; Fin. v 12, 34, and Nágelsbach, Stil. § 95, p. 257.

fratres: Agamemnon and Menelaus. The lines are assigned by Ribbeck (Scaen. Rom. Poes. Fragg. 1<sup>2</sup>, 41) to the Iphigenia of Ennius; earlier critics had assigned them to the Atrous of Accius; the metre is iambic octonarius.

usquam: Bentley's emendation for unquam of nearly all MSS; he compared Plaut. Poen. 825, Pseud. 98.

autem: Fleckeisen (followed by Küh. T.S. Sff. Hei.) proposed item, taking the metre to be trochaic tetrameter; but, as Ribbeck (op. cit. p. xxvii) points out, 'in responsis uel interrogatis uel exclamatis ubi quid augetur uel intenditur, sollemne est autem': he compares Plaut. Cas. 165; Pseud. 305; Amph. 901; Ter. Eun. 798; Hec. 817; Phorm. 775, etc.

intorquentur: cf. iii 26, 63 n. and Sil. Ital. Pun. xi 340 si uiso intorserit ense | diram, qua uertit per campos agmina, uocem.

fratrem: sc. 'Thyestem': the lines following are from the Atrous of Accius (Ribbeck, op. cit. 1<sup>2</sup>, p. 162) and are quoted again in Or. iii 58, 219 and de Nat. Deor. iii 26, 68: the metre is iambic trimeter.

10 Maiór mihi moles, máius miscendúmst malum, Qui illíus acerbum cór contundam et cónprimam.
quo igitur haec erumpit moles? audi Thyestem:

Ípsus hortatúr me frater, út meos malís miser Mánderem natós . . .

15 eorum uiscera apponit. quid est enim quo non progrediatur eodem ira, quo furor? itaque iratos proprie dicimus exisse de potestate, id est de consilio, de ratione, de mente; horum enim

10. miscendum malum R 1 6 7 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L 2-6
W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 2 3. miscendum est malum O 1. miscēdis malū
O 7. miscendumst malum corr. Wolfius. 11. cónprimam G. cōprimam R P B E. comprimam V K S. 12. quo R V P 1-6 G K 1 2 E 1 2 J O 3. que S at ē fuerat o ut uid. W 1. que II O 1. quae O 2. qui C. || haec R G K. hec V B E. hec O 1. h P. h' O 7. hae R 6 O 2. hee II O 3. heg R 10. he P 5 6 B 3 E 2 litt. post e eras. J ed. H. hec R 7 17 P 2 4 K 2 M 1. hic C. eg P 3 S at h eras., fuerat ut uid. hec. || erupit M 1 ed. H. erunt R 1 6 V P 3 4 5 G B K 1 2 S E 1 L 2-6 O 1 3 Urs. 3240. erūt R 7 P 6 B 2 3 W 2 M 2 J O 2. erut E 3.

erunt P 1. eruit P 2. eī R 1 7. erit W 1 D C O 7 Gr. ferunt E 2 II.
erumpit corr. Bentleius teste Dauisio. || thyestem R V G K. thiestem S E.
13. ipsum R 1 6 V G B K S L 3 W 1 M 2 D C O 1 3. ipsū P E II.
ipum E 3 L 4 6. ipm R 7 17 B 3 E 2 L 2 5 W 2 J O 2 7 ed. H. ipē B 2. istum K 2. 14. mandarem R 1 1 7 V P 4 G B K 1 2 E 1 2 M 1 D C J O 7.

manderem R 6 7 P 1 2 B 3 W 1 M 2 O 1-3. mandarem W 2. mandare S. mandere ed. H. maderem B 2. 15. uiscera B 1-3 E 2 3 W 1 M 1 2 D C O 2 3 7 ed. H. uiscerae V. uiscera O 1. uiscere R G K E W 2. ||

apponit R V G B K S E. || quo R G K. quo V atr. uiridi superscr.
16. eodem R 1 6 7 1 7 V P 3 G B 2 3 K 1 2 W 1 M 2 J O 1 2 ed. H. eo ē W 2 litt. post o eras. eorum P 1 2 4 B 1 S E 1 2 M 1 D C II O 3. eorūdē O 7.

moles: sc. mouenda out of miscendum; for the metaphor in the latter cf. Cat. iv 3, 6.

quo...erumpit, a correction of the MSS. attributed by Dav. to Bentley, though in Bentley's notae ineditae printed at the end of Dav.'s edition the word is erupit.

For erumpere cf. Q. Fr. i 2, § 2 'sentire potuit sermones iniquorum in suum potissimum nomen erumpere,' pro Mur. 38, 81 'omnia...in hos dies, in hos mensis, in hoc tempus erumpunt.' Lael. 21, 76 'erumpunt saepe uitia amicorum tum in ipsos amicos tum in alienos.'

ipsum hortatur: Ribbeck, op. cit 1<sup>2</sup>, p. 165: the lines are quoted again in Or. iii 58, 217, whence the correction ipsum here is derived.

manderem: this reading which has less MSS. support here than mandarem is read by the majority of MSS. in Or. l.c. and adopted by Ribb. who quotes Sen. Thyest. 779 'artusque mandit ore funesto suos': mandarem is supported by Lucr. ii 638 'ne Saturnus eum malis mandaret adeptus.'

uiscera, 'flesh,' cf. ii 7, 19 n. For other exx. cf. N.D. ii 6, 18 'terrenam ipsam uiscerum soliditatem'; Seru. ad Aen. i 211, iii 622 'uiscera proprie carnes sunt'; Lucan. vi 545, ix 1052; Salu. de Gub. Dei vi 2, 10; vii 1, 3 and (metaphorically) Amm. Marc. xxiv 4, 9 'miles uisceribus hostium pascebatur.'

quo: 'what length is there to which anger may not go, just as readily (lit. just as far) as madness': quo...eodem may be compared (with Mo.) to such expressions as quod idem Ac. ii 17, 52, Diu. i 45, 102; quam eandem Off. i 7, 20, quem eundem Lael. 18, 65.

Hand in a note to Wopkens, Lect. Tull. p. 143, explains quo as equivalent to quare; which, even were it supported by parallels, would give a poor sense. Bentl. proposed 'quid enim est quo n. p. ira? eo demum quo furor,' arriving at the same sense as the MSS. reading by an unnecessarily circuitous route.

exisse de potestate: cf. iii 5, 11 n.

horum: sc. consiliū, rationis, mentis.

potestas in totum animum esse debet. 78. his aut subtrahendi sunt ii in quos impetum conantur facere, dum se ipsi colligant 20 (quid est autem se ipsum colligere nisi dissipatas animi partis rursus in suum locum cogere?), aut rogandi orandique sunt ut, si quam habent ulciscendi uim, differant in tempus aliud, dum deferuescat ira. deferuescere autem certe significat ardorem animi inuita ratione excitatum. ex quo illud laudatur Archytae, 25 qui cum uilico factus esset iratior, 'Quo te modo,' inquit, 'accepissem, nisi iratus essem!'

XXXVII. 79. Vbi sunt ergo isti, qui iracundiam utilem

§ 78, 19. ei R V G B S E plerique. ii M 1 h. l. hi W 2 in ras. eis P. || impetum R V G B 1 2 K S E. || se ipsi B 1-3 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2
 D C J O 2. ipse ipsi V P. ipse ipsi R G K. se illi O 1. || colligant
 R V G h. l. B K E. colligant P S alii. 20. colligere R V G B K S E. || dissipatas V K. dissipatas G i ex u ead. man. mut. R i ex u ras. mut.
 dissipatas B 1 2 S E. || partis V G B K E. partes R i in e mut.
 24. archytae R G. archyte K. architē S E. 25. uilico R V G B 1 2.
 1
 uilico E 1 al. atr. superscr. uillico S J O 1. || inquit R G B. inquit V K.

§ 78. dissipatas...cogere. Anger according to Stoic doctrine was primarily due to an agitatio animi (Sen. de Ira ii 3, 4) or ψυχῆς κίνησις caused inevitably by oblata species iniuriae: when this was transformed by the will into an impetus (ὄρμη) out of control of the reason it became anger. From another point of view the phenomenon was expressed in purely physical language: anger was defined (e.g. by Nemesius, de nat. hom. c. 19 ap. Arnim, St. vet. frgg. iii § 416) as ζέσις τοῦ περὶ καρδὴν αἵματος ἐξ ἀναθυμιάσεως τῆς χολῆς ἢ ἀναθολώσεως γινομένη or as a dissipation of the vital heat of the soul towards the periphery (Galen in Hippocr. de hum. 1, vol. xvi, p. 1174 K ap. Arnim l.c. ἐν γὰρ τῇ ὄρμῃ καὶ τῷ θυμῷ ἡ ἐμφυτος αὐτῇ [sc. τῇ ψυχῇ] θερμασία ἐκτείνεται καὶ χολὴ τότε γίνεταί τε καὶ αὔξεται). This scattering of the vital heat from the heart explained the rubor and other physical effects of anger. But there was always the danger that it might lead to a permanent weakening of the intellectual centre, the life of which was the fire or vital heat that was of the essence of the soul; for this reason excessive anger often led to madness, cf. Sen. de Ira ii 36, 5 'nulla celerior ad insaniam uia est: multi itaque continuauerunt irae furorem nec quam expulerant mentem umquam receperunt.' To recover then from a fit of anger was to recall to the centre the partes animi which had been temporarily disturbed and scattered.

differant: cf. Sen. de Ira iii 12, 4 'maximum medium irae dilatio est, ut primus eius feruor relanguescat et caligo quae premit mentem aut residat aut minus densa sit.' Plut. de cohib. ira, c. 11, p. 459 E ὅ τε γὰρ χρόνος ἐμποιεῖ τῷ πάθει διατριβὴν καὶ μέλλησιν ἐκλύουσαν ἢ τε κρίσις εὐρίσκει καὶ τρόπον πρόποντα καὶ μέγεθος ἀρμόττον κολάσεως.

Archytas. Archytas of Tarentum, a statesman and Pythagorean philosopher, flourished 400—365 B.C. R. and P. § 61. The story here told of him occurs again in a slightly different form in Rep. i 38, 59 and Val. Max. iv 1, 1 ext. Seneca, de Ira i 15, 3, tells the same story of Socrates and in iii 12, 5 has a precisely similar tale about Plato, who, being in a rage, asked the obliging Speusippus to flog his slave for him; the latter story is repeated by Plut. adu. Col. 2, p. 1108 A, while Diog. Laert. (iii 26) attributes Archytas' saying to Plato (μεμαστίγωσο ἂν εἰ μὴ ὠργίζομαι). It is impossible to say of whom the story was originally invented.

accepissem: see ii 14, 34 n. on uerberibus accipiuntur. This use of accipere is found in Lucilius (vi 667) and is according to Marx ad loc. derived from the sermo uolgaris: cf. also Plaut. Aul. 630 and Cic. Verr. ii 1, 54, 140.

XXXVII. § 79. isti: sc. 'Peripatetici,' cf. 19, 43.

magis iracundus: Cicero's argument seems to be this: if anger were a natural effect of certain impressions, then an im-dicunt (potest utilis esse insania?) aut naturalem? an quicquam est secundum naturam quod fit repugnante ratione? quo modo autem, si naturalis esset ira, aut alius alio magis iracundus esset, 5 aut finem haberet prius quam esset ulta ulciscendi libido, aut quemquam paeniteret quod fecisset per iram? ut Alexandrum regem uidemus, qui cum interemisset Clitum familiarem suum, uix a se manus abstinuit; tanta uis fuit paenitendi. quibus cog- nitis quis est qui dubitet quin hic quoque motus animi sit totus 10 opinabilis ac uoluntarius? quis enim dubitarit quin aegrotationes animi, qualis est auaritia, gloriae cupiditas, ex eo, quod

XXXVII. § 79, 2. aut naturalem RV P I<sub>4</sub> G B I<sub>2</sub> K E<sub>2</sub> O<sub>7</sub>. aut naturalē R I<sub>0</sub> E I. aut naturale R 7 I<sub>6</sub> I<sub>7</sub> K<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M I D C J O I.

aut naturale est B 3. aut naturalis L 3. aut naturalis<sup>est</sup> II al. atr. superscr. et is in ras. aut naturalis est R 6 E<sub>3</sub> L 6 W I M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>2</sub> 3. an naturale
ed. H. || an quicquam (quidquam) R 2 6 I<sub>0</sub> B<sub>3</sub> E<sub>3</sub> L 6 W I M<sub>2</sub> II O<sub>2</sub> 3.
an potest quicquam L 3. hanc quicquam P  marg. an. hanc quicquam E I.

hac quicquam S at in ras.; marg. at eras. naturalis? an. hanc quicquam R 6 V P<sub>4</sub> G B I<sub>2</sub> K E<sub>2</sub> O<sub>7</sub>. hanc quicqd R I<sub>7</sub>. hoc quicquam R I<sub>6</sub>
L<sub>5</sub> J O I ed. H. h' quicquam W 2. h quicquam K 2. hoc aut quicquam R 7 L 2. quicquam M I D C an om. 3. est E I W I C. es R L 2-6. ēē R I<sub>0</sub> V P I<sub>4</sub> B I<sub>2</sub> E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> J O I<sub>7</sub>. esse G K I ed. H.

ēē<sub>Λ</sub> S  marg. p<sub>Λ</sub>. ēē<sup>potest</sup> E 3 al. atr. superscr. esse<sub>Λ</sub> II esse potest
R 6 B<sub>3</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>3</sub>. est et D. esse et M I. potest esse O 2 om. K 2. || fit R V P G B I<sub>2</sub> K I<sub>2</sub> S E I<sub>2</sub> W I<sub>2</sub> M I D C J O I<sub>3</sub> ed. H. sit B 3
E<sub>3</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>2</sub> 7. 5. ulla R I 6 7 I<sub>0</sub> I<sub>6</sub> V P I<sub>3</sub> 4 G B I<sub>-3</sub> K I<sub>2</sub> S E I<sub>-3</sub> L 2-6 W I<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub> D C II J O I<sub>-3</sub> 7 Gr. ull'a R I<sub>7</sub>. ulta corr.
Manutius. || libido R V G K J. libido P B S E. 6. pgniteret B S.

peniteret R V G K E O I. poeniteret W I. || qd fecisse V atr. uiridi superscr.
8. pgnitendi S. penitendi R V G K E. poenitendi B I W I.

pression, which angers any one, ought to produce the same kind and amount of effect upon every one; but as it is notorious that some men are angered by, and others are indifferent to, the same occurrence, it follows that anger is not secundum naturam.

Cicero forgets for the moment the 'mixture elementorum,' which was the work of nature, and yet was responsible for 'uarietates morum' so that Seneca can say 'natura quosdam procliues in iram facit' (de Ira ii 20, 1).

finem: if anger were naturalis, it would be an appetitus or impulse directed towards some end, which would last until the end was attained, the attainment being accompanied by a feeling of satisfaction. Cic. seems, by this argument, to class all natural impulses together and draw no distinction between emotions and appetites.

uidemus: 22, 50 n.

Clitum: the incident is told in Arrian, Anab. iv 8, and with great variations in detail in Plut. Alex. 50 and 51.

quis enim dubitarit: from these words down to perturbatio erroris est in § 80 is bracketed as spurious by TS. and Hasper on the grounds chiefly that it interrupts the argument, and that the reasoning is illogical. It is true that it is more or less a digression and repeats in substance what has been already said in 7, 14 sqq. But Cicero is rather fond of digressions and repetitions and the reasoning is not so illogical as to justify the wholesale condemnation of the passage. The special difficulties are dealt with below.

unde intellegi debet... in opinione. This sentence, according to TS., should have been preceded by a statement that the aegrotationes animi are due to perturbationes: but in a summary repetition Cicero was entitled to assume that his readers could remember what had been taken as proved throughout the whole book.

magni aestimetur ea res ex qua animus aegrotat, oriantur? unde intellegi debet perturbationem quoque omnem esse in opinione. 80. et si fidentia, id est firma animi confisio, scientia quaedam 15 est et opinio grauis non temere adsentientis, metus quoque est diffidentia [expectati et independentis mali], et, si spes est expectatio boni, mali expectationem esse necesse est metum. ut igitur metus, sic reliquae perturbationes [sunt in malo]. ergo

12. magni aestumetur G. magna estumetur R K. magni estumetur B. magni aestimetur P 1. magna estumetur V B 2. magna aestimetur K 2. magni a existimetur M 1 a indistincte script.: magni aestimetur E 2 3 DC O 1. magni existimetur II ed. H. magni extimetur W 1 2 M 2 O 2. magis extimetur O 3. magnis extimetur B 3. || oriantur K 2 O 7. oria<sup>n r</sup> B 1. oria<sup>n r</sup> E 1. oriantur R V P G B 2 K 1 E 2 W 2 O 1 3. 13. intellegi V B K. intelligi R G S E. § 80, 15. adsentientis R V P G K 1 E 1. assentientis B 1-3 S W 1 2 M 1 DC II J O 1-3. 16. diffidentia B 3 K 2 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 DC II J O 1-3. diffidentia S i.e. et in inf mut. defidentia E 1. difidentia K 1. difidentiae V. defidentia R P G B 1 2. || expectati, -tatio, -tationem R V B G K S. expectati, -tatio, -tationem E. || independentis V G E. independentis R B K S. 17. esse necesse est R 1 6 V P G B 1 3 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 M 2 DC II. necesse est esse J O 1 3. esse om. B 2 M 1 O 2 7 W 2 marg. necesse est esse. || mecum V atr. uiridiore superscr. mecum G c in t alt. man. mut.

§ 80. et si fidentia... necesse est metum. The interpretation and meaning of this sentence involve special difficulties: it is a trifle that fidentia only occurs again in Cic. in de Invent. ii 54, 163, and that confisio is ἀραξ ἐλημένον—neither can be seriously urged against the genuineness of the sentence: the real crux is in the clause metus quoque est diffidentia expectati et independentis mali. Heine (Posen Progr. pp. 19 f.) asserts that diffidentia with a gen. can only mean ‘distrust of,’ quoting Suet. Otho, 9 ‘desperatione ulla aut diffidentia copiarum,’ and Plin. Epp. v 1, 7 ‘non diffidentia causae sed metu temporum,’ and proposes to read opinio in its place. But this only introduces fresh difficulties: in the first place as TS. and Hasp. point out the proper antithesis to the feeling of metus in relation to an expectatum et inpendens malum is (acc. to 6, 13) not fidentia but cautio; and one feels that fidentia has only been used in the clause before to lead up to diffidentia here: besides the description of the object of metus (or of the feeling of diffidentia) destroys the balance of the clause (fidentia having been defined as it is in itself without reference to external circumstances) and anticipates the statement of the following clause si spes... necesse est metum.

The words expectati et independentis mali are probably due to a marginal gloss that has crept into the text. If they are omitted, the discussion (in Küh.) as to whether metus or diffidentia is the subject of their clause and Dav.’s proposal to interchange the words become unnecessary.

Cicero’s argument, then, is this: if self-reliance is a kind of knowledge in a mind that does not come to rash conclusions, and fear is the opposite of this, and further if hope is an expectation of good (hope being the feeling excited when the mind has quietly come to the conclusion that the circumstance impending is not a malum) then metus resolves itself into the expectation that what is impending is evil. The discussion of the force of quoque in Dav. and Hei. (l.c.) is avoided by taking the protasis to extend to ‘expectatio boni.’

ut igitur metus... in malo. This sentence is condemned as spurious by Wesenberg, who says ‘Obscurius, praesertim post mali aliter positum, est sunt in malo. Vulgo intellegitur esse idem quod sunt in uitio, uitiosae. sed ut hoc ita sit, quomodo ex iis quae praecedunt concludi potest?’ (Em. III p. 14), and in this he is followed by Hei. and Ba. Both contentions are sound, but both can be ut constantia scientiae, sic perturbatio erroris est. qui autem 20 natura dicuntur iracundi aut misericordes aut inuidi aut tale quid, ii sunt constituti quasi mala ualetudine animi, sanabiles tamen, ut Socrates dicitur, cum multa in conuentu uitia conlegisset in eum Zopyrus, qui se naturam cuiusque ex forma perspicere profitebatur, derisus est a ceteris, qui illa in Socrate 25 uitia non agnoscerent, ab ipso autem Socrate subleuatus, cum illa sibi insita, sed ratione a se deiecta diceret. 81. ergo ut

21. ei sunt constituti R V P G B K E 2 W 1 II J O 1 S marg. eis ii sunt constituti O 3. ei sint constituti O 7. hii sunt constituti W 2 at hii in ras. et al. atr. eis sunt constituti E 1 D C. eis modi sunt constituti M 1.
 ii sunt eius modi constituti M 2. || ualetudine R G K. ualetudini V.

ualetudine P B S E. || sanabiles R 16 B 3 W 2 D O 1 ed. H. sanabile est
 R 12 10 V G B 12 K 12 S E 12 O 7. 22. ut R 12 10 16 V G B 2 3
 K 12 D. aut E 1. aut B 1. || Socrates R V P G B 1-3 W 2 D J. || conlegisset R V B 1 K. collegisset G h. l. B 2. collegissent P.

23. zopyrus R V B 13 O 1. zopirus G B 2 E 1 W 2. zop<sup>h</sup>irus S. zophirus D. zephyrus W 1. 25. agnoscerent R V G h. l. B K S E W 2 D.

26. sibi signa sed R 1 17 V P G B 1 K 12 E 1-3 L 2 3 5 J O 1-3.

sibi signa<sup>h</sup> sed S marg. essent. sibi signa sed W 1 marg. fuisse. sibi signa sed R 7.

sibi signa sed II. sibi signa (sed om.) B 2 3 L 6 M 2. sibi signa W 2 at sed post signa eras. et spat. relict. sibi inesse signa sed L 4. sibi signa inesse sed R 6 D C. sibi uitia in esse sed M 1. sibi signa uitia inesse sed E. H. sibi insita corr. Bentleius. || a se V G B 2 K 1 E 2 W 1 M 2 J. ab se S.
 adse R eod. atr. adse E 1. adse B 1.

removed by omitting sunt in malo: they are just the sort of explanatory addition one would expect to find to a sentence like 'ut igitur metus, sic reliquae perturbationes,' 'the statement about fear applies to other emotions as well.'

ii: for this, which is the reading of the best MSS, Bentley proposed eis, necessitating the further alteration of Socrates to Socratis, in which he is followed by Dav. Mo. Bouh. F. A. W. Or.

constituti: cf. ii 4, 11 'ita animo ac uita constitutus'; pro Sest. 65, 137 'a bonis uiris sapientibus et bene natura constitutis.'

dicitur: Bake is surely right in his contention that to end the sentence with dicitur makes the opening of the following sentence rather abrupt, and that the natural complement to dicitur, when we take the following words into account, is de se dixisse, not constitutus fuisse (Or.) or sanabilis fuisse. He is followed in his assumption of an anacoluthon (the construction being broken with derisus est) by Ba. TS. and Hei., the latter however contending that Cic. meant to complete the construction of dicitur by some words like subleuasse Zopyrum.

conlegisset: Dav. conjectured conicisisset, alleging that colligere in aliquem was bad Latin: but as Wopk. (op. cit. p. 332) points out it is equivalent to collecta memorare in aliquem: colligere uitia occurs again in Fin. i 19, 62. For the pregnant constr. see Nägelsb. Lat. Stil. § 102.

Zopyrus: ὁ φησι οὐκ ἴσμεν, cf. de Fato 5, 10: Maximus Tyr. xxv 3 (p. 299 ed. Hobein); Orig. c. Cels. i 33 quoted by Dav. who denies, however, the identification of this Zopyrus with Alcibiades' Thracian παιδαγωγός made in Spencer's note to Orig. l.c. and thinks him to have been the Syrian μάγος who is said by Diog. Laert. (ii 5, 24) to have foretold Socrates' death. This view is adopted by Förster (Scriptores Physiognomici i p. vii n.).

The story is told in Alexander Aphrodisiensis, de Fato, quoted by Eusebius, Praep. Evang. vi 9, 22, where Socrates' reply is given as ἦν γὰρ ἂν τοιοῦτος ὅσον ἐπὶ τῇ φύσει, εἰ μὴ διὰ τὴν ἐκ φιλοσοφίας ἄσκησιν ἀμέλων τῆς φύσεως ἐγένετο, and by Cassian, Conl. xiii 5, 3, where quoting perh. from Phaedo's lost dialogue Zopyrus (Diog. Laert. ii 9, 2) he gives Socrates' words as πᾶσασθε, ἐταῖροι· εἰμὶ γάρ, ἐπέχω δέ.

insita: Bentley's emendation for the meaningless signa of the MSS is adopted optima quisque ualetudine adfectus potest uideri uel natura ad aliquem morbum procliuior, sic animus alius ad alia uitia propensior. qui autem non natura sed culpa uitiosi esse dicuntur, 30 eorum uitia constant e falsis opinionibus rerum bonarum et malarum, ut sit alius ad alios motus perturbationesque procliuior. inueteratio autem, ut in corporibus, acrius depellitur quam perturbatio, citiusque repentinus oculorum tumor sanatur quam diuturna lippitudo depellitur.

XXXVIII. 82. Sed cognita iam causa perturbationum, quae omnes oriuntur ex iudiciis opinionum et uoluntatibus, sit iam huius disputationis modus. scire autem nos oportet cognitis,

§ 81, 27. optima R V G B K. || quisque R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 2 D C J O 1-3 7. || ualetudine V G K. ualitudine R B S E. ||

adfectus V G. adfectos E. affectus R B K S. || uideri ut natura R 1 6 7 1 7 V P G B 2 3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 3-6 W 2 M 2 D C J O 1-3 7 ed. H. uideri ~~ut~~ natura W 1. uideri utrū natura L 2. uideri anā M 1.

uideri ut natura II alio atr. superscr.

uideri uel natura corr. Seyffertus. 30. bonarum et R 1 7 1 7 V P G B 1-3 K 1 bonarum ac R 6 II. et om. K 2 O 7.

34. lippitudo depellitur R V P G plerique. lippitudo diuturna depellitur O 1.

XXXVIII. § 82, 3. nos B 2 3 S M 2 C II (at n mut. esse uid.) O 1 2 7. uos R V P G B 1 K 1 2 E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 (non ut Küh.) D J O 3.

by CFWM. Bait. TS. Hei. Sch.; Sff. prefers innata, which he wrongly credits to Nissen; it is due to Bentl. who wrote 'probo conjecturam cuiusdam, quam Gebhardus memorat illa sibi INGENITA: nisi forte maus INSITA uel INNATA' (Emend. ad. Tusc. Disp. p. 477 in Dav.'s edn. Ox. 1805). It is possible that signa sed of the MSS is a corruption of sic natura (nā) esse sed, which would reproduce the contrast between φύσις and ἀσκησις in the version quoted above from Eusebius.

§ 81. quisque. 'Accordingly, just as every man, though in the enjoyment of excellent health, may show signs of being naturally prone to contract some one disease more than another, in the same way one mind is more inclined to one fault, another to another'; for the position of quisque cf. Off. i 31, 113; Bent. (followed by Dav.) altered quisque of the MSS to quis and read at before natura for the MSS ut; but not merely is quisque the reading of all the MSS, but it is essential to Cicero's argument, which is, that every one is liable to some natural bodily and mental bias, which varies from one individual to another; in the second place there is no such opposition between good health and a natural liability to some particular ailment as at implies: Hei. TS. Ml. Sch. who retain quisque omit ut before natura, but it is hard to see how it came to be inserted. Sff.'s conjecture uel (ut) gives an excellent sense and lays the proper emphasis upon natura.

culpa: cf. iii 30, 73 'sunt enim ista non naturae uitia sed culpae.'

inueteratio: ἀπαξ εἰρημένον: here = 'in-ueteratum uitium,' 'a chronic complaint.'

oculorum tumor: a concomitant of the ordinary lippitudo (described in Cels. de med. vi 6, i ff.) in which 'tument ac distenduntur cum dolore oculi': the arida lippitudo is described ib. vi 6, 29 'neque tument neque fluunt oculi sed rubent tantum...quantoque minor generis huius impetus, tanto finis minus expeditus est.'

depellitur is suspected by Dav. to be a repetition, due to a copyist, of depellitur above; the word is bracketed by Wes. Hei. Bait.

§ 82. cognita...causa: this is, as Mo. notes, a locutus iudicialis; cf. de Or. ii 24, 100 'nihil est negotii eiusmodi causam cognoscere': Or. 42, 143; Brut. 70, 246.

opinionum, 'judgments resting upon opinions,' as opposed to the iudicia proceeding from scientia (ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος).

disputationis: for the gen. cf. 'calamitatis praesentis...medicina' iii 22, 54 'finem faciet Tusculanarum disputationum' v 1, 1.

quoad possunt ab homine cognosci, bonorum et malorum finibus 5 nihil a philosophia posse aut maius aut utilius optari quam haec, quae a nobis hoc quadriduo disputata sunt. morte enim contempta et dolore ad patiendum leuato adiunximus sedationem aegritudinis, qua nullum homini malum maius est. etsi enim 10 omnis animi perturbatio grauis est nec multum differt ab amen-tia, tamen ita ceteros, cum sunt in aliqua perturbatione aut metus aut laetitiae aut cupiditatis, commotos modo et perturbatos dicere solemus, at eos, qui se aegritudini dederunt, miseros, adflictos, aerumnosos, calamitosos. 83. itaque non for-15 aegritudine et de ceteris perturbationibus disputaremus; in ea

4. quoad R. quoad B I. qđ ad V atr. uiridi corr. quod ad G K I E I.
 6. quadriduo R V G K D. quadriduo P B 23 S E 12 W 12 M I C H J
 O I-3 7. quadruuo B I. 10. tamen ita R I 6 17 V P G B 23 K I 2 S
 E I 2 W 12 M I 2 D II J O I-3 7. tū ita C. tamen in B I at fuerat ita. || cum sunt R V G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 W 2 D C II O I-3. cum sint R 6 B 3 W I M I 2 O 7. cum s P J. 11. commotos R G. commotus V. cōmotos K. 12. qui se aegritudini R. qui se aegritudinis K. quis aegritudini V e atr. ant. inculc. quas aegritudinis G in quis aegritudini ead. man. (ut uid.) mut.
 13. adflictos V G E. afflictos R B K S.

quoad...cognosci: Cic. intends by these words to safeguard his position as an adherent of the New Academy; for a similar qualifying expression, cf. Fin. ii 25, 80 'si haec uera sunt, nihil enim affirmo.'

bonorum...finibus: the treatise de Finibus had been finished shortly before (v 11, 32), probably by the end of June 45 B.C. See Introd. vol. i pp. xv f.

ad patiendum, 'so that it can be endured'; for the constr. cf. 17, 37 'aut intolerabile ad demittendum animum aut nimis laetabile ad efferendum' and n. there.

ita ceteros: ita is bracketed by most edd. and Nissen includes tamen in his condemnation, arguing that tamen ita is but a repetition of amentia preceding. Klotz defends ita, remarking (Quaest. Tull. i 124 sq.) 'ut magis illud quod ante dictum erat legenti adhaeresceret particulam istam adiecit qua illud denuo repeteret'; Mo. and Küh. adopt the more satisfactory explanation of Stuerenburg, who takes ita with the following cum, as in Brut. 62, 222 'grauem oratorem ita dumtaxat cum de re publica diceret.' Sff. conjectures in uita, thus making a contrast between the true philosophic doctrine enunciated in the preceding clause and the view adopted by the ordinary man—a contrast which is sufficiently well brought out by dicere solemus following.

Cicero's point is that whereas in theory every perturbatio is practically insanity, yet in practice and common usage we draw a distinction between various kinds of perturbatio, reserving for those suffering from aegritudo our most emphatic expressions of pity; ceteros refers to all perturbati with the exception of those aegritudini deditos; trans. 'we nevertheless in all the other cases, namely when people are suffering from a mental disturbance such as fear or joy or desire, in this case (ita) merely say usually that they are excited and disturbed, while in the case of those who have surrendered themselves to aegritudo we say that they are wretched, despairing, miserable, undone.'

metus: gen. of definition, cf. i 15, 34 n.; i 45, 109; iv 15, 34.

§ 83. propositum: in iii 4, 7 'uidetur mihi cadere in sapientem aegritudo' where the interlocutor limited his assertion to aegritudo, reserving his statement about the other perturbationes for the following day's discussion (iv 4, 7).

est enim fons miseriarum et caput. sed et aegritudinis et reli-quorum animi morborum una sanatio est, omnis opinabilis esse et uoluntarios ea reque suscipi quod ita rectum esse uideatur.
 hunc errorem quasi radicem malorum omnium stirpitus philo-20 sophia se extracturam pollicetur. §4. demus igitur nos huic excolendos patiamurque nos sanari. his enim malis insidentibus non modo beati, sed ne sani quidem esse possumus. aut igitur negemus quicquam ratione confici, cum contra nihil sine ratione recte fieri possit, aut, cum philosophia ex rationum conlatione 25 constet, ab ea, si et boni et beati uolumus esse, omnia adiumenta et auxilia petamus bene beateque uiuendi.

§ 83, 16. sed et aegritudinis R G. sed eegritudinis V. 17. omnis R V G
 B 1 K. omnes B 2. om̄s S E. || opinabilis R V G B K. opinabiles
 B 2 S E. 18. ea re que V B 1 2 J. ea req; R 17 W 2. ea re q3 S at q3 in ras. et spat̄o post relicto. ea re q̄ P marg. q3. ea re quae R G K.
 ea re quoque O 7. ea que re E 1 atr. ant. superscr. eaq; re R 6 B 3 K 2 E 2 W 1 M 2 D C II O 1-3 ed. H. eaq; nec R 7. eaq; de re M 1.
 § 84, 20. igitur nos R 17 17 V P G B 13 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2
 II J O 1-3 7 ed. H. nos igitur D C. ergo nos R 6 B 2. 22. nommodo G.
 23. ratione confici P. ratione confici V al. atr. superscr. rationi confici R 1 2 10 16 G K 1. 24. conlatione G B. collatione R P K E 2 alii. consolatione V. collocatione S marg. collatione. om. E 1.

enim: for the order of words cf. i 27, 66 n.; 'in his est enim' i 32, 78.

fons...et caput, 'fountain head and source': this is nearly always the meaning of caput as applied to streams and rivers, but cf. Liv. xxxiii 41, 7; Caes. B.G. iv 10; for the phrase here edd. compare de Or. i 10, 42; Fin. v 6, 17; pro Planc. 23, 57.

omnis opinabilis esse: for the acc. and inf. in loose explanation of sanatio est cf. Ac. ii 38, 120 'quanti libertas ipsa aestimanda est non mihi necesse esse quod tibi est?' with Reid's note.

ea re...quod: for the constr. cf. Ac. ii 34, 111 'illud ea re a se esse concessum quod uideretur esse quaedam in uisis differentia'; Off. iii 13, 53 'ea re, quia turpe sit, non esse faciendum.'

stirpitus is ἀπαξ εἰρημένον in Cicero.

§ 84. non modo: cf. i 36, 87 n.

M. TVLLI CICERONIS

TVSCVLANARVM DISPVTATIONVM

LIBER QVINTVS

I. 1. Quintus hic dies, Brute, finem faciet Tusculanarum disputationum, quo die est a nobis ea de re quam tu ex omnibus maxime probas disputatum. placere enim tibi admodum sensi et ex eo libro quem ad me accuratissime scripsisti et ex 5 multis sermonibus tuis uirtutem ad beate uiuendum se ipsa esse contentam. quod etsi difficile est probatu propter tam uaria et tam multa tormenta fortunae, tale tamen est ut elaborandum sit quo facilius probetur. nihil est enim omnium quae in philosophia tractantur quod grauius magnificentiusque dicatur.
 10 2. nam cum ea causa inpulerit eos qui primi se ad philosophiae uerba uirtutem ad beate uiuendum se ipsa esse contentam om. R V P B E I 2 W I M I. glossatoris manu subscr. habet II.

I. § 1, 2. ea de re R V P G B 2 3 K I 2 E 2 L 5 W 2 M I 2 II J O I 3. ea de re S at ea in lit. addere B I E I D C O 7. de ea re W I O 2.

3. maxime R V B K S. habet G alt. man. superscr. 4. accuratissime R V G B K.
 5. semmonibus G in sermonibus alt. man. mut. 6. contentam R V K.

conten tam B I ras. ante et post n. contentam G n ex mp alt. man. mut.
 f

contēptā P. || difficile P K. difficili R V. difficili G alt. man. superscr.
 8. quod G at d ead. man. delete. || probetur R V G B K. probetur E I.

pet P. 9. tractatur G ead. man.
 n

§ 2, 10. inpulerit R V P G B K S. inpulerit E I.

I. § 1. finem faciet...disputationum : for the gen. cf. iv 18, 41 n. on uicio and Madv.'s note on Fin. ii 9, 27 'qualis ista philosophia est, quae non interitum afferat prauitatis' and Madv.'s Lat. Gr. § 241, 3, § 242, 2.

quo die : for the repetition of the antecedent in the relative clause for the sake of clearness (a usage frequent in legal formulae) cf. p. Mil. 20, 53 'ante fundum Clodi, quo in fundo, etc.'; Q.F.
 iii 3, 1 'diem scito esse nullum quo die non dicam'; Rep. i 26, 41 'ad eam causam referendum est, quae causa genuit ciuitatem.'

ea de re : for the order of the words
 cf. i 27, 66 n.

admodum goes with sensi, acc. to the usual Ciceronian rule: see Reid's n. on Lael. 1, 2.

eo libro : i.e. his de Virtute, cf. Fin. i 3, 8 'quamquam a te ipso id quidem facio prouocatus gratissimo mihi libro quem ad me de uirtute misisti'; Sen. ad Helu. 9, 4 quotes 'Brutus in eo libro quem de uirtute composuit.' Quintilian's criticism on Brutus' philosophical style is well known (x 1, 123) 'sufficit ponderi rerum :
 scias eum sentire quae dicit.'

ad me...scripsisti, 'wrote and dedicated to me'; i.e. ad me scriptum misisti, the form of expression employed in 4, 11 ;
 cf. Lael. 1, 4 'in Catone maiore qui est scriptus ad te de senectute.'

§ 2. ea causa : Küh. and Hasp. are clearly wrong in taking this to mean 'the foregoing consideration,' a meaning which Cicero would have expressed by quae causa cum; ea is explained by the clause ut...contlocarent; the 'primi qui se ad studium contulerunt ut omnibus rebus posthabitis totos se in optimo uitae statu exquirendo conlocarent, profecto spe beate uiuendi tantam in eo studio curam operamque posuerunt. quodsi ab iis inuenta et perfecta uirtus est, et si praesidii ad beate 15 uiuendum in uirtute satis est, quis est qui non praeclare et ab illis positam et a nobis susceptam operam philosophandi arbitretur? sin autem uirtus subiecta sub uarios incertosque casus famula fortunae est nec tantarum uirium est ut se ipsa tueatur, uereor ne non tam uirtutis fiducia nitendum nobis ad spem beate 20 uiuendi quam uota facienda uideantur. 3. equidem eos casus in

12. optimo R V G B K. || conlocarent R V G B K E. collocarent S. ru

14. ab his R V P G B K S E. || praesidii R V G B K S E O 37. 18. tantam
 R eod. ut uid. atr.

philosophiae studium contulerunt' are not the early physicists, as this would make 'totos se in optimo uitae statu exquirendo conlocarent' hopelessly unhistorical (a blunder which Hei. is content to attribute to a lapse of memory on Cicero's part), nor Socrates and his followers (Küh.), which would involve an equally serious lapse in primi, but the σοφολ 'a quibus uita hominum instructa primis sit' (§ 6) and the others mentioned in §§ 7 sq.; the optimus uitae status will then have a meaning primarily political and social, not ethical.

Sff., while rightly rejecting Bentley's aliqua for ea as palaeographically unlikely, and Bake's nam quaecumque causa as bad grammar with compulerit, proposes to omit ea as a dittography of the ca in causa. But as his object is to get rid of the historical difficulty in the interpretation of the words qui primi...conlocarent, a difficulty which does not exist if the passage be interpreted (as above) in view of §§ 6 and 7, the emendation becomes unnecessary; his proposal further involves the awkwardness of taking the clause ut...conlocarent as limiting the application of primi se contulerunt in the preceding clause, a case in which Cic. would almost certainly have used ita...ut.

Transl. 'For since the motive impelling those who first devoted themselves to the study of philosophy was such that...they gave their whole attention to the discovery of the ideal state of existence, it must certainly have been from the expectation of a happy life that they devoted so much care and attention to the pursuit of it.'

inuenta et perfecta, 'discovered and elaborated, thoroughly discussed'; for this use of perficere cf. 25, 72 'sequentia adiungit, perfecta concludit'; iv 5, 9 'erit enim hoc totum, quod quaero, ex utroque perfectius' ('more thoroughly discussed'); Legg. i 13, 35; Diu. ii 1, 3 'quae (sc. quaestio) ut plane esset cumulateque perfecta.' Generally perfecta, when applied to uirtus, means 'thoroughly performed,' e.g. pro Sest. 40, 86 'et sentire uero et facere perfectae cumulateque uirtutis'; cf. Off. iii 3, 14 'illud autem officium, quod rectum idem appellant, perfectum atque absolutum est.' Cicero seems fond of contrasting inuenire and perficere, e.g. de Or. i 4, 13 'Athenas, in quibus summa dicendi uis et inuenta est et perfecta'; Brut. 18, 71 'nihil est enim simul et inuentum et perfectum.'

positam: used here to recall operamque posuerunt above: Nissen strangely takes it as equivalent to depositam forming a contrast with susceptam.

subiecta, 'brought under the power of': Madv. in his n. on Fin. ii 15, 48 shows that subicere is followed either by the dative, as in Off. ii 6, 22; pro domo 40, 106; or by sub with the acc. as here, and in iv 7, 16; iv 8, 19; Ac. ii 23, 74.

tantarum uirium: Mo. notes that the gen. plur. is more rarely used in this constr. than the abl. plur.; he quotes Plin. N.H. vii 2 'gens...stridoris horrendi, hirtis corporibus.'

§ 3. eos casus: his political disappointments and domestic troubles which had been increasing since 47 B.C.; see vol. I, Intr. pp. xiv sq.

in quibus: Lamb. deleted in which is supported by pro Arch. 11, 28 'quid est quibus me fortuna uehementer exercuit mecum ipse considerans huic incipio sententiae diffidere interdum et humani generis inbecillitatem fragilitatemque extimescere. uereor enim ne natura, cum corpora nobis infirma dedisset iisque et morbos insanabilis 25 et dolores intolerabilis adiunxisset, animos quoque dederit et corporum doloribus congruentis et separatim suis angoribus et molestiis implicatos. 4. sed in hoc me ipse castigo, quod ex aliorum et ex nostra fortasse mollitia, non ex ipsa uirtute, de uirtutis robore existimo. illa enim, si modo est ulla uirtus, 30 quam dubitationem auunculus tuus, Brute, sustulit, omnia quae cadere in hominem possunt subter se habet eaque despiciens casus contemnit humanos culpaque omni carens praeter se ipsam nihil censet ad se pertinere. nos autem omnia aduersa cum

§ 3, 22. interdum et R I 7 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I W I M I D C

O 3 7. interdum et<sup>iam</sup> II al. atr. superscr. interdum & W 2 O 2. interdum etiam R 6 B 3 M 2 J O I. || inbecillitatem R V P G h. l. B 2 K.
 inbecillitatem B I S E I. 24. hisque R V G B. || insanabilis R V G K. insanabilis P B I 2 S E I. 25. intolerabilis P B E I. intolerabilis R V G K. intolerabiles S. 26. congruentis R V G B I K E. congruentes B 2 S. 27. implicatos R V G B K S. implicatos E I.

§ 4. in hoc R I 6 V P G B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C I J
 O I-3 7. hoc Gr. in om. 29. existumo R G B K. existumē V.

30. auunculis tuis E I. || sustulit R G B K. sustu lit V litt. erasa.
 31. in hominem K I. in hominē V P B. in homine R G. 33. aduersa tum
 R I 6 7 10 17 V P G B I 3 K I 2 S E I-3 L 2-6 W I 2 M 2 D C I J O I-3 7 ed. H. aduersa tamē R I 6. aduersa nobis B 2. aduersa M I tum om.
 cum corr. Dauisius.

quod...tantis nos in laboribus exercemus': for exercere edd. compare pr. Planc. 32, 78; Fam. xii 4, 1; p. Mil. 2, 5.

congruentis, 'responsive to': cf. de Or. iii 59, 222 'est enim actio quasi sermo corporis, quo magis menti congruens esse debet'; Wopkens, op. cit. p. 143, defends the reading of the mss. against Davies' conjecture conruentes and Lambinus' coagregentes. For the thought cf. Ov. Tr. v 13, 3: 'aeger enim traxi contagia corpore mentis.'

§ 4. in hoc, 'in speaking of this'; cf. in eo libro 9, 24 n.

castigo, 'rebuke,' the usual (but not invariable) meaning of the word in class. Lat. Cf. ii 21, 50 'uidesne ut obmutuerit non sedatus corporis sed castigatus animi dolor'; Liv. xxvi 35, 8; xxvii 34, 14; xxviii 26, 3; xxxi 6, 5, etc.

auunculus: M. Porcius Cato Uticensis; Brutus' mother was Servilia, Cato's ὀμωμήτριος ἀδελφή (Plut. Cat. 1, Brut. 2). For Cicero's opinion of Cato's character cf. Att. ii 5, 1 'Cato ille noster qui mihi unus est pro centum milibus'; Phil. xiii 14, 30 'quorum princeps M. Cato idemque omnium gentium uirtute princeps.' Quintilian (xii 7, 4) couples the uncle and nephew 'quorum alter appellatus sapiens, alter nisi creditur fuisse uix scio cui reliquerit huius nominis locum.'

subter: only here and in i 10, 20 in Cicero, it is found also in Varro, R.R. iii 3, 5, but is almost entirely confined to poetry before the time of Livy; the abl. after subter is found only in Catullus and Virgil; Draeger, Synt. d. Lat. Spr. i p. 621; Neue, Formenl. ii<sup>3</sup> pp. 931 sqq. Detlefsen (in Philol. XLII p. 181) sees in subter the influence of poetry, and suggests that despiciens...humanos is the conclusion of a hexameter line from Cicero's Laus Catonis; in a later number (ib. p. 413) he withdraws the unhappy suggestion that 'contemnit humanos' can end a hexameter, but makes the fresh conjecture that a word has been omitted in quotation and that humanos is the first word of the following line.

uenientia metu augentes, tum maerore praesentia rerum naturam 35 quam errorem nostrum damnare malumus.

II. 5. Sed et huius culpa<sup>e</sup> et ceterorum uitiorum peccatorumque nostrorum omnis a philosophia petenda correctio est. cuius in sinum cum a primis temporibus aetatis nostra uoluntas studiumque nos compulisset, his grauissimis casibus in eundem
5 portum ex quo eramus egressi, magna iactati tempestate confugimus. o uitae philosophia dux, o uirtutis indagatrix expultrixque uitiorum! quid non modo nos, sed omnino uita hominum sine te esse potuisset? tu urbis peperisti, tu dissipatos homines

34. naturarum G in naturam alt. man. corr. naturā+ E I. 35. damnare om. G in marg. alt. man. adscr.

II. § 5, 2. correctio R V P G K. correptio E I. 4. compulisset R V P G B 2 K I 2 S M I DC O 1-3 Gr. cōpulisset B I E I W 2 II. compulisset R 7. 9pulisset O 7. cōpulisset E 2. contulisset R 6 W I J. contulisset M 2 at marg. al. manu compulisset. || grauissimis R V G B. grauissimis K. 6. expultrix; V P B I S E 2 W I 2 M I 2 J O 1-3 7. expultrixque R at fuerat excultrixque. excultrixque G B 2 K. expultrix excultrixq 3 D. expultrix excultrix C. expultrix; excultrix; E I. 7. quid non modo R G. quonmodo V. quim P. 8. urbis V G B K. urbis R eod. atr. urbes P. || dissipatos R V G B. disipatos K.

cum...praesentia: cf. iii 7, 14 'quarum enim rerum praesentia sumus in aegritudine, easdem impendentis et uenientis timemus'; cum is Dav.'s correction of the MSS tum and is adopted by all recent edd. except Or.; tum...tum can only mean 'at one time...at another time,' whereas here uenientia and praesentia being in apposition to omnia require the meaning 'both...and.'

II. § 5. sinum, 'protection,' a common meaning of the word; the literal and metaphorical uses are happily blended in Virg. Aen. viii 711 sqq. 'contra autem magno maerentem corpore Nilum | paudentemque sinus et tota ueste uocantem | caeruleum in gremium latebrosaque flumina uictos.'

a primis temporibus: cf. Off. ii 1, 4 'in his studiis ab initio uersatus aetatis existimauit honestissime molestias posse deponi si me ad philosophiam rettulissem'; pro Arch. 6, 14; Brut. 91, 315.

aetatis: cf. i 39, 93 n. on 'exacta aetate.'

compulisset: Dav. preferred here the reading contulisset found in some MSS but (as Küh. points out) the word compellere is used 'ad summum uehementissimumque animi impetum, quo Cicero ad philosophiae studium deferretur, exprimendum.'

portum: for the metaphor edd. quote Eur. Med. 768 οὔτος γὰρ ἀνὴρ ἢ μάλιστ' ἐκάμνομεν | λιμὴν πέφανται τῶν ἐμῶν βουλευμάτων; Anthol. Pal. ix 49 ἐλλίπς καὶ σὺ τύχη, μέγα χαλρετε, τὸν λιμὲν' εὐρον: the metaphor is common in Cicero; see i 49, 119 n.

o uita...dux: Cicero's apostrophe is sharply criticized by Lactantius, Instit. Diu. iii 13 fin. 'potuit eodem modo gratias agere cibo et potui, quia sine his rebus uita constare non possit.'

indagatrix, like expultrix, is ἀπαξ εἰρημένον in Cicero. For the metaphor Mo. compares Diog. Laert. viii 1, 6, where Pythagoras is said to have called philosophers θηραταὶ τῆς ἀληθείας, and Didymus ap. Stobaeum, Ecl. Eth. ii 1, 18 ἡ μὲν γὰρ φιλοσοφία θήρα τῆς ἀληθείας ἐστὶ καὶ δρεξίς: cf. also Iamblichus, Protrept. c. 5 p. 72 K αὶ μὲν ἄλλαι πᾶσαι ἐπιστήμαι θηρευτικαὶ τινές εἰσι...τῶν ἀγαθῶν, and N.D. i 30, 83 'physicum, id est speculatorem uenatoremque naturae.'

quid: cf. iv 23, 52 n. on 'quid... foedius.'

tu urbis peperisti. With this paragraph cf. Or. i 8, 32, where the institution of civil society is ascribed to the uis oratoria, and pro Sest. 42, 91, where it is ascribed to those 'qui primi uirtute et consilio praestanti exstiterunt'; de Rep. vi in societatem uitae conuocasti, tu eos inter se primo domiciliis, 10 deinde coniugiis, tum litterarum et uocum communione iunxisti, tu inuentrix legum, tu magistra morum et disciplinae fuisti; ad te confugimus, a te opem petimus, tibi nos, ut antea magna ex parte, sic nunc penitus totosque tradimus. est autem unus dies bene et ex praeceptis tuis actus peccanti immortalitati ante-15 ponendus. cuius igitur potius opibus utamur quam tuis, quae et uitae tranquillitatem largita nobis es et terrorem mortis sustulisti? 6. ac philosophia quidem tantum abest ut proinde ac

14. peccanti R 27 10 17 V P G B 1 2 K W 2 O 1. peccandi R eod. atr. peccandi O 7. pene toti R 6 16. || immortalitati R V K S. immortalitati G

h. l. B. immortalitate E 1. 15. quae uitae G alt. man. superscr.
 § 6, 17. ac R V P G B 1 K 1 2 E 1 M 1 D C O 3 7. at R 6 B 3 S

M 2 J O 1 2. a W 1 c post a eras. a W 2 al. atr. superscr. at Π t al.
 man. inculc. a R 7 E 2. ex B 2. || proinde R V P G B 1 2 K 1 2

S E 2 W 2 M 1 D C Π J O 2 7. proinde B 3. perinde W 1 M 2 O 1 3.
 h
 pro ac E 1.

13, 13 'nihil est enim illi principi deo, qui omnem mundum regit, quod quidem in terris fiat, acceptius quam concilia coetusque hominum iure sociati, quae ciuitates appellantur,' Hor. A.P. 396 sqq. Though each state owed its inception to some lawgiver, yet the universality of organized communities is due to the natural law, 'nos ad coniunctionem congregationemque hominum et ad naturalem communitatem esse natos,' Fin. iii. 20, 65. Hei. thinks that the statement here is probably due to the formulation of the Stoic view by Posidonius as quoted by Sen. Epp. 99, 5.

Lucretius seems to express a similar view in v 1105 sqq. 'inque dies magis hi uictum uitamque priorem | commutare nouis monstrabant rebus benigni | ingenio qui praestabant et corde uigebant.' But the Epicurean doctrine of the origin of society was diametrically opposed to that of the Stoics: the view of Epicurus is quoted in Epictet. diss. ii 20, 7 οὐκ ἔστι φυσικὴ κοινωνία τοῖς λογικοῖς πρὸς ἀλλήλους.

penitus totosque: for the connection of adj. and adv. by means of a conj. cf. Plaut. Trin. 268 'sunt tamen quos miseros maleque habebas,' and Bacch. 474 'tu Pistoclerum falso atque insontem arguis'; Sall. Iug. 5, 4 'magnum ac late imperium ualebat' (quoted by Ussing, ad loc.); cf. also Panegyricus Messallae 201 'quod tibi si uersus noster, totusue minusue, | uel bene sit notus'; Quintil. ii 10, 5 'haec supra fidem et poetica...themat.'

unus dies... anteponendus: for the sentiment Dav. compares Posidonius ap. Sen. Epp. 78, 28 'unus dies hominum eruditorum plus patet quam imperitis longissima aetas'; Philo, Quis rer. diu. her. p. 522 A μίαν γὰρ ἡμέραν ὑγιενῶς ἔλπε προφήτης ἀνὴρ βούλεσθαι βιώσαι μετ' ἀρετῆς ἢ μυρία ἔτη ἐν σκιᾷ τοῦ θανάτου, σκιὰν τὸν φαῦλον αἰνιττόμενος βίον: add to these reff. Plut. Cons. ad Apoll. 17 p. 428 οὐχ ὁ μακρότατος βίος ἀριστος ἀλλ' ὁ σπουδαιότατος. The passage quoted by Mo. from Julian's letter to Oreibasios (ep. 17, p. 498, 4 Hertl.), ἄμεινον γὰρ ὄλγον ὀρθῶς ἢ πολλὸν κακῶς πρᾶξαι χρόνον, is not parallel (cf. Philol. LXII pp. 586 ff.).

The Stoics held that the happiness produced by virtue was so great that no prolongation could make it greater; cf. Fin. iii 14, 46 'Stoicis non uidetur optabilior nec magis expetenda beata uita si sit longa quam si breuis,' and the reff. given in Zeller, Stoics, etc. p. 225 n. 1. A similar view was held by Epicurus ὁ ἀπειρος χρόνος ἴσην ἔχει τὴν ἡδονὴν καὶ ὁ πεπερασμένος, Diog. Laert. x 145; Fin. i 19, 63. Later sophistic writers sometimes contrast the happiness of a moment's pleasurable experience with the happiness supposed to attach to immortality as such, e.g. Charit. Aphr. vi 7, 12 οὐδὲ ἀθανάσιον προύτιμησεν ἀν' ἡμέρας μιᾶς τῆς μετὰ Χαιρέου.

§ 6. ac...quidem: a formula of transition, iii 2, 4 n.; iii 13, 28 n.

proinde ac: i 36, 86 n.; Draeger, Synt. der Lat. Spr. II § 315, 13 (6).

de hominum est uita merita laudetur, ut a plerisque neglecta a multis etiam uituperetur. uituperare quisquam uitae parentem et hoc parricidio se inquinare audet et tam impie ingratus esse, ut eam accuset quam uereri deberet, etiamsi minus percipere potuisset? sed, ut opinor, hic error et haec indoctorum animis offusa caligo est, quod tam longe retro respicere non possunt nec eos a quibus uita hominum instructa primis sit fuisse philosophos arbitratur.

III. 7. Quam rem antiquissimam cum uideamus, nomen tamen esse confitemur recens. nam sapientiam quidem ipsam quis negare potest non modo re esse antiquam, uerum etiam nomine? quae diuinarum humanarumque rerum, tum initiorum causarumque cuiusque rei cognitione hoc pulcherrimum nomen 18. neglecta G. neglecta V. neclecta R K. 20. parricidio R P G S E.

parricidio R <sup>r</sup>atr. nigriore superscr. paricidio V. || impie R V G K. ante impie habet V ras. duarum fere litt. 24. primis sit V B 2 K I 2 E 2 W 2 Gr.

primiss& R eod. atr. superscr. primi sit G. primi sit P. primum sit R 17 B I W I J O I. primo sit B 3 E I M 2 H O 2 3. primitus sit S M 1. prius sit R 6. i primis sit R 7. primo instructa sit D C.

III. § 7, 1. antiquissimā K atr. nigriore corr. 4. nomineque G. || uerba rerum...causarumque in marg. habet G alt. man. adscr.

5. cuiusque rei R 2 6 7 10 16 P B 1-3 E I 2 M I 2 D C H O I 3. cuius rei V ead. man. cuiusque W I rei om. cuius rei R I 17 K 2 W 2. cui rei G alt. man. superscr. cuius reg K I. rei cuiusque O 2 7. || pulcherrimum R G B K.

parentem, 'mother,' as is shown by eam below. For this, the original, meaning of parens, cf. Phil. ii 20, 49 'aude dicere te prius ad parentem tuam uenisse quam ad me'; Catullus lxii 28; Ciris 68; Consol. ad Liuium 81; Tac. Ann. xiii 13.

caligo: a metaphor from the darkness which sometimes swims before the eyes as the result of nervousness; the phrase is used literally in Liv. xxvi 45, 3 'quidam stantibus scalis cum altitudo caliginem oculis offudisset, ad terram delati sunt'; the same metaphor is found in Fin. v 16, 43; Tac. H. ii 80 'tantae altitudinis obfusam oculis caliginem disiecit'; cf. also Plaut. Mil. Gl. 405 'nunc demum exerior mi ob oculos caliginem obstittisse'; Plat. Soph. 264 C και τοῦθ' ἡμῶν ἀπορουμένων ἐτι μείζων κατεχύθη σκοτοδιμία; Theaet. 155 C ἐνίοτε ὡς ἀληθῶς βλέπων εἰς αὐτὰ σκοτοδινώ.

Cic. here probably intends longe retro respicere to convey the idea of looking back after having mounted to a considerable height rather than after having advanced a considerable distance.

III. § 7. antiquissimam: according to Diog. Laert. (prooem. § 1) τὸ τῆς φιλοσοφίας ἔργον ἐνίοι φασιν ἀπὸ βαρβάρων ἄρξαι...; § 3 λαθάνουσι δ' αὐτοὺς τὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων κατορθώματα, ἀφ' ὧν μὴ ὅτι γε φιλοσοφία ἀλλὰ καὶ γένος ἀνθρώπων ἦρξε, βαρβάροις προσάπτοντες. But Cic. would hold that the philosophy of which he is speaking here arose independently wherever men became civilized.

nomen: the word σοφίη occurs once in Homer (Il. xv 412); the word σοφός occurs first in Archilochus (frag. 45); the earliest use of the word φιλοσοφεῖν is in Herod. i 30, where it is applied to Solon. In Latin the word was borrowed as early as the time of Ennius, 'sophiam, sapientia quae perhibetur' (Ann. vii 218 ed. Vahl, acc. to the certain emendation of Scaliger), and it occurs in Afranius' Sella (Ribb. Scaen. Rom. p. fragm. II<sup>2</sup> p. 202) and in the fabulae Atellanae (id. ib. p. 274); cf. Sen. Epp. 89, 6.

quae...cognitione: for this definition of sapientia cf. iv 26, 57 n.

tum, 'as well as,' cf. Phil. iii 3, 7 'ueteranorumque, fortissimorum uirorum, apud antiquos adsequebatur. itaque et illos septem qui a Graecis σοφοί, sapientes a nostris et habebantur et nominabantur, et multis ante saeculis Lycurgum, cuius temporibus Homerus etiam fuisse ante hanc urbem conditam traditur, et iam heroicis aetatibus Ulixem et Nestorem accepimus et fuisse et habitos esse

6. adsequebatur R V G K E. assequebatur B S. 7. et habebantur
R 2 6 7 10 17 V P B 1-3 E 1 2 W 1 2 M 2 II O 1-3 7. habebantur D C et om. et habeantur R K. et et habeantur G. 8. saeculis R G K.

seculis S E. || lygurgum R V G. lygiljürgum K eod. atr. ligurgum B E. || etiam R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S D J. et W 1. 2 W 2. et M 1.

10. ulixem R P B 1-3 K 1 S E 2 W 2 M 1 2 D J O 1 3. ulixem G i ex correct. alt. man. uxē E 1. & ulyxem V. || nestorem R V G S J.

nestora E 1. || fuisse & R G K. fuisse V atr. ant. superscr.

tum legionis Martiae quartaeque mirabilis consensus.

septem. The list of the Seven Wise Men as given by Plato (Protag. p. 343 A) is Thales of Miletus, Pittakos of Mytilene, Bias of Priene, Solon the Athenian, Kleoboulos of Lindus, Myson ó Χηνεύς and Chilon of Sparta. Other authorities differ both as to the number of the Wise Men and as to their names; cf. Grote, Hist. of Greece iii pp. 316 ff.

The claims of these men to the title of σοφοί or sapientes would have been disputed by the strict Stoics, their wisdom being merely φρόνησις, the 'rerum expendarum fugiendarumque scientia,' not σοφία, the 'rerum diuinarum et humanarum scientia' (Off. i 43, 153), which comprised the virtues. Cicero himself in other passages takes the strict view with regard to their claims, e.g. Off. iii 4, 16 'nec ii qui sapientes sunt habiti et nominati, M. Cato et C. Laelius, sapientes fuerunt, ne illi quidem septem, sed ex meliorum officiorum frequentia similitudinem quandam gerebant speciemque sapientium'; Lael. 2, 7. In the present passage as in Rep. i 7, 12 they seem to be mentioned mainly for their political activities; and it was political virtue only which Dicaearchus admitted them to have, Diog. Laert. i 1, 14 Δικαίαρχος ούτε σοφούς ούτε φιλοσόφους φησίν αυτούς γεγονέναι, συνετούς δέ τινας καί νομοθετικούς.

saeculis, 'generations,' γενεαίς; cf. the Panegyricus Messallae ll. 50, 112, where Nestor's three γενεαί μερόπων ανθρώπων are referred to as 'terna saecula.' Censorinus (de die nat. c. 17 pp. 30 ff. ed. Hultsch) defines saeculum as 'spatium uitae humanae longissimum partu et morte definitum,' or more accurately, according to the 'rituales Etruscorum libri, in quis scriptum esse fertur initia sic poni saeculorum, quo die urbes atque ciuitates constituerentur, de his qui eo die nati essent eum qui diutissime uixisset die mortis suae primi saeculi modulum finire, eoque die qui essent reliqui in ciuitate, de his rursus eius mortem, qui longissimam egisset aetatem, finem esse saeculi secundi.' The Roman authorities preferred, for practical purposes, the round number of one hundred years (cf. Kukula, Römische Säkularpoesie, pp. 2 ff.).

Lycurgum: the claims of Lycurgus were not admitted by the Stoic authorities, any more than those of the Seven; Cleisthenes, Lycurgus and Solon were all φαῖλοι καὶ ἀνόητοι (Plut. de St. rep. 3 p. 1033 F) and neither their laws nor those of the Twelve Tables were anything more than scripta (Ac. ii 44, 136).

Homerus: Dav. in a learned note has collected the ancient authorities for the dates of Homer and Lycurgus, e.g. Plut. Lyc. i 4; Strab. x p. 482 C; Clem. Alex. Strom. i p. 322, who thinks Lycurgus and Solon were μακρῶ νεώτεροι than Homer and Hesiod.

A slightly different chronology is adopted by Cic. in Rep. ii 10, 18 'Homerum autem, qui minimum dicunt, Lycurgi aetati triginta annis antepouunt fere. ex quo intellegi potest permultis annis ante Homerum fuisse quam Romulum.'

Modern criticism, holding it doubtful whether such a person as Lycurgus ever existed (cf. Gilbert, Greek Constitutional Antiq. p. 15 and authorities quoted there), and being equally doubtful with regard to Homer, leaves the question to one side.

Ulixem et Nestorem: πολύμητις is one of the Homeric epithets for Ulysses, and Nestor's wise counsel was as proverbial as his garrulity; cf. ii 21, 48, where Ulysses is called 'sapientissimus Graeciae.'

sapientis. 8. nec uero Atlans sustinere caelum nec Prometheus adfixus Caucasō nec stellatus Cepheus cum uxore, genero, filia traderetur, nisi caelestium diuina cognitio nomen eorum ad errorem fabulae traduxisset. a quibus ducti deinceps omnes qui 15 in rerum contemplatione studia ponebant sapientes et habebantur et nominabantur, idque eorum nomen usque ad Pythagorae manauit aetatem, quem, ut scribit auditor Platonis Ponticus Heraclides, uir doctus in primis, Phliuntem ferunt uenisse,

11. sapientis R 2 V G B 1 K E. sapientes R <sup>i</sup> eod. atr. sapientes B 2 S.
 § 8. Atlans K 1. athlans R eod. atr. athlans V B 2 D. athalans G in athlans alt. man. mut. atlantē E 1. athlas P B 1 3 K 2 S E 2 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 2 J O 1 3. athalans O 7. 12. adfixus R V G K E. affixus B S.
 14. traduxisset B 3 W 1 2 M 1 2 J O 1-3. traduxisset V. traduxisset
 B 1. traduxisset G eod. man. traduxisset O 7. traduxissent R K 1 S
 E 1 2 D C II. || ducti R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J
 O 1 3. 15. sapientes R V P G K. 16. pythagorē W 1. pythagorē V phitagore G E 1. 18. phliuntem R 6. phliuntem R V G B 1 K 1 E 1 2 D C O 1 3. philuntem K 2 S W 2 M 1 2 J O 2. philuntem R 17. philnutē II. phylontē W 1 O 7. philatē B 3. philumem B 2. siluntem R 7.

Atlans: in Homer, Atlas appears to be a divinity of the sea ὄς τε θαλάσσης | πάσης βένθεα ὀδεν (Od. i 52); according to Professor T. D. Seymour, Life in the Homeric Age, p. 441 'he does not appear to be a mountain; the columns which support both earth and heaven appear to be the sea itself.' In Hesiod, Theog. 517 ff., 746 ff., he is a giant supporting the heaven upon his head and hands, the schol. at the latter passage drawing attention to the discrepancy between Hom. and Hesiod; cf. Aesch. P.V. 348. In Ovid, Met. iv. 626, he is identified with the African Mt. Atlas, into which he is said to have been metamorphosed; so Virg. Aen. iv 247, where see Servius' note. The view that he was an astronomer, about whose personality myths were formed, is not put forward earlier than Cicero's time (Hoffter quoted by Mo.), and is probably due to the combined influence of Euhemerus and the Stoic allegorizing doctrines. It appears in Virgil, Aen. i 741; Diod. Sic. iii 60; cf. Paus. ix 20, 3.

There is a long astronomical explanation of the myth in the Hesiodic Ἀλληγόρια p. 475 (Gaisford, Poetae Minores Gr. ii 579 sq.) in which Atlas is regarded as an allegory for ἡ τοῦ παντός περιφορὰ ἐπὶ τῷ ἄξονι; Cornutus, Theol. Gr. c. 26 (p. 48, 9 ed. Lang), regards Atlas as a synonym for ὁ ὅλος κόσμος.

Prometheus: cf. Hesiod, Theog. 251 ff.; Aesch. (P.V. 457, 484) represents Prometheus as having taught mankind astronomy and μαντική. Cornutus, Theol. Gr. c. 18 (p. 31, 19 ed. Lang), allegorizes him in the Stoic fashion into ἡ προμήθεια τῆς ἐν τοῖς ὀλοῖς ψυχῆς.

stellatus: here in the sense of καταστερωθεὶς, Milton's 'starr'd' (Il Penseroso 19), cf. Manilius, Astron. i 341; for the usual meaning cf. Virg. Aen. iv 261 'stellatus iaspide fulua | ensis.'

Cepheus, with his wife Cassiopeia, his daughter Andromeda, and their son-in-law Perseus, were transformed into stars; Cassiopeia had incurred the wrath of Juppiter Ammon and the nymphs by boasting of her beauty (Ovid, Met. iv 607; Cic. Aratea 442 ff.; Manil. Astr. i 350 ff.).

traduxisset: for traducere cf. iii 17, 37 where, as here, it bears the sense of bringing into another sphere of ideas or thought.

ducti, 'descended': cf. ducere genus, progeniem (Virg. Aen. v. 568; vi 835; i 19).

ad Pythagorae... aetatem: Pythagoras' life may be set between 572 B.C. and 500 B.C.; v. R. and P. § 54.

Heraclides: in his treatise περὶ τῆς ἀπνου (Diog. Laert. prooem. 12). Heraclides was a pupil of Speusippus ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν Πυθαγορείων διήκουσε καὶ τὰ Πλάeumque cum Leonte, principe Phlasiorum, docte et copiose 20 disseruisse quaedam; cuius ingenium et eloquentiam cum admira-ratus esset Leon, quaesiuisset ex eo, qua maxime arte confideret; at illum artem quidem se scire nullam, sed esse philosophum.

 admiratum Leontem nouitatem nominis quaesiuisset quinam essent philosophi et quid inter eos et reliquos interesset; 25 9. Pythagoram autem respondisse similem sibi uideri uitam hominum et mercatum eum qui haberetur maximo ludorum

19. phlasiorum R K 1 M 2 O 1. phlasiorium G at i ante l exp. alt. man. phlasiorium V B 13 E 2 C O 2. phlasiorium J. phlasiorium M 1. phlasiorium O 3. phylasiorium O 7. phorum B 2. 20. admiratus R V P G. ammiratus B. 21. maxime R V B K S. maximae G a ante e exp. alt. man.
 23. admiratum R K. admiratum G. ammiratum B. 24. essent G K.

ess& R et V atr. ant. suppl.

§ 9, 25. pythagoram R V G K. phytagorā B. Phitagorā E 1. || uitam W 1.
 uitā P B D. uitā V at linea alt. man. supraduct. uita R G K.

26. maximo R V G B K. maximo S.

τωνος ἐξηλώκει; the Athenians called him Πρωπικός because ἐσθῆτί τε μαλακῇ ἐχρήτο καὶ ὑπέρογκος ἦν τὸ σῶμα (Diog. Laert. v 6, 1—3). For the inversion of the name and the adjective cf. 32, 90 ‘Scythes Anacharsis’; i 24, 59 ‘Scepsius Metrodorus’; Ac. ii 45, 137 ‘Stoicus Diogenes’ with Reid’s n.

Phliuntem: there was a difference of opinion as to the place where this conversation took place; some authorities said Sicyon (Diog. Laert. prooem. 12); Sosicrates (id. viii 1, 8) agreed with Heraclides.

eumque: for the so-called transition from the relative to the demonstrative cf. ii 25, 61 n. Dav. denied the possibility of this transition here, reading uenisse cumque Leonte. It must be admitted that none of the passages adduced in support of this transition by Küh. or other edd. (ad loc.) or Wopkens (op. cit. p. 144) is really parallel; they merely prove (what Dav. would not have denied) that it is common in Latin instead of repeating a relative with an alteration of the case either to omit it or to substitute a demonstrative, as in 13, 38; iii 8, 16, etc.; in the present passage a demonstrative in the same case as the relative is needlessly inserted, as in Plaut. Capt. 555 ‘quibus insputari saluti fuit atque is profuit’; it is, of course, possible that eumque is a corruption for (e.g.) tuumque or dūque.

illum: sc. respondisse to be supplied κατ’ ἀντίθεσιν from quaesiuisset. The story is told in Diog. Laert. viii 1, 6 Σωσικράτης δ’ ἐν Διαδοχαῖς φησιν αὐτὸν ἐρωτηθέντα ὑπὸ Λέοντος τοῦ τῶν Φλιασίων τυράννου τίς εἶη, φιλόσοφος, εἰπεῖν· καὶ τὸν βίον εἰοικέναι πανηγύρει· ὡς οὖν εἰς ταύτην οἱ μὲν ἀγωνισόμενοι, οἱ δὲ κατ’ ἐμπορίαν, οἱ δὲ γε βέλτιστοι ἐρχονται θεαταί, οὕτως ἐν τῷ βίῳ οἱ μὲν ἀνδραποδώδεις, ἔφη, φύονται δόξης καὶ πλεονεθίας θηραταί, οἱ δὲ φιλόσοφοι τῆς ἀληθείας.

admiratum, ‘astonished at,’ a less common meaning of the word; cf. Cic. Att. vi 9, 1 ‘admirator sum, ut uidi obsignatam epistulam, breuitatem eius.’

nouitatem nominis, ‘the novel name,’ which, according to the tradition, was of Pythagoras’ invention; Diog. Laert. prooem. 12 φιλοσοφίαν δὲ πρῶτος ὠνόμασε Πυθαγόρας καὶ εαυτὸν φιλόσοφον; Iamblich. uita Pyth. viii 44.

§ 9. similem...mercatum: cf. Iamblich. uita Pyth. xii 58 εἰοικέναι γὰρ ἔφη τὴν εἰς τὸν βίον τῶν ἀνθρώπων πάροδον τῷ ἐπὶ τὰς πανηγύρεσι ἀπαντῶντι ὀμίλῳ· ὡς γὰρ ἐκεῖσε παντοδαποὶ φοιτῶντας ἄνθρωποι ἄλλος κατ’ ἄλλου χρεῖαν ἀφικνεῖται, ὁ μὲν χρηματισμοῦ καὶ κέρδους χάριν ἀπεμπολήσας τὸν φόρτον ἐπιεργόμενος, ὁ δὲ δόξης ἕνεκα ἐπιδειξόμενος ἤκει τὴν ῥώμην τοῦ σώματος· ἔστι δὲ καὶ τρίτον εἶδος καὶ τό γε ἐλευθεριώτατον, συναλιζόμενον τόπων θεας ἕνεκα καὶ δημιουργημάτων καλῶν καὶ ἀρετῆς ἔργων καὶ λόγων, ὧν αἱ ἐπιδείξεις εἰώθεσαν ἐν ταῖς πανηγύρεσι γίνεσθαι· οὕτω δὴ καὶ τῷ βίῳ παντοδαποὺς ἀνθρώπων ταῖς σπουδαῖς εἰς ταῦτο συναρπύζεσθαι· τοὺς μὲν γὰρ χρημάτων καὶ τρυφῆς αἰρεῖ πόθος, τοὺς δὲ ἀρχῆς καὶ ἡγεμονίας ἡμερος φιλονεικία τε δοξομανεῖς κατέχουσιν· εἰλικρινέστατον δὲ εἶναι τοῦτον ἀνθρώπου τρόπον, τὸν ἀποδεξάμενον τὴν τῶν καλλίστων θεωρίαν, ὃν καὶ προσονομάζει φιλόσοφον. For the sentiment, apparatu totius Graeciae celebritate; nam ut illic alii corporibus exercitatis gloriam et nobilitatem coronae peterent, alii emendi aut uendendi quaestu et lucro ducerentur, esset autem quoddam 30 genus eorum, idque uel maxime ingenuum, qui nec plausum nec lucrum quaerent, sed uisendi causa uenirent studioseque perspicerent quid ageretur et quo modo, item nos quasi in mercatus quandam celebritatem ex urbe aliqua sic in hanc uitam ex alia 35 uita et natura profectos alios gloriae seruire, alios pecuniae; raros esse quosdam, qui ceteris omnibus pro nihilo habitis rerum naturam studiose intuerentur; hos se appellare sapientiae studiosos (id est enim philosophos); et ut illic liberalissimum esset spectare nihil sibi adquirentem, sic in uita longe omnibus studiis contemplationem rerum cognitionemque praestare.

27. apparatu R V G B K S E. || graeciae G. graeciae R K. grece<sup>i</sup> E. || illic S W I O I. illi W 2. illi R V G B K E O 7. 30. maxime
 R V B K S E. maxime G. 31. lucherum G. || studioseque R V P G K. studioque B cod. ut uid. atr. 32. item R V G B<sub>3</sub> K I<sub>2</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub> C II O<sub>3</sub>. itē P B I E I D J O I 2 7. ite B 2. ita W I. || mercatus R 2 10 G. maercatus R. mercatos K. mercatum W I O<sub>3</sub>. mēatu R 16. 33. quandam R V G B I<sub>2</sub> K I M I. quamdam D C. quādā E I. quadam R 6 7 17 K<sub>2</sub> S W I<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> II J O I-3 7. quādā
 R 2 10. qdā E 2. q& R I 6. || celebritatem M I C. celebritatē V B
 E I D. celebritate R I 2 6 7 10 16 17 P G B<sub>23</sub> K<sub>2</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> W I<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub>
 II J O I-3 7. caelebritate K I. 37. enim R I 7 V G B I<sub>3</sub> K I E I W I<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> J O I-3 7. enim S marg. nomine id enī P marg. id est.
 enim om. B 2 E 2 M I D C II. || liberalissimum R V P G B. liberalissimū K.
 38. adquirentem R V G B K E. acquirentem S. 39. cognitionemque R 6 B<sub>3</sub> W I<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub> D C J O I-3 7. cogNitionemq; V cod. atr. at NI in ras.
 cogitationemque R I 7 17 P G B K I<sub>2</sub> S E I<sub>2</sub> II. uerba rerum cognitione mqu om. B 2.

which became a commonplace, Dav. quotes Menander, frag. 481 K; Alexis ap. Athenaeum xi 9 p. 463 d; Dio Chrys. xxvii p. 287; Arrian, Epict. ii 14, 23; Synes. de proud. 128 (col. 1280 Migne); Sen. Epp. i 18, 3.

For similem...et: in place of the more usual atque (ac) cf. de leg. agr. ii 17, 46 'simile uero est multa committi et condonari omnia'; Fin. ii 7, 21 'dicit absurde similiter et si dicat.'

mercatum eum qui...celebritate: the periphrasis is probably intended, not to provide an equivalent for παράγγυλις, but to avoid the mention of the particular Greek festival which Cic. found specified in his authority for the story.

corporibus exercitatis: abl. instr. 'by their athletic frames.'

emendi: the religious festivals in Greece gave an opportunity for the holding of annual fairs; cf. Becker, Charicles (E.T.) p. 292 and the authorities quoted there.

uisendi: i 19, 44 n.
item, 'so' for the more usual ita; cf. Or. 60, 202 'non item in oratione ut in uersu'; II Verr. iv 9 21 'item ut praedones solent.'

quasi...sic: Mo. compares Cato M. 19, 71 'et quasi poma ex arboribus, cruda si sunt, nix euelluntur, si matura et cocta, decidunt, sic uitam adulescentibus uis aufert'; Lael. 17, 63.

ex alia uita et natura, 'another life and mode of existence,' a reference to Pythagoras' doctrine of μετεμψύχωσις.

id est enim philosophos, a parenthetical comment of Cicero's: for id est explanatory of the following, instead of, as is more usual, the preceding, word cf. the exx. quoted in iii 27, 65 n.

IV. 10. Nec uero Pythagoras nominis solum inuentor, sed rerum etiam ipsarum amplificator fuit. qui cum post hunc Phili- asium sermonem in Italiam uenisset, exornauit eam Graeciam quae magna dicta est et priuatim et publice praestantissimis et institutis et artibus. cuius de disciplina aliud tempus fuerit for- tasse dicendi. sed ab antiqua philosophia usque ad Socraten, qui Archelaum, Anaxagorae discipulum, audierat, numeri motusque tractabantur, et unde omnia orerentur quoue reciderent, studiose- que ab iis siderum magnitudines, interualla, cursus anquirebantur

IV. § 10, 1. pythagoras R V G K W I. pythagoras B I. phitagoras E I.
 2. amplicator G. || phliasium R V G B<sub>3</sub> K. phliasium B I<sub>2</sub> E I W I. phylisium S. 3. sermonem R. 4. prae(pre)stantissimis R G K.
 p̄stantissimis V at su in ras. et spatio inter u et m relicto. p̄stantissimis, B. p̄stantifimis P. 6. socraten B I. socratem R V G K S W I O I<sub>3</sub>.
 8. orerentur R V G. orirentur R 6 7 I 7 P B I-3 K<sub>2</sub> S E I<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub>
 D C J O I-3 7. orientur II. orarentur K I. exorirentur W I. || recederent V atr. ant. superscr. recederent R I 6 7 I O I 6 17 P G B I<sub>3</sub> K I<sub>2</sub>
 S E I-3 L 2-6 W I<sub>2</sub> M I<sub>2</sub> D C H J O I-3 7. redent B 2. 9. ab iis
 O<sub>3</sub> S at fuerat his. ab hiis D. ab his R V P G B I<sub>2</sub> K E I W<sub>2</sub> M I
 J O I 7. || siderum R I 2 I O I 6 V G. syderum P B. || currus G r in s alt. man. corr. || anquirebantur R V P B K E. antiquirebantur G. inquirebantur E 2 W I<sub>2</sub> M 2 D J O 2 3 7. acquirebantur S. in querebantur M I. querebantur B 2. requirebantur O I.

IV. § 10. rerum...amplificator, 'not merely devised a name for philosophy, but also extended its scope,' i.e. by the inclusion of politics and psychology; cf. the fragment of Herakleitos quoted in Diog. Laert. viii 1, 6 Πυθαγόρης Μνησάρχου ιστορίην (i.e. philosophical enquiries) ἥσκησεν ἀνθρώπων μάλιστα πάντων.

in Italiam: to Croton, Diog. Laert. viii 1, 3. The date of his arrival is given by Cicero (Rep. ii 15, 28) as the fourth year of Tarquinius Superbus. On Pythagoras and his work in Italy see Burnet, Early Greek Phil. pp. 96 ff.

quae magna dicta est: cf. i 16, 38 n.

fuerit: fut. perf. used in postponing the consideration of a question; cf. Roby, Gr. § 1485. Hei. conjectures that Cic. intended to devote a book to Pythagoreanism to which his translation of the Timaeus was a preliminary.

Archelaum: cf. Diog. Laert. ii 4, 16 οὗτος πρῶτος ἐκ τῆς Ἰωνίας τὴν φυσικὴν φιλοσοφίαν μετέγαγεν Ἀθήνας καὶ ἐκλήθη φυσικός, παρὰ καὶ ἔληξεν ἐν αὐτῷ ἡ φυσικὴ φιλοσοφία, Σωκράτους τὴν ἠθικὴν εἰσαγαγόντος· εἴκοι δὲ καὶ οὗτος ἀψασθαι τῆς ἠθικῆς· καὶ γὰρ περὶ νόμων πεφιλοσόφηκε καὶ καλῶν καὶ δικαίων· παρ' οὗ λαβὼν Σωκράτης τῷ αὐξήσει αὐτὸς εὐρεῖν ὑπελήφθη. Clem. Alex. Strom. i. 301 A (quoted by FAW) τοῦτον (i.e. Anaxagoras) διαδέχεται Ἀρχέλαος, οὗ Σωκράτης διήκουσεν· "ἐκ δ' αὖρα τῶν αὐτέκλιτε λαόξους ἐνομοπέσης | Ἑλλήνων ἐπαίδος," ὁ Τίμων φησὶν ἐν τοῖς Σίλλοις, διὰ τὸ ἀποκεκλικέναι ἀπὸ τῶν φυσικῶν ἐπὶ τὰ ἠθικά. According to Gomperz (Gk Thinkers i 378) A. was employed 'in building a serviceable bridge between the doctrines of Anaxagoras and Anaximenes.'

numeri motusque, 'mathematics and the theories of motion'; cf. Fin. v 29, 87 'cur Plato Aegyptum peragrauit ut a sacerdotibus barbaris numeros et caelestia acciperet?'; ib. i 21, 72 'aut se, ut Plato, in musicis, geometria, numeris, astris contereret.' The following words refer to the earlier physicists, such as Thales, who sought for a universal principle (e.g. air) out of which the universe arose and into which all things were resolved (reciderent): in support of recidere against the MSS. Bentley quotes N.D. ii 26, 66; Lucr. i 857; v 280.

10 et cuncta caelestia. Socrates autem primus philosophiam deuocauit e caelo et in urbibus conlocauit et in domus etiam introduxit et coëgit de uita et moribus rebusque bonis et malis quaerere.

11. cuius multiplex ratio disputandi rerumque uarietas et ingenii magnitudo Platonis memoria et litteris consecrata plura genera 15 effecit dissentientium philosophorum, e quibus nos id potissimum consecuti sumus quo Socraten usum arbitrabamur, ut nostram ipsi sententiam tegeremus, errore alios leuaremus et in omni disputatione quid esset simillimum ueri quaereremus. quem morem cum Carneades acutissime copiosissimeque tenuisset, fecimus et 20 alias saepe et nuper in Tusculano ut ad eam consuetudinem disputaremus. et quadridui quidem sermonem superioribus ad

10. deuocauit R 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 M 1 2 D C II O 2 3 7. euocauit W 2 J O 1. 11. e caelo R 7 V G W 1 2 M 1 O 1 7.

ex caelo B 2. a caelo S. a caelo P B 1 3 E 1 2 M 2 D C O 3. || conlocauit R V G K. collocauit B 1 2 S E 1 W 1. || domus R V P G K 1 S E 1. domos R 6 7 B 1-3 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1 2 7. domibus O 3 Gr.

§ 11, 13. ingenii R V G B K S E. 15. effecit R 7 K 2 E 1-3 M 1 2

D C O 3 ed. H. efficit B 3. efficit R 1 6 1 7 V G B 1 2 K 1 W 1 2 O 1 7. efficit V P. fecit O 2. || dissentientium G ten in tien alt. man. corr. || potissimum R V P G B K. 16. consecuti R 1 2 7 10 17 P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 1 W 2 M 1 D C J O 1 7 Gr. consequuti R 1 6 K 2 E 2 II O 3. consecuti R 6. ~~consecuti V atr. ant. mut.~~ consecuti M 2. secuti W 1. || socratem R V P G K S. socrate B 1 2 E 1 W 2 II J. || arbitrabamur R P G B K S E 2 II O 7. arbitrabamur V atr. ant. arbitramur R 6 7 17 B 2 3 E 3

L 5 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 ed. H. xabitam E 1. 18. simillimum R V G B K. || quaeremus G in marg. re ead. manu. || mouerem G in morem alt. man. mut. 19. acutissime copiosissimeque R V G B K. 20. ut ad eam

V P G B K. ut ad eadem R. 21. quadridui R V G K. quadridui P al. atr. superscr. quadridui B 2. quadridui B 1 3 S W 1 2 II J O 1 2 7.

quadriduo E 1. quadriduo C.

Socrates: cf. Ac. i 4, 15 'S. mihi uidetur, id quod constat inter omnis, primus a rebus occultis et ab ipsa natura inuolutis, in quibus omnes ante eum philosophi occupati fuerunt, auocauisse philosophiam et ad uitam communem adduxisse,' with Reid's note there.

e caelo: Sff.'s correction a caelo though apparently supported by Ac. i 4, 15, quoted above, is unnecessary and misses the point. Cicero means to say that Socrates made philosophy a denizen of earth, while before she had been a denizen of heaven. Sff.'s objections against the use of e here are in reality objections against Cicero's judgment in the use of metaphors.

§ 11. multiplex ... uarietas, 'many-sided genius for argument and wide range of topics,' referring to the perpetually recurring unexpected turns of the Socratic dialogue. The word multiplex may be used in either a good or a bad sense; see Reid's n. to Ac. i 4, 17.

consecrata, 'enshrined in the records of literature.' Billerbeck compares ad Qu. Fr. i 1, 44 'non neglexeris, praesertim cum amplissimis monumentis consecrare uoluisses memoriam nominis tui.'

genera, 'schools,' aiptōeis, the Megarians, Academicians, Peripatetics, Cynics, etc.

arbitrabamur: cf. ii 18, 43 n. on excellerat.

Carneades, a native of Cyrene, succeeded Lacydes as head of the New Academy (Diog. Laert. iv 9, 62). His eloquence and dialectical powers were te perscriptum libris misimus, quinto autem die cum eodem in loco consedissemus, sic est propositum de quo disputaremus:

V. 12. Non mihi uidetur ad beate uiuendum satis posse uirtutem.

At hercule Bruto meo uidetur, cuius ego iudicium, pace tua dixerim, longe antepono tuo.

5 Non dubito, nec id nunc agitur, tu illum quantum ames, sed hoc, quod mihi dixi uideri, quale sit, de quo a te disputari uolo.

Nempe negas ad beate uiuendum satis posse uirtutem?

Prorsus nego.

10 Quid? ad recte, honeste, laudabiliter, postremo ad bene uiuendum satisne est praesidi in uirtute?

Certe satis.

Potes igitur aut, qui male uiuat, non eum miserum dicere aut, quem bene fateare, eum negare beate uiuere?

15 Quidni possim? nam etiam in tormentis recte, honeste, laudabiliter et ob eam rem bene uiui potest, dum modo intellegas, quid

22. libri<sup>s</sup> misimus G alt. man. corr. || eodem in loco R 1 6 7 V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 2 3 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 2 J. O 1 2. in eodem loco R 17 II O 7. eodem loco om. in E 1 D C O 3.

V. § 12. Litteras A et M habent W 1 O 3: M et D habent W 2 D. Dis (Di) et M habet O 1: non habent R V G K E 1 O 7. 1. at R G B 1 2 K.

<sup>z</sup> ad V atr. uiridi superscr. 5. sed hoc R 6 W 1 M 1. sed de hoc R 1 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 5 W 2 M 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 om. R 7. 6. de quo R V P G B 1 2 K 2 S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1 2 7.

de quo B 3. de eo K 1 om. R 7 W 1. 10. presidi R G. psidi E 1.

<sup>i</sup> presidi V eod. atr. fort. praesidii uel pres. uel pres. uel psidii P B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 J O 1-3 7 om. D. 14. <sup>4</sup> laudabiliter V. 15. intellegas R V G B K. intelligas S E.

famous (Or. i 11, 45; Ac. ii 45, 139). His embassy to Rome in 155 B.C. along with Diogenes and Critolaus is well known.

V. § 12. On A and M to distinguish the interlocutors in Cicero's dialogues see an article by Pohlenz in Hermes LXIV pp. 627 ff. He holds that A and M were originally Δ and M standing for Discipulus and Magister and that they were first used in a translation of an exegetical treatise by Paulus, a Persian of Nisibis, made for African Christians by Junilius Africanus.

uirtutem: for the (unusual) acc. and inf. after uidetur cf. 8, 22: it is defended by edd. on the analogy of the Gk construction after δοκεῖ; so after dicitur in Fin. iii 18, 60, quoted by Nipperdey in his note on Tac. Ann. i 69.

pace tua dixerim, 'by your leave,' for the formula cf. Legg. iii 12, 29; Off. iii 10, 41; Ov. Tr. v 12, 45.

nec: aduersative, 'still,' 'and yet,' as in i 24, 58; and Att. xiv 14, 5 'nos et liberati ab egregiis uiris nec liberi sumus' where as here neque = neque tamen.

hoc: sc. agitur.

nempe: ironical, as in iii 20, 49; Brut. 3, 14.

postremo = denique, 'in short,' an unusual use: Hei. compares II Verr. iii, 2, 4, where after the mention of avarice, cruelty, lust is added 'omnia postremo quae uindicaris in altero tibi ipsi uehementer fugienda sunt.'

et, 'and accordingly,' summing up the force of the previous adverbs, cf. iii 2, 3 n. on et inhaerescunt.

nunc dicam 'bene.' dico enim constanter, grauiter, sapienter, fortiter. 13. haec etiam in eculeum coiciuntur, quo uita non adspirat beata.

Quid igitur? solane beata uita, quaeso, relinquitur extra 20 ostium limenque carceris, cum constantia, grauitas, fortitudo, sapientia reliquaeque uirtutes rapiantur ad tortorem nullumque recusent nec supplicium nec dolorem?

Tu, si quid es facturus, noua aliqua conquiras oportet; ista me minime mouent, non solum quia peruulgata sunt, sed multo 25 magis quia, tamquam leuia quaedam uina nihil ualent in aqua, sic Stoicorum ista magis gustata quam potata delectant. uelut iste chorus uirtutum in eculeum inpositus imagines constituit ante oculos cum amplissima dignitate, ut ad eas cursim perrec-

§ 13, 17. eculeum R V P G B 2 K I S E I 2 D II O I 3 7. eculeum
B I M I. equuleum B 3 W 2 M 2 J. aculeum W I. || coiciuntur V P
B I K I E I M I. coitiuntur R G. coniciuntur B 3 M 2 D J O 7. giciuntur B 2. gniciuntur W 2. conitiuntur C. cōniciuntur O 3. cōijciuntur S at j fort. postea add. || adspirat R G. aspirat V B S.
20. ostium R V B I alii. hostium G S E I 2 alii. 21. reliquaeque (reliueque, reliueque) R V P G B 1-3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I M 2 II J O I 3. nec
reliq̄ q3 W 2 O 2 7. relique q; M I C. relique R 6. 22. supplicium G alt. man. superscr. 23. facturas G as in us alt. man. corr. 24. minime R I 2
V P G B K. memini R I O I 6. || peruulgata R V P G K S J. puulta E I.
26. stoicorum R G K E. istoicorum V. || potata R I 16 V P G K alii.
ta h
pota S. pota R 2 I O B I 2 E I. 27. chorus V atr. ant. superscr.
corus R G K. || inpositus R V G B K S. inpositus E I. 28. amplissima
R V G B K. || cursim R V G B 3 K E 2 M I 2 D J II O 3. cursū W 2 im
ex cursū ras. mut. cursum P B I 2 S W I C O 7. cursū E I. cursūm O I. cursin O 2. || perrecturas G s exp. alt. man.

§ 13. haec, 'qualities like these,' i.e. constantia, grauitas, sapientia, fortitudo, to be supplied out of the adv. in the preceding sentence.

eculeum: Fin. iv 12, 31; Mil. 21, 57, an instrument of torture, of the precise nature of which we have no direct evidence; the sufferer was possibly made to sit astride upon a sharp ridge of wood with weights attached to his hands and feet. See Rich, Diction. of Rom. and Gk. Ant. s.v.

adspirat: 9, 27; p. Quinct. 29, 89; Sull. 18, 52; II Verr. i 54, 142; edd. note that the verb is used in Cicero only in negative sentences, or in questions implying a negative.

Quid igitur, used as in i 25, 61 to introduce a supposed reductio ad absurdum: so quid ergo in iii 32, 78; quid enim i 25, 60. ostium ... carceris, carrying on the imagery of in eculeum coiciuntur.

nullumque, more emphatic than neque ullum, the emphasis being further increased by the repetition of the negative nec...nec: cf. nihilque for nec quicquam in i 49, 118.

facturus, 'if you are to make any impression.'

tamquam with the indicative in the sense of ut is not very common, cf. i 36, 88 n.; iii 10, 23; Quint. Fr. i 1, 46.

in aqua, 'mixed with water.' Cicero seems to mean that as a connoisseur judges a wine, not only by its taste, but by its suitability for mixing with water and making a sound drink, so a philosopher should judge a proposition not by its attractiveness in the abstract, but by the manner in which it works out in practice.

uelut, 'As, for example,' ἀντίκα; this use of uelut is common in Plautus, v. Brix and Lorenz on Plaut. Mil. Gl. 25.

chorus uirtutum: for the phrase cf. Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii p. 268 πᾶς ὁ τῶν ἀρετῶν tura nec eas beata uita a se desertas passura uideatur; 14 cum 30 autem animum ab ista pictura imaginibusque uirtutum ad rem ueritatemque traduxeris, hoc nudum relinquitur, possitne quis beatus esse quam diu torqueatur. quam ob rem hoc nunc quae-ramus; uirtutes autem noli uereri ne expostulent et querantur se a beata uita esse relictas. si enim nulla uirtus prudentia uacat, 35 prudentia ipsa hoc uidet, non omnis bonos esse etiam beatos, multaque de M. Atilio, Q. Caepione, M'. Aquilio recordatur, beatamque uitam, si imaginibus potius uti quam rebus ipsis placet, conantem ire in euleum retinet ipsa prudentia negatque ei cum dolore et cruciatu quicquam esse commune.

§ 14. 31. nudum R 16 7 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2

D C H J O 1-3 7. 33. uerereri R V G K. || quaerantur se beata G alt. man.
superscr. 36. matilio R 1 10 16 G B 1 2 K 1. matilio V til in ras.
 M. Atilio R 6 B 3 W 2 M 2 O 2. m. attilio R 2 E 2. m. atilio P S O 1.
 marco attilio O 7. attilio W 1. malitio E 1. || Q. B 3 W 1 M 1 2 D C O 1-3.
 Qu. R 6. quinto R 1 2 10 V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 1 2 W 2 II O 7.
 quinto S marg. Q. quitto R 16. q3 R 17. || caepione M. aquilio R 6.

cepione m. aquilio B 3 M 2 D C O 2 3. caepionē aquilo V marg. m. cepione m. aquilo R 2 10. caepionemaquilo R G. coepionem aquilo K 1.

cepione m. aquilio P. cepionē aquilo E 1 2. cepionē aquilo S marg.
 Q. Scipione. scipione M. aquilio II. cepione aquilio O 1. cepione aquilo

R 16 17 B 1. cepiōe aliq W 2. scipione aquilo B 2.

θεός χορός; Plat. Phaedr. 247 A φθόνος γὰρ ἔξω θελοῦ χοροῦ ἴστανται.

ante oculos, 'presents to our eyes an extremely impressive spectacle'; the oculi are those of the spectators, not of the supposed chorus virtutum.

beata uita: the subject is sometimes (and often in poetry) placed in the second half of a double sentence: cf. Ac. i 8, 30 (quoted by Wopkens, op. cit. 148), 'quamquam oreretur a sensibus, tamen non esse iudicium ueritatis in sensibus' where Lamb. thinks that ind. uer. should come immediately after oreretur, as Ern. here proposes to put beata uita after porrectura. Sff. thinks that beata uita has been inserted between eas and a se to prevent the possibility of se being taken to refer to eas.

§ 14. nudum, 'the abstract difficulty remains.' Hei. compares Parad. 3, 24 'nuda ("in the abstract") ista si ponas, iudicare qualia sint non facile possum.'

nulla uirtus prudentia uacat: prudentia though usually employed in Cic. (e.g. iii 8, 17) as a translation of φρόνησις is here used as equivalent to ἐπιστήμη, scientia, the knowledge which enters into the definition of all virtues (Stob. Ecl. ii 59, 4 W.). Cf. Off. i 43, 153 where the distinction between the sapientia (σοφία) common to all virtues and the particular virtue prudentia (φρόνησις) is clearly drawn.

M. Atilio: M. Atilius Regulus, 'the prototype of heroic misfortune' (Mommsen) with the Romans, cons. 256 B.C., defeated and captured by the Carthaginians in 255, and according to the legend put to death with tortures, cf. Off. iii 26, 99; Hor. C. iii 5, 13 sqq.; Mommsen, R.H. II 178 ff.

Q. Caepione: Q. Servilius Caepio, cos. 106 B.C., defeated by the Cimbri at Arausio in 105, deprived of his office, of his seat in the senate, and of his property, does not seem to have been such a striking example of virtue struggling against misfortune as Cicero thinks. Mommsen, R.H. III 436 ff.

M' Aquilio: M' Aquilius the younger, cos. 101 B.C., despatched as Roman ambassador to Asia in 90 B.C., induced Nicomedes of Bithynia to declare war on Mithradates and was captured and put to death by Mithradates the following year. Mommsen, R.H. IV 24 ff.

ipsa prudentia, expunged unnecessarily by Dav. and Ern. A number of similar exx. of repetition are quoted by Wopkens, op. cit. p. 359.

VI. 15. Facile patior te isto modo agere, etsi iniquum est praescribere mihi te quem ad modum a me disputari uelis. sed quaero utrum aliquid actum superioribus diebus an nihil arbitremur.

5 Actum uero, et aliquantum quidem.

Atqui, si ita est, profligata iam haec et paene ad exitum adducta quaestio est.

Quo tandem modo?

Quia motus turbulenti iactationesque animorum incitatae et 10 impetu inconsiderato elatae rationem omnem repellentes uitae beatae nullam partem relinquunt. quis enim potest mortem aut dolorem metuens, quorum alterum saepe adest, alterum semper inpendet, esse non miser? quid, si idem, quod plerumque fit, paupertatem, ignominiam, infamiam timet, si debilitatem, caeci-15 tatem, si denique, quod non singulis hominibus, sed potentibus populis saepe contingit, seruitutem? potest ea timens esse quis-

VI. § 15, 1. ito G in isto alt. man. corr. || agere P W I D C O I 3 7.

<sup>a</sup> egere V et B atr. ant. superscr. aegere K I. egere R G B 2 E.
2. praescribere R G. pscribere V. 10. impetu R G B K S. impetuum V. inpetu E (h. l.) || aelate R V K G a ante e exp. alt. man. || omnem alt. man.
superscr. habet G. 13. inpendet G E. inpendet R V B K S. || quid si R V P G B 1-3 S E 2 M 2 H O 2. quod si E I W I D C J. Q si
M I O 3. qd̄ si K I O I. qd' si W 2. qui si O 7. 14. infamia R G <sup>modo</sup>
alt. man. superscr. infamia K atr. nigriore mut. 15. non singulis V.
16. contingit G at n post i exp. alt. man.

VI. § 15. facile patior, 'I am quite content that,' i 23, 55, p. Planc. 25, 62; Att. xv 2, 2.

aliquid: cf. i 20, 45 'etenim si nunc aliquid adsequi se putant' and n. there.

et aliquantum quidem: cf. iii 20, 48 n.

profligata: 'virtually finished,' Aul. Gell. N.A. xv 5 devotes a chapter to the castigation of writers who used the word profligare in the sense in which Cic. uses it here and in Fam. viii 9, 2; xii 14, 2; 30, 2 'qui profligato bello ac paene sublato renouatum bellum gerere conamur,' prou. cons. 14, 35; according to him it should always be used in the sense of ad perniciem interitumque deducere; the proper Latin for the meaning given to profligata here is, he asserts, adfectus for which he quotes Cicero prou. cons. 8, 19 'bellum adfectum uidemus' and ib. 12, 29: it seems clear that the scruples felt by Aul. Gell. were unknown to Cicero and Livy (iii 50, 10; ix 37, 1; xxi, 40, 11; xxxv 6, 3).

alterum..alterum, 'the latter (i.e. dolor)

...the former (i.e. mors)' as in i 38, 91: the neuter is used, since quorum, referring to nouns of different genders, is neuter: for other neuters referring to masc. and fem. nouns cf. i 24, 56; iii 4, 7.

ignominiam, infamiam, 'disgrace, degradation,' cf. de Rep. iv 6, 6 'censoris iudicium nihil fere damnato nisi ruborem adfert: itaque...animaduersio illa ignominia dicta est' whereas infamia involved the loss of civil rights; the same climax in iv 20, 45.

non...sed differs from non modo...sed etiam: in non...sed the speaker definitely excludes from consideration an idea which, whether true or false, is not relevant or is inadequate: in non modo...sed etiam he includes both statements in order to emphasize the greater importance of the second: cf. Ac. ii 23, 73; Off. ii 8, 27; Fin. i 2, 6. Contrast the expression in Fin. i 13, 43 'cupiditates...quae non modo singulos homines, sed uniuersas familias euertunt, totam etiam labefactant saepe rem publicam.'

quam beatus? 16. quid, qui non modo ea futura timet, uerum etiam fert sustinetque praesentia? adde eodem exsilia, luctus, orbitates; qui rebus his fractus aegritudine eliditur, potest tandem esse non miserrimus? quid uero? illum quem libidinibus inflammatum et furem uidemus, omnia rabide adpetentem cum inexplibili cupiditate, quoque affluentius uoluptates undique hauriat, eo grauius ardentiusque sitientem, nonne recte miserrimum dixeris? quid? elatus ille leuitate inanique laetitia exsultans et temere gestiens nonne tanto miserior quanto sibi uidetur beator? ergo ut hi miseri, sic contra illi beati quos nulli metus terrent, nullae aegritudines exedunt, nullae libidines incitant, nullae futiles laetitiae exsultantes languidis liquefaciunt uoluptatibus. ut maris igitur tranquillitas intellegitur nulla ne minima quidem aura fluctus commouente, sic animi quietus et placatus status cernitur cum perturbatio nulla est qua moueri queat. 17. quodsi est qui uim fortunae, qui omnia humana, quaecumque accidere possunt, tolerabilia ducat, ex quo nec timor

§ 16, 18. adde V S E r 3. at de R G K i 2 L 5 ed. H. at de P marg. adde. acde B i. || exsilia R V G B K S E. 20. miserrimus R V G B K. || libidinibus R V G B K. 21. adpetentem R V G K E. appetentem B S. 22. affluentius R V G B K S E. 24. miserrimum R V G. miserrimum K. || elatus V P G B S E. eleuatus R K. 25. exultans R V G B K S E. || temere J. temē P. timere V i in e mut. timere R i i in e mut.

timere G K S E. timore B. 26. sic contra R G S. sicontra V eod. atr. sicontra K. 27. libidines R V G B K. 28. futiles R V G K. futiles B i W i. || exultantes R V G B K S E. || liquae faciunt G. 29. intellegitur R V G B K. intelligitur S E. 30. minima R V P G B K.

§ 17, 32. quaecumque R 6 7 W i J O i 3. quae cuique R V P G B r-3

K i S E r 2 M i 2 D C II O 2 7. q̄c̄3 W 2. 33. tolerabilia V eod. atr. tollerabilia G.

§ 16. eliditur, 'is crushed'; the word is used of ships broken up in a storm (Caes. B.C. iii. 27), of strangling (elisa fauce Ov. M. xiv 738; ix 198; xii 142), of grinding between the teeth (Ov. M. xiv 196 elisi sub dentibus), of being crushed in a crowd (Ov. Epp. ex Pont. iv 9, 21 turba quamuis eliderer).

sitientem, often used metaphorically in Cic. pro Planc. 5, 13 'sitientem me uirtutis tuae deseruisti' Q. Fr. iii 5, 3; Phil. v 7, 20.

futiles: 'futiles dicuntur qui silere tacenda nequeunt sed ea effundunt; sic et uasa futilia a fundendo uocata' Fest. p. 89 M.

liquefaciunt: cf. ii 22, 52; iv 17, 37.

§ 17. Quodsi est qui: 'But if there is such a character...what is there to prevent his happiness?' The form of the conclusion does not throw any doubt upon the existence of such characters as are described; but as the discussion has turned not upon their existence, but upon their happiness in misfortune, the hypothetical form of the conclusion is appropriate.

Many edd. follow F.A.W. in punctuating 'quod si est, qui...' 'if this is so, the person who, etc.': but this makes an extremely harsh anacoluthon (qui ducat... idemque si nihil concupiscat), and as Küh. points out, Cic. never elsewhere uses quod si est in this sense but quod si ita est, or id si est, or id si ita est, or quod ut ita sit or quod cum ita sit.

quaecumque accidere possunt, an emphatic amplification of omnia; the reading quae cuique adopted by Kl. and C.F.W.M. introduces a distributive idea eum nec angor attingat, idemque si nihil concupiscat, nulla 35 eferatur animi inani uoluptate, quid est cur is non beatus sit?

 et si haec uirtute efficiuntur, quid est cur uirtus ipsa per se non efficiat beatos?

VII. Atqui alterum dici non potest quin ii qui nihil metuant, nihil angantur, nihil concupiscant, nulla inpotenti laetitia efer-rantur, beati sint, itaque id tibi concedo; alterum autem iam integrum non est. superioribus enim disputationibus effectum 5 est uacare omni animi perturbatione sapientem.

18. Nimirum igitur confecta res est; uidetur enim ad exitum uenisse quaestio.

Propemodum id quidem.

Verum tamen mathematicorum iste mos est, non est philo-10 sophorum. nam geometrae cum aliquid docere uolunt, si quid ad eam rem pertinet eorum quae ante docuerunt, id sumunt pro concesso et probato, illud modo explicant de quo ante nihil scriptum est; philosophi quamcumque rem habent in manibus, in eam quae conueniunt congerunt omnia, etsi alio loco disputata 15 sunt. quod ni ita esset, cur Stoicus, si esset quaesitum satisne ad beate uiuendum uirtus posset, multa diceret? cui satis esset respondere se ante docuisse nihil bonum esse, nisi quod honestum

35. eferatur R V G B. efferatur P B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>12</sub> J O<sub>7</sub>. hœcferatur K I. feratur O I.

VII. 1. quin hi G B. 2. agantur V <sup>N</sup>atr. ant. superscr. || impotenti

R V G B S. inpotenti E. in potenti O<sub>3</sub>. || eferant V B<sub>1</sub>. eferant
 R G. hœcferant K I ec in hœc atr. nigr. mut. efferant P B<sub>3</sub> S E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> C II J O<sub>1-37</sub>. efferant R I<sub>o</sub>. et ferant E I. efferentur R 6. ferantur B 2. 5. uacari G.

§ 18, 9. uerumtamen R V G K. ueruntamen B S. 16. beatae G.
 17. se ante docuisse R 6 7 17 K<sub>2</sub> E<sub>3</sub> L<sub>5</sub> W<sub>12</sub> O<sub>3</sub> ed. H. se ante docuisset II t ex parte eras. se ante C docuisse om. se aut docuisse D O<sub>7</sub>. se satis ante docuisse J O I. sed ante docuisset P marg. se ante docuisse.

sed ante docuisset R G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>1</sub> E I. sed ante docuisset V <sup>i</sup>atr. uiridi mut.
 si ante docuisset B<sub>3</sub> E<sub>2</sub> M<sub>12</sub> O<sub>2</sub>.

which is quite out of place; the reading favoured by Bentl. quae cuiquam is superior to quae cuique but lacks adequate MSS. support.

ex quo = ut ex eo, 'so that, as a result.'
idemque si = et si idem; the construction is quodsi est qui...ducatur, et si idem nihil concupiscat, the second si being a repetition after the parenthesis, and idem being put at the beginning of the clause to make clear that the second si-clause relates to the same subject.

VII. dici non potest quin: for the constr. cf. Phil. iii 8, 21 'quid potest dicere

quin...se hostem confessus sit'; Fin. iv 13, 32 quoted by Draeger, Synt. II p. 641.

alterum...integrum non est: 'the second point is no longer open to discussion': for integrum cf. 21, 62, Liv. xxvi 15, 9, p. Ligar. i 1 'confitendum est, opinor, praesertim cum meus necessarius Pansa fecerit ut id integrum iam non esset.'

§ 18. ad eam rem refers to aliquid:
ea res is used to avoid the repetition of id.

conueniunt, 'are pertinent'; cf. Inu. ii 5, 16 'hoc autem...oportebit attendere non omnis [sc. locos communes] in omnem causam conuenire.'

esset, hoc probato consequens esse beatam uitam uirtute esse contentam, et quo modo hoc sit consequens illi, sic illud huic, ut, si beata uita uirtute contenta sit, nisi honestum quod sit, nihil aliud sit bonum. 19. sed tamen non agunt sic; nam et de honesto et de summo bono separatim libri sunt, et cum ex eo efficiatur satis magnam in uirtute ad beate uiuendum esse uim, nihilo minus hoc agunt separatim. propriis enim et suis argu-25 mentis et admonitionibus tractanda quaeque res est, tanta praesertim. caue enim putes ullam in philosophia uocem emis-sam clariorem ullum esse philosophiae promissum uberius aut maius. nam quid proficitur? o di boni! perfecturam se, qui 30 ut omnia praesidia haberet in se bene beateque uiuendi, ut esset semper denique beatus. 20. sed uidero quid efficiat; tantisper hoc ipsum magni aestimo quod pollicetur. nam Xerxes quidem

uita
 18. beata uirtute V B I.      beata uitaute E I.      beata uirtute R G B 2 K I.
 19. contentam R 2 10 V P G B I E I O I.      contemptam R I K I. conc̄atam (sic) R 16.      contenta R 2 10 G O I.      contempta R I 16 K I E I.
 § 19, 24. nihilo minus V.      nichilo minus P.      nihilominus R eod. atr. nihilominus G.      25. admonitionibus R.      ammonitionibus B I S. amonitionibus V.      amonitionibus E I.      amonitionibus G.      26. ullam in R I 7 P B I-3 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3.      ullam in V atr. ant.      ullam a G.      ullam ph'ye O 7.      27. ullaue G in ullumue alt. man. corr.      28. dii R V P G B I-3 K I S E I J O 7.
 § 20, 32. magni V P.      magi G alt. man. superscr.      magi R K. || aestumo R V G.      aestumo B K.      aestimo P.

sit: the change from secondary to primary sequence is due probably to the fact that in the writer's mind cui satis esset respondere was practically equivalent to qui respondebit.

§ 19. libri: thus Chrysippus wrote both περὶ ἀρετῶν (Diog. L. vii 127) and περὶ ἀγαθῶν (Plut. St. rep. p. 1048 A), Cleanthes both περὶ καλῶν and περὶ ἀρετῶν (Diog. L. vii 175).

ex eo, the identity of honestum and the summum bonum, which is proved by the Stoics in two separate lines of argument.

hoc, the sufficiency of virtue to promote happiness, which though virtually proved in the discussion on honestum and again in that on the summum bonum is made the subject of a separate treatise.

propriis...et suis: cf. i 29, 70 'quae est ei natura? propria, puto, et sua'; Or. ii 10, 39 'adsumpto aliunde uti bono, non proprio nec suo.'

paruisset...esset: for secondary sequence depending upon a primary tense (proficitur) cf. iii 15, 32 n. on uenisset.

§ 20. uidero: cf. i 11, 23 n. on uiderit.

nam Xerxes quidem: nam here introduces a clause giving not so much an intellectual as an emotional reason for the preceding statement: 'the promise of happiness is not to be despised, because one would give a great price to be persuaded it could be realized' is perhaps not a logical but certainly a comprehensible statement. The following sentence falls into two parts (Xerxes quidem... praemium proposuit and nos uellem praemio elicere possemus) forming the statement of a contrast; quidem (like μὲν) points forward to the second part which might have contained an autem or sed to correspond: cf. Lael. 8, 26 'an esset hoc quidem proprium amicitiae, sed antiquior... alia causa;... nam utilitates quidem... percipiuntur... in amicitia autem nihil fictum est.'

refertus omnibus praemiis donisque fortunae, non equitatu, non pedestribus copiis, non nauium multitudine, non infinito pondere 35 auri contentus praemium proposuit qui inuenisset nouam uoluptatem; qua ipsa non fuit contentus; neque enim umquam finem inueniet libido. nos uellem praemio elicere possemus qui nobis aliquid attulisset quo hoc firmiter crederemus.

VIII. 21. Vellem id quidem, sed habeo paulum quod requiram. ego enim adsentior eorum quae posuisti alterum alteri consequens esse, ut, quem ad modum, si quod honestum sit, id solum sit bonum, sequatur uitam beatam uirtute confici, 5 sic, si uita beata in uirtute sit, nihil esse nisi uirtutem bonum. sed Brutus tuus auctore Aristo et Antiocho non sentit hoc; putat enim, etiamsi sit bonum aliquid praeter uirtutem.

33. donisque R 1 2 10 16 G K.

donique V atr. ant. superscr.

34. nonnauium K.

nonnauium V atr. ant. superscr.

nonnauium R G.

35. uerba praemium.....contentus om. E 1. || proposuit qui R V P G B 1-3

K 1 2 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1 7. || inuenisset R V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S

E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 7. || uoluntatem G B. 36. non fuit

R 1 10 16 V G L 4. non fuerit E 3. fieret L 2 non om. 37. inueniet R 1 7

V P G B 1-3 K 1 E 2 W 2 M 2 D I I J O 1-3 7. inueniet M 1.

inuenit W 1 C. || libido R V G B 1 2 K S E. 38. attulisset R S E.

attulisset V d in t cod. atr. mut. attulisset G. attulisset K 1.

VIII. § 21, 1. paulum R V G B 1 K 1 E 1 W 1 2 D C J O 1. paululum

P B 2 3 S E 2 M 1 2 O 2 3 7. 2. adsentior V G E. assentior R B K S.

6. aristone R 1 6 7 10 16 17 V P G B 1-3 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-5 W 1 2 M 1 2

D C H J O 1-3. aristore O 7. antione R 2. Aristo corr. Lambinus.

7. post praeter uirtutem habet V manu ant. in marg. script. tam ad beate uiuendū satis pose uirtutē, quae uerba scribae qui grassabatur in § 24 libri tertii tribuenda uidentur.

praemiis: Lamb. altered to muneribus and Bentl. who thought muneribus too wide a departure from the MSS. tradition himself proposed corporis bonis et fortunae: for praemium in the sense of 'advantage.' Hei. compares Lucr. iii. 956 'omnia perfunctus uitai praemia marces.'

proposuit qui inuenisset, i.e. prop. ei qui inuenisset: for the omission of the antecedent Wopkens (op. cit. p. 250) quotes amongst other passages iv 23, 51 'qui rem publicam saluam esse uellent se sequi iussit,' Fin. ii 28, 90 'qui... loquitur ut Frugi ille Piso non audio': Ern. and Dav. unnecessarily insert ei.

fuit contentus: Bentl. followed by Ern. and Bait. read fuisset and Kl. fuerit. There is no necessity for any alteration. It is true that none of the other authorities who tell this story either of Xerxes (Val. Max. ix 1, 3 ext.) or of Darius Codomannus (Clearchus ap. Athen. xii 539 B) or of the Persian kings in general (Theophr. ap. Athen. iv 144 F) has any corresponding statement with regard to the result of the new pleasure upon the king's happiness. But Cicero may either have made the assertion on his own responsibility or have regarded Xerxes' attempt to conquer Greece as sufficient evidence of a continued dissatisfaction with his fortunes.

hoc, 'our present contention' sc. philosophiam omnia praesidia habere in se bene beateque uiuendi.

VIII. § 21. sic: sc. sequatur.

Aristo: that this and not Aristone is the right reading here is proved by the fact that Cic. elsewhere refers to Aristus, the brother of Antiochus of Ascalon, as being the teacher of Brutus (Brut. 97, 332; Ac. i 3, 12; Fin. v 3, 8); also the coupling of the two names here in apposition to a singular noun auctore implies a closer connexion between them than we know to have existed between Antiochus

Quid igitur? contra Brutumne me dicturum putas?

Tu uero, ut uidetur; nam praefinire non est meum.

10 22. Quid cuique igitur consentaneum sit, alio loco. nam ista mihi et cum Antiocho saepe et cum Aristo nuper, cum Athenis imperator apud eum deuersarer, dissensio fuit. mihi enim non uidebatur quisquam esse beatus posse, cum in malis esset; in malis autem sapientem esse posse, si essent ulla corporis 15 aut fortunae mala. dicebantur haec, quae scriptitauit etiam Antiochus locis pluribus, uirtutem ipsam per se beatam uitam efficere posse neque tamen beatissimam; deinde ex maiore parte plerasque

8. brutumne R 6717 B3 S E2 W12 M12 DCII O127. brutum neq̄ V atr. ant. corr. brutum nec R1 PG B12 K1 E1 Jom. O3.

§ 22, 11. aristone R161017 VP B1-3 K1 S E1-3 L3-6 W12 M12 DCII J O1-37 ed. H. aristhona G. aristono L2. Aristo corr. Lambinus. 12. dissentio G. 15. scriptasit R110 GBKES marg. scriptis. scriptasit V atr. ant. mut. scriptis R6717 P B3 E2 L2-46 W1 M12 II O23. scripta sunt B2 L5 DCJ O17 ed. H. scripta sint K2. scriptis sunt E5. scriptis W2 at in ras. septa s̄ R16. scriptitauit corr. Klotzius. 16. efficere posse R6 VPG B1-3 K1 S E12 W12

M12 DCII J O1-37. efficere R1 eod. atr. efficere R7 posse om.
17. beatissimam R VG K. || maiore (hic et infra) R VG B12 K1 S E12 W12 M12 J O1-3. maiori (hic et infra) D O7. maiori hic, infra maiore C.

and Aristo. It is true that Plut. Brut. c. 2 calls Antiochus' brother Aristo (though many edd. (after Dav.) alter Ἀπλωῶνα to Ἀριστον); those who read Aristone here are compelled to assume either that Plut. is right as against Cicero's repeated statements with regard to the form of the name or that Cic. is here referring to Aristo the Peripatetic (see Reid's n. on Ac. ii 4, 12) with whom there is no evidence that Brutus had anything to do.

Antiocho: cf. iii 25, 59 n.

putat enim: sc. uitam beatam uirtute confici.

tu uero: sc. agas; cf. i. 9, 17 'tu, ut uidetur.'

praefinire non est meum, a good-humoured reference to the remonstrance in 6, 15, 'iniquum est praescribere mihi te quemadmodum a me disputari uelis.'

§ 22. ista...dissensio, i.e. 'eadem dissensio quae nunc est mihi tecum': for dissensio cum cf. Brut. 49, 185; Off. iii 13, 56.

saepe, during his residence as a student in Athens in 79 B.C. Cf. iii 25, 59 n.

nuper, during his visit to Athens in 50 B.C. when returning from Cilicia where he had been saluted as imperator by his army, Att. v 20, 3: on this occasion he was entertained by Aristus, cf. Brut. 97, 332 'Aristus hospes et familiaris meus' Att. v 10, 5.

It seems almost incredible that Küh. should read Aristone here; it is perfectly clear from the passages referred to that Cic. was the guest of Aristus, not Aristo, during his stay in Athens. Küh. finds support for his reading in the ref. in Ac. ii 4, 12 where the speaker after mentioning Heraclitus, Aristus, Aristo and Dio says 'multum temporis in ista una disputatione consumpsimus'; Küh. seems to think this a proof that Cic. and Aristo once discussed this subject: a glance at the context would have shown that the speaker there is not Cic. but Lucullus, who is describing a discussion in which he engaged at Alexandria.

sapientem: for the change from the personal to the impersonal constr. cf. Or. ii 74, 299 (after dicitur) Cato M. 18, 63 (after dicuntur): a somewhat similar change of constr. is seen in N.D. i 12, 31 'facit enim...Socratem disputantem...eundemque et solem et animum deum dicere.'

scriptitauit: Kl.'s emendation for the corrupt scripta sit of many mss. has been adopted by Hei. Sff. and Küh.: the reading scriptis is adopted by Bai. T.S. C.F.W.M. and Schiche; in the latter case it is necessary to assume that scripta res nominari, etiamsi quae pars abesset, ut uires, ut ualetudinem, ut diuitias, ut honorem, ut gloriam, quae genere non numero 20 cernerentur; item beatam uitam, etiamsi ex aliqua parte clauderet, tamen ex multo maiore parte obtinere nomen suum. 23. haec nunc enucleare non ita necesse est, quamquam non constantissimè dici mihi uidentur. nam et qui beatus est, non intellego quid requirat ut sit beatior (si est enim quod desit, ne beatus 25 quidem est), et quod ex maiore parte unam quamque rem appellari spectarique dicunt, est ubi id isto modo ualeat; cum uero tria genera malorum esse dicant, qui duorum generum malis omnibus urgeatur ut omnia aduersa sint in fortuna, omnibus oppressum corpus et confectum doloribus, huic paulumne ad 30 beatam uitam deesse dicemus, non modo ad beatissimam?

18. si quae R G B K S E I 2 D. si q̄ P. si qua B 2 3 W I 2 M I 2
 J O I-37. si q̄ C. || ualetudinem R V G. ualitudinem B S E. ual&itudinem (sic) K I. 20. clauderet R I 17 P G B I K I S E I 2 D C ca ca
 O 7. clauderet V atr. ant. mut. clauderet II eod. atr. cluderet B 2. claudicaret R 6 7 P marg. B 3 S marg. W I M I 2 O I-3 ed. H. claudicet W 2 J. 21. obtinere K I E 2 W I M I. optinere R V G B I 2 S E I.
 § 23, 22. enucleare R G K. enunc leare V. || constantissime R V G B K.
 23. uidentur P. uidetur R V G K. || intellego R V G B K. intelligo S E.
 25. maiore R V G B K. || quamque partem G. quamque S rem om. || appellari R V G B K. 28. aduersa R G B I K E. aduersa V B 3 I I O I. adūsa P S W 2 M I J. adursa B 2. 29. paulumne R V G B I 2 K I W I 2 J O 3. paululumne P B 3 S E 2 M I 2 I I O I 2. paulum
 E I D C. paululum O 7. 30. ad beatissimam R V G K.

was written in the archetype for scripsit and the mistake rectified by adding the proper form of the final syllable; the error may have been rendered easier as Bai. suggests by the two syllables scrip- and -sit being divided in the archetype.

ex maiore parte: cf. Fin. v 30, 92 'semper enim ex eo quod maximas partes continet latissimeque funditur tota res appellatur.'

genere non numero, 'which are distinguished as belonging to a particular class, not by occupying a certain position in it,' i.e. one does not think of denying the title of 'wealthy' or 'healthy' to a man because some one else is healthier or wealthier; so a life may deserve the title of 'happy' although one may conceive a life happier still. For the use of genere here cf. De opt. gen. or. 1, 3 'non genere differunt...sed in eodem genere non sunt pares' and 'haec ut alius melius quam alius concedendum est; uerum id fit non genere sed gradu'; for the use of numerus as equivalent to locus or gradus cf. Diu.

in Caec. 19, 62 'cum is tibi parentis numero fuisset.'

clauderet, a word used in Ter. And. 573, and by Cic. in Or. 51, 170; Brut. 59, 214: claudicaret of some MSS. adopted by Bentl. is due to the substitution of a more familiar for an unusual word.

enucleare, 'analyse in detail,' cf. Part. Or. 17, 57 'nec quicquam in amplificatione nimis enucleandum est': in Planc. 5, 10 'enucleata suffragia' means 'votes given after careful consideration'; cf. also Wilkins' note to Or. iii 9, 32.

non ita = non admodum: 'only occurs in Cicero and the older writers before adjectives and adverbs' Reid on Ac. ii 2, 5.

est ubi like the Gk. ἔστιν ὅπου; T. S. cf. Plaut. Pseud. 1325 'erit ubi te ulciscar si uiuo.'

tria genera: for the τριλογία τῶν ἀγαθῶν and (consequently) τῶν κακῶν into bona (and mala) mentis, corporis and externa cf. Reid's n. to Ac. i 5, 19.

non modo = ne dicam, 'to say nothing of the supremely happy life'; cf. i 38, 92 n.

IX. 24. Hoc illud est quod Theophrastus sustinere non potuit. nam cum statuisset uerbera, tormenta, cruciatus, patriae euersiones, exsilia, orbitates magnam uim habere ad male misereque uiuendum, non est ausus elate et ample loqui cum humiliter demisseque sentiret; quam bene, non quaeritur, constanter quidem certe. itaque mihi placere non solet consequentia reprehendere, cum prima concesseris. hic autem elegantissimus omnium philosophorum et eruditissimus non magnopere reprehenditur cum tria genera dicit bonorum, uexatur autem ab omnibus primum in eo libro quem scripsit de uita beata, in quo multa disputat, quam ob rem is qui torqueatur, qui crucietur, beatus esse non possit. in eo etiam putatur dicere in rotam (id est genus quoddam tormenti apud Graecos) beatam uitam non escendere.

IX. § 24, 1. teophrastus R V G B. teoph rastus K I a eras. teophrastus E I.
3. exilia R V G B K S E. 7. elegantissimus R V G B. eligantissimus K.
8. eruditissimus R V G B K. || magnopere R V P G B K S. 9. dicit J.

diē W 2. dici V et B atram. ant. superscr. dici R G K E. 12. id est genus quoddam tormenti apud graecos R 2 10 17 V P G B 12 K 1 S E 12 L 2-4 D C II O 1 7 Gr. quod genus tormenti est apud graecos W I. .i. in genus celt. M I. id est in genus celt. O 3. uel genus celt. ed. H. E 3 sed punctis not. habet R I at linea subducta atr. recenti. non habent R 6 16 B 3 K 2 L 5 6 W 2 M 2 J O 2. 13. escendere V. escenderet R G. ascendere R 6 P B 1 3 S E 2 W I M 1 2 II O 2 3 7. adscenderet B 2. ascenderet K I.

scandere W 2 J O I. scand R 16. attingere D. attingeret E I. actingere C.

IX. § 24. sustinere: 'this is the very point which Theophrastus was unable to maintain': Theophrastus saw that the logical result of the τριλογία τῶν ἀγαθῶν was an abandonment of the doctrine that virtue alone was capable of conferring happiness; therefore he frankly refused to maintain an impossible position: for sustinere cf. Att. vii 7, 5; II Verr. i 4, 10 'sustinebunt tales uiri se tot senatoribus... non credidisse.' For Theophrastus's views cf. Fin. v 5, 12; Ac. i 9, 33.

cum...sentiret, 'with such abject and spiritless views,' referring to cum statuisset...uiuendum.

elegantissimus: cf. Ac. i 9, 33 'Theophrastus...uir et oratione suauis et ita moratus ut prae se probitatem quandam et ingenuitatem ferret,' Brut. 31, 121 'quis...Theophrasto dulcior?'

uexatur, 'is assailed'; cf. Flacc. 20, 48 'probris omnibus maledictisque uexat.' Mo.: cf. Aul. Gell. ii 6, 3 'qui fertur et raptatur atque huc atque illuc distrahitur, is uexari proprie dicitur'; Macr. Sat. vi 7 (where the same explanation is given).

in eo libro, 'for the book which he wrote': after verbs denoting to praise or to blame, in can be used to express the grounds of the action: edd. cf. Q. Fr. ii 4, 5 'Pompeius noster in amicitia P. Lentuli uituperatur'; Planc. 33, 82 'quem qui reprehendit in eo reprehendit,' etc. Bentl. declared that the sentence made nonsense, as in here could only mean 'in' and read 'quod in eo libro, quem...beata, multa disputarit.'

Theophrastus wrote (acc. to Diog. Laert. v 2, 43, 49) a work περί εὐδαιμονίας and another περί τῆς θείας εὐδαιμονίας. It is probably the former to which Cic. refers here and in Fin. v 28, 85.

rotam: Aristoph. Pax 451 ἐπὶ τοῦ τροχοῦ στρεβλοῖτο μαστιγούμενος where the Sch. notes οἱ γὰρ δοῦλοι σφαλόμενοι ἐπὶ τροχοῦ δεσμούμενοι καὶ συρόμενοι ἐτύπτοντο ἀνακλώμενοι ἐν αὐτῷ: cf. also Antiph. de caede Her. 40; Andoc. de Myst. 43; Dem. contr. Aph. 48. Many editors bracket id est...Graecos as an obvious gloss. But it is doubtful whether non usquam id quidem dicit omnino, sed, quae dicit, idem ualent.

 15 25. possum igitur, cui concesserim in malis esse dolores corporis, in malis naufragia fortunae, huic suscensere dicenti non omnis bonos esse beatos, cum in omnis bonos ea quae ille in malis numerat cadere possint? uexatur idem Theophrastus et libris et scholis omnium philosophorum quod in Callisthene suo lau-20 darit illam sententiam:

Vitám regit fortúna, non sapiéntia.

negant ab ullo philosopho quicquam dictum esse languidius.
 recte id quidem, sed nihil intellego dici potuisse constantius.
 si enim tot sunt in corpore bona, tot extra corpus in casu atque 25 fortuna, nonne consentaneum est plus fortunam, quae domina re-rum sit et externarum et ad corpus pertinentium, quam consilium ualere? 26. an malumus Epicurum imitari? qui multa praeclare saepe dicit; quam enim sibi constanter conuenienterque dicat,

14. non usquam R V P G B I 2 K S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 C H J O I 3 7.
 § 25, 16. suscensere R K E.      su<sup>l</sup>censere V s in c mut.      succensere P G
 B I 2 S E 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O I 3 7.      ||      omnis (bis) R V B G K.
 18. theophrastus R.      thephrastus G alt. man. superscr.      theofrastus V. teophrastus B E.      teopharastus K.      19. scholis B.      scolis R V G K S E. || callisthene V P G B K.      calisthene R.      22. languidius R G B K.      languidus V.
 23. intellego R V G B K.      intelligo S E.
 § 26, 28. quam enim R V P G B I-3 K S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D I I J O I-3 7.      qm C.

the phrase 'in rotam escendere' would have been intelligible to a Latin reader without explanation; and it is significant that in the two passages in Apuleius where the wheel of torture is mentioned (Apul. Met. iii 9 'nec mora cum ritu Graeciensi ignis et rota...inferuntur,' and x 10 'nec rota uel eculus more Graecorum tormentis eius apparatus iam deerant'), the fact of its being a Greek form of punishment is emphasized. References to Ixion's wheel are common in the poets (e.g. Tib. i 3, 74; Verg. Aen. vi 616; Ov. M. iv 461, etc.), and such a reference would not have required explanation here: but rota cannot stand for rota Ixionis any more than taurus could stand in ii 7, 17 for taurus Phalaridos. In Plaut. Cist. 208 'iactor, crucior, agitor, stimulator, uorsor in Amoris rota' the metaphor would be quite intelligible even to an audience to whom the rota as a form of punishment was unfamiliar; but there are no such qualifying words here as in Plaut. to help the reader's understanding.

omnino goes closely with the negative though it is often thrown to the end of the clause or phrase for the sake of emphasis, cf. Fin. ii 31, 100; N.D. iii 27, 69; Ac. ii 15, 48; trans. 'This particular phrase he certainly never makes use of.'

naufragia, a favourite metaphor for disaster, both in prose and in poetry, cf. Phil. xii 8, 19; Fam. i 9, 5; Ov. Tr. i 6, 8.

scholis: cf. i 4, 7 n.

Callisthene: cf. iii 10, 21 n.

sententiam, 'sentiment' = γνώμην: cf. Or. ii 8, 34 'quid autem subtilius quam crebrae acutaeque sententiae?' with Wilkins's note.

The Gk form of the sentiment is τύχη τὰ θνητῶν πράγματ' οὐκ εὐβουλία: it is quoted by Stobaeus, Ecl. Phys. p. 196 [i 6, 7], as from the Achilleus Thersitoktonos of Chairemon, and it forms the text for Plutarch's tract περὶ τύχης.

§ 26. enim: Bentl. proposed to delete enim and Dav. to replace it by autem: neither saw that enim here introduces the non laborat. laudat tenuem uictum. philosophi id quidem, sed 30 si Socrates aut Antisthenes diceret, non is qui finem bonorum uoluptatem esse dixerit. negat quemquam iucunde posse uiuere, nisi idem honeste, sapienter iusteque uiuat. nihil grauius, nihil philosophia dignius, nisi idem hoc ipsum 'honeste, sapienter, iuste' ad uoluptatem referret. quid melius quam fortunam ex-35 iguam interuenire sapienti? sed hoc isne dicit qui, cum dolorem non modo maximum malum, sed solum malum etiam dixerit, toto corpore opprimi possit doloribus acerrimis tum cum maxime contra fortunam gloriatur? quod idem melioribus etiam uerbis Metrodorus: 27. 'Occupauit te,' inquit, 'Fortuna, atque 40 cepi omnisque aditus tuos interclusi, ut ad me adspirarare non posses.' praeclare, si Aristo Chius aut si Stoicus

29. laudat tenuem B<sub>3</sub> E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D<sub>II</sub> O<sub>1-3</sub> 7. laudatenuem V
 atr. ant. superscr. lauda tenuem B<sub>1</sub>. lauda tenuem R G E. laudetenuē K<sub>1</sub>

om. B<sub>2</sub>. 31. iucunde R K. iucundae G at a conf. ead. man. iocunde V
 atr. ant. superscr. iocunde P S E. 33. dignius nisi idem dignius nisi idem G.

34. quid melius R<sub>6</sub> B<sub>3</sub> W<sub>12</sub> D C J O<sub>12</sub> 7. qui melius V atr. ant. B. qui melius R P G B<sub>2</sub> K E<sub>12</sub> O<sub>3</sub>. 35. hisne V atr. ant. corr. hisne R G.

36. maximum R V G B. maximum K S E. 37. toto corpore V atr. ant.
 superscr. || acerrimis R V G B K. || maxime R V G B K S E.

§ 27, 40. cepi K e in e mut. atr. nigriore. coepi V G. || omnisque
 R V G B K E. || adspirare R V K. aspirare G B S. 41. posses R I 67 17
 V P G B<sub>1-3</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E I W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> J O I 7. possi<sup>s</sup> O 2. possis
 E<sub>2</sub> D C II. possit O 3. || Aristo Chius R 6. aristochius V P B.

aristonchius R 16. aristochius R I 2. aristochius E. aristochius G alt. man. superscr. ristochius R 17.

reason for the preceding statement; Epicurus could not express a noble sentiment were it not that he is entirely careless as to its consistency with his main principle, which is radically base.

tenuem uictum: cf. iii 20, 49 n.

si...diceret: 'in the mouth of Socrates or Antisthenes'; the imperf. subj. here does not denote a supposition contrary to fact in present time, but represents in past time the 'pure supposition' expressed in present time by si with the present subj.: for other exx. see Sonnenschein, Unity of the Latin Subj. p. 42.

Antisthenes, the founder of the Cynic School; he was a pupil of Socrates παρ' οὗ καὶ τὸ καρτερικὸν λαβὼν καὶ τὸ ἀπαθὲς ζηλώσας κατῆρξε πρῶτος τοῦ κυνισμοῦ Diog. L. vi 1, 2. Zeller, Socrates and the Socratic Schools, E.T. pp. 284 ff.

negat quemquam...uiuat: cf. iii 20, 46, 49 and nn. there.

iusteque: cf. 14, 41 n. on atque.

fortunam...sapienti: a translation of Epicurus' saying βραχεία σοφῶ τύχη παρεμπίπτει quoted by Diog. Laert. x 144; Stob. Ecl. Eth. p. 199 [ii 7, 28]; Plut. περὶ τύχης, p. 99A: the same transl. occurs Fin. i 19, 63; ii 27, 89: Seneca, De Const. 15, 4 translates 'raro sapienti fortuna interuenit': in the adverbial use of exiguam Cic. adheres closely to the Gk idiom. Usener (Epicurea, p. 74) reads βραχεία not βραχεία, and holds that Cic. wrote exiguam both here and in Fin. ll. cc.

Metrodorus: cf. ii 3, 8 n.

§ 27. occupauit te: προκατελημματ' ὃ τύχη, καὶ πάσαν τὴν σὴν ἀφήρημαι παρεσδυσιν, quoted by Plut. περὶ εὐθ. p. 476 C but without the author's name.

Aristo, son of Miltiades of Chios, a pupil of Zeno but inclined towards the practice of the Cynics. According to Diog. Laert. vii 160 he taught τέλος εἶναι τὸ ἀδιαφόρως ἔχοντα ζῆν πρὸς τὰ μετὰξυ Zenon diceret, qui, nisi quod turpe esset, nihil malum duceret; tu uero, Metrodore, qui omne bonum in uisceribus medullisque condideris et definieris summum bonum firma corporis adfectione explorataque <eius> spe contineri, Fortunae aditus interclusisti? quo modo? isto enim bono iam exspoliari potes.

X. 28. Atqui his capiuntur imperiti, et propter huius modi sententias istorum hominum est multitudo; acute autem disputantis illud est, non quid quisque dicat, sed quid cuique dicendum sit, uidere. uelut in ea ipsa sententia quam in hac disputatione suscepimus omnis bonos semper beatos uolumus esse. quos

42. zenon R 12 16 17 P G B 12 K 1 S E 12 W 2 D J O 17 zenon

V atr. ant. zeno R 6 W 1 M 12 O 3. || nisi quod R G. nisi quid B 1
al. atr. mut. nisi quid E 1. 44. corporis R 6 7 17 B 3 E 2 W 12 M 12

D C II O 1-3 7. corpori V ead. man. corpori B 1 atr. ant. alia man.
superscr. corpori R 1 P G B 2 K 1 S E 1. || adfectione R V G K E. affectio R 2 P B 13 S. 45. explorataque spe R V P G B 1-3 K 1 S E 12 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7. explorataque eius spe corr.
Lambinus. 46. expoliari R 6 17 P S E 2 C II O 7. expoliare R G

B 1-3 K 1 E 1 W 12 J O 12. expoliare V atr. ant. superscr. expoliari D.

explorari O 3. expolicei M 1 (sic). || potes B 3 E 2 3 W 12 M 12 D C II J

O 1-3. potes S at t post s eras. pot P al. atr. superscr. potest V atr. ant. potest R 16 17 G B 12 K 1 E 1 O 7. te potest R 7.

X. § 28, 1. atqui R 17 V P G B 2 3 K 1 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7. atquis B 1. atq; ed. H. || imperiti R V G B K. 5. omnis R V G B K.

omnes S. || quos R 6 M 1. II at os multa in ras. ed. H. quod V S.
quod R 1 G B 12 K. quid R 7 17 P B 3 E 13 L 5 W 12 M 2 D C J O 1-3 7. quid E 2 at id in ras.

ἀρετῆς καὶ κακίας μὴδ' ἠγνιτοῦν ἐν αὐτοῖς παρὰλλαγὴν ἀπολείποντα ἀλλ' ἐπίσης ἐπὶ πάντων ἔχοντα. In his views of the importance of Logic and Physics he differed sharply from the official Stoic view. See Zeller, Stoics, etc. E.T. pp. 59 ff. and authorities quoted there. Cf. also Cic. Fin. ii 13, 43; iv 25, 69; Ac. ii 42, 130. nisi quod turpe esset: cf. ii 12, 29 'nihil est, inquit [sc. Zeno], malum, nisi quod turpe atque uitiosum est': for the attraction of mood and tense in esset, cf. i 5, 9 n.

definieris: cf. ii 6, 17 'Metrodorus quidem perfecte eum beatum putat cui corpus bene constitutum sit et exploratum ita semper fore' with n. there.

explorataque (eius) spe: the analogy of Off. iii 33, 117 'uita omnis beata corporis firma constitutio eiusque constitutionis spe explorata, ut a Metrodoro scriptum est, continetur,' and the necessity of the sense require the insertion either of eius (Lamb. followed by all recent edd. except Küh.) or of eius ad- fectionis; the latter would be more likely to drop out after the preceding corporis adfectione than would eius by itself.

X. § 28. his, 'sayings like these,' i.e. like those of Epicurus and Metrodorus quoted above.

capiuntur, 'are attracted': for this use cf. § 31 and ii 12, 29; pro Cluent. 5, 13 'pellexit eis omnibus rebus quibus illa aetas capi ac deleniri potest.'

istorum hominum, 'persons of that way of thinking'; the phrase is intentionally contemptuous.

uelut, cf. 5, 13 n. The example introduced by uelut is discussed down to the end of § 31.

uolumus, 'wish to make out,' i 18, 42 n. N.D. i 11, 26 'mentem istam quasi animal aliquod uoluit esse'; Liv. xxi 10, 8 'nec puer hic dux erat, sed pater ipse Hamilcar, Mars alter, ut isti uolunt.'

quos: most MSS. have either quid or quod; a few have quos which has been adopted by Lamb. Tr. Kl. Ba. and most dicam bonos perspicuum est; omnibus enim uirtutibus instructos et ornatos tum sapientis, tum uiros bonos dicimus. uideamus qui dicendi sint beati. equidem eos existimo qui sint in bonis nullo adiuncto malo; 29 neque ulla alia huic uerbo, cum beatum 10 dicimus, subiecta notio est nisi secretis malis omnibus cumulata bonorum complexio. hanc adsequi uirtus, si quicquam praeter ipsam boni est, non potest. aderit enim malorum, si mala illa ducimus, turba quaedam, paupertas, ignobilitas, humilitas, solitudo, amissio suorum, graues dolores corporis, perdita ualetudo, 15 debilitas, caecitas, interitus patriae, exsilium, seruitus denique. in his tot et tantis (atque etiam plura possunt accidere) potest esse sapiens; nam haec casus inportat, qui in sapientem potest incurrere. at si ea mala sunt, quis potest praestare semper sapientem beatum fore, cum uel in omnibus his uno tempore esse

7. tum (prius) R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 W 1 2 M 1 (non ut Küh.)
 II J O 1-3 7. tum E 2 at t in ras. cum B 3 M 2 C. || sapientis R V P G
 B 1 K E 1 J. sapientes B 2 S. 8. equidem hos R V P G B 1-3 K 1
 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 C J O 1-3 7. || existimo R V G B K.

§ 29, 11. assequi R V B S E. asequi G alt. man. superscr. aessequi K. || praeter ipsam V P K. praeter ipsa R G. 13. ducimus R V P G G R.

dicimus K 1 atr. nigriore superscr. dicimus R 1 6. 14. ualetudo J.

ualitudo R V G B K S E. 15. interius G alt. man. superscr. || exilium
 R V P G B K S E. 16. etiam plura possunt R 1 7 10 V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 M 1 C II O 3. etiam plura quae possunt B 3 W 1 2 M 2 J O 1 2. etiam quae plura possunt R 6. et que etiam plura possunt D. 17. importat

R V G B K S E. 18. incurrere R G K. incurere V manu ant. superscr. || semper sapientem R 1 7 V P G B 1-3 K 1 E 1 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1 3 7. sapientem semper R 6 E 2 II O 2.

edd., and is supported by uideamus qui dicendi sint beati below: Or. reads quid and explains 'quid intelligam quum beatos dico'; but though quid est bonitas? is good Latin, it is more than doubtful whether Cicero would have used quid est (sunt) boni? in the sense 'what are good men?'

in bonis, 'in possession of good things': for in cf. ii 21, 49 in uolnere = uolneratus, v 26, 73 in cruciatu atque tormentis; Fin. i 10, 32 'in ea uoluptate uelit esse.'

§ 29. complexio, 'the accumulation and combination of good things and the exclusion of bad things'; for complexio in the sense of combination of things of different kinds cf. Fin. i 6, 19 'ita effici complexiones et copulationes et adhaesiones atomorum inter se' where it is a translation of συμπλοκή. The word is rare in Cic. in this sense.

turba quaedam, 'a rabble, so to speak'; for the force of quaedam see i 12, 27 n. For a similar list of the turba malorum cf. iii 34, 81.

dolores corporis: Diog. L. vii 37 enumerates amongst Zeno's pupils a certain Dionysius ὁ μεταθέμενος εἰς τὴν ἡδονήν διὰ γὰρ σφοδρὰν ὀφθαλμῶν ὠκνησεν εἰ λέγειν τὸν πόνον ἀδιάφορον.

perdita: 'bad health' cf. Phil. viii. 10, 31 'cum esset summa senectute et perdita ualitudine,' pro Rab. perd. 7, 21 'perditus morbo.'

in his.. sapiens: 'a philosopher may be confronted with all these, many and serious as they are': Cic. purposely avoids the use of the word malis, as he did not regard these afflictions as really evils. For the order of the words potest esse cf. i 46, 110 n.

praestare: cf. iii 16, 34 n. and Madvig, Opuscula Acad. i p. 151.

20 possit? 30. non igitur facile concedo neque Bruto meo neque communibus magistris nec ueteribus illis, Aristoteli, Speusippo, Xenocrati, Polemoni ut, cum ea quae supra enumeraui in malis numerent, idem dicant semper beatum esse sapientem. quos si titulus hic delectat insignis et pulcher, Pythagora, Socrate, 25 Platone dignissimus, inducant animum illa, quorum splendore capiuntur, uires, ualetudinem, pulchritudinem, diuitias, honores, opes contemnere eaque quae his contraria sunt pro nihilo ducere; tum poterunt clarissima uoce profiteri se neque fortunae impetu nec multitudinis opinione nec dolore nec paupertate terreri, 30 omniaque sibi in sese esse posita, nec esse quicquam extra suam

§ 30, 21. nec R V P G B I 2 K I S E I 2 W 2 D C II J. neque W I
 M I 2 O 2 3 7. || speusippo R V P B K. speusippo G. 23. idem
 R I 2 I O 16 V G B I 2 K I E I 2 W 2 M I D J O 2 7. ijdem S at j postea inculc. iidem W I M 2 O 3. || quos si R 6 P B I-3 S E I 2
 M I 2 D C II O 2 3. quod si R I 17 V G K I 2 W I 2 J O I. qui si R 7 O 7. 24. delectat B I W I. dilectat R V G K. 25. inducant animum R I 6 17 P B I-3 K I E 2 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O 2 3 7. inducant animum G at i ante animum eras. ut uid. inducant animum V atr. ant. superscr.

 inducat animum O I. inducā animum W I. 26. ualetudinem R V G K J. ualetudinem B S E. 27. contem<sup>ra</sup> nere S. contempnere G E. || contraria K.
 contra<sup>ra</sup> R eod. atr. contra<sup>ri</sup> G alt. man. superscr. contra B 2. contra V. || sunt B I W I 2 J O I 2 7. sint R V P G B 3 K I S E I 2 M 2 D C II.
 28. impetu R V G B K S E.

§ 30. communibus, i.e. whose lectures Brutus and I attended. Cic. is referring to philosophers like Antiochus and Aristus, whose point of view is here under discussion. Ha. curiously takes communibus as = mihī et Academicis Peripateticisque communibus, a meaning which (however true of Antiochus and Aristus the words may be in point of fact) cannot be got out of the context.

ueteribus illis: Antiochus though calling himself an Academic attempted on the one hand to minimize the differences between the Academics and Peripatetics and on the other hand to show that the Stoic doctrines were really to be found in Plato: hence he regarded not merely the heads of the Academy (Speusippus, Xenocrates, Polemo) but Aristotle as his teachers in philosophy; cf. Fin. v 3, 7; Ac. ii 45, 137. See Hirzel, Untersuchungen zu Cicero's philosophischen Schriften III 242.

quos: for the relative attracted into the construction of the nearer clause cf. iii 31, 76 'ut Prometheus ille Aeschylī, cui cum dictum esset...respondit', iv 19, 43 'sine aculeis iracundiae, quae etiamsi non adsit, tamen uerbis atque motu simulandam arbitrantur': see also i 34, 84 n.

Pythagora: Hirzel (loc. cit.) points out that the coupling of Plato and Pythagoras was characteristic of the later developments of Platonism.

Cic. implies here, though he does not definitely say so, that Pythagoras, Socrates and Plato adopted the Stoic view upon the sufficiency of virtue as against that of the Peripatetics and Academics. Elsewhere he claims Socratic authority for the Stoic παράδοξα, iii 5, 10; Ac. ii 44, 136. Antiochus, who differed from the Stoics on the point, ἐπεδείκνυε ὅτι παρὰ Πλάτωνι κεῖται τὰ τῶν Στωϊκῶν δόγματα, Sext. Emp. Pyrrh. Hypot. i 33 fin. But it is more than doubtful whether either Socrates or Plato would have subscribed to the Stoic formula.

inducant animum: this and not inducere in animum is Cicero's usual phrase, Diu. i 13, 22; pro Cluent. 15, 45; even in pro Sulla 30, 83 (where see Reid's n.) the right reading is almost certainly animum inducant.

omniaque: for -que connecting contrasted clauses see i 29, 71 n. on adhibuitque.

potestatem quod ducant in bonis. 31. nunc et haec loqui, quae sunt magni cuiusdam et alti uiri, et eadem, quae uulgius, in malis et bonis numerare concedi nullo modo potest. qua gloria commotus Epicurus exoritur; cui etiam, si dis placet, uidetur semper 35 sapiens beatus. hic dignitate huius sententiae capitur, sed numquam id diceret si ipse se audiret. quid est enim quod minus conueniat quam ut is qui uel summum uel solum malum dolorem esse dicat idem censeat 'Quam hoc suaue est!' tum, cum dolore crucietur, dicturum esse sapientem? non igitur ex singulis 40 uocibus philosophi spectandi sunt, sed ex perpetuitate atque constantia.

XI. 32. Adducis me ut tibi adsentiar. sed tua quoque uide ne desideretur constantia.

Quonam modo?

§ 31, 31. nec hunc et haec R V P G B 1 K 1 E 1 L 4 5 D. nec hunc et hoc O 7. nec hunc et h<sup>c</sup> B 2 K 2 L 2. nec hunc et h<sup>r</sup> R 17 W 2 C J. neque hunc et haec R 6. nec hinc et haec S. nec huic et haec R 7. neq; huic et hec ed. H. nam hunc et haec E 2 L 3 M 1 2 II O 2 3. nam hinc et haec L 6. nam huic et haec E 3. nunc et haec corr. Wesenbergius.

32. uulgius R G S E. uulgius<sup>v</sup> V atr. ant. 34. si dis placet G B K. si displicet R. si displicet V marg. si diis placet. si displicet P S E 1 2 D C O 7. si diis placet W 1 2 M 1 2 J O 1-3. 36. si ipse se audiret V at se audiret in ras. et in marg. excurr. si ipse audiret G. 38. idem R 6 17 V at m in ras. P B E 2 W 1 M 1 2 D C II O 1-3 7. id<sup>em</sup> ÷ E 1 al. atr. superscr. id ÷ K. id est R G.

XI. § 32, 1. adducis V P B K. aducis R. uerò adducis...constantia habet G in marg. infer. alt. manu adscript. || adsentiar R V K E. assentiar G B S.

§ 31. nunc: for nunc aduersative (often nunc autem, or nunc uero) cf. ii 19, 45; iii 1, 2 n.

qua gloria=gloria huius rei sc. loquendi quae sunt magni cuiusdam et alti uiri: for this use of the pron. cf. i 19, 45 n. on haec; and for the subjective use of gloria cf. ii 20, 46.

si dis placet: expressing indignant surprise; cf. Ter. Eun. 919, where Don. says 'proprium est exclamantis propter indignitatem alicuius rei'; cf. Fin. ii 10, 31; Or. iii 24, 93, with Wilkins' note.

audiret, 'if he were to go to his own school'; for audire in the sense of to 'attend the lectures of' cf. N.D. i 14, 37 'Cleanthes...qui Zenonem audiuit'; Off. i 1, 1 'te, Marce fili, annum iam audientem Cratippum...abundare oportet praeceptis institutisque philosophiae,' Fin. i 5, 16; from this is developed the sense seen in i 26, 65 'nec Homerum audio,' 'nor do I accept Homer's authority,' Fin. i 13, 42

'errore maximo, si Epicurum audire uoluerint, liberabuntur' and here.

quam hoc suaue est: cf. ii 7, 17; Lact. Diu. Inst. iii 27 'Epicurus multo fortius; sapiens, inquit, semper beatus est; et uel inclusus in Phalaridis tauro hanc uocem emittet: suaue est et nihil curo. quis eum non irriserit? maxime quod homo uoluptarius personam sibi uiri fortis imposuit,' a passage evidently modelled upon this.

uocibus, 'isolated sayings'; for uox in this sense cf. pro Planc. 14, 34; II Verr. v 65, 168 'in hac uoce, "ciuis Romanus sum."' spectandi, 'are to be judged,' cf. Q. Rosc. Com. 10, 28 'nemo enim illum ex trunco corporis spectabat'; Att. xii 39, 1: and the use of the word spectatus, 'approved.'

perpetuitate, 'the general tenor and consistency of their doctrines'; cf. Off. i 33, 119 'ut constare in perpetuitate uitae possimus nobismet ipsis.'

Quia legi tuum nuper quartum de finibus; in eo mihi uidebare 5 contra Catonem disserens hoc uelle ostendere, quod mihi quidem probat, inter Zenonem et Peripateticos nihil praeter uerborum nouitatem interesse. quod si ita est, quid est causae quin, si Zenonis rationi consentaneum sit satis magnam uim in uirtute esse ad beate uiuendum, liceat idem Peripateticis dicere? rem 10 enim opinor spectari oportere non uerba.

33. Tu quidem tabellis obsignatis agis mecum et testificaris quid dixerim aliquando aut scripserim. cum aliis isto modo qui legibus inpositis disputant; nos in diem uiuimus; quodcumque nostros animos probabilitate percussit, id dicimus, itaque soli 15 sumus liberi. uerum tamen, quoniam de constantia paulo ante diximus, non ego hoc loco id quaerendum puto uerumne sit quod Zenoni placuerit quodque eius auditori Aristoni, bonum esse solum quod honestum esset, sed, si ita esset, † tum ut totum

6. probatur R 67 V P G B I 2 S E I W I 2 M I 2 D C O I-37. probare R. probares E 2 II. probare<sup>n</sup> K I. probaretur J. 7. quin si R V P B. qui si G alt. man. superscr. qui nisi E I. quin S si om.

§ 33, 13. impositis R V G B K E. impositis V. 15. uerumtamen R V G K. ueruntamen B S. 16. quaerendum R G. qugerendum V B S. quprendum K (i in g mut.) 17. auditori G. 18. esset tum ut totum hoc

R I 17 P G B I K I 2 E I L 2-4 W I 2 M I J O I ed. H. esset tum ut totum hoc V atr. ant. esset tum ut hoc totum R 6 D C. esset tum totum hoc S E 2 3 L 5 6 M 2 II O 7. esset tum hoc totum O 3. esset cum ut totum hoc B 2 O 2.

XI. § 32. nuper: the five books of the de Finibus were completed by the end of June 45 B.C.; Att. xiii 19, 4. The reference in the text isto Fin. iv 20, 56 sqq.

probatur: Bentr. Dav. Ern. read here probare, with which uidebare must be supplied. Kl. points out that the inf. probably arose from the copyist mistaking the contraction for probatur.

inter Zenonem...interesse: cf. 41, 120; Fin. iv 20, 57 'hic [sc. Zeno] loquebatur aliter atque omnes, sentiebat idem quod ceteri'; v 8, 22 'restant Stoici, qui cum a Peripateticis et Academicis omnia transtulissent, nominibus aliis easdem res secuti sunt.' Carneades seems to have been the first to take this view of the case; cf. Fin. iii 12, 41 'Carneades... pugnare non destitit in omni hac quaestione, quae de bonis et malis appelletur, non esse rerum Stoicis cum Peripateticis controuersiam, sed nominum.'

rationi, 'system,' cf. ii 27, 65 n.

§ 33. tabellis obsignatis. Depositions and affidavits were made in the presence of witnesses who affixed their seals (obsignare) to the written record: pro Quinct. 21, 67 'eius rei condicionisque tabellas obsignauerunt uiri boni complures,' Att.

ii 12, 1 'emittat ad me Publius qui obsignet: iurabo Cnaeum...Antii mihi narrasse se in auspicio fuisse.' Such a document when sealed became legal evidence, and legal advisers were supposed to see that their clients in such affidavits stated nothing which could be used against their case. Or. i 38, 174 'cum obsignes tabellas clientis tui quibus in tabellis id sit scriptum quo ille capiatur.'

Cic. here humorously protests against his statements in the de Finibus being regarded as a sworn deposition, for the truth of which he could be held responsible. A similar metaphorical use of the phrase is found in Pis. 28, 69 'retinere quod acceperat, testificari, tabellas obsignare uelle, Epicurum diserte dicere existimare.'

Transl. 'You are conducting your argument with me as if depositions had been sworn in the case, and you are putting in evidence what I said or wrote some time or other.'

isto modo: sc. agas; cf. 8, 21 tu uero.

quodcumque...dicimus: cf. 29, 82; iv 4, 7.

Aristoni: cf. 9, 27 n.

sed si ita...poneret: the reading tum hoc beate uiuere in una uirtute poneret. 34. quare demus hoc 20 sane Bruto ut sit beatus semper sapiens; quam sibi conueniat ipse uiderit; gloria quidem huius sententiae quis est illo uiro dignior? nos tamen teneamus ut sit idem beatissimus.

XII. Et, si Zeno Citieus, aduena quidam et ignobilis uerborum opifex, insinuasse se in antiquam philosophiam uidetur, huius sententiae grauitas a Platonis auctoritate repetatur, apud quem saepe haec oratio usurpata est ut nihil praeter uirtutem 5 diceretur bonum. 35. uelut in Gorgia Socrates, cum esset ex eo quaesitum, Archelaum, Perdiccae filium, qui tum fortunatissimus

19. poneret R 1 6 7 10 16 17 V G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed. H. posuit W 2.

§ 34, 21. ipse B 1 E 2 M 1 2. ipsa V. ipsa R G K E 1.
22. beatissimus R V P G B K.

XII. 1. zeno citieus G B 1. zenocitiegus V. zeno citiens B 2. zenoticieus R K. zenotici ei P. zenocio eius E 1. zenonici eius S. zenoticus ed. H. || quidam R V G B 1 M 2 O 7. quidei S ē in ā mut.
quidem E 2 J. 2. insinuasse se in R 1 6 7 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1-3 W 1 2 M 2 D C II J O 1 3. insinuasse se ad O 7. insinuasse in M 1 O 2.

§ 35, 5. uelut V P G. uelud R K. 6. archelaum B. arcelaum V atr. uiridi superscr. arcaelaum G. arcelaum R K E.

ut totum of nearly all MSS can only be defended either by supplying (with Or.) postulandum (from quaerendum) before ut, and taking the subject of poneret to be (not Zeno or Aristo, but) Peripateticus—on which Sff. comments ‘haec a sano homine scribi aut probari potuisse uix credibile uidetur’—or (with T.S. and Ha.) by making ut...poneret depend upon uerum sit in the sense of ‘whether it is proper that he should etc.’ the tense of the subj. being supposed to be due to the attraction of the preceding honestum esset. Hei. inserts uolui before ut. Bentl. followed by Dav. proposed ni ita esset, utrum totum hoc, and this line of emendation is followed with unimportant variations by F.A.W. Küh. Sff. (who inserts recte before poneret); Schiche reads sed ni ita esset, num consentaneum esset tum ut totum...poneretur.

It is perhaps possible that Cicero wrote ‘sed si ita esset tum hoc...poneret,’ that tum was corrected in the archetype by uel (ut) totum, and that the gloss was copied into the text after tum in the form ut totum: ‘I do not consider that the point now to be discussed is whether Zeno’s view is correct, but if it were, then he would make the life of happiness to depend solely upon virtue.’

§ 34. demus: for dare in this sense cf. i 11, 25 ‘dasne aut manere animos post mortem aut morte ipsa intire’: here the clause ‘ut...sapiens’ is explanatory of hoc.

teneamus ut: cf. i 42, 100 n.

XII. aduena, ‘an outsider, so to speak, and in literature a vulgar artisan.’ The word aduena is used not simply because Zeno being a native of the Phoenician town of Citium was supposed not to be of Greek blood (so Küh. and edd. generally) but because he was, as a foreigner, an intruder into Greek philosophy; for this metaphorical use of the word (emphasized here by quidam) cf. Or. i 58, 249.

For other criticisms, see always unfavourable, upon Zeno’s style cf. Fin. iii 2, 5; iv 3, 7 and Zeller, Stoics, etc. E.T. p. 40.

§ 35. uelut: 5, 13 n.

in Gorgia, p. 470 D and E: it was a favourite passage with later moralists; Dav. refers to Plut. de lib. educ. p. 6A, Dio Chrys. Or. iii p. 102 R; Julian, Or. ii p. 79.

Archelaum: he was king of Macedonia from 413 B.C. to 399 B.C.; a patron of art and letters, he entertained Greek poets, artists and musicians at his court: cf. Holm, History of Greece III p. 203.

haberetur, nonne beatum putaret, Haud scio, inquit; numquam enim cum eo conlocutus sum. — ain tandem? aliter id scire non potes? — nullo modo. — tu igitur 10 ne de Persarum quidem rege magno potes dicere beatusne sit? — an ego possim, cum ignorem quam sit doctus, quam uir bonus? — quid? tu in eo sitam uitam beatam putas? — ita prorsus existimo, bonos beatos, improbos miseros. — miser ergo Archelaus? — certe, 15 si iniustus. — Videturne omnem hic beatam uitam in una uirtute ponere? 36. quid uero? in Epitaphio quo modo idem? ‘nam cui uiro,’ inquit, ‘ex se ipso apta sunt omnia quae ad beate uiuendum ferunt, nec suspensa aliorum aut bono casu aut contrario pendere ex alterius euentis 20 et errare coguntur, huic optime uiuendi ratio comparata est. hic est ille moderatus, hic fortis, hic sapiens, hic et nascentibus et cadentibus cum reliquis

7. nonne R 16 V P G B 12 K 1 S E 12 W 12 M 12 D C H J
 O 127. non O 3. 8. conlocutus R V G B K E. collocutus P S. || an tu aliter II al. atr. superscr. an tu an aliter V atr. ant. superscr. B 1 atr.

nigriore superscr. an tu aliter R 67 E 2 L 236 M 12 D C J O 12 ed. H. an tu an aliter S L 4. an tu an aliter P. an tu aliter W 2 an post tu eras.
 an tu an aliter R 117 G B 2 K 12 E 13 L 5 O 7. an tu id aliter W 1. an tu aliter tu id O 3. ain tandem? aliter corr. Seyffertus. 10. magno R G B K

E 2 C O 27. magna V. 11. possim R 17 V P G B 12 K 12 S E 1-3 W 1 M 12 D C H J O 37. p'si W 2. possem O 2. possum O 1.
 13. existimo R V G B K E. 14. improbos R V G B K S E. || archelaus
 R V G B K. arcelaus E.

§ 36, 17. e se ipso V ras. inter e et s. esse ipso R G B K E. in se ipso P.
 18. beate R B J. beate ex beatae alt. man. mut. G. beatae V.
 19. alterius II al. atr. superscr. alterius E 2 ex om. 20. optime R V G B K. || comparata R V G K. cōparata B. 22. cadentibus B K plerique. cadentibus R G B 2 E 1.

Ain tandem? aliter: Sff.'s correction of an tu an aliter of the best MSS seems most satisfactory, tandem having been in his view corrupted through the contraction tān into tu an. Ain tu? an (Mo.) which seems nearer the MSS is less satisfactory, as ain tu? never seems to be followed by any but a simple question (Hand, Tursell. III p. 495). The reading ain tu? aliter, adopted by Küh. Hei. Sch., does not account for the second an of the MSS.

Ain tandem? translates τί δαλ; of the Gk. which lower down is translated again by quid? For further exx. of the use of the phrase Küh. refers to Cic. Fam. ix 21, 1; Fin. iv 1, 1; Legg. i 20, 53.

uideturne: for this ironical use of ne

where nonne might have been expected cf. ii 11, 26 n.

§ 36. in Epitaphio: from the Menexenus p. 247 E. The Menexenus was composed by Plato in ironical imitation of such λόγοι ἐπιτάφιοι as the funeral speech of Pericles in Thuc. ii, 35 sqq.

ex se ipso apta: a translation of εἰς ἑαυτὸν ἀνήρηται; cf. Parad. ii. 17 ‘nemo potest non beatissimus esse, qui est totus aptus ex sese’ and n. to 14, 40 below.

suspensa: Küh. compares Fam. v. 13, 1 ‘quam quidem laudem sapientiae statuo esse maximam, non aliunde pendere nec extrinsecus aut bene aut male uiuendi suspensas habere rationes,’ written in the same year.

commodis, tum maxime liberis parebit et oboediet praecepto illi ueteri; neque enim laetabitur umquam 25 nec maerebit nimis, quod semper in se ipse omnem spem reponet sui.' Ex hoc igitur Platonis quasi quodam sancto augustoque fonte nostra omnis manabit oratio.

XIII. 37. Vnde igitur ordiri rectius possumus quam a communi parente natura? quae, quicquid genuit, non modo animal, sed etiam quod ita ortum esset e terra ut stirpibus suis niteretur, in suo quidque genere perfectum esse uoluit. itaque et arbores 5 et uites et ea quae sunt humiliora neque se tollere a terra altius possunt alia semper uirent, alia hieme nudata uerno tempore

23. tūmaxime V. tumaxime R G. || oboediet R V G K. obēdīet B I.
 obediet B 2 S E I J. 24. umquam nec R V P G B K S E I 2 W I M I 2 C J O I 3 7. umquam n3 W 2. 25. quod semper R G B E I 2 W I D. qui quod semper V atr. uiridi superscr. qui semper W 2 M 2 O 2. quid semper
 M I. 26. reponet R I 7 V P G B I 2 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 ed. H. 27. manabit P B I K W I M I J. manēbit V. manebit R G B 2.

XIII. § 37, 1. ordiri R 6 7 W I M I 2 D C O 2 3 ed. H. oriri V
atr. uiridi superscr. W 2 II. oriri R I 1 7 P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 J
 O I 7. || rectius post ordiri (oriri) habent R I 7 V P G B I 2 K I E I 2 M I 2
 D C O 2 3 7. ante ordiri (oriri) habent R 6 W I 2 J O I ed. H. 3. ortum esset
 R V P G B I 2 K I E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I 2 7. esset ortum O 3.
 4. quidque R V P G K I E I M 2. quicque B 2 E 2. quodque W 2
 M I D C J O I. quocque W I. quidquid S marg. quodque. 6. uiuerent G at ue ead. man. expunx.

tum maxime liberis : Cic. seems to have mistaken the Gk slightly, οὔτος γιγνομένων χρημάτων καὶ παίδων καὶ διαφθειρομένων μάλιστα πέσειται τῇ παροιμίᾳ, where μάλιστα has no special reference to παίδων.

neque enim...sui : Victorius followed by Bentl. and others regarded these words as two iambic senarii; Bentl. mending the metre by reading aut for nec before maerebit and ponet for reponet. Ribbeck in Trag. Rom. Frag. I p. 211 considered the words quod...sui to be a fragment of the Teucer of Pacuvius, a suggestion which he withdrew tacitly in his second edition. Or. notes that Cic. is not likely to have translated Plato's last sentence into verse on his own account, and that if the words be verse it must be assumed that some one else had done so and that Cicero preferred this translation to his own—a doubly hazardous supposition.

fonte : for the metaphor cf. i 3, 6 'philosophiae fontes aperiemus, e quibus etiam illa manabant.' Or. i 10, 42 'ab illo fonte et capite Socrate,' and for the collocation of anctus and augustus, Tac.

Dial. 4 'sanctiorem illam et augustiorem eloquentiam colam.'

XIII. § 37. unde...ordiri : cf. ii 18, 42 n. communi parente natura : for the Stoic conception of Nature as only another term for the Divine Being cf. Zeller, Stoics, etc. E.T. pp. 145 ff. and the reff. given there.

quod ita ortum...niteretur, 'the vegetable world'; a similar periphrasis in N.D. ii 10, 26 'omnia quae terra concipiat semina, quaeque ipsa ex se generata stirpibus infixae contineat'; but T.S. are surely wrong in saying that there is no single word in Latin to express this idea. Cic. uses stirpes alone in this sense in N.D. ii 13, 36 'neque enim si stirpium similis sit [sc. natura], aut etiam bestiarum, optima putanda sit.' Fin. v 4, 10 'persecutus est...Theophrastus autem stirpium naturas omniumque fere rerum, quae e terra gignerentur, causas atque rationes,' where stirpium naturas is a translation of φυτικαὶ αἰτίαι and the other words refer to such books as περὶ ἀλῶν, νίτρου, στυπτηρίας, περὶ λίθων, περὶ μετᾶλλων mentioned by Diog. L. v 2, 13.

tepefacta frondescunt, neque est ullum quod non ita uigeat interiore quodam motu et suis in quoque seminibus inclusis ut aut flores aut fruges fundat aut bacas, omniaque in omnibus, 10 quantum in ipsis sit, nulla ui impediante perfecta sint. 38. facilius uero etiam in bestiis, quod iis sensus a natura est datus, uis ipsius naturae perspicitur potest. namque alias bestias nantis aquarum incolas esse uoluit, alias uolucres caelo frui libero, serpentis quasdam, quasdam esse gradientis; earum ipsarum partim soliuagas, 15 partim congregatas, inmanis alias, quasdam autem cicures, non nullas abditas terraque tectas. atque earum quaeque suum tenens munus, cum in disparis animantis uitam transire non possit, manet in lege naturae. et ut bestiis aliud alii praecipui a natura datum est, quod suum quaeque retinet nec discedit ab

7. uigeat E 2 M 1 2 II alii. uigeat B 1 n ex parte eras. uigeant R V G K 1 E 1. 10. sit R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7. || ui P B 1 2 K 1 E 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C O 3 7. uim R G. || impediante R V G B K S. impediante P E. || perfecta sint R V G B 1 2 K 1 S E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 II J O 2 3. perfecta sunt E 1 D C O 1. perfecta sit O 7.

§ 38, 11. quod iis M 2 O 2. quod iis S ex his ras. mut. quod his R V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 2 W 1 M 1 O 1. quod his D C II O 3. quod is W 2 J. si his O 7. 12. nantis V P G B 1 2 K E 1.

nantis R eod. atr. ut uid. nantes S. 13. uolucres R V P G B 1 2 K S E 1. || serpentis G B 1 2 K 1 L 3 O 1. serpentis V P E 1. serpentis R i i n e mut. eod. atr. ut uid. serpentes S W 1 M 1 J O 1 2 7. || quasdam quasdam R 1 7 V G B 1 K 1 L 4. quasdam semel tantum R 6 1 7 P B 2 K 2 S E 1 2 L 2 5 6 W 2 M 2 D C II O 3 7 ed. H. quasdam serpentes quasdam L 3 W 1 M 1 J O 1 2. 14. gradientis R 2 V P G B K. gradientis R 1 e in i mut. et postea i paene eras. gradientes R 1 0 1 6 B 2 S O 7. 15. inmanis R V P G B 2 K. immanis B 1 E. immanes S. inmanes O 7. || quasdam autem R G. quasdam au V. quasdam aut E 1. quasdam uero S. 17. disparis R V G B 1 2 K E. dispare S. || animantis R V G B. animantis S e in i mut. 18. praecipui R V P G B 1 K 1 2 S praecipui B 2. praecipue D C. praecipuum W 1 O 7. 19. discedit P E 2 W 1 M 1 D C II O 1-3 7. discedat M 2. discedit B 1. discedit R V G B 2 K.

fundat: this word denotes an easy or an abundant production; cf. Nägelsbach, Stil. § 130, 3, who compares N.D. ii 51, 129 [‘oua’] fetum fundunt, Or. iii 50, 194 ‘solitus est uersus hexametros...fundere ex tempore.’

sit...sint: attracted into the construction of the clause immediately preceding; the clause beginning with omnia is parallel in thought to the clause neque est ullum...bacas.

§ 38. etiam qualifies facilius: for etiam thus placed after, and separated by another word from, the word it qualifies cf. II in Verr. iii 88, 206 ‘cetera quae forsitan alii quoque etiam fecerint,’ and Madvig, Gr. § 471.

partim...partim=alias...alias: cf. 33, 93; N.D. i 37, 103 ‘bestiarum autem terrenae sunt aliae, partim aquatiles, aliae quasi ancipites’; Liv. xxvi 21, 16; Roby, Lat. Gr. §§ 1264, 1429.

quaeque suum: for the order (which is here perhaps influenced by the construction) see Draeger, Syntax § 33 and the exx. quoted there from Livy (e.g. v 20, 8 ‘quod quisque sua manu ex hoste captum domum rettulerit’; vi 25, 9 ‘huc atque illuc euntium qua quemque suorum usuum causae ferrent’), and the poets.

discedit ab eo: for the transition from relative to demonstrative cf. ii 25, 61 n.

20 eo, sic homini multo quiddam praestantius; etsi praestantia debent ea dici quae habent aliquam comparisonem, humanus autem animus decerptus ex mente diuina cum alio nullo nisi cum ipso deo, si hoc fas est dictu, comparari potest. 39. hic igitur si est excultus, et si eius acies ita curata est ut ne cae-
 25 caretur erroribus, fit perfecta mens, id est absoluta ratio, quod est idem uirtus. et, si omne beatum est cui nihil deest et quod in suo genere expletum atque cumulatam est, idque uirtutis est proprium, certe omnes uirtutis compotes beati sunt. et hoc quidem mihi cum Bruto conuenit, id est cum Aristotele, Xeno-30 crate, Speusippo, Polemone. sed mihi uidentur etiam beatissimi. 40. quid enim deest ad beate uiuendum ei qui confidit suis bonis? aut, qui diffidit, beatus esse qui potest? at diffidat ne- cesse est qui bona diuidit tripertito.

XIV. Qui enim poterit aut corporis firmitate aut fortunae

21. comparisonem R V G B K. 23. comparari R V G K. cōparari B.
 § 39, 24. caecaretur R V P G B 12 K 12 E 12 W 12 M 12 D C H J O 1-3. cecaretur S at car in lit. cecetur O 7. 25. quod est idem uirtus
 R V G B 12 K 1 S E 1-3 L 5 W 12 M 2 D C H J O 137. quod idem est uirtus K 2 M 1 O 2. q̄ est idem qđ uirtus ed. H. 28. omnes R 6 17
 G B 12 S alii. omnis R V P K 1 E 12 W 12. omnis in omnes mut. II. || compotes R V G. cōpotes B K. 29. id est R V G B 2 K M 2 C. id P B 1. idē W 12 J O 7. idē S spat. post ē relict. 30. speusippo P W 1. pseusippo R V B 1. pseu'sippo G. pseusippo S marg. speusippo.
 pseusippo K 1 E 1. || beatissimi R V G B K.

§ 40, 33. triptito E. tripertito G. tripertio R V K.

XIV. 1. firmitate R K. firmitati V G B 12 S.

etsi: introducing a correction, some- times followed by an aduersative con- junction, as here and i 42, 99, sometimes alone as in iii 8, 17.

habent, 'admit of,' cf. i 49, 119 n.; iv 36, 77 n.

decerptus, 'a fragment of,' an attempt to translate ἀπόσπασμα, a uox technica in Stoic writers; cf. Marc. Aur. v 27 ὁ δαίμων ὃν ἐκάστω...ὁ Ζεὺς ἔδωκεν, ἀπόσπασμα ἑαυτοῦ· οὗτος δὲ ἔστιν ὁ ἐκάστου νοῦς καὶ λόγος and the parallels quoted by Gale ad loc. especially N.D. i 11, 27 'Pythagoras...censuit animum esse per naturam rerum omnem intentum et commentem, ex quo nostri animi carperentur.'

§ 39. ut ne: cf. i 32, 78 n. and Madv. Lat. Gr. § 456 obs. 4.

caecaretur: the impft. here expresses not the result, but the result aimed at in past time. Küh. on i 4, 7 compares Somn. Scip. 3 (15, 15 Or.) 'homines sunt hac lege generati qui tuerentur illum globum'; Bentley's caecetur, adopted by Or., is not merely unnecessary but spoils the sense.

quod est idem: we should have expected quae est eadem, and the fem. would have been more in accordance with Cic.'s usage: the neuter quod is perhaps due (as Küh. suggests) to the gender of id in id est immediately before.

§ 40. Quid enim deest...qui potest? Cf. Arist. Nic. Eth. i, 1100 a 4 δὲ γὰρ [sc. πρὸς τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν], ὥσπερ εἶπομεν καὶ ἀρετῆς τελείας καὶ βίου τελείου· πολλὰ γὰρ μεταβολὰι γίνονται καὶ παντοῖα τύχαι κατὰ τὸν βίον, καὶ ἐνδέχεται τὸν μάλιστα εὐθενοῦντα μεγάλας συμφοραῖς περιπεσεῖν ἐπὶ γήρως, καθάπερ ἐν τοῖς Τρωϊκοῖς περὶ Πριάμου μυθεύεται· τὸν δὲ τοιαύταις χρησάμενον τύχαις καὶ τελευτήσαντα ἄθλιως οὐδεὶς εὐδαιμονίζει, where Aristotle proves Cic.'s contention that the result of reckoning other things than virtue as conducive to happiness, destroys all assurance of the continuance of happiness. The same argument is urged in Fin. ii 27, 86.

tripertito: i.e. into bona animi, bona corporis and bona externa.

stabilitate confidere? atqui nisi stabili et fixo et permanente bono beatus esse nemo potest. quid ergo eius modi istorum est? ut mihi Laconis illud dictum in hos cadere uideatur, qui glorianti 5 cuidam mercatori, quod multas nauis in omnem oram maritimam dimisisset, ‘Non sane optabilis quidem ista,’ inquit, ‘rudentibus apta fortuna.’ an dubium est quin nihil sit habendum in eo genere quo uita beata compleatur, si id possit amitti? nihil enim interarescere, nihil exstingui, nihil cadere 10 debet eorum in quibus uita beata consistit. nam qui timebit ne quid ex his deperdat, beatus esse non poterit. 41. uolumus enim eum qui beatus sit tutum esse, inexpugnabilem, saeptum atque munitum, non ut paruo metu praeditus sit, sed ut nullo.

2. stabilitate R G B 2 K 1 W 1. stabili R 16 W 2. stabilitate V. stabilitati R 2 10 S. stabilitatē B 1 E 1. 5. nauis R V G B 1 K. naues B 2 S E 1. 6. quidem ista R 1 17 V P G B 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 D C II J O 2 3 7. ista quidem O 1. ista quidem est R 6 M 2. quidem est ista R 7. 7. qui nihil G alt. man. superscr. 8. quo uita R G B 1 2 K 1 E 2 W 1 J O 1 7 Gr. qui V atr. ant. quod P 2 S E 3 M 1 O 2 3. || compleatur O 7. complectitur R 1 6 7 10 16 17 V P 1 2 G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 2 3 L 2 3 5 6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 Gr. ed. H. completitur L 4. cōpletit E 1. 9. extingui R V G B K S E. 11. ex his R V P G B K S E W 1 2 M 1 J O 1 7. ex iis M 2 O 2. ex hiis D C II. ex eis O 3. § 41, 12. septum G h.l.

XIV. glorianti: Cicero has, as Dav. points out, either followed a slightly different version to that followed by Plutarch, or repeated the story inaccurately. Plutarch's version is (Apophth. Lac. p. 234 F) πρὸς δὲ τὸν μακαρίζοντα Λάμπριν τὸν Αἰγυπτήην διότι ἐδόκει πλουσιώτατος εἶναι ναυκλήρια πολλὰ ἔχων, Λάκων εἶπεν, ‘οὐ προσέχω εὐδαιμονία ἐκ σχοινίων ἀπηρημένῃ.’

apta: cf. Lucilius x 389 (Marx) ‘ualidis in funibus aptas,’ where see Marx's note; and the abl. without a preposition is found in Ennius ‘fides alma apta pinnis,’ quoted in Off. iii 29, 104; in Enn. 340 (Vahlen) ‘uinclis uenatica uelox apta’; and in Lucil. xxx 1060 (Marx) ‘restibus aptus’; cf. also Leg. i 21, 56 ‘uita apta uirtute’; the word is derived from the root in adipiscor and literally means ‘caught,’ ‘attached,’ ‘conexus et conligatus’ as Nonius explains it (p. 235, 2).

compleatur: the reading quo...complectitur of nearly all MSS was defended by Lamb. as an example of the passive use of the deponent found in Rosc. Am. 13, 37 ‘quo uno maleficio scelera omnia complexa esse uideantur’ and by Dav. as an example of ‘Hellenismus’ (or attraction of the relative) as in Auct. ad Herenn. i 7, 11 ‘aperte rationibus quibus perscripsimus.’ Bentl. proposed to read completur, in which he is followed by Tr. and Ba. Wopkens (op. cit. p. 148) proposed compleatur (found in one Oxford MS), accepted by Or. Kl. Küh. Sff., which is undoubtedly right; cf. 16, 47 ‘iis uitam beatam compleri negant.’ The subj. comes under the head of ‘class-subjunctives.’

§ 41. atque: according to the rules laid down by Madv. in his note to Fin. iv 20, 56 saeptum and munitum should here be taken closely together as forming the third phrase in the series, as according to him Cic. never in an enumeration of three or more terms puts a copula between the last two if they form independent terms in the series. But, as Küh. points out, though the rule may be generally true it is not universal, and breaks down (e.g.) in 9, 26 where no such distinction can be drawn between ‘honeste, sapienter, iuste’ and ‘honeste, sapienter iusteque.’

ut enim innocens is dicitur, non qui leuiter nocet, sed qui nihil 15 nocet, sic sine metu is habendus est, non qui parua metuit, sed qui omnino metu uacat. quae est enim alia fortitudo nisi animi adfectio cum in adeundo periculo et in labore ac dolore patiens, tum procul ab omni metu? 42. atque haec certe non ita se 20 autem illam maxime optatam et expetitam securitatem (securi-tatem autem nunc appello uacuitatem aegritudinis, in qua uita beata posita est) habere quisquam potest cui aut adsit aut adesse possit multitudo malorum? qui autem poterit esse celsus et erectus et ea quae homini accidere possunt omnia parua ducens 25 qualem sapientem esse uolumus, nisi omnia sibi in se posita cen-

15. sicne G <sup>si</sup>ead. man. || parua metuit R161017 VPG B12 K12 S
 E13 L3-5 W1 M12 II O23 ed. H. parū metuit DC. parūa metuit O1. puā metuit R16 E2 L6 W2 J margin. e cont. om. O7. parua non metuit R7. non parua non metuit L2. 16. quae est enim R V P G E12 W1 M12 DCIIJ O127. quod est enim K1. que enim est O3. quae est B2 enim om. 17. adfectio R V G K E. affectio B S. || cum in adeundo R V P G B12 K1 E12 W12 M2 DCIIJ O13. tum in adeundo K2 M1 O27 ed. H.

§ 42, 18. atquae G a ante e exp. alt. man. 20. maxume R V B K. illa maxime G u ex i mut. maxime S E. || expetitam M1 O1. expeditam
 R167101617 VPG B12 K12 S E1-3 L24-6 W12 M2 DCIIJ O237. expectatam L3. 21. appello G K. apello R V.
 ad e

22. adsitaut V a ante u alio atr. inculc. sitaut G ead. man. 23. et rectus
 G ead. man. 25. omnia sibi in se R V P G B12 K12 E12 W12 DCII O137 ed. H. omnia in se L5. omnia <sup>in se</sup>sibi J. omnia sibi in se S margin. bona. omnia bona sibi in se M2. omnia is in se M1 O2.

parua metuit, 'whose fears are of small things,' i.e. who though secure against serious apprehensions may yet have small troubles to expect. This, which is the reading of the best (and most) MSS is retained by Tr. Ml. Kl. Ba. and is defended by Madv. on Fin. v 30, 91; Fabr. and Or. with some MSS. read parum: Ba. alters parua to pauca; Sff. conjectured parce and T.S. (followed by Küh.) alter to qui paruo metu est. Sff.'s objection that the man who fears parua is really full of fears, not practically free from them, while true as a statement of practical experience and of Peripatetic doctrine (cf. Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii 296 τὸν δ' ἐμπάλιν πάντα φοβούμενον, ὥστε καὶ τὴν σκιάν, ἀγεννή καὶ δειλὸν) ignores the fact that we are here dealing with hypotheses. Cic. is arguing that no one can be said to be sine metu who is afraid of anything whatever, and assumes the case of a man who, secure against serious disaster, can have no fear of any but insignificant mischances; his being afraid of the latter is only a proof that he has nothing worse to fear, not that he is constitutionally a coward.

procul: the adverbial clause is here equivalent to an adj. Edd. quote as parallels N.D. ii 66, 166 'ipsorum deorum saepe praesentiae,' Or. iii 47, 183 'a breuius deinceps tribus.'

§ 42. omnia sibi in se posita: Bentl. followed by Dav. altered sibi to sua which, Wopkens (op. cit. p. 148) points out, he need not have done if he had remembered 10, 30 'omniaque sibi in sese esse posita.' Ter. Ad. 958 'suo sibi gladio hunc iugulo' quoted by Or. is not parallel.

sebit? an Lacedaemonii Philippo minitante per litteras se omnia quae conarentur prohibitorum quaesierunt, num se esset etiam mori prohibitorum; uir is quem quaerimus non multo facilius tali animo reperietur quam ciuitas uniuersa? quid? ad hanc 30 fortitudinem de qua loquimur temperantia adiuncta, quae sit moderatrix omnium commotionum, quid potest ad beate uiuendum deesse ei quem fortitudo ab aegritudine et a metu uindicet, temperantia cum a libidine auocet, tum insolenti alacritate gestire non sinat? haec efficere uirtutem ostenderem, nisi superioribus 35 diebus essent explicata.

XV. 43. Atque cum perturbationes animi miseriam, sedationes autem uitam efficiant beatam, duplexque ratio perturbationis sit, quod aegritudo et metus in malis opinatis, in bonorum autem errore laetitia gestiens libidoque uersetur,

26. lacedaemonii G. lacedaimonii E I. lacedemonii B I. lacedemoni B 2. lacedemonii R V. lacedomonii K. || philosopho militanti V marg. alio atr. adscr. t philippo minitanti. minitanti R 6 7 L 2 W I M I 2 D C J O I-3 7.

minitanti W 2. militanti S marg. minitanti. militante R I 2 I O 17 V P G B I 2 K I 2 E I 2 L 5 II. minitante corr. Bentleyus. 29. reperietur P B K W I. repperietur R eod. atr. repperietur V G E I. 30. loquimur R 6 7 I 7 K 2 E 2 L 5 W I 2 M I 2 D C II O I-3 ed. H. loquim V at m in ras. loquitur B I al. atr. superscr. loqt S marg. loqm. loquitur R P G B 2 K I E I O 7. || quae sit R I 2 6 I O I 6 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C J O 7. 31. commotionum A V marg. atr. uiridi adscr. addi pot. || beatae G. 33. cum a K 2. cum a J fuerat fortasse cum.

tum a S at t e x c mut. uidetur. tuma P. tum a R I 6 7 I 7 V G B I 2 K I E I-3 W I 2 M I 2 D C II O I-3 7 ed. H. || libidine R V P G K.

XV. § 43, 1. atque cum S. atqui cum P 2 K 2 E 3 L 2-4 6 W I 2 M I 2 J O I-3. atquicumque V. atq3 cumq3 E 2 II. atquicumque R G K I. atquiq; P marg. atq. cū. adquecūque O 7. at quicumque

B I 2 L 5. at quecumque D C. at q̄q; E I. || miseriam R V P G B I 2 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I D C II J O 2. miseram M 2 O I 3 7. 4. uersetur R V P G B I 2 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7.

minitante: Bentley's reading for the MSS minitanti is adopted by nearly all recent edd. Of those who retain the MSS reading Kl. and Or. regard the abl. form in -i as permissible in participles in the abl. absolute construction; while Küh. following a suggestion of F.A.W. takes minitanti as a dative, and the sentence as an anacoluthon, Cic. having intended to write responderunt but having written quaesierunt instead. Confusion between -i and -e is common enough in MSS.

The story is told with many variations by Val. Max. vi 4, 4 ext.; Plut. Apophth. Lac. p. 235 B, and Stob. Ecl. iii 7, 69.

XV. § 43. Atque, 'and further'; this use of atque in passing to a fresh set of considerations is common in Cicero; cf. Sff.'s note to Lael. 15, 54. Sff. proposes to read here cumque, supposing atque to have arisen from a dittography of the preceding two syllables.

duplex ratio: explained in iv 6, 11—12. quod... uersetur: the subjunct. is perhaps best explained as due to the influence of the subjunctives preceding; cf. Roby, Lat. Gr. II § 1778. T.S. alter quod to cum, comparing iv 19, 44 'quod somnum capere non posset,' which is not really parallel; see n. there.

5 cum omnia <ea> cum consilio et ratione pugnent, his tu tam grauibus concitationibus tamque ipsis inter se dissentientibus atque distractis quem uacuum, solutum, liberum uideris, hunc dubitabis beatum dicere? atqui sapiens semper ita adfectus est; semper igitur sapiens beatus est. atque etiam omne bonum laetabile 10 est; quod autem laetabile, id praedicandum et prae se ferendum; quod tale autem, id etiam gloriosum; si uero gloriosum, certe laudabile; quod laudabile autem, profecto etiam honestum; quod bonum igitur, id honestum. 44. at quae isti bona numerant, ne ipsi quidem honesta dicunt; solum igitur bonum, quod hones-15 tum; ex quo efficitur honestate una uitam contineri beatam.
non sunt igitur ea bona dicenda nec habenda quibus abundantem licet esse miserrimum. 45. an dubitas quin praestans ualetudine, uiribus, forma, acerrimis integerrimisque sensibus,

5. cum omnia cum R 1 7 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 2 L 3 5 W 1 2 D C J O 1 3 7. cum oia cum L 4. cum oia L 2. cum hc omia S at hc in marg.
haec excurrit. cum omnia cum E 3 et II alio atr. superscr. cum haec omnia cum R 6 L 6 M 2 O 2 ed. H. cum omnia haec cum M 1. cum q3 omia cum K 2. cum omnia ea corr. Scyffertus. 6. tamque in ipsis G at in exp. alt. man.
S. adfectus R V G K E. affectus B S. 9. atque etiam R V P 1 2 G K 1 E 1. at quae etiam W 1 O 2. atqui etiam K 2 M 1 O 1.
§ 44, 13. at que isti D O 1. atq: isti V. atque isti R G B 1 K 1
C O 7. atq; isti P. atq3 que S at que in marg. ad init. lineae. atqui isti
K 2 E 2 W 2 M 1 2. 15. unam uitam G. || contineri B 1. continere V. continere R G B 2 K 1. 16. abundantem R V S at lit. ante ab. habun-dantem G B K E. 17. miserrimum R V G B K.
§ 45, 18. ualetudine R V G K. ualitudine B S E. || acerrimis R V G B. acerumis K eod. atr. er integerrimisque B. integerrimisque L 6. integerum hisque R K. integrum hisque V atr. uiridi superscr. e integrum hisque G.

cum omnia <ea>: Sff.'s addition of ea seems to be the best emendation of this passage. Bentley's quae for cum has been adopted by Sch. Ba. and T.S., the latter two also altering pugnent to pugnant. Or. and Küh. prefer cum <haec> omnia.

atqui: as often, introducing the minor premiss of the syllogism; cf. Fin. i 18, 58 with Madv.'s note.

atque etiam, 'and further still,' stronger than atque in transitions. For the 'chain-argument' which follows cf. Fin. iii 8, 27 'quod est bonum, omne laudabile est; quod autem laudabile est, omne est honestum; bonum igitur quod est, honestum est' and Plut. Stoic. rep. 1039 C; and for the Stoic 'chain-argument' in general, Zeller, Stoics, etc. p. 115.

§ 44. at: like atqui, sometimes introduces the minor premiss; cf. iii 7, 15, where the syllogism is 'sapiens numquam est perturbatus; at aegritudo perturbatio est; semper igitur ea sapiens uacabit'; so in 16, 48 below; N.D. iii 17, 43; Fin. i 11, 39.

numerant, 'reckon as'; cf. N.D. iii 16, 40 'singulas enim stellas numeras deos'; pro Mur. 24, 49 'Sulpicium accusatorem suum numerabat' and the other passages quoted by Wopkens, op. cit. p. 183.

abundantem, 'of which one may have plenty and yet be miserable'; for the acc. and inf. after licet and the use of the participle as equivalent to a relative clause with an indefinite antecedent cf. i 38, 91 'quare licet etiam mortalem esse animum iudicantem aeterna moliri' and n. there.

§ 45. an dubitas quin...dicere: the sentence is an anacoluthon; Cic. might have written 'an dubitas quin praestans adde etiam, si libet, pernicitatem et uelocitatem, da diuitias, 20 honores, imperia, opes, gloriam: si fuerit is qui haec habet iniustus, intemperans, timidus, hebeti ingenio atque nullo, dubitabisne eum miserum dicere? qualia igitur ista bona sunt, quae qui habeat miserrimus esse possit? uideamus ne, ut acruus ex sui generis granis, sic beata uita ex sui similibus partibus effici 25 debeat. quod si ita est, ex bonis quae sola honesta sint efficiendum est beatum; ea mixta ex dissimilibus si erunt, honestum ex iis effici nihil poterit; quo detracto quid poterit beatum intellegi? etenim, quicquid est quod bonum sit, id expetendum est; quod autem expetendum, id certe adprobandum; quod 30 uero adprobaris, id gratum acceptumque habendum; ergo etiam dignitas ei tribuenda est. quod si ita est, laudabile sit necesse est; bonum igitur omne laudabile. ex quo efficitur ut, quod sit honestum, id sit solum bonum.

19. si lubet R V G B K. 21. hebeti G <sup>n</sup>ead. man. superscr. 23. miserrimus R V G B K. 24. effici et efficiendum R V G B K. 25. efficiendum est beatum R 17 V G B 12 K 1 W 2 D O 137. efficiendum esse beatum W 1 O 2. efficiens est beatu K 2. efficiendus est beatus R 17 M 1.
 26. <sup>a</sup>emixta G ead. man. superscr. 27. ex iis M 2. ex hiis R 16 D II.
 ex his R 12 10 V P G B 1 K 1 E 12 W 12 M 1 C J O 1-37. || quo detracto R P G B 1 K 1 S M 12 C J O 1-37. quod detracto V. qđ detracto E 1. 29. adprobandum R V G K E. approbandum B S.
 30. adprobaris R V G K. approbaris B S E. 31. tribuenda G da ex dū alt. manu mut.

ualetudine...si fuerit iniustus...miser sit'; the change of construction is due to the length and varied construction of the clause immediately following praestans.

pernicitatem et uelocitatem: for the distinction between these words cf. i 19, 43 n. on uelocius.

atque, 'dull and even wanting in intellect'; for the intensive use of atque, often strengthened by adeo or potius, cf. Hand, Turs. I 406.

uideamus ne: for this 'formula urbana monendi et dubitandi,' cf. the Gk ὄρα μή, and the use of uide ne in (e.g.) i 34, 83.

beatum: 'happiness,' τὸ μακάριον, a meaning for which Cic. generally prefers the phrase uita beata; cf. Fin. v 28, 84 'uirtutem in qua sit ipsum etiam beatum.' F.A.W. quoted by Mo. notes that Cic. later in N.D. i 34, 95 suggested beatitas and beatitudo, 'aut ista siue beatitas siue beatitudo dicenda est—utrumque omnino durum, sed usu mollienda nobis uerba sunt,' which Quint. viii 3, 32 implies were not universally received even in his time.

ea mixta ex dissimilibus si erunt, 'if they (i.e. the bona which are relied upon to produce happiness) are made up of a mixture of dissimilar elements'; for the phrase cf. Off. iii 33, 119 'nec uero finis bonorum, qui simplex esse debet, ex dissimillimis rebus misceri et temperari potest.' In the text Cic. uses bona in rather a non-committal way to cover all objects which are reckoned usually to deserve that title, whether in his own judgment they really do so or not. It is necessary therefore in the preceding clause to read 'quae sola honesta sint,' 'only such bona as are honourable,' the intention of the clause being to define a certain class of bona.

etenim: introducing a further argument as in iii 9, 20; iv 17, 40; Fin. i 9, 30, etc.

XVI. 46. Quod ni ita tenebimus, multa erunt quae nobis bona dicenda sint; omitto diuitias (quas cum quibus quamvis indignus habere possit, in bonis non numero; quod enim est bonum, id non quibus habere potest), omitto nobilitatem famam-
5 que popularem stultorum inproborumque consensu excitatam; haec, quae sunt minima, tamen bona dicantur necesse est: candiduli dentes, uenusti oculi, color suauis et ea quae Anticlea laudat Ulixi pedes abluens:

Lénitudo orationis, mollitudo corporis.

10 ea si bona ducemus, quid erit in philosophi grauitate quam in uolgi opinione stultorumque turba quod dicatur aut grauius aut grandius? 47. at enim eadem Stoici 'praecipua' uel 'producta' dicunt, quae 'bona' isti. dicunt illi quidem, sed iis uitam beatam

XVI. § 46, 2. sint R V J. sunt G B E. 5. inproborumque V G E. inproborumque R B K. 6. minima R V G B K. 7. et ea quae R 67
M 2 O 3. et ea que W 1. et ea que M 1 O 1. et ea q̄ E 3 J. et que II al. atr. superscr. S litt. ante q̄ erasa. et eq; P margin. ea q̄. et aequae R G K. et eque V B 1. et eque R 17 B 2 E 12 L 5 W 2 C O 27.

et e quant ea D. || anticlea R V P G B 12 L 6 M 12 J O 3. anticlea
E 1 O 2. anticlea E 2 L 2-5 C H. anticlea O 1. || laudat R 6
II al. atr. superscr. om. R 17 17 V P G B 12 K 1 E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12
M 12 D C J O 1-37 ed. H. 8. ulixi R V P G B 12 K 12 S E 2 3
L 2-6 W 2 M 12 D C H J O 137 ed. H. Ulyssi W 1. auxilii E 1 O 2.
10. ducemus R V G B 12 K 12 S E 2 M 2 II Gr. dicemus R 67 P

E 1 W 12 M 1 D C J O 17. 11. uolgi V G B. uolgi R indistincte at atr. ant. superscr. uulgi E 1 S.

§ 47, 13. sed iis M 2 O 2. sed hiis K 2 D C II. sed his R V P G
B 12 K 1 S E 12 W 12 M 1 J O 13 ed. H. Claus. om. O 7.

XVI. 46. indignus: ii 5, 14 n.

minima: i.e. minimi pretii (Küh.): Neide's correction minime (sc. bona) is unnecessary.

candiduli: found only here and Juv. x 355 in class. Latin: the use of the diminutive imparts a slight shade of contempt.

color: cf. iv 13, 31 'apta figura membrorum cum coloris quadam suauitate' and n. there.

Anticlea: a μυμηονικὸν ἀμάρτημα on Cicero's part. Anticlea was Ulysses' mother (Od. xi 84); it was his nurse Eurycleia who, when washing his feet, recognized him by a scar (Od. xix 380 sqq.). It is better to assume that Cicero made a slip than to read Eurycleia here, as no plausible reason can be given to explain the substitution of the wrong name for the right one by a copyist. It is possible that the blunder was a common mistake and not Cicero's own. Ribbeck (Röm. Trag. p. 274) seems to think it possible, relying on the evidence of a figured and inscribed vase from Chiusi, that Pacuvius in his play Niptra gave the name of Antiphata to the character who washed Ulysses' feet.

Ulixi: for the form of the gen. cf. i 48, 98; Callistheni in iii 10, 21; Aristoteli, Fin. i 5, 14 (with Madvig's note); Herculi, Ac. ii 34, 108; Lacydi, Ac. ii 6, 16 (with Reid's n.)

lenitudo...corporis: a trochaic tetracatalect. from the Niptra of Pacuvius, for which see ii 21, 48 n. and Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. 1<sup>2</sup> pp. 107 sqq.

quam: for the quam-clause preceding the comparative cf. iii 22, 52 'maris subita tempestas quam ante prouisa terret nauigantes uehementius.'

§ 47. praecipua...producta: tentative translations of the technical Stoic term προηγμένα, for which see Fin. iii 15, 50 sqq.; Diog. Laert. vii 105; Sext. Emp. iii 24 p. 174 (who defines προηγμένα as compleri negant; hi autem sine iis esse nullam putant aut, si sit 15 beata, beatissimam certe negant. nos autem uolumus beatissimam, idque nobis Socratica illa conclusione confirmatur. sic enim princeps ille philosophiae disserebat: qualis cuiusque animi adfectus esset, talem esse hominem; qualis autem homo ipse 20 esset, talem eius esse orationem; orationi autem facta similia, factis uitam. adfectus autem animi in bono uiro laudabilis, et uita igitur laudabilis boni uiri, et honesta ergo, quoniam laudabilis. ex quibus bonorum beatam uitam esse concluditur.

 48. etenim, pro deorum atque hominum fidem! parumne cognitum est superioribus nostris disputationibus, an delectationis et 25 otii consumendi causa locuti sumus sapientem ab omni concitatione animi, quam perturbationem uoco, semper uacare, semper in animo eius esse placidissimam pacem? uir igitur temperatus, constans, sine metu, sine aegritudine, sine alacritate ulla, sine

14. sine hiis E 3. sine his S. si his R V G. si is B E I.
 15. beatissimam (bis) R V P G B K. 18. adfectus R V G K E. affectus B S. || homo ipse R V P G K I E I W I 2 M I 2 D C J O I 3 7 ed. H. S marg., e cont. claus. om. ipse homo R 6 7. ipse esset homo E 2 H. ipse B 2 homo om. claus. om. B I O 2. 19. orationem R 6 K 2 O 3. orōnē S at o extra init. lineae. orōnem L 4 at o postea add. rationem R I 7 17 V P G B I 2 K I E I-3 L 2 3 5 6 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O I 7 ed. H. claus. om. O 2. || orationi R 6 O 3. orationis S at o postea add. Rationis H. rationi E 3 L 2 6 M I 2 D C ed. H. rōnis P. rationi R 7 litt. post ni erasa. rationis
 R I 1 7 V G B I 2 K I 2 E I 2 L 3-5 W I 2 J O I 2 7. 20. adfectus R V G K E. affectus B S.

§ 48, 23. fidem R 6 M I 2 D C H O I-3 7. fidē B I E 2 W I. fide R V G B 2 K I E I. uitam W 2 (sic). 24. an delectationis B I E 2 W I M I 2 O I 3. an delectacionis K I. an dilectationis R G. an dilectationibus V. 27. placidissimam R V P G B K. 28. alacritate ulla R I 6 7 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 L 5 W I 2 M I 2 H J O I-3 7. alacritudine ulla D C.

τὰ ἱκανῆν ἀξίαν ἔχοντα ὡς ὑγίειαν πλοῦτον) and the other authorities quoted in Zeller, Stoics etc. pp. 263—267.

sic enim: Cic. is apparently (as Dav. notes) referring to Plat. Rep. iii p. 400 D τὴ δ' ὁ πρόπος τῆς λέξεως, ἣν δ' ἐγώ, καὶ ὁ λόγος; οὐ τῷ τῆς ψυχῆς ἦθει ἔπεται; Πῶς γὰρ οὐ; Τῇ δὲ λέξει τὰ ἄλλα; Nal. But the idea is a commonplace from the time of Solon who is credited (Diog. Laert. i 58) with the saying τὸν μὲν λόγον εἰδῶλον εἶναι τῶν ἔργων, as may be seen from the quotations collected by Dav.

pro deorum...fidem: an exclamation found in Lael. 15, 52 in the form 'pro deorum fidem atque hominum'; Cicero notes in Or. 46, 156 that the form deum (which is found in Ter. Andr. 246) is also permissible in this phrase.

delectationis: cf. iii 34, 81.

sine alacritate ulla: the MSS reading has been objected to here upon two grounds: first that alacritas is not in itself a word of evil signification, and secondly that even if it were there is no particular reason for emphasizing it by the addition of ulla. The first objection may be met by the testimony of Nonius Marcellus (p. 456 M.) who quotes our passage for proof that alacritas is to be reckoned in malis; Bentley, however, followed by Sff. reads futili for ulla and Bouh. (with greater palaeographical probability) stulta. Many edd. who accept Nonius' testimony take exception to ulla: Nissen proposes illa; Sauppe (followed by He.) reads sine aegritudine, nulla libidine, a reading accepted by L. Müller (ad Non. Marc. l.c.) in preference to the testimony of the MSS of Nonius: C. Ph.

libidine nonne beatus? at semper sapiens talis; semper igitur 30 beatus. iam uero qui potest uir bonus non ad id quod laudabile sit omnia referre quae agit quaeque sentit? refert autem omnia ad beate uiuendum; beata igitur uita laudabilis; nec quicquam sine uirtute laudabile; beata igitur uita uirtute conficitur.

XVII. 49. Atque hoc sic etiam concluditur: nec in misera uita quicquam est praedicabile aut gloriandum nec in ea quae nec misera sit nec beata. et est in aliqua uita praedicabile aliquid et gloriandum ac prae se ferendum, ut Epaminondas:

5 Consiliis nostris laus est attonsa Laconum, ut Africanus:

29. libidine R V P G B K. || at semper P B. a τ semper V ras. inter
a et τ). aut semper R G K. 32. nec quicquam R I 2 IO 16 B I K I. ne quicquam V G.

XVII. § 49, 3. est praedicabile aliquid et gloriandum ac prae se ferendum G cert. om. aliquid et interpunxit et aut suberscr. alt. man. 4. ac prae se ferendum R V P. ac preferendum K I. 5. attonsa R V G S E. adtonsa K I.

Wagner proposed sine aegritudine, alacritate nulla, nulla libidine. There is no objection, however, to ulla on the score of Ciceronian usage. Cic. is rather fond of series of ablatives with sine and often adds ullus to one of them; it is true that the qualified noun is usually either the first or last of the series but not invariably; cf. N.D. ii 29, 74 'hominem sine arte, sine litteris, insultantem in omnes, sine acumine ullo, sine auctoritate, sine lepore.' Similarly in Leg. Agr. i 9, 26 'nullum externum periculum est, non rex, non gens ulla, non natio pertimescenda est.'

iam uero: Küh. compares Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii p. 138 τέλος δέ φασιν [sc. οἱ Στωϊκοί] εἶναι τὸ εὐδαιμονεῖν, οὐ ἔνεκα πάντα πράττεται, αὐτὸ δὲ πράττεται μὲν οὐδενὸς δὲ ἔνεκα, τοῦτο δ' ὑπάρχειν ἐν τῷ κατ' ἀρετὴν ζῆν, ἐν τῷ ὁμολογουμένως ζῆν, ἔτι, ταύτου ὄντος, ἐν τῷ κατὰ φύσιν ζῆν... κέχρηται δὲ καὶ Κλέανθης τῷ ὄρφ τούτῳ... καὶ ὁ Χρῦσιππος... τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν εἶναι λέγοντες οὐχ ἕτεραν τοῦ εὐδαιμονος βίου... δῆλον οὖν ἐκ τούτων ὅτι ἰσοδυναμεῖ τὸ κατὰ φύσιν ζῆν καὶ τὸ καλῶς ζῆν.

XVII. § 49. et: for et introducing the minor premiss (here of a disjunctive syllogism) cf. iii 8, 18.

aliqua: emphatic, 'there is a life in which, etc.'; for the truth of this premiss Cic. appeals to experience. If there is some life to which nobility and glory attaches, and that is neither the unhappy life nor the life that is neither happy nor unhappy, it follows that it must be the happy life.

Epaminondas: sc. prae se fert. The quotation is a translation of the first line of an epigram said by Pausanias (ix 15, 4) to have been inscribed on the base of the statue of Epaminondas in Thebes: ἡμετέρας βουλαῖς Σπάρτη μὲν ἐκείρατο δόξαν | Μεσσήνη δ' ἱερὰ τέκνα χρόνῳ δέχεται. | Θῆβαι δ' ὄπλοισι μεγάλην πόλιν ἐστεφάνωται | αὐτόνομος δ' Ἑλλάς πᾶσ' ἐν ἐλευθερίῃ. Plut. non p. suau. uiui sec. Ep. p. 1098 A quotes the same line in illustration of his thesis ταῖς μέντοι τῆς ψυχῆς χαραῖς ὁμολογουμένως μέγεθος ὑποκείσθαι δεῖ πράξεων καὶ κάλλος ἔργων ἀξιολόγων εἰ μέλλουσι... ἐμβριθεῖς εἶσεσθαι καὶ βέβαιοι καὶ μεγαλοπρεπεῖς.

Africanus: i.e. P. Scipio Africanus, the elder. The lines quoted are from Ennius (Vahlen, Enn. Poes. Rell.<sup>2</sup> p. 216). Scaliger (Catal. p. 187) saw that they were the opening of an epigram of which the two following lines are given by Seneca, Epp. 108, 34 (from a lost portion of Cic. de republica) 'si fas endo plagas caelestum ascendere cuiquam est | mi soli caeli maxima porta patet.' The last two lines are also quoted by Lactantius, Diu. Inst. i 18, 10, with many expressions of dissent from their theology. The reading of the first line given by Mamertinus in his Genethliacus Maximiano (16, 3) is 'a sole ex oriente adusque Maeotis paludes,' thus mistaking the sense, which is that from Rome to where the sun rises over

A sole exoriente supra Maeotis paludes Nemo est qui factis aequiperare queat.

50. quod si <est>, beata uita glorianda et praedicanda et prae 10 se ferenda est; nihil est enim aliud quod praedicandum et prae se ferendum sit. quibus positis intellegis quid sequatur; et qui-dem, nisi ea uita beata est quae est eadem honesta, sit aliud necesse est melius uita beata; quod erit enim honestum, certe fatebuntur esse melius. ita erit beata uita melius aliquid; quo 15 quid potest dici peruersius? quid? cum fatentur satis magnam uim esse in uitis ad miseram uitam, nonne fatendum est eandem uim in uirtute esse ad beatam uitam? contrariorum enim contraria sunt consequentia. 51. quo loco quaero quam uim habeat libra illa Critolai, qui cum in alteram lancem animi bona 20 inponat, in alteram corporis et externa, tantum propendere illam lancem putet ut terram et maria deprimat.

8. aequiperare V G Gr. equiperare B 1 W 1. equiperare R P K E
W 2 J O 13. equiparare S. qui me factis uitupare M 1. || quaeat G.
§ 50, 9. quod si beata R 16 7 17 V P G B 12 K 12 S E 1-3 W 12
M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed H. quod si est, beata corr. Lambinus. || prae se ferenda R G K. et pferenda R 17 E 1. 10. prae se ferendum R G. et pferendum V. et pferendum R 17. 11. intellegis R V G B K. intellegis S E. 16. eandem R V G B 1 K 1 S. eandem E 1.
17. uim in uirtute R 6 K 2 E 2 W 2 M 1 II O 12. uim i uirtute J ed. H.

in uim uirtute B 1 al. atr. superscr. uim uirtute O 7. uim uirtutem R V P G B 2 K 1 S E 1 D C. uim uirtutum R 7 17 E 3 W 1 M 2 O 3.
§ 51, 19. habeat R G K J. haberet V. 20. inponat R V P G B K S E.
21. illam lancem W 2. illam lancem S boni eras. et spat. relict. illam boni lancem R 16 7 17 V P G B 12 K 12 E 13 L 2-6 W 1 M 12 D C II O 13 7
ed. H. illam lancem boni J. illam bona lancem E 2. illa boni lancem O 2.

the marshes of Maeotis Scipio has no equal.

For the scansion of Maeotis as Maeoti' cf. i 5, 10 n. and for the form of the genitive (instead of Maeotidis) edd. refer to leg. agr. ii 19, 52 where Cic. has the abl. Maeote; Bouh. also compares Plaut. Epid. 35 Theti for Thetidi.

In the second line Dav. and Or. insert me after factis, unnecessarily, since the object is easily supplied.

§ 50. quod: sc. praedicabile aliquid (Küh.)

et quidem, 'and furthermore,' introducing a new argument, an extension of the more frequent use in which it amplifies a preceding statement by the addition of a word or clause, e.g. 18, 53; i 11, 24 'feci mehercule, et quidem saepius'; iii 16, 35 'diceret aliquid et magno quidem philosopho dignum.'

§ 51. quam uim habeat, 'what is involved in,' cf. i 22, 52 'hanc habet uim praeceptum Apollinis'; Off. iii 9, 39 'haec est uis huius anuli et huius exempli'; Sull. 13, 39.

Critolai: Critolaus succeeded Aristo as head of the Peripatetic School. For his celebrated visit to Rome in company with Diogenes and Carneades cf. Or. ii 37, 155; Zeller, Aristotle etc. ii pp. 479 sqq.

Cicero seems to be the earliest author who mentions Critolaus' illustration of the relative merits of the bona animi and the bona corporis et externa: cf. Fin. v 30, 92 where, however, Critolaus' name is not given. The Emperor Julian may have had it in his mind when he wrote (Or. iii p. 119 A, p. 152 Hertl.) ἀνδρῶν γὰρ ἀγαθῶν φημι ξυντυχίαν πρὸς χρυσοῦ πλῆθος ὁσονδηοῦν ἐξεταζομένην καθέλκει τὸν ζυγὸν καὶ οὐκ ἐπιτρέπειν τῷ σώφρονι κριτῇ οὐδὲ ἐπ' ὄλιγον ῥόπης ἐπιστῆσαι.

propendere illam lancem, 'that the former scale is so much the weightier': for propendere cf. 31, 86 and Plaut. Asin.

XVIII. Quid ergo aut hunc prohibet aut etiam Xenocratem, illum grauissimum philosophorum, exaggerantem tantopere uirtutem, extenuantem cetera et abicientem, in uirtute non beatam modo uitam sed etiam beatissimam ponere? quod quidem nisi fit, uirtutum interitus consequetur. 52. nam in quem cadit aegritudo, in eundem metum cadere necesse est; est enim metus futurae aegritudinis sollicita exspectatio; in quem autem metus, in eundem formido, timiditas, pauor, ignauia; ergo, ut idem uincatur interdum nec putet ad se praeceptum illud Atrai 10 pertinere:

Proinde ita parent se in uita ut uinci nesciant.

hic autem uincetur, ut dixi, nec modo uincetur sed etiam seruiet; at nos uirtutem semper liberam uolumus, semper inuictam; quae

XVIII. 2. grauissimum R G B K. grauissimum V. || tantopere R G B S E. tanto opere V. 3. abicientem R V P G B 12 K 1 W 1

J O 37. abicientem E 1. abicientem S. 4. beatissimam R V G B K. 5. fit R V P G B 12 E 2 M 12 II O 3 Gr. sit K 1 W 2 D C J O 12 7. N:

§ 52, 7. exspectatio R E. expectatio V G B K S. 11. ut uicinesciant V (sic) marg. † uinci atr. uiridi adscript. 13. at nos R 6 7 P K 2 E 2 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 12 ed. H. at nos autem V. at nos autem E 3. at nos autem R 1 17 G B 12 K 1 S E 1 O 3 7.

305. The word boni inserted in so many MSS is apparently a careless gloss, and Ba. and Ml. suspect lancem as well; boni is inaccurate as the difference between the scales was not that one contained bona and the other mala, but each a different kind of bonum. Be. followed by Dav. changed one gloss into another by reading animi for boni, and Bouh. does no better with honesti; Ern. (followed by Mo. Kl. Sch.) amplifies boni into bonorum animi, which if boni be not a gloss is the best emendation (cf. Vahlen, Opusc. Acad. ii pp. 353 ff.), and Sff. rewrites the words altogether, reading praeponderare illam hanc lancem.

deprimat, 'outweighs'; this, the same phrase, is found in Fin. v 30, 92. As Dav. points out, the use of the word is technically incorrect if applied to the effect of a heavier scale upon a lighter one: but preno and its compounds had acquired the secondary sense of 'to be too heavy for,' 'to be superior to,' and this meaning possibly influenced the use here. It is also possible that Cic. used deprimere as a translation of καθέλκειν, which may have been the word used in the Greek source, and which passed from the meaning of 'drag down the scale,' seen in Aristoph. Ran. 1398 and the passage from Julian quoted above, to the meaning 'outweigh' seen, e.g. in Diog. Laert. vii 18.

XVIII. Xenocratem: cf. i 10, 20 n. Dav. suggests that the ref. here may be to his work περὶ ἀρετῆς in two books mentioned by Diog. Laert. iv 12.

exaggerantem, 'extolling,' as in 30, 85; iii 19, 45.

§ 52. nam in quem cadit: cf. iv 6, 14 sqq.

ergo ut idem uincatur; i.e. ergo in eundem cadit, ut uincatur.

illud Atrai: the quotation is usually assigned to the Atrous of Accius, but Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poës. Fragg. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 251 assigns it to the 'incertae incertorum fabulae.' The line is an iambic senarius, proinde being scanned as a disyllable, with elision of the last syllable.

hic: sc. in quem cadit aegritudo: the autem following contrasts the character under discussion with the style of character implied by the advice of Atrous.

at nos: many edd. (including Dav. Tr. Mo. Kl. Küh. Sff.) adopt the reading nos autem, and Mo. conjectures that at is due to dittography of the final syllable of the preceding word. Wesenb. who reads at nisi sunt, sublata uirtus est. 53. atque si in uirtute satis est 15 praesidii ad bene uiuendum, satis est etiam ad beate; satis est enim certe in uirtute ut fortiter uiuamus; si fortiter, etiam ut magno animo, et quidem ut nulla re umquam terreamur semperque simus inuicti. sequitur ut nihil paeniteat, nihil desit, nihil obstet; ergo omnia profluenter, absolute, prospere, igitur 20 beate. satis autem uirtus ad fortiter uiuendum potest; satis ergo etiam ad beate. 54. etenim ut stultitia, etsi adepta est quod concupiuit, numquam se tamen satis consecutam putat, sic sapi-entia semper eo contenta est quod adest neque eam umquam sui paenitet.

14. nisi sunt R V P G B<sub>2</sub> K I E I<sub>2</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> D C H J O I<sub>3</sub>.
 nisi sunt S. nisi st B I. st' W I. nisi sint M I O 2 7. nisi ita est R 6.
 § 53. atq; M I O 2. atq R I 7. atqui R I 6 7 V P G B I 2
 K I 2 S E 2 3 L 5 W I 2 M 2 H J O I 3 7 ed. H. claus. om. E I D C.
 15. praesidii R G. praesidii V. praesidii K I. 18. paeniteat R. paeniteat B. paeniteat V G K. 20. uirtus ad fortiter uiuendum R V P G B I 2 K I S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O 3 7 ed. H. claus. om. O I 2.
 § 54, 22. consecutam K. consecuta B V atr. uiridi superscr. consecuta
 R G. || putat R G K. putet V atr. uiridi superscr. 23. conta G.
 24. paeni& R atr. ant. paenitet B. paeniteat S. paenitet V P G K.

thinks it equally probable that autem was repeated from the preceding clause, and T.S. argue that at is more appropriate, as it expresses a stronger antithesis. As a matter of fact, either of the two is equally appropriate here. Cic. having proved that a man subject to aegritudo will allow himself to be overcome, proceeds to use that statement as the major premiss of a syllogism, of which this sentence forms the minor premiss (which may be introduced by atqui, at, autem or et): 'the man who is subject to aegritudo, is not a free man; virtue is free and independent; ergo, in the man who is subject to aegritudo virtue there is none.' The syllogistic nature of the reasoning is somewhat obscured by Cicero's method of expressing the conclusion.

quae nisi sunt, 'unless these qualities exist, virtue there is none.' The conclusion brings us back by another route to the preceding conclusion 'quod quidem nisi fit, uirtutum interitus consequetur.' The neuter quae refers loosely to libera and inuicta; Wesenberg's correction of sunt to est is hardly necessary.

§ 53. Atque: introducing a fresh line of argument; atqui adopted by Schiche alone amongst recent edd. is inappropriate. The following sentences syllogism. 'If virtue is sufficient for a good life, it is sufficient for a happy life; virtue is sufficient for a good life [proved in satis est enim certe... uiuendum potest]; ergo, it is sufficient for a good life.' The proof that virtue is sufficient for a good life is based upon a proof of the identity of bene uiuere and fortiter uiuere; but all that Cic. succeeds in proving is not the identity but that fortiter uiuere is an indispensable condition of bene uiuere.

et quidem: cf. 17, 50 n.

nihil paeniteat, 'nothing causes regret,' cf. 28, 81 'quod paenitere possit' and Madv. L. Gr. § 218 (a) obs. 2.

omnia: sc. se habebunt, fiunt (Ern.) which seems preferable to Küh.'s ad-sint.

absolute = perfecte, cf. Fin. iii 7, 26 'sequitur omnes sapientes semper feliciter, absolute, fortunate uiuere.'

§ 54. eo contenta est quod adest: cf. Hor. Carm. iii 29, 32 'quod adest memento componere aequis' and the Gk στέργειν τὰ πάροντα, Herod. ix 117 and often.

XIX. Similemne putas C. Laelii unum consulatum fuisse, et eum quidem cum repulsa (si, cum sapiens et bonus uir, qualis ille fuit, suffragiis praeteritur, non populus a bono consule potius quam ille a bono populo repulsam fert) — sed tamen utrum 5 malles te, si potestas esset, semel ut Laelium consulem an ut Cinnam quater? 55. non dubito tu quid responsurus sis; itaque uideo cui committam. non quemuis hoc idem interrogarem; responderet enim alius fortasse se non modo quattuor consulatus uni antepone- 10 re sed unum diem Cinnae multorum et clarorum uirorum totis aetatibus. Laelius si digito quem attigisset poenas

XIX. 1. similemne R6 M1 DC. simile<sup>m</sup> ne S. simile<sup>m</sup> ne R7 B1 O1. simile<sup>m</sup> ne II alio fort. atr. e in ē mut. simile<sup>m</sup> ne R117 VPG B2 K12 E1-3 L5 W12 M2 J O237 ed. H. || c. laelii R K1 W1. c. Ielii V. c. Ielii G B12 S E1 W2 M12 DC O13. || consulatum R6 B1 E2 M1 II O12. consulatum R VG B2 O7. || fuisse PC II. fuisse V. fuisse R G K E1. 2. si cum R1210 GK. si<sup>c</sup> cum V B1 S. sic cum R16 DCJ O17. sed cum W1. 3. consulat G 4. a bono populo R V P G B12 K12 S E1-3 L24-6 W1 M12 DC II J O23 ed. H. bono populo O7 a om. ab uno populo L3 O1. a uano populo R6. a bono populo W2 margin. e cont. om. om. R717. || post repulsam fert denuo inculcant suffragiis praeteritur R1210 V P G K E13 L2-5. 6. cinnam R G K. cinam V atr. ant. cinam E1. § 55, 7. committam R1216 VG. cōmittam R10 K. omittam P. 8. consulatus R6 P B1 K1 W12 C O1-37. consulatus R eod. atr. consulatus V G B2. 10. attigisset R V G B K S E.

XIX. unum consulatum : in the year 140 B.C. along with Q. Servilius Caepio; he had been unsuccessful in his candidature for the consulship of the previous year. A repulsa was looked upon as more or less of a disgrace; cf. Plut. Cato Min. c. 50 on Cato's conduct on a similar occasion φέρωντος τοῦ πράγματος οὐκ αὐτοῖς μόνοις τοῖς ἀποτυχοῦσιν ἀλλὰ καὶ φίλοις αὐτῶν καὶ οἰκείοις σὺν αἰσχύνῃ τινὶ κατήφειαν καὶ πένθος ἐφ' ἡμέρας πολλάς. Cic. Off. i 21, 71 'uidentur...offensionum et repulsarum quasi quandam ignominiam timere atque infamiam.'

a bono populo : Cicero's point is that the repulsa of a man of Laelius' character (which could not be impeached) proves, not that the populus had too high a standard for him, but that he had too high a standard for them; 'the electors are repulsed by the virtue of the candidate, not the candidate by the virtue of the electors.' The corrections miss the point: Mdv. Tr. Ba. omit bono before populo; Erasm. followed by Be. Or. F.A.W. Küh. altered it to uano, and

Dav. to malo : Sff. reads a <non> bono populo.

Cicero's view of the high standard expected by the people in candidates for the consulship is well known.

ut Laelium consulem : sc. esse; cf. 23, 66; Fin. v 5 13 'Strato physicum se uoluit'; Inu. i 31, 52 'tuumne equum malis [sc. habere] quam illius?' and Mdv.'s note on Fin. ii 31, 102.

§ 55. committam, 'in whose hands I am putting myself'; this absolute use of committere is common from Plautus onwards. Hei. compares II Verr. iii 60, 137; Leg. Agr. ii 8, 20 'uniuerso populo...committit.'

unum diem : cf. 2, 5 n. Victorius (Variae Lect. xii 10) compares the lines quoted in Plut. Solon 14 καὶ τυραννεύσας Ἀθηῶν μόνον ἡμέραν μίαν | ἄσχος ὑστερον δεδάσθαι καὶ ἐπιτετριῖσθαι γένος.

digito...attigisset, 'laid a finger upon.' Turn. (Adv. vii 16) compares the line of Porcius Licinus quoted in Aul. Gell. xix 9, 6 'si digito attigero, incendam siluam simul omnem.'

dedisset; at Cinna collegae sui, consulis Cn. Octavii, praecidi caput iussit, <iussit> P. Crassi, L. Caesaris, nobilissimorum hominum, quorum uirtus fuerat domi militiaeque cognita, M. Antonii, omnium eloquentissimi quos ego audierim, C. Caesaris, 15 in quo mihi uidetur specimen fuisse humanitatis, salis, suauitatis, leporis. beatusne igitur qui hos interfecit? mihi contra non solum eo uidetur miser quod ea fecit, sed etiam quod ita se gessit ut ea facere ei liceret. etsi peccare nemini licet; sed sermonis errore labimur; id enim licere dicimus quod cuique 20 conceditur. 56. utrum tandem beatior C. Marius tum, cum Cimbricae uictoriae gloriam cum collega Catulo communicauit, 11. collegæ R V. college G K E. || CN. Octavii L 3. 'CN' Octavii M 12 O 1. GN. Octavii V B 2 E 1. GN. octavii R G B 1 K 1 S W 12. GN. octavii P marg. octavii. cnei octavii D. gnei octavii E 2. Gn. Octavii O 3. 12. iussit R 1 6 7 17 VP B 12 K 12 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 ed. H. iussit G. iubssit O 7. iussit, iussit corr. Seyffertus. || p̄. crassi G. post crassi O 2. || l. caesaris V G.

13. M. Antonii R P G K S E. m̄ antonii V. 14. C. caesaris B 1 E 2 M 1. G. caesaris R V G B 2 K 1 M 2. 15. specimen fuisse R 1 17 V P G B 12 K 1 E 12 W 12 M 1 D C II J O 1 2 7 ed. H. fuisse specimen R 6 7 M 2.

fuisse spem O 3. 16. qui hos S E 2 M 12 II O 2 3. quos V atr. uiridi corr. quos P marg. q hos. q, hos E 3. quos R G B 12 K 1 E 1. quia hos K 2 L 5 W 12 J O 1. qui eos O 7 ed. H. quia eos D C. 18. & si peccar & V. & si peccaret R G K. § 56, 20. c. marius V P G B 1 K 1 S E 12 W 1 O 3. G. marius R W 2. 21. cimbrice G. || collega R V G B K S E. || catulo R V G B W 1 J. catullo S.

consulis Cn. Octavii: Manut. considered consulis to be a gloss upon collegae, and he is followed by Lamb. Hei. Bak. Bai., but Kl. and Küh. are no doubt right in regarding it as used for emphasis. Dav. compares Liv. xxxi 14, 2 and Vell. Pat. ii 22, 2: but in the former passage Weissenborn reads not consulis but Cn.

For the consulship of Cn. Octavius in 87 B.C. and his relations with Cinna cf. Mommsen, R.H. iv 58 ff.

P. Crassi: i.e. P. Licinius Crassus cos. in 97 B.C.; cf. Appian, B.C. i 72 Κράσσοσ δὲ μετὰ τοῦ παιδὸσ διωκόμενοσ, τὸν μὲν νῖὸν ἐφθασε προαρελεῖν αὐτὸσ δ' ὑπὸ τῶν διωκόντων ἐπανηρέθη; the account in Livy's Epitome lxxx is 'Crassus filius ab equitibus Fimbriae occisus; pater Crassus ne quid indignum uirtute sua pateretur, gladio se transfixit.'

L. Caesaris: i.e. L. Iulius Caesar Strabo, cos. in 90 B.C.; he and his brother, mentioned below, ἐν ὁδῷ καταληφθέντες ἀνηρέθησαν (Appian, l.c.); their heads were placed on the rostrum (Livy, l.c.).

militiae: Crassus had commanded during the Spanish and Social wars, and Caesar had distinguished himself in the Social war at Acerrae (Mommsen, R.H. iii 479, 509 ff.).

M. Antonii: the celebrated orator, interlocutor along with Crassus in Cicero's de Oratore; for his life see Wilkins' edition of the dialogue i pp. 13 ff. The story of his betrayal to Marius and his murder is told in Appian, l.c. and in Plut. Marius 44.

audierim: subj. of limitation; cf. i 16, 38 n. on exstet. Kühn. Lat. Gr. i 1 p. 862, 8.

C. Caesaris: for his charm and wit cf. Off. i 37, 133 'sale et facietis...uicit omnes.' Or. ii 23, 98 'inuitatum nostris quidem oratoribus leporem quandam et salem...consecutus est.' Brut. 48, 177, 'nemo unquam urbanitate, nemo lepore, nemo suauitate conditor.'

etsi...sed: cf. i 42, 99 n.; iv 29, 63; for etsi in this sense without sed following cf. iii 8, 17.

§ 56. communicauit: cf. Plut. Mar. c. 27 ἵν. μάλιστα δὲ οἱ πολλοὶ κτίστην τε paene altero Laelio (nam hunc illi duco simillimum), an cum ciuili bello uictor iratus necessariis Catuli deprecantibus non semel respondit sed saepe: 'Moriatur'? in quo beator ille 25 qui huic nefariae uoci paruit quam is qui tam scelerate imperauit. nam cum accipere quam facere praestat iniuriam, tum morti iam ipsi aduentanti paulum procedere ob uiam, quod fecit Catulus, quam quod Marius, talis uiri interitu sex suos obruere consulatus et contaminare extremum tempus aetatis.

XX. 57. Duodequadraginta annos tyrannus Syracusanorum fuit Dionysius, cum quinque et uiginti natus annos dominatum occupauisset. qua pulchritudine urbem, quibus autem opibus praeditam seruitute oppressam tenuit ciuitatem! atqui de hoc 5 homine a bonis auctoribus sic scriptum accepimus, summam

22. poene G. || hunc illi R 7 17 K 2 L 2 4 5 W 1 D C. huic illum
 R 6 L 3 6 M 1 2 O 1-3 ed. H. huic illi R 1 G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 2 W 2

Π J. huic illum S marg. hūc illi. huic illi P marg. illū. huic illi V
 atr. uiridi superscr. huc illi O 7. || simillimum R V G B K. || annum G in an cum ali. man. mut. 23. deprecantibus V K. deprecantibus R G deprecantibus P. 25. nefariae V G. nefarię R 1 2 10 P. ne/farię B 1 diabus litt. eras. || quam quod R G K. "quod" quam V. || imperauit

 R V G B K S E. 28. quam quod R G K. "quod" quam V. || interitus ex suos R V P G K. interitus & suos B.

XX. § 57, 2. dionysius R G B 1 2. dionysius V K S E. 4. atqui R V G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 ed. H. adqui P. at quidem E 1. atque W 1 O 7. atq E 3.

'Ρώμης τρίτον ἐκείνον ἀνηγόρευον...οὐ μὴν ἐθρίαμβουσεν οὕτως ἀλλὰ μετὰ τοῦ Κάτλου, μέτριον ἐπὶ τηλικαύταις εὐτυχίαις βουλόμενος παρέχεν ἐαυτὸν· ἔστι δὲ ὅτι καὶ τοὺς στρατιώτας φοβηθεὶς παρατεταγμένους, εἰ Κάτλος ἀπελργοῖτο τῆς τιμῆς, μὴδὲ ἐκείνον εἶαν θριαμβεύειν. Juv. viii 253 with Mayor's n.

paene altero Laelio: cf. for Cicero's opinion of Catulus, Brut. 35, 132 where he attributes to him 'multae litterae, summa non uitae solum atque naturae sed orationis etiam comitas, incorrupta quaedam Latini sermonis integritas,' and ib. 21, 84 where he credits Laelium with 'ingenium, litterae, eloquentia, sapientia.'

moriatur: Plut. Mar. 44 πρὸς τοὺς δεομένους ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ καὶ παραιτουμένους ὁ Μάριος τοσοῦτον μόνον εἶπεν, 'Αποθανεῖν δεῖ.'

accipere...iniuriam: a commonplace of Socrates' ethical teaching; cf. Plat. Gorg. 469 C ἐλοῖμην ἂν μάλλον ἀδικεῖσθαι ἢ ἀδικεῖν; Aristotle says much the same in Nic. Eth. v 11 § 7 φανερόν δὲ καὶ ὅτι ἄμφω μὲν φαῦλα καὶ τὸ ἀδικεῖσθαι καὶ τὸ ἀδικεῖν...ἀλλ' ὁμως χεῖρον τὸ ἀδικεῖν τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἀδικεῖν μετὰ κακίας καὶ ψεκτόν...τὸ δ' ἀδικεῖσθαι ἄνευ κακίας καὶ ἀδικίας.

ob uiam: Catulus closed himself up in a room and πολλοὺς ἀνθρακας ἐκζωπυρήσας ἀπεπνίγη. Plut. Mar. 44; App. B.C. i 74.

obruere: cf. Or. i 25, 116 'ita quicquid est in quo offenditur, id etiam illa quae laudanda sunt obruit.'

XX. § 57. Dionysius, the elder, tyrant of Syracuse 405—367 B.C. for his career v. Holm, Hist. of Greece (E.T.) iii pp. 130 ff.; Grote viii pp. 403 ff.

pulchritudine: cf. Rep. iii 31, 43 'urbs illa praeclara quam ait Timaeus Graecarum maximam, omnium autem esse pulcherrimam.' II Verr. iv 52, 117, where there is a long description of the city.

autem: for this use Hei. refers to iv 2, 5 'quot et quanti poetae, qui autem oratores'; Mur. 13, 29 'magna res, magna dignitas, summa autem gratia.'

de hoc homine: for the construction 'de hoc accepimus fuisse uirum acrem' Wopkens (op. cit. p. 75) compares Fam. x 20 1 'de te tamen fama constans nec decipi posse nec uinci'; on the other hand in iv 22, 50 we find 'de Africano...

fuisse eius in uictu temperantiam in rebusque gerundis uirum acrem et industrium, eundem tamen maleficum natura et inius-tum. ex quo omnibus bene ueritatem intuentibus uideri necesse est miserrimum. ea enim ipsa quae concupierat, ne tum quidem, 10 cum omnia se posse censebat, conseqebatur. 58. qui cum esset bonis parentibus atque honesto loco natus (etsi id quidem alius alio modo tradidit) abundaretque et aequalium familiaritatibus et consuetudine propinquorum, haberet etiam more Graeciae quosdam adulescentis amore coniunctos, credebat eorum nemini, 15 sed iis quos ex familiis locupletium seruos delegerat, quibus nomen seruitutis ipse detraxerat, et quibusdam conuenis et feris

6. gerundis R 1 17 V G B 1 2 K 1 S E 3 L 4 5 W 2 J O 1. gerendis R 6 7 P E 2 L 3 6 W 1 M 1 2 D C II O 2 3 7 ed. H. <sup>e c</sup> grandis E 1. gerōdis L 2. 8. intuentibus B 1. inuentibus V atr. ant. inuentibus R G B 2 K 1. 9. miserrimum R V P G B K.
 § 58, 12. abundaretque R V K II. abundaretque G B E D O 1 7 ed. H. || et aequalium R 6 W 1 M 2 II O 2 3. eī aequalium B 1 ei in et atr. nigriore mut. ei aequalium R V P G B 2 K 1 S E 1 2. aequalium om. et R 7 17 K 2 W 2 M 1 D C J O 1 7. 13. amore gretiae G a ante m exp. alt. man. more gratiē V atr. uiridi superscr. 14. adulescentis R G K. adulescentis V. adolescentis B. adolescentis E 1. adolescentes P S. || credebat nemini W 1 eorum om. 15. sed iis M 2. sed his S. sed hiis II.
 sed his R V G K. sed si is E 1. sed si is B 1. || quos ex R 6 17 P K 2
 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II O 1-3 7 ed. H. quod ex V atr. uiridi mut.
 quod ex R G B 1 K 1 E 1. om. R 7. || locupletium R 1 17 V P G B 1 2
 K 1 2 E 1 W 1 2 M 2 D C J. locupletum R 6 S E 2 M 1 O 1-3 ed. H. locuplectum O 7. || delegerat R V P G B 2 K 1 2 W 1 2 D C J O 1 3 7. delegerat S at a ante r mut. fuerat delegerat. delegerat B 1. delegerat E 1.
 16. traxerat G marg. de alt. man. adscr. || conuenis et feris R 6 17 P B 1 W 1
 M 1 2 D C O 2 3 ed. H. conuenis et feris II at s ante et in ras. conuenisset feris R 1 V G B 2 K 1 O 7. coinuenisset feris E 2. cum uenisset feris E 1. conuenisse feris O 1. cū uenis et feris S. cū in lit. et o ante u uideri potest.
 conuenis feris W 2 at nis in ras.

iurare possum non illum...fuisse; II Verr. iv 18, 38 'de hoc Verri dicitur habere eum perbona toreumata.'

For the character of Dionysius here given cf. Corn. Nep. de regibus 2 'et manu fortis et belli peritus fuit et id quod in tyranno non facile reperit, minime libidinosus, non luxuriosus, non auarus,' and Grote, Hist. of Gr. ix pp. 44 ff.; Freeman, Hist. of Sicily iv pp. 5 ff.

ueritatem, 'the facts of life'; cf. 5, 13 and Or. i 34, 149 'dicatis quam maxime ad ueritatem adcommodate' with Wilkins' note.

§ 58. alius alio modo: Diodorus Siculus xiii 96 says his father was a γραμματεὺς; Isocrates, Or. v. 73, refers to him as πολλοστὸς ὧν Συρακοσίων καὶ τῶ γένει καὶ τῇ δόξῃ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἄπασιν and as οὐκ ἔνδοξος (ib. 75).

more Graeciae: cf. iv 33 70 n. on 'in Graecorum gymnasiis.'

credebat: Erasmus followed by Bentl. wished to insert se, wrongly, as the contrast intended by sed is not that between appointing the serui and barbari to be his bodyguard, and rejecting the adulescentes: but between his want of all real confidence in the adulescentes and his action in entrusting the care of his person to strangers; cf. Plat. Epist. vii p. 332 D Διονύσιος... πιστεύων οὐδένι. Wopkens' defence of the MSS reading (op. cit. p. 149) misses the point.

nomen seruitutis: according to Diod. Sic. xiv 7, Dionysius seems to have ad-barbaris corporis custodiam committebat. ita propter iniustam dominatus cupiditatem in carcerem quodam modo ipse se incluserat. quin etiam, ne tonsori collum committeret, tondere 20 filias suas docuit. ita sordido ancillarique artificio regiae uirgines ut tonstriculae tondebant barbam et capillum patris. et tamen ab his ipsis, cum iam essent adultae, ferrum remouit instituitque ut candentibus iuglandium putaminibus barbam sibi et capillum adurerent. 59. cumque duas uxores haberet, Aristomachen, 25 ciuem suam, Doridem autem Locrensem, sic noctu ad eas uentitabat ut omnia specularetur et perscrutaretur ante. et cum

17. committebat R V P G. cōmittebat K. 18. dominatus domi G eod. atr. 19. committeret R V G. cōmitteret P K. 20. filias lias G at lias exp. alt. man. || sordido ancillarique R 7 16 17 K 2 E 3 L 2-5 W 1 2
 M 1 D C O 1 2. sordido ancillariq; J. sordido ancillari<sup>9</sup> B 1 ras. post o. sordidoque ancillari R V G B 2 K 1 E 1 II. sordidoq; ancillari P. sordidoque artificio ancillari E 2. sordidoque artificio ancillari<sup>9</sup> II al. atr. superscr.
 sordido atque ancillari R 2 10 S L 6 M 2 O 3 7 ed. H. ancillari sordidoque
 R 6. || artificio R 1 6 7 G. artificio V atr. uiridi superscr. officio R 16 17.
 23. iuglandium R G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 2 M 2 J. iuglandium C. iuglandium W iu ante g in ras. iuglandium V atr. ant. iuglandium M 1 O 2. inglandium D II O 1 ed. H. inglandiū P marg. iuglandiū. in gladium O 3 7.
 § 59, 24. aristomachen L 2 4 W 1 O 1 ed. H. aristomachē P B 1
 E 1 O 7. aristomachem R V B 2 K S E 2 L 3 5 6 M 1 2 D O 3. aristomachem G. 25. noctu R P G. notu V atr. ant. K eod. atr.

mitted freedmen to the roll of citizens and to have given them the title νεοπολίται; Dionysius' first bodyguard was chosen from the Syracusan army (Diod. xiii 95); to them were afterwards added a body of Spaniards who refused to lay down their arms after the battle of Daskon in 397 (id. xiv 75); shortly after ἄλλους μισθοφόρους ξενολογήσας τοῦτοις τε καὶ τοῖς ἡλευθερωμένοις οἰκέταις ἐνεπίστευσεν τὴν ἀρχήν (id. xiv 78).

feris: altered by Lamb. and Fabr. to ferē; but (as Dav. puts it) 'non tantum ferē sed omnino barbari fuerunt hi satellites'; Dav. also illustrates the use of barbari as a substantive.

Victorius (Variae Lectiones XI 13) draws attention to the similarity between Cicero's language here with regard to Dionysius and Plato's in describing the τυραννικὸς ἀνὴρ in the ninth book of the Republic: Cicero's 'in carcerem quodam modo ipse se incluserat' is like Plato's ἀρ' οὐκ ἐν τοιοῦτῳ μὲν δεσμοτηριῷ δέδεται ὁ τύραννος, Rep. ix 579 B. Vict. thinks it possible that Cicero may have had Plato's passage in mind, but the resemblances are not so close as to make this a very likely supposition.

tonstriculae is ἀπαξ εἰρημένον. For women as barbers edd. quote Plaut. Truc. 405 'tonstricem Suram nouisti nostram'; Mart. ii 17, 1 'tonstrix Suburae faucibus sedet primis.' For the story cf. Ammian. Marcell. xvi 8, 10 'semper se feriri sperabat, ut Dionysium tyrannus ille Siciliae qui ob hoc idem uitium et tonstrices docuit filias ne cui alieno ora committeret leuiganda'; Off. ii 7, 25 'superiorem illum Dionysium...qui cultros metuens tonsorios candente carbone sibi adurebat capillum'; Val. Max. ix 13, ext. 4. A somewhat different version in Plut. Dio. 9 τῶν πλαστῶν τις ἐπιφοιτῶν ἀνθρακι τὴν κρήνην περιέκαιεν.

Lampridius says that the Emperor Commodus did the same 'adurens comam et barbam timore tonsoris' (Vita, Comm. 17, 3).

duas uxores: he married them on the same day, according to a story reported by Plutarch (Dio. 3) and Aelian V.H. xiii 10; Diod. Sic. xiv 45 says merely περὶ δὲ τὸν αὐτὸν χρόνον ἀμφοτέρας γήμας.

fossam latam cubiculari lecto circumdedisset eiusque fossae transitum ponticulo ligneo coniunxisset, eum ipsum, cum forem cubiculi clauserat, detorquebat. idemque cum in communibus 30 suggestis consistere non auderet, contionari ex turri alta solebat.
 60. atque is cum pila ludere uellet (studiose enim id factitabat) tunicamque poneret, adulescentulo quem amabat, tradidisse gladium dicitur. hic cum quidam familiaris iocans dixisset:
 35 adulescens, utrumque iussit interfici, alterum quia uiam demonstrauisset interimendi sui, alterum quia dictum id risu adprobauisset. atque eo facto sic doluit nihil ut tulerit grauius in uita;

27. fossam latam R 6 E 2 M 2 C O 3. fossam latā D II. fossā latā P E 3 B I at a in ā alio atr. bis mut. fossa lata R 1 2 7 10 16 17 V G B 2 K 1 2 S E 1 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 J O 1 2 7 ed. H. || cubiculari lecto R 6 E 2 M 2 D C II O 3. cubiculari lecto E 3 O 7. cubiculari lecto B 1 at post ri eras. cubicularis lecto P. cubicularis lecto R 1 V G B 2 K 1 E 1. cubicularis lectum R 17 K 2 L 5 W 2 J O 1 2. cubicular' lectum M 1. cubicularem lectum R 7 W 1. cubicular' lectum R 16. cubiculares lecto R 10 S. 28. forem R V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 2 D C II O 3 7. fore S marg. fores. fores R 6 7 17 W 1 2 M 1 2 J O 1 2 ed. H.

§ 60, 31. atque is R V P B 1 K 1 W 2 D O 7 ed. H. atque is (h eras.) S W 1. atque his G E 1. 34. adrisissetque G B 1 2. adrisissetque V atr. ant. adrisissetque R K 1 E 1. arrisissetque S. 35. lussit G. 36. adprobauisset R V G K E. adprobauisset B S. 37. eo facto R P G K.

eo facta V atr. uiridi superscr.

cubiculari lecto, 'the couch in his bedchamber': the same phrase occurs in Diu. ii 65, 134: the lectus cubicularis is distinguished from the lectus tricliniaris by Varro, L.L. viii 32.

The conjecture lecto (Gesn. Tr.) is contradicted by the following words which imply that the fossa was inside the door of the chamber, as the bridge was disconnected after shutting the door; cf. also Val. Max. ix 13, ext. 4 'cubicularem lectum perinde quasi castra lata fossa cinxit, in quem se ligneo ponte recipiebat, cum forem cubiculi extrinsecus a custodibus optertam, interiori claustro ipse diligenter obserasset.' Ammian Marc. xvi 8, 10 supposes the fossa to have been outside the chamber 'aedemque breuem, ubi cubitare suenerat, alta circumdedit fossa, eamque ponte solubili superstrauit; cuius disiectos asseres et axiculos secum in somnum abiens transferebat, eosdemque compaginabat lucis initio processurus.'

ipsum, 'even that,' small as was the chance of any one being able to cross it. O. Rossbach in Phil. LXIII N.F. (1904) p. 100 n. conjectured ipse, remarking 'neque enim id premitur ponticulum ductilem detorqueri, sed regem ipsum hoc humili officio fungi,' which completely misses the point.

detorquebat: i.e. 'in alteram partem deflectebat, ut introitus esset interclusus' (Beroald.). Cic. assumes that the only way to reach the bed from the door was over the bridge which spanned the fossa; the bridge was supposed to swing on a pivot which permitted of its being swung to the side when not in use.

§ 60. poneret, 'laid aside'; so ponere librum i 11, 24.

gladium: cf. the similar story in Plut. Dio. 9 ἔπει δὲ Λεπτινῆς ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτῷ ποτε χωρίου φύσιν ἐξηγούμενος λαβὼν λόγχην παρά τινος τῶν δορυφόρων ὑπέγραψε τὸν τόπον, ἐκεῖνῳ μὲν ἰσχυρῶς ἐχαλέπηνε τὸν δὲ δόντα τὴν λόγχην ἀπέκτεινε. Dav. suggested that the young man of this story may be Leon, whose fate is told in Aelian, V.H. xiii 34, τὸν Λέοντα ὁ Διονύσιος μετὰ τὴν πρόσταξιν τὴν κατ' αὐτοῦ ἀνευρῶν ἐς τρεῖς τοῖς δορυφόροις ἐκέλευσεν ἀπάγειν καὶ μετέγνω τρεῖς, καὶ καθ' ἑκάστην μεταπομπὴν κατεφίλει κλάων καὶ καταρῶμενος αὐτῷ ὅτι ἔλαβε τὸ ξίφος. τελευτῶν ἤττηται τῷ φόβῳ καὶ προσέταξεν ἀποσφαγῆναι εἰπὼν ὅτι 'οὐκ ἔστιν, ὦ Λέων, σοι ζῆν.'

quidem certe: Küh. points out that in this combination, quidem emphasises the preceding word, while certe is attached more closely to the verb.

quem enim uehementer amat, occiderat. sic distrahuntur in contrarias partis inpotentium cupiditates. cum huic obsecutus 40 sis, illi est repugnandum.

XXI. 61. Quamquam hic quidem tyrannus ipse iudicauit quam esset beatus. nam cum quidam ex eius adsentatoribus, Damocles, commemoraret in sermone copias eius, opes, maiestatem dominatus, rerum abundantiam, magnificentiam aedium 5 regiarum negaretque umquam beatiorem quemquam fuisse, 'uisne igitur,' inquit, 'o Damocle, quoniam te haec uita delectat, ipse eadem degustare et fortunam experiri meam?' cum se ille cupere dixisset, conlocari iussit hominem

38. amat R V G B 2 K S E Gr. Vict. amaret O 7. 39. partis R V G K O 1. partes S E. || inpotentium R V G K S. inpotentium E. || obsecutus sis R G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1 2 7. obsecutus sis II O 3. assecutus sis ed. H.

XXI. § 61, 1. iudicauit R 1 6 7 1 7 V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 W 1 M 1 C II O 1-3 ed. H. indicauit K 2 E 2 W 2 M 2 D J O 7.

2. adsentatoribus R V G K. 3. commemoraret R V G K. commemoraret P. inquit

5. regnarum G at n in i alt. man. mut. 6. inquit K 1. R eod. atr. superscr. inquit V. inquit G at d in t alt. man. mut. || damocle R V P G

B 1 K 1 2 S E 1 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1 2 7. damode B 2 O 3. damoclee E 2 II. || te haec uita R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 2 M 1 2 II

O 2 3 7. haec te uita R 6 K 2 W 1 2 J O 1. haec uita te E 1. h' uita D C te om.

7. ipse eadem R 1 7 1 7 V G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 1 2 W 2 D C II O 3 7. ipse eandem R 6 S W 1 M 2 O 1. ipse eadem P J.

ipse in eadem dignitate fortunam M 1 || experiri R G B K. experiri V atr. ant. superscr. 8. conlocari V G B. collocari R K S E.

obsecutus sis: the 2nd pers. of the subj. expresses an indefinite subject; Madv. Lat. Gr. § 370. Sff. reads es, relying upon the doctrine laid down by Madvig in his Opusc. Acad. ii p. 243 and his note to Fin. v 15, 41 'ubi enim aliquid certo tempore fieri solere significatur, idque tempus actionis praegressae absolute notatur...ibi Latini sic loquuntur: cum (id est, quotiens) huc ueni, etc....Coniunctiuo modo nullus locus est in hac simplici temporis notatione,' which (though true) is here not to the point.

XXI. § 61. iudicauit: the MSS reading has been defended by Wopkens (Lect. Tull. p. 149) and by Mo. who quotes Off. iii 22, 86 'quamquam id quidem cum saepe alias, tum Pyrrhi bello a C. Fabricio consule iterum et a senatu nostro iudicatum est,' where, as here, the idea seems to be that of 'giving one's verdict': Man. and Lamb. relying upon declarasse in the next paragraph read indicauit here, unnecessarily, and they are followed by Be. Dav. Or. F.A.W.

Damocles: for the story of Damocles Dav., in a learned note, quotes Hor. C. iii 1, 17; Pers. iii 40; Macr. Somn. Scip. i 10; Philo ap. Eus. Praep. Euang. viii 14, 29; Amm. Marcell. xxix 2, 4.

copias eius, opes: for the asyndeton cf. i 14, 31 n. and Heine, Posen. Progr. p. 8.

Damocle: for the formation of the voc. see ii 21, 49 n. on Ulixes.

eadem: the neuter plur. seems (as in i 24, 56; ii 26, 62) to give a more comprehensive sense than either eandem (Dav. Or.) or eam (Ern. Kl. Ba. Sff.) would have done; cf. Sen. Tro. 1143 (of the dying Polyxena) 'et fere cuncti magis | peritura laudant.' Sff. justifies eam by the hypothesis that eadem is due to dittography of the first syllable of degustare. For the use of degustare here edd. quote Sen. Epp. 33, 5 'depone istam spem posse te degustare ingenia summorum hominum'; Quint. iv 1, 14 'degustanda tamen haec prooemio non consumenda.'

hominem: more emphatic than eum as in i 21, 49.

in aureo lecto strato pulcherrimo textili stragulo, magnificis 10 operibus picto, abacosque compluris ornauit argento auroque caelato. tum ad mensam eximia forma pueros delectos iussit consistere eosque nutum illius intuentis diligenter ministrare.
 62. aderant unguenta, coronae, incendebantur odores, mensae 15 uidebatur. in hoc medio apparatu fulgentem gladium e lacunari saeta equina aptum demitti iussit, ut impenderet illius beati ceruicibus. itaque nec pulchros illos ministratores aspiciebat nec plenum artis argentum nec manum porrigebat in mensam, iam ipsae defluebant coronae; denique exorauit tyrannum ut abire

9. pulcherrimo R V P G B K. || textili R V G B 2 W 1 2 D II O 3 7. textilis P. textilis K I. 10. picto R G K. pi cto V litt. eras. || compluris R V G K O I. cōpluris B 1 E I. complures S.
 12. eos <sup>que</sup> G all. man. superscr. || intuentis R V G K E O I. intuentis S e in i mut. intuentes B I.
 § 62, 14. conquistissimis R V G B K. cū quisitissimis E I. || epulis P K.
 epulis V. aepulis R G. || extruebantur R V G B K S E. 15. apparatu
 R V G B K S E. 16. saeta V K. seta R 2 P. seta R 6 7 10 16 17
 B 1 2 S E I 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O I-3 7. saetaequina R I. lacunaria et aequina G in lacunari saeta equina all. man. corr. || aptum R 1 2 10
 V P G K E I Gr. S marg. appēsū. appensum R 6 7 16 17 E 2 L 5 W 1 2
 M 2 O I ed. H. apensū E 3. apprehensum M I. || demitti V P G.
 dimitti R K. || impenderet R V G B 1 2 K I S. ipenderet E I.
 17. pulchros R V P G B K S E. || aspiciebat R V G B K S E. 19. ipse G.

strato...picto: for the chiasmic arrangement see Nägelsbach, § 169; textili stragulo being equivalent to a single noun (peristroma) can take another adj. pulcherrimo without the addition of a copula.

Embroidered couch covers are called peristromata Campanica in Plaut. Pseud.
 146: the magnifica opera remind one of the similar description in Catullus lxiv 47 ff., 'puluinar uero diuae geniale locatur | sedibus in mediis, Indo quod
 dente politum | tincta tegit roseo conchyli purpura fuco. | haec uestis priscis hominum uariata figuris | heroum mira uirtutes indicat arte.'

ministrare: used of waiting at table (i 26, 65) or of the attendance of servants generally (Fin. ii 21, 69).

§ 62. odores: the effect for the cause;
 the same expression occurs in iii 18, 43:
odores is often thus used, cf. Plaut. Men.
 354, Pseud. 1248 (with Lorenz's n.).

epulis, 'dishes' as in Plaut. Trin. 471
 'si illi congestae sint epulae a clientibus'; compare Ellis's n. to Avianus Fab. 30, 10.
For extruebantur cf. Lucil. xiii 442 (Marx)
 'extructa ampliter...mensa' where Marx quotes Cato M. 13, 44; Pis. 27, 67; Ov.
 Met. xi 120.

fortunatus, 'in luck'; so in Ov. F. iii 540 the word is used by jealous bystanders of revellers returning home drunk.

saeta, not necessarily 'a horse's hair' but 'a horse hair line,' cf. Avianus Fab. 20, 1 'piscator solitus praedam suspendere saeta'; for the Gk ὄπλις ἀφ' ἰππέλης (Babr. vi 3): see Ellis's n. ad loc.
 who refers to Ov. Hal. 35; Mart. i 55, 9; x 30, 16 for this use of saeta. Amm.
 Marc. xxix 2, 4 speaks also of a saeta equina, but Philo (ap. Eus. P.E. viii 14), having changed the sword into an axe, is compelled to change the saeta into a μῆρυθος.

For aptum see n. to 'rudentibus apta' in i 4, 40 above.

illius beati, 'our fortunate friend';
 the expression is sarcastic.

defluebant, 'threatened to fall from his head'; his alarm was disturbing all his movements; for defluere, which is not very common in classical writers in this sense, cf. Ov. Met. vi 141 'tristi medicamine tactae | defluxere comae'; Liv. ii 20, 3 'moribundus Romanus labentibus super corpus armis ad terram defluxit'; for another sense cf. i 25, 62 n.

20 liceret quod iam beatus nollet esse. satisne uidetur declarasse Dionysius nihil esse ei beatum cui semper aliqui terror inpendeat? atque ei ne integrum quidem erat ut ad iustitiam remigraret, cuius libertatem et iura redderet; iis enim se adulescens inprovida aetate inretierat erratis eaque commiserat ut saluus 25 esse non posset, si sanus esse coepisset.

XXII. 63. Quantopere uero amicitias desideraret, quarum infidelitatem extimescebat, declarauit in Pythagoriis duobus illis, quorum cum alterum uadem mortis accepisset, alter, ut uadem

21. dyonisius V G B K.                      dionisius R E.    ||    aliqui terror B I E I. aliquid error R I G B 2 K I E 2.                      aliq<sup>i</sup>derror P marg. aliq<sup>f</sup> terror.
aliquis terror R 2 6 7 10 17 K 2 W I M 2 D O 3 7.                      aliquid terror V at t postea atr. uiridi inculc.                      aliquid terror II at t postea inculc.                      aliquid terroris E 3 M I O 2.                      aliquis error W 2 al. atr. superscr.    ||    impendat R G B K S. impendat V atr. ant.                      impendat E I.    22. remigraret R G K.                      remigraret V atr. uiridi superscr.                      23. cuiusque libertatem R 6 ed. H.    ||    his G. || adulescens R V G B 2 K I O I.                      adolescens P B I S E.    24. inprovida
R V P G B I 2 K I II.                      improvida S W 2 D C O I.    ||    inretierat
R V G B K E.                      irretierat S.    ||    ea quae G.    ||    commiserat V G.                      comiserat R.
B K.                      comiserat R.

XXII. § 63, 2. pythagoriis R I K I W 2.    pytagoriis G B.    pythagoris V. pythagoris P.    pitagoriis B 2.    phitagoriis E I.    pythagoreis R 6 W I O I. pithagoreis S at spatio post pi relict., fuerat ut uid. pijthagoreis.    3. uadem K I 2 E 2 W I M I 2 D II O I-3 ed. H.                      uadē P W 2 C O 7.                      uadē V at > atr. uiridi suppl.                      uadē B I at e in ē al. atr. mut.                      uade R B 2 E I. uade G at lineam super e duxisse uid. alt. man.    ||    alter ut P K 2 E 3 L 2-6
W I 2 ed. H.                      alterum R V G B I 2 K I S E I.                      alterum ut O 7. alter D C O 2 ut om.    ||    uadem R V G B 2 W I 2 O 3 7.                      uadē P B I E I D C.                      uadā S a in e mut.

nollet: subj. of reported reason, cf. iv 19, 44 n.

aliqui: cf. i 11, 23 n.; i 34, 82 n.

ut, 'it was not open to him to'; the inf. is more usual after integrum, cf. iii 29, 73 n.

inprovida aetate: Dav. proposed to insert in, which he supposed had fallen out by haplography; but the simple abl. seems to be intended to express cause as well as time.

XXII. § 63. in Pythagoriis, 'in the case of'; for in cf. 9, 24 n. on in eo libro.

The two Pythagoreans were Damon and Phintias, whose story is told in Off. iii 10, 45 'Damonem et Phintiam Pythagoreus ferunt hoc animo inter se fuisse ut cum eorum alteri Dionysius tyrannus diem necis destinauisset et is qui morti addictus esset paucos sibi dies commendandorum suorum causa postulauisset, uas factus sit alter eius sistendi, ut si ille non reuertisset, moriendum esset ipsi. qui cum ad diem se recepisset, admiratus eorum fidem tyrannus petiuit, ut se ad amicitiam tertium ascriberent.' Cf. also Diod. Sic. x 4; Val. Max. iv 7 ext. 1. According to Aristoxenus, whose account is given in Iamblichus, Vit. Pythag. c. 33, the whole thing was a cruel experiment of Dionysius the younger and his friends to test the reality of Pythagorean professions.

The story is told in varying forms and with varying names, and seems to have been invented for purposes of edification in Pythagorean circles. See 'Die Novelle von der Bürgerschaft im Altertum,' by H. Gasse, in Rh. M. LXVI pp. 607 ff.

uadem mortis: Scheibe wished to delete mortis here as 'ineptum' and as interpolated from horam mortis below. Heine (Posen. Progr. p. 5) shows by a comparison of Off. iii 10, 45; Fin. ii 24, 79 that a defining genitive or prepositional phrase after uadem is regular.

suum liberaret, praesto fuisset ad horam mortis destinatum, 5 'utinam ego,' inquit, 'tertius uobis amicus adscriberer!' quam huic erat miserum carere consuetudine amicorum, societate uictus, sermone omnino familiari, homini praesertim docto a puero et artibus ingenuis erudito! musicorum uero perstudiosum, poëtam etiam tragicum (quam bonum, nihil ad rem; in 10 hoc enim genere nescio quo pacto magis quam in aliis suum cuique pulchrum est. adhuc neminem cognoui poëtam (et mihi fuit cum Aquinio amicitia), qui sibi non optimus uideretur. sic se res habet: te tua, me delectant mea) — sed ut ad Dionysium

4. ad horam R P G. adoram V E. || mortis R I 6 7 17 V G B I 2 K I S E 1 2 M I 2 C II O 2 3 7 ed. H. mortis P. morti K 2 W I 2 J O I.
5. adscriberer R V G B K E. asscriberer II. ascriberer S. 7. docto R G K. dato V. 8. ingenuis R 6 7 V P G B I E 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C O I 3. ingenuus O 2. ingeniis R I 1 7 B 2 K I E I II O 7. || musicorum P K 2 E I-3 W I 2 D O I-3 7 ed. H. musicū B I.

musicorum R V G B 2 K I. || uero V G. uero P B I. uero R i ex e al. atr. mut. || perstudiosum poëtam (om. accepimus) R I 7 V P G B I K I 2 E I-3 L 2 3 5 6 W I 2 M 2 D C J O 2 7 ed. H. perstudiosum<sub>A</sub> poëtam S accepimus marg. accepimus. perstudiosum poëtam II al. atr. superscr. perstudiosum accepimus poëtam O 3. perstudiosum poëtam etiam tragicum accepimus L 4 M I O I. 11. pulcrum G h. l. 12. aquinio R I 7 V P G B 2 K I S taliq<sup>o</sup>

E I 2 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O I 7. aquino B I. aquino K 2 W I O 2 3 ed. H. || optimus R V G B K. 13. dyonisium R I 1 6 V P G B I K I. dionisium R 2 10.

horam mortis: the genitive is paralleled by 'diem necis' in Off. iii 10, 45, quoted above; Lamb.'s morti, adopted by Tr., is unnecessary.

musicorum uero perstudiosum: for Dionysius' love of music and poetry cf. Diod. Sic. xiv 109 (σφδρα γὰρ εἰς τὴν ποιητικὴν ὑπῆρχε μεμηνώς), xv 6, 74; Aelian, V.H. xiii 18; Amm. Marcell. xv 5, 37.

The accusatives perstudiosum and poëtam are out of construction. Had the parenthesis not interrupted the thought Cic. might have ended his sentence with fuisse accepimus or some such phrase; for similar ἀνάκολουθα cf. iii 8, 16; Fin. ii 33, 107. Bentley followed by Dav. altered the accusatives (including bonum) to the dative; and many edd., including Kl. He. Sff. Sch., insert accepimus with some mss; Lamb. added fuisse as well; Sff. and Sch. read 'erudito, musicorum uero perstudioso. poëtam etiam tragicum accepimus.' For bonum, attracted into the case of the preceding adj. (instead of quam bonus fuerit, nihil ad rem), cf. Fin. ii 27, 88 'ne dolorem quidem' with Madvig's note.

neminem: cf. i 41, 99 n. on hominem, neminem.

For this cynical view of the character of poets edd. refer to ad Att. xiv 20, 3 'nemo unquam neque poeta neque orator fuit qui quemquam meliorem quam se arbitraretur' and Arist. Eth. Nic. ix 7 (1168a) μάλιστα δ' ἴσως τοῦτο περὶ τοὺς ποιητὰς συμβαίνει, ὑπεραγαπῶσιν γὰρ οὗτοι τὰ οἰκεία ποιήματα στέργοντες ὥσπερ τέκνα.

Aquinio: if this poet is identical with Catullus' Aquinus (xiv 18) we must either (with some mss. and Ern. Bouh. F.A.W. and Or.) read Aquino here or else suppose that Aquinus and Aquino are different forms of the same name (Ellis, Comment. on Cat. ad loc.). It is just possible, the supply of bad poets being then (apparently) what it always is, that Cic. and Catullus are speaking of different persons.

se res: for the order of these two words, which varies, see Madvig's note to Fin. i 7, 25.

te tua...mea: Cic. quotes in a similar context (Att. xiv 20, 3) a line of Atilius to the same effect 'suam cuique sponsam, mihi meam; suum cuique amorem, mihi meum,' adding the comment 'non scite.'

redeamus, omni cultu et uictu humano carebat; uiuebat cum 15 fugitiuis, cum facinerosis, cum barbaris; neminem, qui aut libertate dignus esset aut uellet omnino liber esse, sibi amicum arbitrabatur.

XXIII. 64. Non ego iam cum huius uita, qua taetrius, miserius, detestabilius excogitare nihil possum, Platonis aut Archytæ uitam comparabo, doctorum hominum et plane sapi-entium; ex eadem urbe humilem homunculum a puluere et radio 5 excitabo, qui multis annis post fuit, Archimedes. cuius ego quaestor ignoratum ab Syracusanis, cum esse omnino negarent, saepum undique et uestitum uepribus et dumetis indagauī sepulcrum. tenebam enim quosdam senariolos, quos in eius monumento esse inscriptos acceperam, qui declarabant in summo

15. facinerosis R V G B 2 K 1. facinorosis P B 1 K 2 S E 1 2
W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed. H.

XXIII. § 64, 1. non ego R G B K O 1 Gr. none/go V litt. post e eras.
3. uitæ uitam V B. uitæ uitam R G K. uite uitam B 2. || comparabo
R V G K S. cōparabo B. 5. archimedes R G K. archimedē V
B 1 2 S E. 6. ignoratum ab R V G B K E M 2. ignoratum ab S.

ignorum a W 1 2 J O 7. || negaret septum G ead. man. superscr.
7. uestitum R 1 2 10 G K. uestitum V atr. uiridi corr. uestatū R 16. || sepulchrum R 2 V G B E. sepulchrum R 1 eod. atr. sepulchrum S h eras. sepulchrum K.

XXIII. § 64. Archytæ: cf. iv 36, 78 n.

humilem homunculum, 'an obscure individual,' i.e. in comparison either with the more celebrated Plato or Archytas, whom everyone had heard of, or with Dionysius. The expression can hardly be ironical as Mayor (Juv. iii 76 n. on geometres) assumes. The rhetorical expression used by Sil. Ital. Pun. xiv 343 'nudus opum' in describing Archimedes (quoted by Dav. and subsequent edd.) ought not to be appealed to as an interpretation of humilis here. Archimedes, according to Plutarch, Marc. c. 14, was Ἰέρωνι τῷ βασιλεῖ συγγενής...καὶ φῖλος, and can scarcely have been in poverty.

puluere et radio, 'from his drawing board and pencil'; an abacus covered with fine sand was used by mathematicians, and diagrams were made on it with a radius or sharp-pointed rod. Cf. Fin. v 19, 50; Pers. i 131; Sen. Epp. 74, 27.

It seems better to take a puluere with excitabo (the idea being that of metaphorically summoning Archimedes to leave his geometry for the moment) than with homunculum on the analogy of such phrases as seruus ab epistulis.

Archimedes: the celebrated mathematician and inventor who was said to have assisted by his warlike machines in the defence of Syracuse in 212 B.C.; he was killed by Marcellus' soldiers while engaged in solving a mathematical problem (Liv. xxv 31, 9; Plut. Marc. 19); for his orrery see i 25, 63 and n.

quaestor: as Cicero was quaestor (75 B.C.) of the W. part of Sicily, with his headquarters at Lilybaeum, his visits to Syracuse can only have been occasional.

sepulcrum: cf. Livy xxv 31, 10 (of the death of Archimedes) 'aegre id Marcellum tulisse sepulturaeque curam habitam et propinque etiam inquisitis honori praesidioque nomen ac memoriam eius fuisse.'

tenebam: sc. mente, cf. Off. iii 16, 67 'qui id, quod emerat, quo iure esset teneret'; the usage is common in Plautus, e.g. Epid. 292 'hic poterit cauere recte, iura qui et leges tenet'; Most. 171 'ut lepide omnis mores tenet.'

The iambic lines referred to are not extant. By the diminutive senariolos Cic. does not seem to mean to express depreciation of their quality but to indicate their length as contrasted with that of the hexameter.

10 sepulcro sphaeram esse positam cum cylindro. 65. ego autem cum omnia conlustrarem oculis (est enim ad portas Agragentinas magna frequentia sepulcrorum), animum aduerti columellam non multum e dumis eminentem in qua inerat sphaerae figura et cylindri. atque ego statim Syracusanis (erant autem principes 15 mecum) dixi me illud ipsum arbitrari esse quod quaererem. inmissi cum falcibus multi purgarunt et aperuerunt locum. 66. quo cum patefactus esset aditus, ad aduersam basim accessimus. apparebat epigramma exesis posterioribus partibus

10. sepulchro V G B E. sepulchro R I cod. atr. sepulcro S h eras.
sepulcro K. sepulchro R 2. || sphaeram R V G B K. sperā P E.

§ 65, 11. conlustrarem R V G B K. conlustrarem S. collustrarem E. || ad portas R 2 10 16 P K I 2 E 2 3 W 2 M 1 2 D C II O 1-3 7 ed. H.

a portas R 1 G. a porta V atr. uiridi superscr. a porta B 1 2 E 1. || agragianas R 1 G K I 2 W 2 O 2 S at litt. ad init. eras. sagragianas R 10 V P B 2 E 2 D C II O 3 7. agraginas E 3 M 2. sagragiana B 1 E 1. ag gianas R 16. ag gianas O 1. fa gginas M 1. ag gregianas W 1. segragianas R 2. agragianas ed. H. 12. sepulchrorum V G B E W 2. sepulchrorum R cod. atr. sepulchrorum S h eras. sepulchrorum K. || animum aduerti R V P G B 1 2 K E 1. animū<sup>Λ</sup> S marg. aniadu'ti.

animaduerti E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1 2. || columellam R G B K S marg.

colūnellā W 2 O 3. colūnellam V u in ū atr. uiridi mut. calumellam E 1 al. atr. superscr. 13. sphaerae B 1. sphaera G K. sphaerae R V.

h
sperē P. 15. illud ipsum R V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1-3 L 4-6 M 1 2 J O 7. illud L 3 O 1 ipsum om. 16. inmissi cum R 7 17 K 2 C. inmissi tum ed. H. imissi cum E 3 M 2. immissi cum E 2 L 5 W 2 D J O 1-3. imissi cum W 1 M 1. immissi cum R 6. immisce cum II.

f inmusicum V atr. uiridi mut. inmusicū P in in imis cū mut. inmusicum R 1 G. in musicum B 1 2 E 1 O 7. in musicū R 10 S marg. immissi cū.
inmusicum K 1. || falcibus R 1 2 10 16 V P G B 1 2 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 D C II J

c
O 1 3. faltibus K 1 atr. nigriore superscr. faucibus E 1. facibus K 2. || multi R 1 2 7 10 16 V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 ed. H. tullii O 7.

§ 66, 17. patefactus R 6 17 K 2 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed. H.

s patefactu P. patefactū B 1 ū in us mut. patefactum S. patefactum R 1 V
G K 1 B 2 E 1. || addit' G at prius d confod. alt. man. et post t duae litt. eras. || basim R 6 17 P B 1 K 2 E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II O 1 3 7. bassim
R 1 V B 2 K 1 O 2 G at prius s expunx. ead. man. ut uid. 18. apparebat
R V G K S E. || epigramma G. epygramma R V K. || exesis R G K 1
W 1 2 D O 1 7. exesis V. exesis B 1 E 1.

sphaeram: cf. Plut. Marc. 17 πολλῶν δὲ καὶ καλῶν εὐρετῆς γεγωνῶς λέγεται [sc. ὁ Ἀρχιμήδης] τῶν φιλῶν δεηθῆναι καὶ τῶν συγγενῶν ὅπως αὐτοῦ μετὰ τὴν τελευτὴν ἐπιστήσῃσι τῷ τάφῳ τὸν περιλαμβάνοντα τὴν σφαῖραν ἐντὸς κύλινδρον ἐπιγράψαντες τὸν λόγον τῆς ὑπεροχῆς τοῦ περιέχοντος στερεοῦ πρὸς τὸ περιεχόμενον. Archimedes' treatise on this point περὶ σφαιρας καὶ κυλινδρον is still extant.

This sphaera is to be distinguished from that spoken of in i 25, 63, where see n. de Rep. i 14, 22.

animum aduerti: cf. iii 20, 48 n.

multi, 'a number of men'; the emendations tumuli (Scheibe), fanuli (Lattmann) and militēs (Sff.) are quite unnecessary.

exesis: a common word, especially in poetry, for the effects of weathering. Sen.

uersicolorum dimidiatis fere. ita nobilissima Graeciae ciuitas, 20 quondam uero etiam doctissima, sui ciuis unius acutissimi monu-mentum ignorasset, nisi ab homine Arpinate didicisset. sed redeat, unde aberrauit oratio. quis est omnium, qui modo cum Musis, id est cum humanitate et cum doctrina, habeat aliquod 25 commercium, qui se non hunc mathematicum malit quam illum tyrannum? si uitae modum actionemque quaerimus, alterius mens rationibus agitandis exquirendisque aiebatur cum oblectatione sollertiae, qui est unus suauissimus pastus animorum, alterius in caede et iniuriis cum et diurno et nocturno metu. age confer Democritum, Pythagoram, Anaxagoram; quae 30 regna, quas opes studiis eorum et delectationibus antepones?

19. nobilissima...doctissima...acutissimi R V G B K.

22. reddeat R V K

G at prius d expunx. ead. man. ut uid. || qui modo R G B 2 K 1. quomodo
 V atr. uiridi superscr. 24. qui se non hunc mathematicum malit R I 10 V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-5 W 1 2 M 1 II J O 1-3. qui non se hunc math. malit D. qui se non se hunc math. malit C. qui non hunc math.
 malit M 2 L 6. qui se non ad hunc m. malit O 7. qui se non hunc mathematicum esse malit ed. H. qui se non habet mathe<sup>cu</sup> malit R 16.

26. exquirendisque G. exquir<sup>i</sup>rendisque R eod. atr. exquirandisque K.
 27. suauissimus R V G B. suauissimus K. 28. in caede R V P B 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 W 1 2 M 2 C II J O 3. in caede G B 1 D O 1.
 caede M 1. caede O 2. etiam caede O 7. || et iniuriis R V P G B 1 2 K 1 2
 S E 1 2 D C II. et in iuriis O 7. et in iniuriis O 3. et in uitis O 1.

et in uiciis W 1 2 J. 29. pythagoram R K. pythagorā V. phythagoram G ead. man. pytagorā P B. phitagorā E. || anaxagoram R 1 2 V G. anaxagorā R 10 16 P B.

Phoen. 72 'partes lapsi montis exesas.'
 Virg. G. iv 419 'exesi latere in montis.'

dimidiatis, 'almost to the middle of the line'; strictly speaking dimidiatis should have agreed with uersicolorum, but Bentley's dimidiatum (adopted by Dav.) seems unnecessary.

For the adjectival use of dimidiatus cf. Aul. Gell. iii 14.

Graeciae: not 'Greece' in the narrow sense, but including Magna Graecia, 'the Greek world' as in pro Arch. 5, 10. It is no doubt the implied superiority of Syracuse to Athens which has induced some edd. here to take Graeciae as a synonym for Magna Graeciae, for which there seems to be no sufficient authority; but Cicero's language here is no stronger than in II Verr. 4, 52, 117, where he speaks of Syracuse as 'maxima Graecarum [urbium], pulcherrima omnium.'

ignorasset: the suggestion of Frederking (Philol. LX p. 637) ignoraret, 'would still be ignorant' would make Cicero say that no one but himself would ever have discovered the monument.

se...malit: see n. on 18, 54 above; Lamb. here inserts esse after hunc, unnecessarily.

oblectatione sollertiae: cf. Plut. non p. suau. uiu. sec. Ep. 11 [p. 1093 E] τινας οὐόμεθα καὶ πηλικας ἡδονὰς ἀπὸ γεωμετρίας δρέπεσθαι καὶ ἀστρολογίας... Ἀρχιμήδην ἀνευρόντα τῇ γωνίᾳ τὴν διάμετρον τοῦ ἡλλου κ.τ.λ.

pastus: cf. Fin. v. 19, 54 'animi cultus ille erat ei quasi quidam humanitatis cibus.'

in caede: some word like uersabatur is to be supplied from alebatur. Ma. and La. omit in, while Ba. proposes to repeat it before iniuriis.

67. etenim, quae pars optima est in homine, in ea situm esse necesse est illud, quod quaeris, optimum. quid est autem in homine sagaci ac bona mente melius? eius bono fruendum est igitur, si beati esse uolumus; bonum autem mentis est uirtus; 35 ergo hac beatam uitam contineri necesse est. hinc omnia quae pulchra, honesta, praeclara sunt, ut supra dixi, sed dicendum idem illud paulo uberius uidetur, plena gaudiorum sunt. ex perpetuis autem plenisque gaudiis cum perspicuum sit uitam beatam existere, sequitur ut ea existat ex honestate.

XXIV. 68. Sed ne uerbis solum attingamus ea quae uolumus ostendere, proponenda quaedam quasi mouentia sunt, quae nos magis ad cognitionem intelligentiamque conuertant. sumatur enim nobis quidam praestans uir optimis artibus, isque animo 5 parumper et cogitatione fingatur. primum ingenio eximio sit necesse est; tardis enim mentibus uirtus non facile comitatur; deinde ad inuestigandam ueritatem studio incitato. ex quo triplex ille animi fetus existet, unus in cognitione rerum positus et in explicatione naturae, alter in discriptione expetendarum

§ 67, 31. optuma...optimum R V G B K. || in homine...necesse est om. G in marg. inf. add. alt. man. 32. quaeris R V P G B I K I 2 S W I 2 M 2. queris E I 2 M I D C II J O I-3 7 ed. H. queriq̄ B 2. || omnium optimum

W I. <sup>omnium</sup> optimum II al. atr. superscr. omnium non habet Gr.
34. si beati esse R G B I E I 2 J. si esse beati S. si beati V esse om. 36. pulchra R G B. pulchra K. 39. existere...existat R V G B K S E.

XXIV. § 68, 1. attingamus R V G B K S E. || ea quae G. eaq̄ V que in quae atr. uiridi corr. eaque R K. 3. intelligentiamque R V G B K. intelligentiamque S E. 4. optimis R V G B K. optimis S. obtimis E.
6. uirtutis G al ti exp. ead. man. 8. fetus R 7 I 7 P B 2 K I 2 L 2-6

W 2 M I D C J O I-3 7. fetus R I. fetus E I. fetus S. faetus M 2. factus V G. foetus R 6 B I E 3 W I. flexus P 4 E 2 II. affectus ed. H. || existet R I V P I 4 G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7. existit R 7 ed. H. 9. discriptione R V G K. discriptione B I et E I di in de mul. descriptione R 7 P B 2 S E 2 W I 2 D C II J O 2. discretionem O I. discrepatione O 7.

§ 67. ut supra dixi: in 15, 43 above.

XXIV. § 68. mouentia: probably a translation of some such word as κινούντα or κινητικά (or ὀρμητικά); for this use of κινούν in Stoic phraseology cf. Stob. Ecl. II 6, 6, p. 175, 8 τὸ δὲ κινούν τὴν ὀρμὴν οὐδὲν ἕτερον εἶναι λέγουσιν ἀλλ' ἢ φαντασίαν ὀρμητικὴν τοῦ καθήκοντος αὐτόθεν.

nobis: cf. II 1, 2 n. on mihi.

comitatur: for the dative with comitari cf. 35, 100.

triplex: for the threefold division of philosophy into τὸ φυσικόν, τὸ ἠθικόν and τὸ λογικόν cf. Ac. I 5, 19; II 36, 116; Fin. v 4, 9; it continued to be a commonplace of philosophical discussion as e.g. in Julian, Or. vii 215 D (p. 279 Hertl.): triplex fetus is here equivalent to tres fetus, as is shown by unus, alter, tertius.

- 10 fugiendarumque rerum et in ratione uiuendi, tertius in iudicando quid cuique rei sit consequens, quid repugnans, in quo inest omnis cum subtilitas disserendi, tum ueritas iudicandi. 69. quo tandem igitur gaudio adfici necesse est sapientis animum cum his habitantem pernoctantemque curis! ut cum totius mundi 15 motus conuersionesque perspexerit sideraque uiderit innumerabilia caelo inhaerentia cum eius ipsius motu congruere certis

10. fugiendarumque rerum R 1 ante rerum est ras. duarum fere litt. et post rerum in ras. apparet uiuendi litteris paene euandis. fugiendarumque ue rerumne uiuendi V atr. uiridi mut. fugiendarumque ue rerumne uiuendi G K 1. fugiendarumque rerumne uiuendi R 16 17 B 1. fugiendarumque ueterumne uiuendi R 2.

fugiendarumque<sup>A</sup> uiuendi S marg. rerū i 9 munione. fugiendarumque uerunt ne uiuendi E 1. fugiendarumque rerumne uiuendi K 2 L 35 W 2 J. fugiendarumque rerum uiuendi P 4 O 17. fugiendarumque rerum in communione uiuendi W 1. fugiendarumque rerum bene uiuendi L 4. fugiendarumque uiuendi rerum E 2 II. fugiendarumque rerum in ratoē uiuendi L 2. fugiendarumque ne rerum ne uiuendi B 2. fugiendarumque ne uiuendi P 5. fugiendarumque ue uiuendi Urs. 3240. fugiendarumque.....uiuendi R 10 spatio duodecim fere litterarum relicto. fugiendarumque rerum uiuendi P 3 L 6 M 2. fugiendarumque rerumne uiuendi P 1. fugiendarumque rerumne uiuendi P 6. fugiendarumque rerum in munere uiuendi O 2. fugiendarumque rerum hñ uiuendi E 3.

fugiendarumque<sup>Aue</sup> rerum immune uiuendi M 1. fugiendarumque rerum R 6 O 3. fugiendarumque rerum uiuendi P 2. fugiendarumque rerum in rōē uiuendi R 7. fugiendarumque rerum in munere uiuendi D C. fugiendarumque rerum arte ue uiuendi ed. H. || iudicando quid R 6 V P G B 12 K 2 S E 1-3 W 1 M 12 D II O 7. iudicando qui O 1. iudicando quā ed. H. iudicando ne quid R 1 K 1 W 2 J. iudicanda quid O 2. 12. omnis cum R 1 17 V G B 2 K 1 E 12 W 2. omnis tum P B 1 S E 3 W 1 M 12 D C II J O 1-37. ||

subtilitas G K. subtilitas V atr. ant. superscr. § 69, 13. adfici R V G K E. affici B S. || necesse est R 6 7 17 V P 2 D C. necesse eēt E 3. necesse eēt K 1 ē et in eēt alio atr. mut. necesse esset R 1 P 13-6 G B 12 K 2 S E 12 W 12 M 12 II J O 1-37 ed. H. 14. ut cum R 17 V P G B 12 K 12 S E 1-3 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7 Gr. ed. H. & cum R 6.

disserendi...iudicandi: referring to the subdivision of τὸ λογικὸν into ἡ ῥητορικὴ and ἡ διαλεκτικὴ (Diog. Laert. vii 41).

§ 69. habitantem: cf. iii 34, 83 n.

curis, 'pursuits,' like the Gk μελέται; cf. Diu. i 42, 93 'Aegyptii et Babylonii...omnem curam in siderum cognitione posuerunt.'

ut, ejected by Be. and Dav., may be taken either in the sense of 'as for example' (Küh. T. S. etc.), in which case perspexerit and uiderit will be future perfect indic. or (with Sff.) as meaning 'so that,' in which case the sentence will be anacoluthistic, the verb intended to follow upon ut being omitted owing to the length of the subordinate clause cum...definiant. Sff. supposes that Cic. would have written ut cum...definiant, ipse se agnoscat coniunctumque cum diuina mente se sentiat, as he does when he finally picks up the broken thread in § 70: it seems simpler to find the missing clause in the next sentence and supply horum aspectus impellat et admoveat ut plura quaerat.

mundi, 'the heavens'; a translation of κόσμος in the second of the three senses in which it was used (according to Diog. Laert. vii 138) by the Stoics καὶ αὐτὴν δὲ τὴν διακόσμησιν τῶν ἀστέρων κόσμον εἶναι λέγουσι; Cic. uses mundus in the same sense in his translation of the Phaenomena of Aratus, ll. 224, 237 (ed. Bait.).

caelo: the sphere of the fixed stars or οὐρανός; cf. Diog. Laert. l. c. ἀνωτάτω μὲν οὖν εἶναι τὸ πῦρ, ὃ δὴ αἰθέρα καλεῖσθαι, ἐν ᾧ πρώτην τὴν τῶν ἀπλανῶν σφαῖραν γεννᾶσθαι, εἶτα τὴν τῶν πλανωμένων...οὐρανός δὲ ἔστιν ἡ ἐσχάτη περιφέρεια ἐν ἣ πάν ἰδρυται τὸ θεῖον.

infixa sedibus, septem alia suos quaeque tenere cursus multum inter se aut altitudine aut humilitate distantia, quorum uagi motus rata tamen et certa sui cursus spatia definiant. horum 20 nimirum aspectus inpulit illos ueteres et admonuit ut plura quaerent. inde est indagatio nata initiorum et tamquam seminum unde essent omnia orta, generata, concreta, quaeque cuiusque generis uel inanimi uel animantis uel muti uel loquentis origo, quae uita, qui interitus quaeque ex alio in aliud uicissitudo atque mutatio, unde terra et quibus librata ponderibus, quibus cauernis maria sustineantur, qua omnia delata grauitate

17. suos quaeque R 1 G. suos quaeque R 10 V S. suos quaeque R 2 K. suos quoque R 16. suoseque B 1. suoseque E 1. suosq; P.
 20. aspectus R V G B K S E. || inpulit R V G B K S. inpulit E. ||

admonuit R V G K. ammonuit R 2 B. admouit P. 21. inde est enim G at enim exp. ead. man. || indagatio R V P G K. inadatio B E. 23. loquenti-

B K. loquentes R eod. atr. loquentes G. 24. qui interitus K 1 E 2

W 1 M 1 J O 2. qui interitus II al. atr. superscr. q̄ interitus K 2. q̄ interitus E 3. quis interitus M 2 D C O 3. quae interitus R 1 eod. atr.

que. interitus V atr. uiridi mut. que interitus B 1. que interitus E 1.

que interitus R 16 B 2. q̄ interitus P marg. qs. quae interitus G. qua interitus R 2. 25. et quibus R 1 2 6 7 10 16 17 V P G E 1 2 L 2-4 6 plerique. e quibus L 5. quibus W 1 et om. 26. sustineantur R 2 6 S E 2

L 2 5 M 1 II O 2 3 7 ed. H. sustineant R 10 P. sustineant R 16. sustineant R 1 17 G B 2 K 1 E 1. sustineant V B 1. sustineat K 2 E 3

L 3 4 6 M 2 D C O 1. sustinuit J. substineat W 1 2. substinuit R 7. || in qua R 1 6 7 V P G B 1 K 1 S<sup>ea</sup> E 1 2 L 2 3 5 6 W 1 M 1 II J O 1-3 7

ed. H. in qua E 3 eod. atr. in quo L 4. in qua D. inq K 2 W 2. inquam C. inq B 2. in quo R 17. qua corr. Dauisius.

septem: the seven planets, i.e. the Sun, the Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn; cf. i 25, 63 n.

rata: a 'uox usitatissima in commemorandis rebus caelestibus,' as Wopkens remarks (op. cit. p. 230); he compares N.D. ii 38, 97 'qui cum tam certos caeli motus, tam ratos astrorum ordines... uiderit.'

horum...quaerent: for the thought cf. i 19, 45 'haec enim pulchritudo... philosophiam cognitionis cupiditate incensam excitauit.'

initiorum...seminum: cf. Tac. Dial. c. 33 'initia et semina ueteris eloquentiae,' where Gudemann quotes Quint. ii 20, 6 'initia quaedam ac semina sunt concessa natura.'

uicissitudo: referring to the evolution of air, water and earth by successive condensations from fire; cf. the passage quoted from Chrysippus in Stob. Ecl. i 10, 16 τὸ δὲ πῦρ κατ' ἐξοχὴν στοιχείων λέγεσθαι, διὰ τὸ ἐξ αὐτοῦ πρώτου τὰ λοιπὰ συνίστασθαι κατὰ μεταβολὴν καὶ εἰς αὐτὸ ἔσχατον πάντα χεόμενα διαλύεσθαι... πρώτης μέντοι γιγνομένης τῆς ἐκ πυρὸς κατὰ σύστασιν εἰς ἀέρα μεταβολῆς, δευτέρας δ' ἀπὸ τούτου εἰς ὕδωρ, τρίτης δ' ἐτι μᾶλλον κατὰ τὸ ἀνάλογον συνισταμένου τοῦ ὕδατος εἰς γῆν.

quibus...ponderibus, 'by what forces it is held in equilibrium'; the earth being the κέντρον of the universe was held in position by the resultant of the centripetal and centrifugal forces; cf. i 17, 40 nn. and Achilles, Isagoge 4 (quoted in von Arnim, Stoic. vet. frag. ii p. 175), paraphrasing Chrysippus and others, καὶ τὴν γῆν δὲ πανταχόθεν ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀέρος ἀθουμένην ἰσορροπῶς ἐν τῷ μέσῳ εἶναι καὶ ἐστάναι... ὥσπερ εἰ τις λαβὼν σῶμα δῆσειε πανταχόθεν σχοινοῖς καὶ δολῆ τισιν ἰσορροπῶς ἔλκειν ἐπ' ἀκριβέλας· συμβήσεται γὰρ πανταχόθεν ἐπίσης περιελκόμενον στήναι καὶ ἀτρεμῆσαι; Plut. de Stoic. repugn. p. 1053.

medium mundi locum semper expetant, qui est idem infimus in rotundo.

XXV. 70. Haec tractanti animo et noctes et dies cogitanti existit illa a deo Delphis praecepta cognitio, ut ipsa se mens adgnoscat coniunctamque cum diuina mente se sentiat, ex quo insatiabili gaudio compleatur. ipsa enim cogitatio de ui et natura deorum studium incendit illius aeternitatem imitandi neque se in

27. expetant E<sub>2</sub> L<sub>4</sub> 6 ed. H. expectant E<sub>3</sub>. expectant R V P G
K I 2 S L 2 3 5 W I M I O 3. exspectant E<sub>1</sub>. || infimus R V P G K.

28. rotundo V P B I K I E I W I 2 M I J O I 3 7. rotondo S. rotundo R h. l. G B 2.

XXV. § 70, 1. tractanti R 6 7 17 P B I E 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C II
O I - 3 7. tractandi V atr. uiridi superscr. tractandi R I G B 2 E I. tractandø K I. || cogitanti R I 6 7 17 P G B I E I W I 2 M I D C O 2 3 7.

cogitandi V atr. uiridi superscr. cogitandi B 2 K I. 2. existit R V P G B S E. || illa a deo delphis R 6 P 2 K I 2 E 2 W 2 M I 2 I I J O I 2. illa deo delphis R I 7 V B I 2 G. illa deo delphis E I. illa de adelphis D C O 3 7. illa de adelphis S margin. a deo. illa de adelphis P I. illa de delphis W I litt. eras. 3. agnoscat R V P G h. l. B K S E. 4. compleatur R G K. cōpleatur V P B. 5. incendit P B I. incedit R G B 2. || aeternitatis
R V P G B I 2 E 2 W I 2 D C II O I - 3 7. externitatis M I. aeternitatem corr. Seyffertus. || imitandi R I 7 17 V P I - 6 G B I 2 K I 2
E I - 3 L 2 - 6 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O 2 3 7 Urs. 3240. imitandae R 6. imitandē S W I. imitande O I ed. H.

cauernis, 'hollows'; water being lighter than earth, the sphere of water originally lay above the earth; later, by a process which is differently explained, the sea became confined to certain deep hollows and channels on the surface of the earth; cf. N.D. ii 45, 116; Manilius, Astron. i 163 'et saccata magis struxerunt aequora terram | adiacutique cauis fluidum conuallibus aequor.'

sustineantur, 'are held'; for the use of sustinere cf. Sen. de breu. uit. 19, 1 'quid sit quod huius mundi grauissima quaeque in medio sustineat'; for the change from secondary to primary sequence cf. 7, 18 above, and for the reverse change iii 15, 32.

medium ... rotundo: the statement often occurs, e.g. N.D. ii 45, 116; Manil. Astr. i 170 'medium totius et imum est.' Sen. de breu. uit. 19, 1 (quoted in preceding n.); Plut. de Stoic. repugn. p. 1054: Sallustius, de diis et mundo c. 7 (Mullach, Frgg. Phil. Gr. iii p. 37) σφαίρας δὲ οὐσῆς τοῦ κόσμου... ἐπειδὴ σφαίρας πάσης τὸ κάτω μέσον ἐστὶ, πανταχόθεν γὰρ πλείστον ἀφέστηκε· τὰ τε βαρῆα φέρεται κάτω, φέρεται δὲ εἰς γῆν.

The matter of the preceding paragraph has been derived in all probability from Posidonius; see Capelle, in Neue Jahrb. 1905, p. 534<sup>4</sup>.

XXV. § 70. Haec tractanti: Cicero passes here from the consideration of the first of the tres animi fetus of § 68, viz. cognitio rerum (which has occupied § 69) to the second, the descriptio expetendarum fugiendarumque rerum which occupies this and the next paragraph.

noctes et dies: Madv. notes on Fin. i 16, 51 that Cic. always uses either noctes diesque or noctes et dies or et dies et noctes or dies noctesque.

praecepta: cf. i 22, 52 and nn. there.
compleatur: the subj. is consecutive; Bentley's completur is adopted only by Dav. and Ern.

illius: sc. mentis.

aeternitatem: Sff.'s emendation of aeternitatis (the reading of nearly all the MSS) has been accepted by Hei. T.S. and Sch.; the gen. seems to be due to the influence of the preceding illius: a few MSS have aeternitatis imitandae, adopted by Dav. Or. Tr. Wes., while Madv. (on Fin. i 18, 60) proposed aeterni status imitandi: the reading of the MSS aeternitatis imitandi is kept by Kl. Mo. Ha. and Küh., and is defended by reference to Ter. Hec. 372 'ego eius [sc. mulieris] uidendi cupidus recta consequor,' and Cic. Phil. v 3, 6 'facultas... agrorum suis latronibus condonandi.' Madv. (l.c.) points out that while such a construction breuitate uitae conlocatam putat, cum rerum causas alias ex aliis aptas et necessitate nexas uidet, quibus ab aeterno tempore fluentibus in aeternum ratio tamen mensque moderatur. 71. haec ille intuens atque suspiciens uel potius omnis partis orasque 10 circumspiciens quanta rursus animi tranquillitate humana et ceteriora considerat! hinc illa cognitio uirtutis existit, efflorescunt genera partesque uirtutum, inuenitur quid sit quod natura spectet extremum in bonis, quid in malis ultimum, quo referenda sint officia, quae degendae aetatis ratio deligenda. quibus et 15 talibus rebus exquisitis hoc uel maxime efficitur, quod hac disputatione agimus, ut uirtus ad beate uiuendum sit se ipsa contenta. 72. sequitur tertia, quae per omnis partis sapientiae manat et funditur, quae rem definit, genera dispertit, sequentia

6. conlocatam B I K I. conlocatā V. collocatam R 6 E 2 M 2 D C II O I-3. collocatā P B 2 S W I 2 M I J. collocata R G E I. collatam R 17 O 7.
 § 71, 9. omnis partis R V P G B K E. om̄s partes S. 11. existit R V P G B S E. existit K ex extitet mut. 13. spectet R V P B K S. spectat E. expectet G at ex expunx. et s superscr. alt. man. expectetur Gr. || quid in malis R V P G B I 2 K I S E I 2 W 2 M I 2 D II O I 3.
 in malis quid O 2. quod in malis W I O 7. qd' in malis J. || ultimum R V G K. ultimum P B. 14. degendę R E. degende P S O 7. degente G at t expunx. et d superscr. ead. man. || deligenda M I 2 O I 2 7. diligenda R V P G B I 2 K I E W 2 D J. dirigenda O 3. 15. maxime
 h
 R V P G B. || quod ac G ead. man.
 § 72, 17. omnis partis R V P G B K. om̄s partes B 2 S. 18. definiuit V. definiuit R G. definiuit K. diffinit P W I M I 2.

as agrorum condonandi is well attested with plural nouns, being a mixture of agros condonandi and agrorum condonandorum, a similar construction is never found with a singular noun. See also Roby, Lat. Gr. ii p. lxxviii.

conlocatam: for which Dav. (followed by Ba. and Wes.) reads conlocatum, agrees in gender with the personified cogitatio, which 'makes the mind eager to imitate the eternal existence of the gods and refuses to regard mortality as its natural sphere.'

quibus: sc. rebus; for this attempt to reconcile natural law with a guiding providence, Küh. quotes Chrysippus, ap. Stob. Ecl. Phys. i 5, 15 p. 180 εἰμαρμένη ἐστὶν ὁ τοῦ κόσμου λόγος ἢ λόγος τῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ προνοία διοικουμένων.

rursus: i 17, 40 n. on rursus.

ceteriora: τὰ κατωτέρω τοῦ οὐρανοῦ: 'mundane affairs,' i.e. everything on this side of the moon, which occupied the lowest of the celestial spheres.

genera partesque: i.e. the four cardinal virtues and their subdivisions.

efficitur: cf. i 8, 16 n. on efficies ut.

§ 72. tertia: the final division of the discussion commenced in § 69.

definit, 'forms a definition'; the importance assigned by the Stoics to definition is well known; Diog. Laert. vii 41.

genera: for the Stoic categories (γέννη) cf. Zeller, Stoics (E.T.) pp. 97 ff. and authorities there quoted.

sequentia adiungit: not 'makes inferences' but 'forms hypothetical judgments' (συνημμένα); cf. Diog. Laert. vii 71 τῶν δ' οὐχ ἀπλῶν ἀξιωματῶν συνημμένον μὲν ἐστὶ... τὸ συνεστὸς διὰ τοῦ εἰ συναπτικοῦ συνδέσμου· ἐπαγγέλλεται δ' ὁ σύνδεσμος οὗτος ἀκολουθεῖν τὸ δεύτερον τῷ πρώτῳ. Cicero's phrase might be translated into Greek by ἀκολουθοῦντα συνάπτει. These hypothetical judgments play a large part in constructing the favourite Stoic 'chain-argument' so often exemplified in these books.

desiderat, quo sit beatior? cui refertae tot tantisque gaudiis 30 Fortuna ipsa cedat necesse est. quodsi gaudere talibus bonis animi, id est uirtutibus, beatum est omnisque sapientes his gaudiis perfruuntur, omnis eos beatos esse confiteri necesse est.

XXVI. 73. Etiamne in cruciatu atque tormentis?

An tu me in uiola putabas aut in rosa dicere? an Epicuro, qui tantum modo induit personam philosophi et sibi ipse hoc nomen inscripsit, dicere licebit, quod quidem, ut habet se res, 5 me tamen plaudente dicit, nullum sapienti esse tempus, etiamsi uratur, torqueatur, secetur, quin possit exclamare: 'quam pro nihilo puto!' cum praesertim omne malum dolore definiat, bonum uoluptate, haec nostra honesta, turpia inrideat dicatque nos in uocibus occupatos inanis sonos fundere, neque quicquam

29. quod sit G in quo sit corr. alt. man. || cui referte R 7 E 2 C.
 rei <sup>at referte</sup> cui referte II al. atr. superscr. cui p fecte D al. atr. superscr. cui rei referte S. cui rei refertae R G K 1 O 2 Gr. cui rei referte B 1 L 4 W 1. cui rei referte R 6 P 1 2 6 E 1 3 L 5 M 1 J ed. H. cui rei referta et V B 2. cui rei refertae e P 4. cui rei referctae L 3 M 2. cui rei referte P 5 O 1 3. cui rei perfecta L 2. cui recte perfecte O 7. cui rei referre L 6.
 32. omnis eos R V P G B K. || beatos esse confiteri R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 W 1 2 M 2 D C J O 1 3 ed. H. confiteri beatos esse M 1 O 2. beatos confiteri K 2 O 7 esse om. esse beatos confiteri E 2 II.

XXVI. § 73, 1. & iam R ne eras. 3. qui tantum W 1 D C O 1 3 7.
 a
 qui G alt. man. superscr. quia R V P B 1 2 K 1 S margin. E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2
 II J O 2. 5. etiamsi R V G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 II J O 3. et si P K 2 W 1 2 M 1 O 1 2 7. et si M 2 D C. 8. inrideat R V G B K. irrideat P S E. 9. inanis R V P G B K. inanes S E.

XXVI. § 73. in uiola...in rosa: i.e. uiolis, rosas circumfusum, cf. Fin. ii 20, 65 'potantem in rosa Thorium,' where Madv. quotes Sen. Ep. 36, 9 'in rosa iacere': for the use of the collective sing. cf. iii 18, 43.

an Epicuro: the sentence might have been expected to assume the form 'an Epicuro...dicere licebit...Stoicis immo Peripateticis etiam non idem dicendum erit?' as Madv. Emm. in Cic. lib. phil. i 44 sq. (quoted by Mo.) suggests; but the structure of the sentence changes as the thought develops, and the contrast, which is not mentioned before § 75, loses its sharpness.

qui: Kl. adopts quia; but as Wopkens (op. cit. p. 150) says, the following words, so far from giving a reason, 'nihil ad rem faciunt nisi ut Epicuri mentioni odii ac uituperationis notam apponant.'

personam, 'the mask of a philosopher'; Cic. sometimes seems to dispute Epicurus' title to rank as a philosopher on the ground of his want of culture (Fin. i 7, 26; N.D. i 26, 72), his contempt of logic (Fin. i 7, 22; Ac. ii 30, 97) and his inconsistencies (Off. iii 33, 117); but he praises his clear and straightforward style (Fin. i 5, 14; ii 5, 15).

inscripsit: Dav. quotes Fin. ii 3, 7 'qui [sc. Epicurus] se unus, quod sciam, sapientem profiteri sit ausus.'

uratur...secetur: cf. Sen. Ep. 71, 23 'quid miraris si uri, uulnerari, occidi, alligari iuuat, aliquando etiam libet'; Mo. notes that the expressions seem to be borrowed from the oath taken by gladiators, and compares Sen. Ep. 37, 1, 'eadem honestissimi huius et illius turpissimi auctoramenti uerba sunt, uri, uinciri, ferroque necari'; cf. also Petr. 117 'in uerba Eumolpi sacramentum iurauimus, uri, uinciri, uerberari ferroque necari.'

quam...puto: cf. ii 7, 17. Sen. Ep. 66, 18, where Epicurus' phrase is given as 'dulce est et ad me nihil pertinet'; cf. Tertullian's 'nihil crux sentit in neruo, cum animus in caelo est' (ad Mart. 2).

cum praesertim: iii 21, 51 n.
sonos fundere: cf. iii 18, 42; Ac. ii 23, 74 (with Reid's n.); Fin. ii. 15, 48 'uoce inani sonare.'

10 ad nos pertinere, nisi quod aut leue aut asperum in corpore sentiatur: huic ergo, ut dixi, non multum differenti a iudicio ferarum obliuisci licebit sui et tum fortunam contemnere, cum sit omne et bonum eius et malum in potestate fortunae, tum dicere se beatum in summo cruciatu atque tormentis, cum con-15 stituerit non modo summum malum esse dolorem, sed etiam solum? 74. nec uero illa sibi remedia comparauit ad tolerandum dolorem, firmitatem animi, turpitudinis uerecundiam, exercitationem consuetudinemque patiendi, praecepta fortitudinis, duritiam uirilem, sed una se dicit recordatione adquiescere 20 praeteritarum uoluptatum, ut si quis aestuans, cum uim caloris non facile patitur, recordari uelit sese aliquando in Arpinati nostro gelidis fluminibus circumfusum fuisse. non enim uideo

11. differenti a G. differentia R V P. differentia a S. 12. et tum
 R I 6 V P G B I K I 2 S E 2 3 W 2 M I 2 I I J O I - 3. et cum B 2
 E I. et tantum W I. et tñ D.

§ 74, 16. comparauit R V G K S. cōparauit P B E. || tollerandum
 R V K G a ex tollendum ead. man. mut. tofandū P. 18. praecepta fortitudinis R I 7 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I - 3 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J
 O I - 3 7 ed. H. 19. duritiam R V G. duritiem S. || adquiescere
 R V P G B E. adquiescere K. acquiescere S at c ex d mut.
 20. uoluptatum R V G B I K E I. uoluptatum P B 2 S E 2 W I 2
 M I 2 C I I J O I - 3 7. 21. sese R 7 I 7 M I D C O 2 7 S at pr.

se in ras. ee B I ee in sese mut. esse V atr. uiridi mut. ee P marg. se. se R 6 M 2 I I J O I 3 W 2 at indistincte in ras. esse R I G K I. ee B 2 E I 3 L 5 W I. || aliquando se E 2. om. K 2. se uelit aliquando esse ed. H. || arpinati P G B I 2 K I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I O I - 3 7 ed. H. apinati R V E I. alpinati E 2.

leue aut asperum: according to Epicurus all pleasure was in the last resort of physical origin; Plut. non p. suau. 4 p. 1088 E ἐπ' οὐδενί ψυχῇ τῶν ὄντων πέφυκε χαίρειν καὶ γαληνίζειν πλὴν ἐπὶ σώματος ἡδοναῖς παρούσαις ἢ προσδοκώμεναις. Physical pleasure or pain depended upon the smooth or rough character of the atoms composing the objects which gave pleasure or pain; Lucr. ii 402 ff. where the words leuia and aspera are used to express the contrast.

a iudicio ferarum: Epicurus relied upon alleged facts with regard to animals (which he called 'specula naturae,' Fin. ii 10, 31) for proof of his assertion that all living beings naturally desired pleasure; cf. the passage quoted in Usener, Epicurea § 398; for the comparatio compendiaria in 'differenti a iudicio ferarum' = 'cuius iudicium non multum differt a iudicio ferarum' cf. i 1, 2 n. Wopk. op. cit. p. 189.

§ 74. una...adquiescere: the ref. is to Epicurus' letter written on his deathbed to Idomeneus, Diog. Laert. x 22; Fin. ii 30, 96 in which, after enumerating his disorders, he says ἀντιπαρετάττετο δὲ πᾶσι τούτοις τὸ κατὰ ψυχὴν χαίρειν ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν γεγονότων ἡμῶν διαλογισμῶν μνήμη. Epicurus had, however, laid down that the prospect of a speedy cessation of extreme pain ought to be an additional source of consolation; cf. iii 17, 38; Fin. ii 28, 93.

uoluptatum: for the termination of the gen. plur. cf. Neue, Formenl. 1<sup>3</sup> p. 410.

gelidis fluminibus: Cic. probably has in view such a scene as he describes in the preface to the second book of the De Legibus, where the interlocutors are seated in the insula enclosed by two arms of the Fibrenus, just above where it falls into the Liris; the Fibrenus was exceptionally cold. Legg. ii 3, 6 'nec enim ullum hoc frigidius flumen attigi, cum ad multa accesserim, ut uix pede temptare id possim.'

quo modo sedare possint mala praesentia praeteritae uoluptates. 75. sed cum is dicat semper beatum esse sapientem, 25 cui dicere hoc, si sibi constare uellet, non liceret, quidnam faciendum est iis qui nihil expetendum, nihil in bonis ducendum, quod honestate careat, existumant? me quidem auctore etiam Peripatetici ueteresque Academici balbutire aliquando desinant aperteque et clara uoce audeant dicere beatam uitam in Phalaridis 30 taurum descensuram.

XXVII. 76. Sint enim tria genera bonorum, ut iam a laqueis Stoicorum, quibus usum me pluribus, quam soleo, intellego, recedamus, sint sane illa genera bonorum, dum corporis et externa iaceant humi et tantum modo, quia sumenda sint, appellentur 5 bona, alia autem illa diuina longe lateque se pandant caelumque contingant; ut ea qui adeptus sit, cur eum beatum modo et non

§ 75, 24. cum his V G. 25. sibi P G alt. man. superscr. sibi S si om. || faciendum R V P G K I E I 2 L 2 3 4 6. faciundum O I. 26. iis W I M 2 O 3. hiis D C II O 7. his R V P G B I 2 K I E I 2 W 2 M I
 J O I 2. eis S at ex his mut. 27. careant G n exp. cad. man. || existumant R 2 V G K. existumant R I. existimant P B. 28. academici G.

academici V atr. ant. achademici R P B K E. || balbutire R 2 16 P. balbutire V atr. ant. balbutire R I 10 G. 30. decensuram V atr. uiridi superscr. de<sup>h</sup>cessurā P. decensuram R G B 2 K I.

XXVII. § 76, 1. sint enim R I 2 10 V P G B I K I E 2 M 2 D C O I. sint enim S. sit enim E I. sunt enim R 16 K 2 W I O 7. sunt O 2 enim om. 3. sint sane R V G B 2 K I 2 M I J ed. H. sint sane S. sunt sane E I W I O 7. sane P. || corporis et externa R 6 7 W I

O 3 7 ed. H. corporis<sup>et</sup> externa II al. atr. corr. corporis externa R V P G
 B I 2 K I 2 E I-3 W 2 M I 2 D C J O I 2. om. R 17. 4. sumenda sint
 R 1 7 V G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 W I M I C II J O I 2 7 ed. H. sumenda sunt R 6 P W 2 M 2 D O 3. || appellentur R G B I 2 K I
 W I 2 M I 2 II J O I 2 7. appellent V atr. uiridi superscr. appellantur
 P S E I. 5. alia R I 6 7 10 16 17 V P I 2 G B I 2 K 2 S E 2 3 L 2-6
 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 ed. H. alii K I E I. || illa G alt. man.
superscr. 6. ut ea R V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I 2 7 ed. H.

§ 75. balbutire, 'to give an uncertain sound'; this seems to be the only passage in which this sense occurs: Diu. i 3, 5, quoted by Or. and others, is (as Küh. points out) not really parallel, nor is Ac. ii 45, 137, quoted by Ern. Clau. s.u. Phalaridis taurum: ii 7, 17 n.

XXVII. § 76. laqueis: cf. Or. i 10, 43 'Stoici uero nostri disputationum suarum...laqueis te inretitum tenerent.'

pluribus: sc. uerbis, 'at greater length'; cf. Famm. ii 3, 1 'scribam ad te postea pluribus'; Diu. ii 2, 7 'sed haec alias pluribus'; Quint. v 13, 14; xi 3, 153.

sumenda: i.e. τὰ προηγημένα, the 'quae aestimanda sunt' of Fin. iii 15, 51; cf. Stob. Ecl. Eth. ii 6, 6 προηγημένον δ' εἶναι λέγουσι δ' ἀδιάφορον ὃν ἐκλεγόμεθα κατὰ προηγουμένον λόγον.

alia: i.e. bona animi; Jeep (followed by Küh.) proposes to read animi in place of alia.

ut ea qui adeptus sit...: 'so that the man who succeeds in winning them (sc. the bona animi)—why should I merely beatissimum etiam dixerim? dolorem uero sapiens extimescet? is enim huic maxime sententiae repugnat. nam contra mortem nostram atque nostrorum contraque aegritudinem et reliquas 10 animi perturbationes satis esse uidemur superiorum dierum disputationibus armati et parati; dolor esse uidetur acerrimus uirtutis aduersarius; is ardentis faces intentat, is fortitudinem, magnitudinem animi, patientiam se debilitaturum minatur.

 77. huic igitur succumbet uirtus, huic beata sapientis et con-
 15 stantis uiri uita cedet? quam turpe, o di boni! pueri Spartiatae non ingemescunt uerberum dolore laniati. adulescentium greges

7. beatissimum R V P G B K.

8. maxime R V P G B K S E.

11. acerrimus R B K G ex acerrimus ead. man. mut. acerrum; V. acerrimus P S. acerrimus E I. 12. uirtuti R I 6 7 10 16 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I - 3 L 2 - 6 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J O I - 3 7 ed. H. uirtu R 17. uirtutis corr. Wesenbergius. || ardentis R V P G B I K E I O I. ardentis B 2. ardentis S.

§ 77, 15. cedet P G B I 2 K I S E I M I D II O I - 3 W 2 margin. e cont. om. caedet R V M 2. dicit J. || dii R V P G B I K I S E I

W 2 D C J O I 2 7. 16. ingemescunt V G B 2. ingemescunt R eod. atr. ingemiscunt P B I K I S E I W 2 D O 7. || adulescentium R V G B 2.

adulescentium P B I S E. || greges P G B K. <sup>g</sup>reges V al. atr. superscr. graeges R.

say that he is happy and not supremely happy?' Cicero doubtless, as Hand (in Wopkens, op. cit. p. 152) points out, had intended to end his sentence, 'beatus sit dicendus,' but substituted a question for the direct statement. Wopkens (l.c.) quotes a close parallel from Fin. ii 21, 67 'nunc uero, quoniam haec nos etiam tractare coepimus, suppediabit nobis Atticus noster e thesauris suis quos et quantos uiros.'

Küh. alone among recent edd. retains ut here, Lamb. being almost universally followed in deleting ut as due to dittography of the last two letters of contingant. Heine (Pos. Progr. p. 12) retracting his former opinion (Halle Dissert. p. 30) argues against ut on the ground that the words 'ea qui adeptus sit, etc.' contain the ἀπόδοσις, the propositio of which is contained in the preceding subjunctives. But this is not so; the clause beginning ut ea is dependent upon 'alia autem... contingant,' to the subject of which alone ea can refer; if Heine's view of the construction were correct, it would have to be taken to refer to all three genera bonorum, which is absurd. The argument is: let us assume that the bona corporis, as well as the bona externa, deserve to come under the same category as the bona animi, i.e. the category of bona; but we must make the proviso that they are to occupy an admittedly and markedly inferior position, and that the bona animi are to cover practically the whole field and tower over everything else, and so enable their possessor to be called not beatus merely but beatissimus.

huic sententiae: sc. sapientem beatissimum esse.

uirtutis: Wes. seems right in changing uirtuti of the MSS here to the genitive, as the noun is dependent entirely upon aduersarius, not on the verb or on the general construction of the sentence.

faces: ii 25, 61 n.

§ 77. Spartiatae: for the διαμαστίγων see nn. on ii 14, 34; 20, 46. The example of endurance furnished by the Spartan youths was a favourite topic in ethical exhortations, cf. Sen. de proud. 4, 11 'numquid tu inuisos esse Lacedaemoniis liberos suos credis, quorum experiuntur indolem publice uerberibus admotis?... quid mirum, si dure generosos spiritus deus temptat?' Musonius rell. p. 112 (Hense) τεκμήρια δὲ τούτων αἱ τῶν ἐφήβων ἐκεῖ καρτερήσεις, ἐθιζομένων φέρειν λιμὸν τε καὶ δῖφος καὶ μετὰ τούτων ῥῆγος, ἔτι δὲ πληγὰς καὶ πόνους ἄλλους.

uerberum dolore laniati, 'while being flogged with cruel blows till the blood comes'; for uerb. dolore = uerberibus qui

Lacedaemone uidimus ipsi incredibili contentione certantis pugnis, calcibus, unguibus, morsu denique, cum exanimarentur prius quam uictos se faterentur. quae barbaria India uastior aut 20 agrestior? in ea tamen gente primum ei qui sapientes habentur nudi aetatem agunt et Caucasi niues hiemalemque uim perferunt sine dolore, cumque ad flammam se adplicauerunt, sine gemitu aduruntur. 78. mulieres uero in India, cum est cuius earum uir mortuus, in certamen iudiciumque ueniunt, quam plurimum ille
 25 dilexerit (plures enim singulis solent esse nuptae); quae est uictrix, ea laeta prosequentibus suis una cum uiro in rogam

17. contentione M I 2 contione B. con†atione P. con<sup>ten</sup>itione E I. contione R V K. conditione G di exp. alt. man. || certantis R V G B I 2 K I E I. certantis P. certantes S. 18. cum exanimarentur R V P G

B I 2 K 2 E I 2 L 2 3 5 6 W I 2 M I 2 D C H J O I - 3 7. <sup>ut</sup> exanimarentur L 4. tum exanimarentur S. ut exanimarentur ed. H om. E 3. 19. uictos se R V P G B 2 K I S E I 2 D C H O 3 7. se uictos B I K 2 W I 2 M I 2 J O I 2. 20. ei R V P G B 2 K I S E I 2 W 2 M I 2 D C H J O 7. ii O 2. hi W I O 3. 21. nudi aetatem R G B I W I M 2.

nudietatem V E 2 M I D C H O I 3 7. nudietatem B 2. nudietatem S W 2 J O 2. nudietatem P. 22. adplicauerunt G. applicauerunt R V B I K I E I Gr. applicuerunt J. applicauerint B 2 S E 2 W I M I D C H O I 2. applicuerint P M 2 O 3 W 2 marg. e cont. om. applicauit O 7.

78, 23. cuius R I P G B I 2 K I S W 2. cuius V <sup>i</sup>atr. uiridi superscr. libet cui<sup>9</sup> E I al. atr. superscr. cuius uir R I 7 K 2 O 7 earum om. earum cuius uir E 2 II. cuiusque R 6 M 2 O 3 ed. H. cuiusque uir W I earum om.
 cuius libet M I D C O 2. cuiusuis J. alicuius O I. a uiuu R 7.
 24. plurimum R V G B K. plurimum P S. 26. leta G. || una cum P G K. unam cum V.

dolorem afferunt cf. iii 5, 11 n.; for the perf. part. used to express time contemporaneous with the time of the principal verb, as the aor. part. sometimes in Greek (Goodwin, M. and T. §§ 148 ff.), cf. Cat. lxiii 15 'sectam meam exsecutae duce me mihi comites | rapidum salum tulistis,' with Friedrich's n., who compares Prop. i 3, 26; iv 3, 14.

greges: i.e. ἀγέλαι (Plut. Lyc. 16), which was the ordinary Gk word for the correct Spartan βοῦαι (Gilbert, Gk Const. Ant. p. 63).

uidimus ipsi: probably when as a young man he spent some time in the Peloponnesus, iii 22, 53.

prius quam, 'rather than'; for prius = potius cf. i 8, 16 n.

barbaria = barbarorum terra, as always in Cic.

ei qui sapientes: the Brahmins or γυμνοσοφισταί; see ii 22, 52 n. on 'Calanus' and compare the description of their mode of life given in Philostratus, Apoll. Tyan. iii 15 p. 94 (Kayser) where they are said to go barefoot, and ὑπαίθριοι δοκοῦντες ἀλιγεσθαι... ὄντος οὐ ψεκάζονται καὶ ὑπὸ τῷ ἡλίῳ εἶναι, ἐπειδὴν αὐτοὶ βοῦλῶνται; cf. also Lucan iii 240; Quint. Curt. viii 9, 32.

Caucasi: the Himalayas; cf. ii 22, 52 n. on Caucasi.

adplicauerunt: cf. ii 23, 54 n. on restiterunt.

§ 78. cuius, 'the husband of any of them'; there is no necessity to change cuius to communis with Geel, or to rewrite (with Jeep) cum est coniunx earum uix mortuus. The desire to alter cuius is due to a misunderstanding of mulieres, which refers, not to a group of women married to a particular man, but to the married women of India, each of whom was the wife of some man.

inponitur, illa uicta maesta discedit. numquam naturam mos uinceret; est enim ea semper inuicta; sed nos umbris, deliciis, otio, languore, desidia animum infecimus, opinionibus maloque 30 more delenitum molliuimus. Aegyptiorum morem quis ignorat? quorum inbutae mentes prauitatis erroribus quamuis carnificinam prius subierint quam ibim aut aspidem aut faelem aut canem aut crocodilum uiolent, quorum etiamsi imprudentes quippiam fecerint, poenam nullam recusent. 79. de hominibus loquor; quid?
 35 bestiae non frigus, non famem, non montiuagos atque siluestris cursus lustrationesque patiuntur? non pro suo partu ita propug-

27. imponitur R V B K S. <sup>im</sup>ponitur G alt. man. superscr. iponitur P E I. || maesta R. mesta V P G J. maiesta E. 28. deliciis P delicis V. delitiis R G K. 29. langore G. 30. delenitum R G B<sub>2</sub> K I. delenitum V in e mut., ut uid. delinitum M<sub>2</sub> D C O I. †linitu P alio atr. superscr. deuictum E<sub>2</sub> II. deuictu S  marg. delinitu. demotum Gr. marg. deuictum. demotum B I E I. 31. inbutae R V G
 h. l. K E. imbutae B S. || prauitatis R V P G B<sub>2</sub> K I<sub>2</sub> S E<sub>3</sub> W I<sub>2</sub>
 D C II J O I-37. prauitatis B I E I ed. H. || canifici nam G.
 32. felem V P G B I<sub>2</sub> E I<sub>2</sub> W I M I D O I<sub>2</sub> 7. faelem R K I W<sub>2</sub>
 M<sub>2</sub> J. 33. crocodillum M I. crochodilon O<sub>2</sub>. crocodrillum D C.
<sup>r</sup>crocodillum P. corcodillum R V G B<sub>2</sub>. corcodrillum R<sub>2</sub> I<sub>6</sub> B I K I. corcodrillum S. cocodrillum M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>7</sub>. cocodrillum K<sub>2</sub> E I<sub>2</sub> W I<sub>2</sub>
 II J O<sub>3</sub>. cocodrillum O I. || imprudentes R V G K E. imprudentes B S. || quippiam R V P G B K S E.
 § 79, 35. siluestris R V P G B K.

illa, 'the rival wife'; as there were generally several rivals to the favourite wife, Bentl. and Dav. proposed to alter all the words in the sentence to the plural; Scheibe proposed turba for illa, and Schiche changed illa to quae to make the sentence exactly parallel to the preceding.

Cicero expresses himself as if the victorious wife established her claim in opposition to the claims of some definite rival, and Cicero's authority may have described some means by which this selection was made, in which this would have been the case: whether this be so or not, Cicero's use of illa is both intelligible and idiomatic; for the idiom cf. Hor. S. i 1, 115 'instat equis auriga suos uincitibus, illum praeteritum tempens extremos inter euntem.'

umbris, 'idle hours,' i.e. time spent in the shade instead of at work in the open air; cf. pro Mur. 14, 30 'cedat...forum castris, otium militiae, stilus gladio, umbra soli.'

Aegyptiorum: the history and religious rites of the Egyptians had been an object of interest to the Greeks since the time of Herodotus and Pythagoras (Isocr. Bus. 30); in the Hellenistic period increased attention was directed to Egyptian religion through the work of Hekataios and Manetho (Gruppe, Die Griech. Culte u. Mythen I pp. 422 ff.).

prauitatis, 'arising from a distorted mind'; for the gen. cf. Fin. iii 10, 35 'omniaque ea sunt opiniones ac iudicia leuitatis'; some of the other exx. adduced in support of the mss. reading here by Wopkens (op. cit. 152 ff.) are not parallel.

quorum, 'any of these things,' i.e. acts of aggression against any of the animals named, cf. Her. ii 65 τὸ δ' ἂν τις τῶν θηρίων τούτων ἀποκτείνῃ ἦν μὲν ἐκῶν, θάνατος ἢ ζημίη· ἦν δ' ἄεκων ἀποτίνει ζημίην τὴν ἂν οἱ ἰπέες τάζωνται· ὅς δ' ἂν ἔβω ἢ ἔρηκα ἀποκτείνῃ ἦν τε ἐκῶν ἦν τε ἄεκων τεθνᾶναι ἀνάγκη. Cic. N. D. i 29, 82 'ne fando quidem auditum est crocodillum aut ibim aut faelem uiolatum ab Aegyptio.'

§ 79. montiuagos: the word seems to be ἀπαξ εἰρημένον in prose; it occurs in Lucretius i 404; ii 597, from whom Cicero may have borrowed it.

nant ut uulnera excipiant, nullos impetus, nullos ictus reformident? omitto quae perferant quaeque patiantur ambitiosi honoris causa, laudis studiosi gloriae gratia, amore incensi cupiditatis.
40 plena uita exemplorum est.

XXVIII. 80. Sed adhibeat oratio modum et redeat illuc unde deflexit. dabit, dabit, inquam, se in tormenta uita beata nec iustitiam, temperantiam in primisque fortitudinem, magnitudinem animi, patientiam prosecuta, cum tortoris os uiderit, 5 consistet uirtutibusque omnibus sine ullo animi terrore ad cruciatum profectis resistet extra fores, ut ante dixi, limenque carceris. quid enim ea foedius, quid deformius sola relicta,  comitatu pulcherrimo segregata? quod tamen fieri nullo pacto potest; nec enim uirtutes sine beata uita cohaerere possunt nec illa sine
10 uirtutibus. 81. itaque eam tergiuersari non sinent secumque rapiant, ad quemcumque ipsae dolorem cruciatumque ducentur. sapientis est enim proprium nihil quod paenitere possit facere, nihil inuitum, splendide, constanter, grauiter, honeste omnia, nihil

37. uulnera R V P G h. l. B K S E. || impetus R V P G K. ipetus S. inpetus E. 38. omittoque R. omittoq; G ead. man. superser. omittoq; V linea al. atr. superduct. omitto q̄ P. 40. plena P K. plana R G.

XXVIII. § 80, 2. deflexit R P G K I M I D O 3. deflexit S. defluxit M 2 J. fluxit O I. || dabit dabit R 6 P I. dabit (semel tantum)
R 17 17 V P 2-6 G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 L 2-6 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J O 1-3 7 Urs. 3240 ed. H. 4. patientiam R 6 K I. patientiā W I M I O 2. patientiā B I linea al. atr. superduct. patientiā II linea fort. al. atr. superduct.
patiā B 2. paciā R 7. patientia R 17 V P G S E I 2 W 2 M 2 D C J
O I 3 7 Gr. 6. fores R P G B K. 7. comitatu (a deest) R I 6 7 17 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 W I 2 M I 2 D C I I J O 1-3 7 ed. H. a comitatu corr. Lambinus. 8. pulcherrimo V P S E. pulcherrumo R K.

§ 81, 10. non sinent P. non sinenti V. non sinenti R G K.
12. penitere B. penitere R V P G K. 13. constanter grauiter V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 I I J O 1-3 7. grauiter constanter R D C.

cupiditatis: sc. gratia. Vrs. Gron. and Dav. delete gratia after gloriae and make all three genitives depend upon causa.

XXVIII. § 80. illuc unde deflexit, i.e. to the discussion of c. xxvi.

dabit, dabit: Dav., Or., Mo. and Küh. seem right in retaining the repetition found in some MSS., and the use of inquam is more usual with the repeated, than with the single, word: cf. i 49, 119 n.

ut ante dixi: in 5, 13 above.

cohaerere: cf. iii 25, 61 n.

§ 81. tergiuersari, 'hang back'; cf. iii 18, 41 n.

quod paenitere possit, 'which could cause regret'; Lambinus' proposal of cuius for quod is unnecessary; cf. 18, 53 n.

ut...uideatur, 'as seeming novel and unexpected': the point of view which the action of the verb (admirari) serves to bring out is represented as the result of the action: so in negative sentences e.g. Or. i 25, 115 'neque haec ita dico ut ars aliquos limare non possit': 'this statement does not prevent the possibility of etc.' i.e. 'this statement is made from a point of view which recognizes the possibility of etc.' For the attitude of the wise man towards the accidents of fortune cf. iii 14, 30.

stare, 'abide by his principles'; cf. ii 26, 63 n.

ita exspectare quasi certo futurum, nihil, cum acciderit, admirari, 15 ut inopinatum ac nouum accidisse uideatur, omnia ad suum arbitrium referre, suis stare iudiciis. quo quid sit beatius, mihi certe in mentem uenire non potest. 82. Stoicorum quidem facilis conclusio est; qui cum finem bonorum esse senserint congruere naturae cumque ea conuenienter uiuere, cum id sit in sapientis 20 situm non officio solum uerum etiam potestate, sequatur necesse est ut, cuius in potestate summum bonum, in eiusdem uita beata sit. ita fit semper uita beata sapientis. habes quae fortissime de beata uita dici putem et, quo modo nunc est, nisi quid tu melius attuleris, etiam uerissime.

XXIX. Melius equidem adferre nihil possum, sed a te impetrarim libenter ut, nisi molestum sit, quoniam te nulla uincula impediunt ullius certae disciplinae libasque ex omnibus quod-

14. exspectare R G E. expectare V P B K S. || admirari R V P G K.

amirari B. 16. beatius R P G K. beatus V atr. ant.
§ 82, 19. in sapiente R V P G B K plerique. in sapiētē W 1. in sapientis corr. Lambinus. 22. ita fit R P G K. ista fit V. || fortissime R V P G B K.
24. attuleris R V P G B K S E. || uerissime R V P G B K.

XXIX. 1. impetrarim R V G B K S. impetrarim E 1. impetrari E 2
O 1 7 Gr. Vict. impetrare M 2. impetrarē P B 2. 2. lubenter
R V P G B K L 5 Gr. || ut nisi R 1 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 M 1
D C O 2 3 7. uelim nisi R 6 E 2 M 2 II O 1. nisi R 7 K 2 L 5
W 1 2 J ed. H. || molestum sit R V P G B K plerique. sit molestum L 5
W 2 J O 1 ed. H. 3. impediunt R V G B K S E. ipediunt P. || ullius R 6 7 E 2 3 W 1 M 1 2 C II O 1-3 ed. H. illius V atr. uiridi superscr.

ullius B 1 alio atr. superscr. ullius P. ullius E 1 i in v alio atr. mut. ullius D. illius R 1 17 G B 2 K 1 S L 5 W 2 J O 7.

§ 82. senserint = censuerint as in i. 17, 39 'Platonem ferunt...non solum sensisse idem quod Pythagoram sed rationem etiam attulisse'; Ac. i 6 22 'philosophia sensit in una uirtute esse positam beatam uitam,' where see Reid's n.

congruere...uiuere: a translation of the Stoic ὁμολογουμένως τῇ φύσει ζῆν; for the varying versions and interpretations of the formula cf. Diog. Laert. vii 87 ff. and Zeller, Stoics etc. E. T. p. 215.

sapientis: Lambinus's emendation is probably correct: sapientis of the MSS. (retained by Or., Tr., Kl., Mo., Küh.) gives an awkward, though not impossible, construction to officio and potestate 'from the point of view of his duty,...ability,' and is probably due to the influence of the in preceding.

habes: cf. i 49, 119; iii 17, 38; iv 14, 33. fortissime, 'most consistently with fortitude'; fortis is thus sometimes predicated of words or actions natural to a person of courage; cf. iii 10, 22 'qui maxime forti et, ut ita dicam, uirili utuntur ratione.'

XXIX. ut, omitted by Dav. and Ern.; another instance of anacoluthon; instead of impetrarim ut...audiam, the construction with which he begins, Cicero puts uelim id audire after the long parenthesis, uelim repeating and replacing impetr. and id audire taking the place of the ut-clause.

sit is altered to est by Halm and Ba.: but, as Küh. says, 'conuinctius optime respondet antecedenti impetrarim.'

ullius...disciplinae: cf. 11, 33; iv 4, 7. libas: the word combines the ideas of a fastidious as well as a capricious selection; in its application here and elsewhere (Or. i 35, 159 etc.) to mental studies the metaphor suggested is probably that of the bee (Lucr. iii 11): in Tac. Dial. c. 31 it cumque te maxime specie ueritatis mouet (quod paulo ante 5 Peripateticos ueteremque Academiam hortari uidebare, ut sine retractatione libere dicere auderent sapientis esse semper beatissimos)— id uelim audire quem ad modum his putes consentaneum esse id dicere. multa enim a te contra istam sententiam dicta sunt et Stoicorum ratione conclusa.

10 83. utamur igitur libertate, qua nobis solis in philosophia licet uti, quorum oratio nihil ipsa iudicat, sed habetur in omnis partis, ut ab aliis possit ipsa per sese nullius auctoritate adiuncta iudicari. et quoniam uideris hoc uelle ut, quaecumque dissen-tientium philosophorum sententia sit de finibus, tamen uirtus 15 satis habeat ad uitam beatam praesidii, quod quidem Carneadem disputare solitum accepimus; sed is, ut contra Stoicos, quos studiosissime semper refellebat, et contra quorum disciplinam ingenium eius exarserat, nos quidem illud cum pace agemus. si

4. maxime R V P G B K S E.

5. achademiam R V P G B K E.

6. retractatione R V P G K E.

retractione L 2 5 6 Gr. || dicere P B K.

dicerent V atr. uiridi corr.

dicerent G ead. man. corr.

dicerent R. ||

sapientis R V G B K O I. sapientis P. || beatissimos R V P G B K E.

§ 83, 11. omnis partis R V P G B K E. omnes partis O I. omnes partes S.

15. praesidii R V P G B I 2 K S.

praesidiū E I. || carneadem R V G K.

carneadē P B S E.

16. quos R I G K.

q̄ B I ex q̄ mut. q̄ E I al. atr.

superscr.

quod R 2 10.

17. studiosissime R V P G B K.

18. exarserat P K E.

exasserat R V G.

|| nos illud quidem R V G B I 2

K I 2 E I W I M I 2 J O I 7.

nos illius quidem P E 2 D C II O 2 3.

nos illius quidem S  marg. illud  alia man. adscr.

nos quidem illud  corr.

Wesenbergius.

is contrasted with haurire, denoting the exhaustive studies of the specialist 'eum qui quasdam artes haurire, omnes libare debet.'

paulo ante : in 26, 75 supra.

retractatione: practically equivalent to tergiuersatio above; cf. i 31, 76 n. on retractabis.

istam : i.e. 'the view of your friends,' the followers of the Academy: Cic. had said that they need not beat about the bush any longer but should declare for the all-sufficiency of virtue in procuring happiness. True, is the retort; but you yourself have already argued the Stoic position against them so strongly, and shown the absurdity of their premisses from that standpoint so well, that you put it beyond doubt that their principles cannot possibly lead to the position you wish to be established.

§ 83. nobis : i.e. Academicis.

habetur...partis, 'puts the case for all sides impartially'; orationem h. in utramque partem = 'to state a case both ways':

in omnis partis often equals 'all round,' 'from every point of view'; cf. Off. i 3, 7 'quibus in omnis partis usus uitae conformari potest'; Fam. v. 10 b [10, 6] 'meam causam agas meque tibi in omnis partis defendendum putes.'

adiuncta : Bentley's adiuta is unnecessary as is shown by Wopkens (op. cit., p. 155) who quotes Diu. ii 55, 113 'auctoritatem quidem nullam debemus nec fidem commenticiis rebus adiungere.'

quod quidem...agemus : the first quidem emphasizes quod, 'as indeed'; the clause sed...agemus introduces an amplification of the nature of a parenthesis, while the quidem after nos serves to draw attention to the preceding word in contrast to is: 'but he conducted the dispute (sc. disputauit from preceding clause) as might have been expected from him in dealing with the Stoics, whom he used to criticize with great vigour, and whose tenets had roused him to a white heat; we indeed shall discuss the matter (illud agemus = disputabimus) with moderation.'

enim Stoici finis bonorum recte posuerunt, confecta res est: 20 necesse est semper beatum esse sapientem. 84. sed quaeramus unam quamque reliquorum sententiam, si fieri potest ut hoc praeclarum quasi decretum beatæ uitæ possit omnium sententiis et disciplinis conuenire.

XXX. Sunt autem hæc de finibus, ut opinor, retentæ defensæque sententiæ: primum simplices quattuor, nihil bonum nisi honestum, ut Stoici, nihil bonum nisi uoluptatem, ut Epicurus, nihil bonum nisi uacuitatem doloris, ut Hieronymus, 5 nihil bonum nisi naturæ primis bonis aut omnibus aut maximis frui, ut Carneades contra Stoicos disserebat. hæc igitur simplicia, illa mixta: 85 tria genera bonorum, maxima animi, secunda corporis, externa tertia, ut Peripatetici nec multo ueteres Academici secus; uoluptatem cum honestate

19. finis R P G B 2 K. . . . . finib; B 1. || possuerunt R G B 1 K. possuerunt V. possuerunt E 1. posuerunt R 6 7 17 P B 2 S E 2 3 W 1 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7.

§ 84, 21. sententiam V P G B K. sententiam R. XXX. 1. hæc R G K O 3. hæc V B 1 E 1. hæc B 2 E 2 C II O 7. h' W 2 J. H P. hee D. hæ S at c eras. hæ R 6 O 2. hæ W 1. he M 1 2 O 1. 3. nisi uoluptatum M 1. nisi uoluptas R 17 O 7. 4. uacuitatem doloris R 6 O 3. uacuitatem ut Hieronimus doloris W 1.

uacuitatem ut iheronim K 1 at iheronimus in ras. et spatio quingue litt. post relict. uacuitatem (doloris om.) R 17 V P G B 1 2 K 2 S E 1-3 L 3-5 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J G 1 2. uacuitas (doloris om.) R 17 O 7. 5. primis bonis R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 II J O 1-3 7. bonis primis D C. || maximis R V G B K. maximis P. 6. frui ut R P G K. frui aut V.

§ 85, 7. maxima R V G B K. maxima P. 9. ueteres academicis res R P G B K E. u&e academicis V.

Lamb. proposed to read hoc quidem... nos autem, though the clause beginning with nos is contrasted not with the hoc-clause but with is...exarserat; Vrs. read with some MSS. nos illius (or illorum) quidem; Bouh., Tr. and Kl. read nos illud idem; Sch. and Küh. with some MSS. nos illud quidem. Sff. proposes nos illud quiete et while Bentr. proposed nos illud quidem omnium, which alterations are entirely unnecessary.

For Carneades' attitude to the Stoics cf. iv 24, 53 n.; for ut cf. i 8, 15 n.

accepimus: it is possible that Cic. may have in mind the Consolatio of Clitomachus, which he quotes in iii 22, 54 for the views of Carneades.

posuerunt, a form of the perf. which occurs often in Plautus and Inscr. and is found in Cato, Catullus (xxxiv 8) and Fronto: see Neue, Formenl. III<sup>3</sup>, pp. 397 sqq., who prefers here the spelling of some MSS. possuerunt. Küh. follows Or. and Tr. in reading posuerunt, with many MSS.

§ 84. decretum: cf. ii 4, 11 n.

XXX. haec: cf. i 11, 22 n. The following résumé of the tenets of the principal schools of philosophy with regard to the summum bonum is closely paralleled in Fin. ii 11, 34 f.; v 7, 18 ff.; Ac. ii 42, 129 ff.

Hieronimus: cf. ii 6, 15 n. and Zeller, Aristotle, etc. (E.T.) ii p. 475.

naturæ primis bonis: the πρῶτα κατὰ φύσιν, called prima naturæ commoda in Fin. v 21, 58 and Ac. ii 45, 138; though the phrase prima naturæ is more usual (Fin. iii 9, 30; iv 16, 43; v 8, 21) yet there is no necessity for deleting oonis here with Wes.

It was a matter in dispute between the Stoics and the Peripatetics what should come under this title: the latter included 'incolumitatem conseruationemque omnium partium, ualetudinem, sensus integros, doloris uacuitatem, uiris, pulchritudinem, cetera generis eiusdem' (Fin. v 7, 18); the Stoics would not include any-

10 Dinomachus et Callipho copulauit, indolentiam autem honestati Peripateticus Diodorus adiunxit. hae sunt sententiae quae stabilitatis aliquid habeant; nam Aristonis, Pyrrhonis, Erilli non nullorumque aliorum euanuerunt. hi quid possint obtinere uideamus omissis Stoicis, quorum satis uideor defendisse sententiam. et Peripateticorum quidem explicata causa est praeter Theophrastum, et si qui illum secuti inbecillius horrent dolorem et reformidant; reliquis quidem licet facere id quod fere faciunt, ut grauitatem dignitatemque uirtutis exaggerent. quam cum ad caelum extulerunt, quod facere eloquentes homines copiose solent, reliqua ex conlatione facile est contere atque contempnere. nec enim licet iis qui laudem cum dolore petendam esse

10. callipho R P G B 1 K 1 S W 2 J. calipho V. calippho E 1. calipho B 2 W 1 M 1 O 1 7. 11. peripateticus R V P K. peripatheticus B. peripaticus G. || hae R 1 6 G. hē P B 1 W 1 O 3. hē S c eras.
 he E 2 W 2 J. hēc V atr. uiridi mut. hēc E 1. hēc B 2 K 2 II ed. H. haec K 1. hee D. 12. pyrronif erilli V. pyrronis erilli J L 4. pyronis erilli E 3 O 3. pirronis erilli R 1 7. pyrrhonis herilli R 6 P 5 L 3 W 1. pyrroni ferilli R 1 2 10 16 G B 1 K 1 L 5 Urs. 3240. pyrronifer illi P 1 marg. pirronis herilli. pironifer illi E 1. pyrroni ferilli S. pyroni ferilli P 4 E 2. pyroni ferelli P 6. pirronio herilli P 3 M 2. pirronis herilli L 6. pirroni ferilli B 2. pirroni ferilli R 7. pyrrhonis herylli O 1. pirronis perilli M 1. pironis perilli O 2. pirronis pherilli L 2. pironis pherilli P 2. pyronis erilli II at s alio, ut uid., atram. pyrronis b erilli W 2. pironis herelli O 7. et erilli pironis D C. claus. om. K 2.
 13. optinere R V P G B K E. 14. omisis K. 16. imbecillius R V P G K. inbecillius B E. 19. extulerunt W 2 marg. extulerit. extulerint R 1 6 7 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 M 1 2 D II J O 2 3 7. extulerit C. abstulerint O 1. 20. conlatione R V G B K. collatione P. || contempnere R B K. contempnere P G E. 21. licet iis M 2. licet hiis O 7. licet his R V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 W 2 M 1 O 1. licet is S eod. atr.

thing of the nature of pleasure (Fin. iii 5, 16). The whole question is treated in Excursus IV to Madvig's edition of the De Finibus.

§ 85. Dinomachus et Callipho: of these two, though they are often mentioned by Cicero (e.g. Off. iii 33, 119; Fin. v 8, 21; Ac. ii 45, 139) little else is known.

indolentiam: cf. iii 6, 12 n.

Diodorus of Tyre (Stob. Ecl. Phys. i 1, 29) was a pupil of the Peripatetic Critolaus (Or. i 11, 45).

Aristonis, Pyrrhonis: ii 6, 15 n.

Erilli: Erillus of Carthage was a pupil of Zeno (Diog. Laert. vii 166; Ac. ii 42, 129); he is frequently mentioned by Cicero (Fin. ii, 13, 43, etc.); for the spelling Erillus as against Herillus see Madvig's note on Fin. ii 11, 35. According to him the summum bonum was επιστήμη (Diog. L. l.c.).

obtinere: i 12, 26 n.

explicata, 'unambiguous'; for the adjectival use edd. quote Or. i 2, 4; pro Planc. 2, 5; Att. ix 7, 2.

Theophrastum: cf. 9, 25 above and Fin. v 5, 12 'Theophrasti...liber in quo multum admodum fortunae datur.'

exaggerent: cf. 18, 51 n.

extulerunt: cf. ii 23, 54 n. on restituerunt.

contere, 'disparage,' an unusual meaning; cf. Plaut. Poen. 537 'est domi quod edimus ne nos tam contempnim conteras.'

dicant negare eos esse beatos qui illam adepti sint. quamquam enim sint in quibusdam malis, tamen hoc nomen beati longe et late patet.

XXXI. 86. Nam ut quaestuosa mercatura, fructuosa aratio dicitur, non si altera semper omni damno, altera omni tempestatis calamitate semper uacat, sed si multo maiore ex parte exstat in utraque felicitas, sic uita non solum si undique referta bonis est, sed si multo maiore et grauiore ex parte bona propendent, beata recte dici potest. 87. sequetur igitur horum ratione uel ad supplicium beata uita uirtutem cumque ea descendet in taurum Aristotele, Xenocrate, Speusippo, Polemone auctoribus nec eam minis, blandimentis corrupta deseret. eadem

22. dicant R 17 10 16 17 V P G B 12 K 12 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed. H. dicunt R 6. || adepti sunt R 16 10 16 17 V P G B 12 K 12 S E 12 L 2-6 W 1 M 12 D C II J O 1-3 7.

adepti f R 2. adepti f W 2.

XXXI. § 86, 1. aratio R 6 P 3 L 3 6 W 1 M 2 O 3. ara<sup>tio</sup> E 3 fort.

cod. atr. arratio P 5. ratio II al. atr. superscr. rō P 1 marg. aratio. fō W 2 marg. aratio. ratio R 17 17 V P 4 G B 12 K 12 E 1 L 5 D C J O 1 2 7 ed. H. fatio E 2 at f in litura. rō S marg. nō. non L 4. ideo L 2. tum M 1. 2. altera omnis R 16 7 17 V P 1-6 G B 12 K 12 E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 2 D C II J O 1 3 7 Urs. 3240 ed. H. altera om̄s S. omni damno et tempestates et calamitate M 1 O 2. omni corr. Ursinus. 3. ex parte R V P G B. expartae K. 4. exstat R V B 2. exstat P G B 1 K 1 E 12 M 12 D C O 2 3 7. existat S J O 1.

§ 87, 6. horum R 17 L 4 O 7. horū II at ū in ras. boz<sup>no</sup> E 3 horum in bonorum fort. cod. atr. mut. honorum R 1 V P 1 2 6 G B 2 K 12. bonorum R 6 7 16 P 3-5 B 1 S E 12 L 3 5 6 W 1 M 12 D C J O 1-3 ed. H. eorum bonorum R 10. bōz<sup>no</sup> W 2. btoz<sup>no</sup> L 2. 9. minimis blandimentis R 16 7 17 V P G B 1 K 12 S E 1-3 L 3-6 W 1 M 12 D II J O 1-3 ed. H. minis blandimentis B 2. minis blandimentis L 2 W 2 C O 7. minis, blandimentis corr. Klotzius.

dicant...sint: the subj. seems to be required in both clauses because the first clause, though referring to definite persons already mentioned, describes them as a class concurring in a view by which alone they are of importance in the argument, and the second clause describes a class simpliciter: 'it is not open to these philosophers, though asserting that renown is worth seeking at the cost of pain, to refuse to give the name of happy to any who have secured it': Kühner's statement 'indicatius necessarius est quia certi philosophi intelleguntur' misses the point. Edd. are divided between dicunt...sint, and dicant...sunt.

quamquam...sint: the subj. is concessive, 'though they may be granted to be': see i 45, 109 n. on abierit.

nomen beati, 'the term happiness'; for beatum cf. 15, 45 n.

XXXI. § 86. maiore ex parte: cf. 8, 22 'ex maiore parte plerasque res nominari.'

propendent: cf. 17, 51 n. Edd. note that praeponderari is found only in the passive voice in Cic.

§ 87. horum: i.e. the Peripatetics and the Old Academy (30, 85); Aristotle is mentioned infra as representing the former, and the latter is represented by Xenocrates and Speusippus (i 10, 20 n.) and Polemo, the successor of Xenocrates (Diog. L. iv 16).

minis, blandimentis: for the asyndeton Hei. (Pos. Progr. p. 8) compares 31, 87; i 14, 31; iii 3, 6 (where see nn.); with minis it seems best to supply some word like territa from corrupta, though Caesar (B.C. iii 64, 2) has id corruptum timore. The MSS. have minimis bland.; Be. followed by Dav., Or., Ba., Küh. read

10 Calliphontis erit Diodorique sententia, quorum uterque honestatem sic complectitur ut omnia quae sine ea sint longe retro ponenda censeat. reliqui habere se uidentur angustius, enatant tamen, Epicurus, Hieronymus, et si qui sunt qui desertum illud Car-neadeum curent defendere. nemo est enim quin eorum bonorum 15 animum putet esse iudicem eumque condocefaciat, ut ea quae bona malaue uideantur possit contemnere. 88. nam quae tibi Epicuri uidetur, eadem erit Hieronymi et Carneadis causa et hercule omnium reliquorum. quis enim parum est contra mortem aut dolorem paratus? ordiamur ab eo, si placet, quem mollem, 20 quem uoluptarium dicimus.

10. calliphontis B 12 K. callipontis V. callifontis P G. caliphontis
 E 1. || diodorique P B 1 W 12 M 12 O 17. diodori q; S ras. post ri. diodoriq; E 1. diodorisque R V G B 2. diodoloris K 1 lo ex parte eras.
 11. complectitur R V G K S. complectitur E. cōplectitur B P. ||

longe retro M 1 O 2 3. longe 2 ~~tro~~ W 2 margin. ret. longe et retro R 16 7 17
 V P G B 12 K 12 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 M 2 D C H J O 17 ed. H.
 13. illum R 12 10 16 V P G B 12 K 12 E 13 W 1. illud corr. Bakius. || carneadeum R G K. carne ad eū B 2. carneadeum V atr. uiridi mut. carneadem R 2 10 16 P B 1 K 2 S E 13 W 12 M 2 D O 12 7 ed. H. carneadent L 5. 14. quī eorum P 2 B 1 S D. qui eorum R 16 7 V G

K 12 E 1-3 L 2-6 W 12 M 12 H J O 12 7. qui bonorum P 1 margin. eo 2.
 q' eorum B 2. qui bonorum eorum O 3. qui bonorum animum eorum C. qui eorum ed. H. 16. contemnere R V K. contempnere P G E.

§ 88. nam quae R 6 L 3 M 2. que L 6 H O 1 ed. H. q̄ J E 3 E 2 at fuerat ut uid. q3. q̄ P 1 B 2 M 1. quod S margin. que.
 quod R 17 17 V G B 1 K 1 E 1 L 4 W 1 D C O 2 37. qd' K 2 L 2 5.
 17. epicuri R 6 E 2 L 3 6 M 2 H J O 1 ed. H. epicuri' W 2 (sic). epicurus R 17 17 V P B 12 K 12 S E 1 L 2 4 5 M 1 D C O 2 3 7. epycurus G. epycurus W 1. || hieronymi R. hieronymi V G B E.
 hyeronimi K. || carneadis R V P G B 12 K 1 S E W 12 alii. 18. hercule
 R V P G B 12 K 1 S E 1 W 2 M 12 D H J O 1-37. hercle W 1.
 19. ordiamur P B S plerique. ordiamur K 1 E 1. ordiamur V. ordinamur R G B 2 ed. H.

minis aut; Sch. conj. nimiis, which may very possibly be right; Wes. read minis nec bland.; the reading in the text is due to Kl. and Sff.

enatant, 'swim ashore'; the word does not seem to be used elsewhere in this metaphorical sense, which is usually expressed by emergere.

illud Carneadeum, 'Carneades' well-known thesis, i.e. 'nihil bonum nisi naturae primis bonis aut omnibus aut maximis frui' (30, 84 supr.). This doctrine is called desertum as the attitude of the Old Academy had been pretty generally abandoned; cf. N. D. i 3, 6; i 5, 11 quoted by Bentley.

The reading is Bake's correction of the MSS.; Küh. alone among recent edd. reads illum Carneadem.

nemo...quin eorum: 'Every single one considers that the mind is the judge of these several goods, and each impresses upon it the lesson of acquiring the capacity to despise seeming goods and seeming evils'; quin is Lambinus' emendation confirmed by four mss. of the mss. qui. There is no necessity with Dav., Ern., Or., etc. to put eorum before quin, as the range within which nemo applies is sufficiently defined by the context, as is the case with quis...paratus below, where no one proposes to insert eorum. Bentl. followed by Küh. changed eorum to uerorum, unnecessarily, since the idea of a right decision is sufficiently expressed by iudicem.

condocefaciat seems to occur in Cicero only here and in N. D. ii 64, 161. Mo. erroneously supposes it to be ἀπαξ εἰρημένον.

uoluptarium: cf. ii 7, 18, 'Epicurus, homo, ut scis, uoluptarius,' iii 18, 40.

quid? is tibi mortemne uidetur aut dolorem timere? qui eum diem quo moritur beatum appellat maximisque doloribus adfectus eos ipsos inuentorum suorum memoria et recordatione confutat nec haec sic agit ut ex tempore quasi effutire uideatur? 25 de morte enim ita sentit ut dissoluto animante sensum extinctum putet, quod autem sensu careat, nihil ad nos id iudicet pertinere. item de dolore certa habet quae sequatur, cuius magnitudinem breuitate consolatur, longinquitatem leuitate. 89. quid tandem?

21. uidetur aut W I. uidetur an R I 6 7 17 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 L 2-6 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 ed. H. 22. appellat R V G B K S. || maximisque R V G B K. || adfectus V G E. affectus R P B K S. 24. nec haec R V G B I E I. nec hec E 2 C ed. H. naec hec K I.

nec hec S. nec h B 2 D. nec h P I K 2. nec h' W 2 J. nec hoc II at o ut uid. mut. nec hoc E 3 M I 2 O I-3. nec his W I. nec hic

(pro haec sic) O 7. || effutire R 2 V. effutire P. effutire R I G K. 25. ita sentit L 3 W I. ista sentit B I marg. ita. ista sentit R I 6 7 10 16 17 V P G B 2 K I 2 S E I-3 L 2-6 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 7 ed. H. ||

extinctum R V P G B K S E. 27. de dolore L 2 3 6 W I O I 3 7. dolore E 3 cod. ut uid. atr. dolore S et W 2 marg. de. dolore R V P G K I E I L 4 5. dolorē B I. dolorum K 2. in dolore D C ed. H. || quorum magnitudinem R I 6 7 10 16 17 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 L 2-6 W I 2 M I 2 D C II J ed. H. cuius corr. Bentleius. 28. leuitate B 2 E 2 W I M 2 C II O 7. lenitate V P G B I E I W 2 M I D J O I 2 ed. H. laenitate R K.

§ 89. quid tandem R 6 7 L 6 W 2 M I 2 O 2 ed. H. qui tandem R I 17 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 L 5 W I D C J O I 3 7. qui tandem II.

eum diem...appellat: in the letter said (by Diog. Laert. x 22) to have been written on his deathbed to Idomeneus; τὴν μακαρίαν ἀγοντες καὶ ἅμα τελευτῶντες ἡμέραν τοῦ βίου, ἐγράφομεν ὑμῖν ταύτη. Cic. gives a translation of it in Fin. ii 30, 96, but says it was addressed to Her-marchus. Usener (Epicurea, p. 139 n.) thinks that copies may have been sent to several friends.

doloribus: στραγγουρία καὶ δυσεντερικὰ πάθη (Diog. Laert. l.c.): 'vesicae et torminum morbi,' Fin. ii 30, 96.

memoria et recordatione, 'lively recollection'; 'memoria is the mere recollection of something in the past, produced by the mens et cogitatio; recordatio is the representation and laying to heart of the past cum animo et affectu' (Wilkins on Or. i 53, 228).

confutat: the reading compensat (adopted by Be.) which Ürs. says he found in a manuscript is probably a conjecture of his own in an attempt to better Cicero's translation of ἀντιπαρετάττετο in the original.

For the use of the word cf. Cato, ap. Aul. Gell. vi (vii) 3, 13 'iniuriis atque impetiosis minationibus confutare' and Titinius 128 (Ribbeck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. Frag. II<sup>2</sup> 151) 'cocus magnum ahenum, quando feruit, paula confutat trua.'

ex tempore: i.e. tempori conuenienter 'to suit the occasion.'

effutire: explained by Nonius (s. u.) by 'commenticia dicere'; he quotes Ter. Phorm. 746 and Lucr. v 910; cf. also N. D. i 30, 84; ii 37, 94.

de morte: cf. Diog. Laert. x 125 συνέβηζε δὲ ἐν τῷ νομίζειν μηδὲν πρὸς ἡμᾶς εἶναι τὸν θάνατον· ἐπεὶ πάντων ἀγαθὸν καὶ κακὸν ἐν αἰσθήσει στέργεισι δὲ ἐστὶν αἰσθήσεως ὁ θάνατος; Sext. Emp. Pyrrh. Hypot. iii 229 καὶ ὁ Ἐπικούρου δὲ φησὶν, ὁ θάνατος οὐδὲν πρὸς ἡμᾶς· τὸ γὰρ διαλυθὲν ἀναισθητεῖ, τὸ δὲ ἀναισθητοῦν οὐδὲν πρὸς ἡμᾶς. A. Frederking points out in Philol. LX p. 637 that the reasoning requires ἀναισθητόν to be read in the latter passage in place of ἀναισθητοῦν, though Cic. is probably translating ἀναισθητοῦν in 'quod sensu careat.' It is obvious that what is 'nihil ad nos' must be 'what we do not perceive' not 'what lacks feeling.' ita: the reading ista is defended by Wopkens (op. cit., p. 155 f.) by parallels which would be equally good for ita.

de dolore: cf. ii 19, 44 and nn. there.

isti grandiloqui contra haec duo, quae maxime angunt, melius se 30 habent quam Epicurus? an ad cetera quae mala putantur non et Epicurus et reliqui philosophi satis parati uidentur? quis non paupertatem extimescit? neque tamen quisquam philosophorum.

XXXII. Hic uero ipse quam paruo est contentus! nemo de tenui uictu plura dixit. etenim, quae res pecuniae cupiditatem adferunt ut amori, ut ambitioni, ut cotidianis sumptibus copiae suppetant, cum procul ab his omnibus rebus absit, cur pecuniam 5 magnopere desideret uel potius cur curet omnino? 90. an Scythes Anacharsis potuit pro nihilo pecuniam ducere, nostrates philosophi facere non poterunt? illius epistula fertur his uerbis:
'Anacharsis Hannoni salutem. mihi amictui est

29. quae maxime R G K. que maxime B. que haec maxime V. || melius se R V P G K<sub>1</sub> B<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D C II O<sub>137</sub>. melius (se om.) K<sub>2</sub> L<sub>5</sub> W<sub>2</sub> J O<sub>2</sub> ed. H.

XXXII. 3. adferunt R V P G K. afferunt B S E. 4. ab his R V P G
B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E<sub>12</sub> L<sub>5</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>1</sub> J O<sub>1</sub>. ab iis M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>23</sub>. ab hiis K<sub>2</sub> D C II O<sub>7</sub>. 5. magnopere R V P G B K S E.

§ 90, 6. scythes R P B K. scythes E. schytes V atr. ant. sythes S. cythes G. || anacharsis R V P B K. anacharsis G. anatharsis J.
7. facere R<sub>16717</sub> V P G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>1-3</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D C II J
O<sub>1-37</sub> ed. H. || poterunt L<sub>3</sub> W<sub>1</sub> M<sub>2</sub> O<sub>1</sub>. potuerunt V alio atr. corr.
potuerunt E<sub>1</sub>. potuerunt R<sub>167101617</sub> P G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E<sub>23</sub> L<sub>24-6</sub>
W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D C II J O<sub>237</sub> ed. H. potuit K<sub>2</sub>. || epistula G K. epistola R u in o alio atr. mut. epistola B E. ep̄ta V P S.

§ 89. grandiloqui: the Stoics; Cicero in putting the argument from the Epicurean standpoint adopts dramatically the Epicurean tone in referring to the Stoics. It seems unnecessary to suppose that he is directly quoting some Epicurean source.

neque tamen quisquam: it is hard to see why Lamb. proposed to insert non after tamen: Cicero's contention is that while the ordinary man feared poverty, there was no single philosopher of any school whose tenets did not enable him to despise it.

XXXII. tenui uictu: cf. iii 20, 49 n. on 'tenuem uictum.'

§ 90. Anacharsis: a Scythian prince who visited Athens in the time of Solon and was said to have been put to death for introducing Greek customs into Scythia: he was counted by some authorities as one of the seven wise men: cf. Herod. iv 76; Strab. vii p. 303 A; Diog. Laert. i 101 ff. For the gentile adj. preceding the noun cf. 3, 8 n.

For the form of the argumentum a minore 'an potuit ducere...poterunt' cf. i 14, 31 n.

facere, 'to do so,' cf. iv 14, 31 n. for this use of facere; Man. and Dav. omit the word, and Sorof unnecessarily inserted idem.

poterunt, adopted by Lamb. Or. Tr. Küh. Sff. as against potuerunt (Kl. Ba. Wes.), is undoubtedly right. The argument is not an inference from one fact in the past (Anacharsis potuit) to another fact in the past (nostrates philosophi potuerunt), but a confident prediction as to the conduct of nostrates philosophi based upon the knowledge of the action of a barbarian. Nostrates (contrasted with Scythes) includes both Greeks and their Roman followers, not the Greeks alone (Wes.) nor the Romans alone (Küh. Sff.).

epistula: Cicero's translation is loose in places; the Greek is 'Ἀνάχαρσις Ἀνωρι. ἐμοὶ μὲν περιβλημα χλαίνα Σκυθική, ὑπόδημα δέρμα ποδῶν κοίτη δὲ πᾶσα γῆ, δέλπνον καὶ ἄριστον γάλα καὶ τυρὸς καὶ κρέας ὀπτόν, πεινὸν ὕδωρ ὡς οὖν ἀγοντὸς μου σχολῆν, ὧν οἱ πλεῖστοι ἐνεκεν ἀσχολοῦνται, παραγένου πρὸς με, εἴ τινα χρεῖαν ἔχεις ὄρωρα δὲ οἷς ἐντρυφᾶτε, ἀντιδωροῦμαι σοι, ἡμεῖς δ' ὅσοι Καρχηδονίων, εἰς χάριν σὴν ἀνάθεσθε θεοῖς.

Scythicum tegimen, calciamentum solorum callum, 10 cubile terra, pulpamentum fames, lacte, caseo, carne uescor. quare ut ad quietum me licet uenias. munera autem ista quibus es delectatus uel ciuibus tuis uel dis immortalibus dona.' omnes fere philosophi omnium disciplinarum, nisi quos a recta ratione natura uitiosa 15 detorsisset, eodem hoc animo esse potuerunt. 91. Socrates, in pompa cum magna uis auri argentique ferretur, 'Quam multa non desidero!' inquit. Xenocrates, cum legati ab Alexandro quinquaginta ei talenta attulissent, quae erat pecunia temporibus illis, Athenis praesertim, maxima, abduxit legatos ad cenam 20 in Academiam; iis apposuit tantum quod satis esset nullo apparatu. cum postridie rogaret eum, cui numerari iuberet, 'Quid? uos hesterna,' inquit, 'cenula non intellexistis me pecunia non egere?' quos cum tristioris uidisset, triginta

10. pulpamentum R 7 17 P B 1 2 K 2 E 1 alii. palpamentum V atr.
 uiridi superscr. palpamentum R G K 1 O 2. pulmentum R 6 E 2 Π O 37. 13. diis immortalibus R G B S E. diis immortalibus V K.
 15. detorsisset R V P plerique. detraxisset W 1. detorxisset O 1.
 § 91, 18. attulissent R V P G B S E. attulissent K. 19. maxuma
 R V G B K. maxima P S E. 20. academiam R V P G B K. || apposuit
 R V P G B K. 21. apparatu R V P G B. || iuberet R V P K. luberet G.
 23. quos R 6 7 17 P B 1 2 K 2 S E 1-3 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C Π J O 1-37. quod R V. quod G K 1. || tristioris R V P G B K E. tristiciores S.

Scythicum tegimen, i.e. skins; cf. Sen. Ep. 90, 16 'non hodieque magna Scytharum pars tergis uulpium induitur ac murum.'

delectatus is not a very close translation of ἐντροφᾶτε, but the slight inaccuracy is due probably to Cic. and not to a copyist. Lamb.'s delicatus or deliciatus is unnecessary.

detorsisset: Sff., who declares that the form of a conditional sentence is out of place here, reads detorsit: with this reading the sentence means 'almost all philosophers of every school were able to accept this attitude except those whom natural depravity turned aside.' But the conditional detorsisset which alone has MSS. authority yields a perfectly satisfactory sense 'all would have been of this mind (potuerunt esse=fuissent) had not depravity turned some aside,' quos being not a relative, but an indefinite, pronoun.

§ 91. Socrates: in iii 23, 56 Socrates and Diogenes have already been introduced as types of philosophic poverty.

The story about Socrates is told in Diog. Laert. ii 25 πολλάκις δ' ἀφορῶν εἰς τὰ πλήθη τῶν πιπρασκομένων ἔλεγε πρὸς αὐτὸν Πόσων ἐγὼ χρεῖλαν οὐκ ἔχω. Victorius (Var. Lect. xiv 18) notes that quam multa is more appropriate to Diogenes' version of the story in which Isocrates is represented as looking at many different things than to Cicero's, where he is looking at a large quantity of the same thing.

Xenocrates: the story is told substantially in the same form in Val. Max. iv 3, 3 ext. Diog. Laert. iv 8 has simply 'Ἀλεξάνδρου γοῦν καὶ συχρὸν ἀργύριον ἀποστειλαντος αὐτῷ τρισχιλίας Ἀττικὰς ἀφελῶν τὸ λοιπὸν ἀπέπεμψεν εἰπὼν ἐκέλευ πλείονων δὲν πλείονας τρέφοντι; it is often mentioned, e.g. in Plut. Alex. c. 8 de fort. Alex. i c. 10.

cui numerari, 'into what bank he wished it paid': cui sc. argentario; both at Athens and at Rome monetary transactions of importance were generally carried out through the agency of a banker (τραπέστης, argentarius), cf. pro Caec. 6, 16.

minas accepit, ne aspernari regis liberalitatem uideretur. 92. at 25 uero Diogenes liberius, ut Cynicus, Alexandro roganti ut diceret, si quid opus esset, 'Nunc quidem paululum,' inquit, 'a sole.' offererat uidelicet apicanti. et hic quidem disputare solebat quanto regem Persarum uita fortunaque superaret; sibi nihil deesse, illi nihil satis umquam fore; se eius uoluptates non desi-30 derare, quibus numquam satiari ille posset, suas eum consequi nullo modo posse.

XXXIII. 93. Vides, credo, ut Epicurus cupiditatum genera diuiserit, non nimis fortasse subtiliter, utiliter tamen, partim esse naturales et necessarias, partim naturales et non necessarias, partim neutrum; necessarias satiari posse paene nihilo; diuitias 5 enim naturae esse parabiles; secundum autem genus cupidi-tatum nec ad potiendum difficile esse censet nec uero ad carendum; tertias, quod essent plane inanes neque necessitatem modo, sed ne naturam quidem attingerent, funditus eiciendas putauit. 94. hoc loco multa ab Epicureis disputantur, eaeque

§ 92, 26. si quid R P G K. siquis<sup>d</sup> V atr. uiridi superscr. 28. fortunaque

R G. fortuneque V atr. uiridi superscr. 29. ei V i.e. eius.

XXXIII. § 93, 2. subtiliter R P G K. subtiliter B. || Verba partim esse naturales et necessarias parti naturales et non necessarias om. K I. || 3. naturales manu inculc.; uerba partim naturales et non necessarias om. K I. 3. naturales R P G B K E. naturalis O 1. || naturales R P G K S E O 1. 5. esse parabiles R V G K. parabiles esse R 2 P B S. 8. attingerent R V P G B K S E. || eiciendas R V P G B I 2 K I 2 E I W 2 M I 2 D J O 7. eiciendas S. eiciendas R 6 W I I O 3.

§ 94, 9. eaeque R 2 G B K. *Ξαε*que R 1. eaeque V E. *εε*q; P.

Diogenes: Diog. Laert. vi 38 ἐν τῷ Κρανεῖω ἡλιουμένῳ αὐτῷ Ἀλέξανδρος ἐπιστάς φησι, Ἀτρήσον με ὁ θέλεις· καὶ ὅς, Ἀποσκότῃσον μου, ἔφη. Dav. quotes also Plut. de exil. 605 D; Dio Chrys. Orat. iv p. 61 M.

ut: cf. i 8, 15 n.

offererat: Mo. compares N. D. ii 19, 49 'ipsa enim umbra terrae soli officiens noctem efficit.'

regem Persarum: Dav. quotes Dio Chrys. Or. vi p. 93 M (of Diogenes) ὥστε οὐκέθ' αὐτὸν ἤξιλον τῷ Περσῶν βασιλεῖ παραβάλλειν· πολὺ γὰρ εἶναι τὸ μεταξὺ τὸν μὲν γὰρ ἀθλιώτατον ἀπάντων τυγχάνειν κ.τ.λ.

XXXIII. § 93. uides: cf. use of uideo in iii 25, 59.

subtiliter: for Cicero's mingled praise and criticism cf. Fin. i 13, 45 'quae est enim aut utilior aut ad bene uiuendum aptior partitio quam illa qua est usus Epicurus'; Fin. ii 9 26 'primum diuisit ineleганter; duo enim genera quae erant, fecit tria. hoc est non diuidere sed frangere.' According to Cicero in the latter passage, the division should have been 'duo genera cupiditatum, naturales et inanes; naturalium duo, necessariae et non necessariae.' Cic. is quoting one of the κύρια δόξα of Epicurus (Diog. Laert. x 149) τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν αἱ μὲν εἰσι φυσικαὶ καὶ ἀναγκαῖαι· αἱ δὲ φυσικαὶ καὶ οὐκ ἀναγκαῖαι· αἱ δὲ οὔτε φυσικαὶ οὔτε ἀναγκαῖαι, ἀλλὰ πρὸς κενὴν δόξαν γινόμεναι.

partim...partim = alias...alias, cf. 13, 38 n.

neutrum: i.e. neque naturales neque necessarias, cf. Madv. ad Fin. iii 17, 56.

ad potiendum: for this use of ad with the gerund cf. iv 17, 37 n.

neque...modo: cf. i 36, 87 n.

10 uoluptates singillatim extenuantur quarum genera non contem-nunt; quaerunt tamen copiam. nam et obscenas uoluptates, de quibus multa ab illis habetur oratio, facilis, communis, in medio sitas esse dicunt, easque si natura requirat, non genere aut loco aut ordine, sed forma, aetate, figura metiendas putant, ab iisque abs-15 tinere minime esse difficile, si aut ualetudo aut officium aut fama postulet, omninoque genus hoc uoluptatum optabile esse si non obsit, prodesse numquam. 95. totumque hoc de uoluptate sic ille praecipit ut uoluptatem ipsam per se, quia uoluptas sit, semper optandam et expetendam putet, eademque ratione

10. singillatim R V P G B I 2 K I E I C S marg. singulatim. sigillatim
E 2 II O 7. singulatim W I M I 2 J O I 2. singulatim W 2. || non ante contemnant om. D O 2. 12. facilis communis R V G B K S E. facit communis P. 14. metiendas R P G B I 2 K I 2 plerique. mentiendas V.

metiendas E I. || ab hisque G B S. ab hisque E. ab hisque R I.
ab hisque V i in e mut. ab his quae K. ab his q̄<sup>q3</sup> P. 15. difficile R V P K. difficile G alio atr. superscr. 16. optabile R G B K. optabile V P.

§ 95. 19. optandam et expetendam R 7 L 2 4 D C O 3. optandam
7 expetendam E I at 7 fort. alio atr. scr. optandam expetendam R I 17 V P G
B I 2 K I S E 2 W 2 marg. M I O 7. optandam expetendamque L 3 5 6

M 2 O I II at q; extra lineam alio atr. scr. optandam expetendam E 3 fort. eod. atr. optandam W I. expetendam J O 2. claus. om. K 2. optandam expectandamque ed. H.

§ 94. extenuantur, 'are belittled'; cf. Fin. ii 10, 30 'hanc in motu uoluptatem... interdum ita extenuat ut M' Curium putes loqui.'

The words aeque...extenuantur form a hexameter line (as was noted by Muretus) if aeque be scanned as a disyllable.

quarum...copiam: the interpretation of these words has given rise to much needless discussion; the meaning and relation of the clauses are made clear by the punctuation adopted in the text 'those pleasures, which they admit to belong to honourable categories [i.e. the first two classes] are belittled when discussed severally; though for all that they wish them to be easy of attainment': copiam here = facilem copiam; genera is contrasted with singillatim.

Madv. (on Fin. i 13, 45) proposed to omit non before contemnant, and he is followed by Tr., Usener (Epicurea § 440) and Hei. (Posen. Progr. pp. 13 f.): Bentley followed by Ern. and F. A. W. inserted non before quaerunt; both emendations destroy the meaning, which is that the Epicureans who regard true pleasure as the chief good, and who therefore naturally wish it to be easy of attainment, in discussing the several pleasures make them out to consist of such simple feelings, and speak so temperately about them that their point of view is not so very far removed after all in practice from that of more grandiloquent philosophers.

et obscenas uoluptates: these belonged to the second class, naturales et non necessariae; the et would, had the treatment of this section not been prolonged, have been followed by another et and a clause dealing with uictus and epulae which now forms a separate section.

Cicero elsewhere (e.g. Fin. ii 10, 29) speaks much less indulgently of Epicurean views on this point.

non genere...putant: Hor. Sat. i 2, 27 ff. is an unblushing commentary upon this sentiment.

optabile esse...nunquam: a mis-translation of the Epicurean sentiment quoted in Diog. Laert. x 118 συννοσῆθι δέ, φασίν, ὧν ἦσε μὲν οὐδέποτε ἀγαπητὸν δέ, εἰ μὴ καὶ ἐβλαψεν: the latter clause means 'one might consider oneself fortunate, if it did not actually do one harm.' Cicero takes it to mean 'desirable, unless it did harm.'

§ 95. totumque: cf. i 34, 82 n. on totumque hoc.

et expetendam: unless one is prepared to assume an awkward asyndeton here, one must read either et expetendam with 20 dolorem ob id ipsum, quia dolor sit, semper esse fugiendum ; itaque hac usurum compensatione sapientem ut et uoluptatem fugiat, si ea maiorem dolorem effectura sit, et dolorem suscipiat maiorem efficientem uoluptatem, omniaque iucunda, quamquam 25 circa corpus gaudere tam diu dum praesentem sentiret uoluptatem, animum et praesentem percipere pariter cum corpore et prospicere uenientem nec praeteritam praeterfluere sinere. ita perpetuas et contextas uoluptates in sapiente fore semper, cum exspectatio speratarum uoluptatum perceptarum memoriae 30 iungeretur.

XXXIV. 97. Atque his similia ad uictum etiam trans-

21. ut et R 17 E 3 L 3 4 W 1 J O 7. et ut M 1 O 2. <sup>ut</sup> W 2.
 et R 1 V P G B 2 K 1 E 1 L 5. ut R 6 7 B 1 S E 2 L 2 6 M 2

D C II ed. H. ut et uoluptatem om. K 2. 23. iucunda B K. <sup>v</sup> iucunda R eod. atr. iocunda V P G S E.

§ 96, 25. sentiret R V P G B K plerique. J marg. e cont. om. sentire O 2.
 28. cum expectatio R 1 7 V P B 1 2 K 1 S E 2 W 1 D O 1 2 3 ed. H. cum exspectatio E 1 C. cum expectatione G at ne exp. ead. man. cum expectatione R 1 7 P 2 M 1. cum expectatione O 7. cum expectatio <sup>ne</sup> II al. atr. suppl. cum expectationi R 6 M 2. cum expectatio E 3 fort. eod. atr.

cum expectatiōi W 2 o in òi alio atr. mut. cum exptacō K 2. 29. memoriae W 1. memoriae B 1 a in ae alio atr. mut. memoria R 1 2 10 16 V P G B 2 K 1 E 1-3 L 5 6 W 2 M 1 2 D C II O 1-3 ed. H. memō K 2.

XXXIV. § 97, 1. atque his R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 (non ut Küh.) J. atque iis O 2. atque hiis C II O 7.

Wes. Sff. etc. or expetendamque with Or. Ba., etc.: the former is preferable as it may easily be lost before ex-.

compensatione: Mo. compares N. D. i 9, 23 'ita multa sunt incommoda in uita ut ea sapientes commodorum compensatione leniant.'

ut..efficientem uoluptatem: cf. Epicurus' words in his letter to Menoiceus ap. Diog. Laert. x 129 ἀλλ' ἔστιν ὅτε πολλὰς ἡδονὰς ὑπερβαίνομεν, ὅταν πλείον ἡμῖν τὸ δυσχερὲς ἐκ τούτων ἐπηται· καὶ πολλὰς ἀλγηδόνας ἡδονῶν κρείττους νομίζομεν, ἐπειδὴν μείζων ἡμῖν ἡδονὴ παρακολουθῆ, πολλὸν χρόνον ὑπομείνασι τὰς ἀλγηδόνας.

§ 96. quocirca corpus... Diog. Laert. x 137 τὴν γοῦν σάρκα διὰ τὸ παρὸν μόνον χειμάζειν· τὴν δὲ ψυχὴν καὶ διὰ τὸ παρελθὸν καὶ τὸ παρὸν καὶ τὸ μέλλον; Fin. i 17, 55 'nam corpore nihil nisi praesens et quod adest sentire possumus, animo autem et praeterita et futura.'

sentiret: for the tense cf. iii 15, 32 n. on uenisset: Bentley's sentiat has not been adopted except by Dav.

cum expectatio...iungeretur: the reading of the best mss. here involves construing iungeretur with the simple abl. memoria which (though defended by Küh.) seems impossible. The insertion of cum before perceptarum adopted by Ba. Ml. Sff. Sch. TS. Hei. is credited generally to Madv.: it is really due to Bentley: memoriae was tentatively proposed by Urs. and adopted by Lamb.; Dav. proposed expectationi in place of expectatio.

XXXIV. § 97. uictum: cf. Fin. ii 8, 24—26. Some idea of what one of these treatises must have been like may be formed from the περὶ τροφῆς of the Stoic Musonius (C. Musonii Rufi Reliquiae ed. Hense, pp. 99 ff.).

feruntur, extenuaturque magnificentia et sumptus epularum, quod paruo cultu natura contenta sit. etenim quis hoc non uidet, desiderii omnia ista condiri? Darius in fuga cum aquam
 5 turbidam et cadaueribus inquinatam bibisset, negauit umquam se bibisse iucundius. numquam uidelicet sitiens biberat. nec esuriens Ptolomaeus ederat; cui cum peragranti Aegyptum comitibus non consecutis cibarius in casa panis datus esset, nihil
 10 uisum est illo pane iucundius. Socraten ferunt cum usque ad uesperum contentius ambularet quaesitumque esset ex eo quare id faceret, respondisse se, quo melius cenaret, obsonare ambulando famem. 98. quid? uictum Lacedaemoniorum in philitiis nonne uidemus? ubi cum tyrannus cenauisset Dionysius, negauit

2. extenuaturque R I 6 7 I 7 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I W 2 M I D C J

O I 3 7. extenuaturque M I. extenuatur <sup>q</sup> II alio atr. mut. extenuatur E 2. extenuanturque W I. et extenuantur O 2. 6. iucundius R V G B K. iucundius P S E. 7. ptolomeus R G S E J alii. ptolom̄s K. ptholomeus V B. tholomeus P D. 8. cibarius K 2 L 5 6 J. cybarius L 3.

<sup>u</sup> cibarius E 2 alio atr. corr. cibariis R V G E I L 2 4. cibariis P marg. cibari<sup>9</sup>. cibariis S litt. inter r et i eras. cybariis B. 9. iucundius R V G B K. iocundius P S E. || socraten R V P G B I 2 K I S. socratē K 2 E I 2 W I 2 D II J. socratem L 5 6 M I 2 O I-3 7. 11. obsonare R I O B I 2 S E I-3 W I M I 2 D O I 3. opsonare R 2 P. obsanare V

atr. uiridi corr. <sup>on</sup> obsanare R I atr. nigriore mut. obsanare G K I J O 7. absanare K 2.

§ 98, 12. philitiis R I V P 2 G B I M I 2 C O 3. phylitiis R 2. philiciis R I O K I S E I W I 2 D II J O I ed. H. philidiis E 2 at d

ex c mut. <sup>h</sup> pyliciis P I. phidiciis R 6. 13. cenauisset P K E. cenauisset R V S. caenauisset G.

Darius: Maximus Tyrius xxxiv 6 (p. 397, ed. Hobein) tells a similar story of Ἄρτοξέρξης ὁ Περσῶν βασιλεὺς who ἠττηθεὶς ἐφευγεν ἐπὶ ψιλὸν λόφον ὅπου τῆς νυκτὸς ἀναπαυόμενος ἐδίψησεν ὁ δύστηνος πρῶτον τότε...καὶ ἠγάπησεν παρὰ ἀνδρὸς Μάρδου λαβὼν ἐν ἀσκή ὀδῶδός ὕδωρ. A similar story is found in Plut. Art. 12 and Apophth. p. 174 A. The story was no doubt first invented to point the moral of such comparisons as that in 32, 92 and then told of more than one king, whether of Persia or of Egypt.

consecutis: for the rare use of the perf. part. of deponents with an active meaning in the abl. absol. construction cf. Draeger, Synt. d. lat. Spr. ii p. 765 (§ 583).

cibarius: cf. Isid. Orig. xx 2 '[panis] cibarius est qui ad cibum seruis datur nec delicatus.'

Socraten: Socrates is often quoted in favour of tenuis uictus, Finn. ii 28, 90;

Musonius, l.c. p. 102 ἔφη τοὺς μὲν πολλοὺς ἀνθρώπους ζῆν ἵνα ἐσθλιῶν αὐτοὺς δὲ ἐσθλιῶν ἵνα ζῆ, Aul. Gell. xix 2, 7. Dav. quotes Athen. iv p. 157 E; Xen. Mem. i 3, 5; Porphy. de abst. iii 26.

contentius: Nonius, p. 264 M. quotes this passage in support of the meaning of continuuus, perseuerans given to contentuus.

§ 98. philitiis: the common meals (συστήρια) of the Spartans were known as φιδίτια or φιλίτια, the latter form being no doubt due to a popular derivation from φίλος; on the derivation of φιδίτια see (for different views) Vaniček, Etym. Wört. p. 1010; Gilbert, Gk. Const. Antiq. p. 66<sup>1</sup>.

Dionysius: a somewhat similar story is told in Stob. Flor. iii 29, 100 [vol. ii p. 22 Gaisf.] Διονύσιος Λακωνικὸν μάγειρον πριάμενος ἐκέλευσεν αὐτὸν σκεύασαι τὸν Λακωνικὸν ζῶμὸν καὶ σκευάσαντος οὐκ ἤσθιεν ἤρετο δὲ κατὰ τί αὐτῷ ἦδονται ἀηδέστατά ὄντι οἱ Λάκωνες ὁ δὲ οὐκ ἔχειν se iure illo nigro, quod cenae caput erat, delectatum. tum is qui 15 illa coxerat: 'Minime mirum; condimenta enim de-fuerunt.' 'quae tandem?' inquit ille. 'labor in uenatu, sudor, cursus ad Eurotam, fames, sitis. his enim rebus Lacedaemoniorum epulae condiuntur.' atque hoc non ex 20 ut quicquid obiectum est, quod modo a natura non sit alienum, eo contentae non quaerunt amplius. 99. civitates quaedam uniuersae more doctae parsimonia delectantur, ut de Lacedaemoniis paulo ante diximus. Persarum a Xenophonte uictus

14. cene VP B2 E1 L5 O1. cenę K1. caene RG.
 coenae R6 W1 O2. || caput erat R6 W1 M2 O3 ed. H. cap̄ erat R7.
 caput cene erat DC. capud erat K2. capuderat O1. capuerat V atr. uiridi corr. S fort. eod. atr. E1 et W2 alio atr. mut. capuerat R1 17 G B12 K1 L5 J. cup̄ierat P marg. caput. ceperat O2. cepat E2 II.
 at caput
 copia erat E3. copia erat O7. om. M1. || delectatū...coxerat habet in marg.
 V atr. uiridi adscr. 15. minime RVPBK. mineiurum G in minime mirum ead. man. mut. 17. sudor PBKE. sodor R fort. eod. atr. sodor VG. || ad eurota L25. ab eurota R16 VPG B12 K12 S E12 L346 W12 M12 DCII J O1-37 ed. H. ad Eurotam corr. Bentleyus.
 18. epulę R10 B1 E1. epule P E2. epulę V. aepulę R1 K1. aepulae G. 19. intellegi B. intelligi RVP GKSE. 20. ut quicquid R16 VPG B1 K12 S E12 W1 M1 DJ O1-3. ut quidquid
 W2 II O7. ut quitqq̄ C. ut quid M2. om. B2. || quod modo R6
 K2 E2 M1 DCII O1-37. quomodo PG B2 K1 S E1 W2 M2 J. quomodo V
 atr. uiridi mut. dūmō W1 ed. H. || a natura R16 VPG B12 K12 S
 E12 W12 M12 DCII J O1-37.
 § 99, 23. persarum R P G K E. parsarum V atr. uiridi superscr.

ἔφη τοῦτον τὰ ἡδύσματα ἃ ἐκέλνουσ ἐχειν, διὰ τοῦτο αὐτῷ μὴ ἀρέσαι· καὶ δε ἐπίθετο τίνα εἶη ταῦτα... ὃ δ' εἶπεν ἃ μὴ ἔστι παρὰ σοί, οἱ πρὸ τοῦ δελπνου πόνου καὶ τὸ ἐν τῷ Εὐρώτῃ λουτρόν, cf. also Plut. Inst. Lac. p. 236 E.
 A similar story is found in Plut. Lyc. 12 of one of the kings of Pontus.

iure illo nigro: ὁ μέλας ζωμός, also called αἱματία; among the ingredients were blood, pork, vinegar and salt; see Gilbert op. cit. p. 67<sup>2</sup> and reff. there.

cenae caput, 'principal dish,' cf. Fin.
 ii 8, 25 and the Gk phrase κεφαλὴ δελπνου, occurring in a fragment of Alexis (Fragg.
Com. Gr. iii p. 462 Mein.). Mo. compares Mart. x 31, 4.

cursus ad Eurotam, 'running beside the Eurotas,' where the δρόμος was; Bentley's emendation for ab Eurota adopted by Wes. Ba. Me. TS. Hei. Sff. and Schiche. Ern. keeps ab E. and explains 'cursus uidetur initium cepisse a ripa Eurotae ad quam sedebant specta-tores' and he is followed by Mo. and Küh. But it is to be noted that the versions of the story quoted above all refer to bathing in the Eurotas as one of the main sources of the appetite required for appreciation of the ius nigrum, and it is possible that cursus ab Eurota is right and refers to a run taken after the bath in the river.

Sff. unnecessarily makes cursus qualify sudor, to provide a better parallel to labor in uenatu. Bak. brackets as a gloss his enim...condiuntur.

ut quicquid: cf. iv 19, 44 n.

§ 99. a Xenophonte: in Cyr. i 2, 8 διδάσκουσι δὲ καὶ ἐγκράτειαν γαστρὸς καὶ ποτοῦ... φέρονται δὲ οἰκοθεν σίτον μὲν ἄρτον, ὄψον δὲ κάρδαμον: cf. Fin. ii 28, 92.

exponitur, quos negat ad panem adhibere quicquam praeter 25 nasturcium. quamquam, si quaedam etiam suauiora natura desideret, quam multa ex terra arboribusque gignuntur cum copia facili, tum suauitate praestantia! 100. adde siccitatem, quae consequitur hanc continentiam in uictu, adde integri-30 quam opimos boues; tum intelleges, qui uoluptatem maxime sequantur, eos minime consequi, iucunditatemque uictus esse in desiderio, non in satietate.

XXXV. Timotheum, clarum hominem Athenis et principem ciuitatis, ferunt, cum cenauisset apud Platonem eoque conuiuio admodum delectatus esset uidissetque eum postridie, dixisse:
 5 etiam postero die iucundae sunt.' quid, quod ne mente quidem recte uti possumus multo cibo et potione completi?
 est praeclara epistula Platonis ad Dionis propinquos, in qua

25. nasturcium R V P G B I K I S E I 2 W I M 2 D C O I-3. nasturtium R 6 W 2 II J O 7. nastrutium M I. 26. cum copia R I 6 I 7
 V P G B I K I E I 2 M 2 D C J O I 3 7. tum copia R 7 W I 2 II
 O 2 ed. H. 27. praestantia R I 6 7 I 7 V P G B I 2 K I S E I 2 L 2-4
 W I 2 M I 2 D C J O I-3 7. prestancia II.

§ 100, 29. ualetudinis R V G. ualetudinis P B K S E. || sudantis ructantis
 R V P G B K E. sudantes ructantes S. 30. intelleges R V G B K. intelliges P S E. || maxime R V P G K. maxime B. 31. minime
 R V P G B K.

XXXV. 2. cenauisset P G K E alii. cenauisset R B. 3. postridie V.

post<sup>i</sup>die P margin. β' die. p̄tridie B K. posttridie R G. posteridie E.
 4. uestrae equidem R I 2 6 7 10 16 17 V P B I K I 2 E I-3 L 2 4-6' W I 2
 M 2 D C II O I 3 7 ed. H. uestrae quidem G. uerū equidem M I J.
 uere quidem O 2. uesidem S margin. uestrē. et quidem L 3. || cenē R 2.
 cene K. cenē R V P. caene G. 5. postero die R V P G B alii. || quiquod R atr. nigriore superscr. quiquod V P G K E. 6. completi R I P G. cōpleti R 2 V K. copleti E. 7. epistula G. epistula R I u in o mut. atr. nigriore. epistola V B K E. ep̄ta P S J.

nasturcium: cf. Suidas s.v. κάρδαμα ἐπισχετικά οὖρων τὰ κάρδαμα καὶ πύσματος καὶ διὰ τοῦτό φασι τοὺς Πέρσας χρῆσθαι φυλάττουσι γὰρ πολλὰ πύειν καὶ οὐρεῖν καὶ ἀπορῶντες θάαι.

cum...praestantia: Lamb. (followed by Ba. Wes. T.S. Schiche) read prae- stanti, and Bentl. followed by Dav. changed facili into facilia; but Mo. Küh. Hei. Sff. are no doubt right in keeping praestantia of the MSS.

§ 100. siccitatem, 'a dry habit of body.' Cato M. 10, 34 'summam esse in eo corporis siccitatem.' Catull. xxiii 12 atqui corpora sicciora cornu | aut siquid magis aridum esse habetis | sole et frigore et esuritione... a te sudor abest, abest saliuua | mucusque et mala pituita nasi. Salu. de gub. iii 14 'opinor enim omnes omnino homines cibis ac poculis fortes esse, infirmos autem abstinentia, ariditate, ieiuniis' where ariditas seems to denote an excess of siccitas.

XXXV. Timotheum: son of Konon, recovered Athenian naval supremacy in the Aegean in 376 and the following years: v. Holm, Hist. of Gr. iii 89 ff.

principem, 'statesman,' i 15, 34 n.

ferunt: the story is told with slight variations in Athen. x 419 D; Aelian V. H. ii 18; Plut. de tuenda san. praec.
 127 B (quoted by Dav.).

epistula: the passage occurs in the seventh epistle p. 326 B; the reference is to his first visit to Italy and Sicily:

scriptum est his fere uerbis: 'Quo cum uenisset, uita illa beata, quae ferebatur, plena Italicarum Syracusiarum-10 que mensarum, nullo modo mihi placuit, bis in die saturum fieri nec umquam pernoctare solum ceteraque quae comitantur huic uitae, in qua sapiens nemo efficietur umquam, moderatus uero multo minus.
 101. quae enim natura tam mirabiliter temperari potest?'
 15 quo modo igitur iucunda uita potest esse a qua absit prudentia, absit moderatio? ex quo Sardanapalli, opulentissimi Syriae regis, error adgnoscutur, qui incidi iussit in busto:

Haec habeo quae edi, quaeque exsaturata lubido Hausit; at illa iacent multa et praeclara relicta.

9. syracusiarum R V B I.      syracusyriarum G.      syracusiarum P I K 2
 E I W 2 D C.      siracusarum J.      sirracusiarum B 2.      syracusarum R 7 K O 2.      siracusarum S M 2 O I.      syracusanarum R 6 W I O 3 ed. H. siracusanarum R 17 P 2 E 2 M I II O 7.      10. post Syracusiarum habent que R I alio atr. que in q, mut. P.      quae G.      que om. P 2 W 2.
 11. ceteraq. que K.      ceteraq; q̄ P.      ceteraque quae R.      caeteraque quae G. ceřaq; B I quae om.      cetera que E I.      ceteraq; ed. H quae om.
 12. in qua P G.      in quae R B.

§ 101, 15. prudentię V atr. uiridi corr.      16. sardanapalli R V G B I 2
 K I S E I W 2 M I D J O I 2.      sardinapalli P.      sardanapali E 2 W I
 M 2 O 3 7 ed. H.      || opulentissimi R V G B K E.      17. adgnoscutur R V K. adgnoscutur G cod. atr.      agnoscutur P B S E.      18. exsaturata R V G B K.
 ex
 7saturata P.      || lubido J.      libido R V P G B K E alii.      19. hausit P K E.
 h ausit R V atr. uiridi superscr.      ausit G.

ἐλόθοντα δὲ με ὁ ταύτη λεγόμενος αὐ βίος εὐδαίμων Ἰταλιωτικῶν τε καὶ Συρακουσίων τραπεζῶν πλήρης, οὐδαμῆ οὐδαμῶς ἤρεσε δὲς τε τῆς ἡμέρας ἐμπιπλάμενον ζῆν καὶ μηδέποτε κοιμώμενον μόνον νύκτωρ· καὶ ὅσα τούτω ἐπιτηδεύματα ξυνέπεται τῷ βίῳ· ἐκ γὰρ τούτων τῶν ἐθῶν οὐτ' ἂν φρόνιμος οὐδεὶς ποτε γενέσθαι τῶν ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνθρώπων ἐκένουεπιτηθεύων δύναίτο οὐθ' οὕτως θαυμαστῇ φύσει κραθήσεται· σῶφρων δ' οὐδ' ἂν μελλῆσαι ποτε γενέσθαι.

Italicarum...mensarum: the luxury of Magna Graecia and Sicily was proverbial, cf. Plato, Rep. iii 404 D; Gorg. 518 B. For the Gk form of the adj. Syracusius in place of the usual Latin Syracusanus see Wilkins' n. to Or. ii 13, 57; it occurs also in Or. iii 34, 139; Off. i 44, 155; Diu. i 20, 39.

bis in die: cf. Virg. G. iii 527 'non illis epulae nocere repostae' with Conington's n.

uitae: for the dat. with comitari cf. 24, 68 n. Cic. is translating ὅσα τούτω ἐπιτηδεύματα ξυνέπεται τῷ βίῳ.

temperari, 'what disposition could show such a remarkable combination,' οὐθ' οὕτως θαυμαστῇ φύσει κραθήσεται.

§ 101. Sardanapalli: the legend of Sardanapallus (as told by Ktesias), generally supposed to be a distortion of the history of Assurbanipal who was king of Assyria 668—625 B.C., is given by Diod. Sic. ii 23 ff., who represents him as the last king of Assyria; Prof. Sayce (Encycl. Brit. s.v.) thinks that the name is derived from that of Assur-danin-pal, the rebel son of Shalmaneser I, whose reign ended with the fall of Niniveh in 823, while his supposed fate is an echo of that of Samastum-yukin, brother of Assur-bani-pal. The latter was 'luxurious and indolent...but a magnificent patron of art and literature.'

Syriae: Greek and Latin writers habitually confused Assyria and Syria: cf. Herod. vii 63 ὑπὸ μὲν Ἑλλήνων ἐκαλέοντο Σύριοι, ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν βαρβάρων Ἀσσυριοὶ ἐκλήθησαν; Strabo xvi p. 737 A; Fin. ii 32, 106.

The lines said to have been inscribed on the tomb of Sardanapallus are given

20 'Quid aliud,' inquit Aristoteles, 'in bouis, non in regis sepulcro inscriberes? haec habere se mortuum dicit quae ne uiuus quidem diutius habebat quam fruebatur.'
 102. cur igitur diuitiae desiderentur, aut ubi paupertas beatos esse non sinit? signis, credo, tabulis, ludis—si quis est, qui his
 25 delectetur, nonne melius tenues homines fruuntur quam illi qui iis abundant? est enim earum rerum omnium nostra in urbe summa in publico copia. quae qui priuati habent, nec tam multa et raro uident, cum in sua rura uenerunt; quos tamen pungit

20. inquit R P G. inq̄d V atr. uiridi corr. inquit K. || aristoteles V G K. aristoteles R e in i atr. nigriore mut. aristotiles P. 21. sepulcro R P G. sepulchro V B K S E. 22. uius R atr. nigriore superscr. § 102, 24. non sinit R V P G B K plerique. non sinitur L 5. non sunt B 2 ed. H. || tabulis ludis R 1 6 7 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 7 ed. H. 26. abundant R atr. nigro superscr. habundant P G. || earum rerum omnium R 1 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 M 1 2 II O 2 3 7. omnium earum rerum R 7 K 2 W 2 D C J O 1. earum omnium rerum R 6. || nostra in urbe R 6. nostra urbe II. nostrae urbe G cad. man. mut. nostra urbe R 1 7 17 V P B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 J O 1-3 7. in nostra urbe W 1 D C ed. H. 27. priuati R 1 10 16 V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 2 L 2-6 W 1 2 D C J O 2 7 ed. H. prauit̄ati E 1. 28. uenerunt R V P G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 ed. H. ueniunt O 7. peruenerint W 1.

with some variations in Athen. viii p. 336 A; Strabo xiv p. 672 B; Diod. Sic. ii 23. Cic. translates only the last two ταῦτ' ἔχω ὅσσι' ἔφαγον καὶ ἐθύβρισα καὶ μετ' ἔρωτος | τέρνν' ἔπαθον, τὰ δὲ πολλὰ καὶ ὄλβια κείνα λείπεται. These two are printed among the ἀδέσποτα of the Palatine Anthology vii 325, and are often quoted, e.g. Dio. Chrys. iv p. 81 M. The verses are attributed to Choerilus; see Madv. on Fin. ii 32, 106: Suidas (s.v. Σαρδανάπαλος) says they were composed by κόλακες καὶ μιμηταὶ τῆς ἐκείνου φιλοσοφίας καὶ γαστριμαργίας καὶ οἰσθηλασίας.

Aristoteles, quoted again in Fin. ii 32, 106. The passage does not occur in any of the extant works, which contain two other reff. to Sardanapallus, Eth. Nic. i 5, 3; Pol. viii p. 1312a 1 (where some doubt is thrown upon the truth of the legend). Athenaeus l.c. quotes another saying of Aristotle with regard to Sardanapallus, ὃν ἀδιανοητότερον εἶναι κατὰ τὴν προσηγορίαν τοῦ πατρὸς [i.e. Ἀνακυνδάραξω] Ἀριστοτέλης ἔφη.

§ 102. ludis: that this, and not any of the conjectures, is the right reading here is rendered probable by the enumeration in Fin. ii 32, 107 'signum, tabulae, locus amoenus, ludi, uenatio,' where also the argument is somewhat similar. The sentence is an anacoluthon: as the parenthetical credo shows, Cicero had begun his sentence as an ironical statement of the opposite of what he wished to enforce, 'signis, credo, tabulis, ludis... minus tenues homines fruuntur,' but altered the construction to the form in the text. Sff. proposed signis credo et tabulis studeo.

nostra in urbe: the reading of G, nostrae, seems to have arisen from nostra i, and to be decisive in favour of inserting in before urbe, and not before nostra: Mo. endeavours to defend the mss. reading by citing exx. of media urbe and tota urbe which are not really parallel.

priuati, 'in their own homes' = priuatum; for the use of the adj. in place of an adverb cf. the use of occultus and secretus in Liv. ii 11, 7; xxv 30, 4 (quoted by Naegelsb. Lat. Stil. p. 224); it is unnecessary (with Lamb. Wes. Or. Ba. Sff. T.S. Hei.) to alter here to priuatum.

nec...et: cf. i 4, 7 n.

uenerunt: cf. ii 23, 54 n.

aliquid, cum illa unde habeant recordantur. dies deficiat, si 30 uelim paupertatis causam defendere. aperta enim res est et cotidie nos ipsa natura admonet, quam paucis, quam paruis rebus egeat, quam uilibus.

XXXVI. 103. Num igitur ignobilitas aut humilitas aut etiam popularis offensio sapientem beatum esse prohibebit?
 uide ne plus commendatio in uulgus et haec quae expetitur gloria molestiae habeat quam uoluptatis. leuculus sane noster 5 Demosthenes, qui illo susurro delectari se dicebat aquam ferentis mulierculae, ut mos in Graecia est, insusurrantisque alteri: 'hic est ille Demosthenes.' quid hoc leuius? at quantus orator!
 sed apud alios loqui uidelicet didicerat, non multum ipse secum.

104. intellegendum est igitur nec gloriam popularem ipsam per 10 sese expetendam nec ignobilitatem extimescendam. 'ueni Athenas,' inquit Democritus, 'neque me quisquam ibi adgnouit.' constantem hominem et grauem, qui gloriatur a

29. deficiat V G B I E I. deficiat P <sup>e</sup> alio atr. superscr. deficiat B 2 ā in a mut. deficiet R I K I 2 S E 2 3 W I 2 M 2 D C I I J O I-3 ed. H. deficiet O 7. defitiet M I.

XXXVI. § 103, 3. commendatio R V G B. cōmendatio K E. || uulgus
 R V P G B K S E. 5. demosthenes P. demostenes R V G K E. || susurro V G B I 2 K I alii. susurrō R atr. nigriore superscr. susurriō P. || aquam R 6 E 3 W I M I 2 D C O I 2 ed. H. aquam E 2 at a alio atr. add.

<sup>a</sup>quam V atr. uiridi superscr. <sup>a</sup>quam II alio atr. superscr. quam R P G B I 2

K I E I W 2 J O 7. q, K 2 om. O 3. 6. insusurrantisque G E I. insusurrantisq 3 P K 2 S E 3 D O I. insusurrantisq; K I. insusurrantisque R. insusurrantisque V. insusurrantis q̄ B 2. 7. at quantus R P G B E. aut quantus V. aut quantus K. an quantus R 2.

§ 104, 9. intellegendum R V G K. intelligendum P S E. 11. quisquam ibi R I 6 7 V G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 W 2 M I D C I I J O I ed. H. ibi quisquam R 17 P W I M 2 O 2 3 7. 12. adgnouit R V K. agnouit P G B S E.

dies deficiat, si uelim: for the phrase Mo. quotes N. D. iii 32, 81.

XXXVI. § 103. leuculus is ἀπαξ εἰρημῶνον in Cicero.

sane: cf. iv 21, 48 n.

noster: the word is used either as = 'quem in deliciis habeo' (Küh.) or 'quia eius orationibus lectitandis familiaritatem quasi cum eo contraxerat' (Mo.); cf. iii 10, 22 'Peripatetici, familiares nostri.'

Demosthenes: the story is found again in Aelian V. H. ix 17; cf. Plin. Epp. ix 23, 5 'D. iure laetatus est quod illum natus Attica ita noscitauit οὐτός ἐστι Δημοσθένης.'

ut mos in Graecia est: this parenthetic exclamation may serve as an argument for the retention of 'id est genus quoddam tormenti apud Graecos' in 9, 24.

secum: i.e. 'to indulge in reflexion and self-criticism'; cf. Off. iii 1, 1 where Cato is praised for his habit 'et in otio de negotiis cogitare et in solitudine secum loqui'; cf. Epictet. Dissert. iv 4, 26 ἄλλ' ἀν μὲν οὕτω φέρῃ τὰ πράγματα ὅστε μόνον ἢ μετ' ὀλίγων διεξαγαγεῖν... λάλει σεαυτῷ.

§ 104. Democritus: cf. Diog. Laert. ix 36 ἦλθον γάρ, φησίν, εἰς Ἀθήνας καὶ οὐτως με ἐγῶκεν and Val. Max. viii 7, 4 ext.

ibi is omitted by Urs. Vict. Fabr. for the insufficient reason that there is nothing to correspond to it in the Greek of Dio-genes (Vict. Var. Lect. XIX 22).

gloria se afuisse! an tibicines iique qui fidibus utuntur suo, non multitudinis arbitrio cantus numerosque moderantur, uir sapiens, 15 multo arte maiore praeditus, non quid uerissimum sit, sed quid uelit uulgi, exquiret? an quicquam stultius quam, quos singulos sicut operarios barbarosque contemnas, eos aliquid putare esse uniuersos? ille uero nostras ambitiones leuitatesque contemnet honoresque populi etiam ultro delatos repudiabit; nos autem eos 20 nescimus, ante quam paenitere coepit, contemnere. 105. est apud Heraclitum physicum de principe Ephesiorum Hermodoro; uniuersos ait Ephesios esse morte multandos quod, cum ciuitate expellerent Hermodorum, ita locuti sint: 'Nemo de nobis unus excellat; sin quis exstiterit, alio in loco et apud 25 alios sit.' an hoc non ita fit omni in populo? nonne omnem exsuperantiam uirtutis oderunt? quid? Aristides (malo enim

13. afuisse G B 2. <sup>b</sup> afuisse R V atr. uiridi add. E alio atr. add. S.
 abfuisse B 1 f in b mut. affuisse P marg. alio atr. adscr. ab. affuisse K 1 2. abfuisse R 6 7 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D II J O 1-3 ed. H. affugisse R 17 O 7. || hique R 7. hique R 2 10 16 V P G B 1 K 1 S E. hique R 1 q in q. alio atr. mut. || qui om. V habent R P G B K E. 15. praeditus R G. p̄ditus P. p̄dit' K E. p̄dictus V. || uerissimum R V P G B K.

16. uulgi R V P G B K S E. 17. contemnas R 2 V. contemnas R 1 cod. atr. contempnas R 10 16 P G K. 18. contemnet V. contemnet R 1 cod. atr. contempnet P G. <sup>e</sup> c̄tēpnat K 1 cod. atr. 20. paenitere M 2. penitere K 1 B 1 S. penitere P E 1 2 M 1 II J O 1 7. poenitere R V G O 2. p̄nit<sup>9</sup> B 2.

§ 105, 21. Verba a Ephesiorum usque ad non sine causa igitur Epicurus (§ 110) desunt in P 1, pagina amissa. 23. locuti sint R 1 V B 2 G ex sunt cod. atr. mut. locuti sunt R 1 7 B 1 K 2 S E 1 2 L 5 M 1 2 D C II O 1-3 7 ed. H.

locuti J̄ K 1. locuti st W 1 2 J. 24. sin quis R 1 17 V G B 2 K 1 2
 O 1 7. si quis R 7 B 1 E 1 W 2 J. et si quis S E 2 W 1 M 2 D C II
 O 3 ed. H. sed si quis R 6. et quisquis M 1 O 2. 26. exsuperantiam R V G K. exuperantiam B S E.

gloria = φιλοδοξία; cf. ii 20, 46 n.

multo arte maiore: for the order of the words cf. (with Mo.) N. D. iii 27, 69, pro Sest. 23, 52 'multo alia maiora.'

singulos: Dav. quotes Aelian, V. H. ii 1, where Socrates is quoted as saying to Alcibiades, εἰ τῶν [leg. τοιούτων] καθ' ἓνα καταφρονεῖς, καταφρονητέον ἄρα καὶ τῶν ἡθροισμένων; Diog. Laert. ii 34 and Xen. Mem. iii 7, 6 where similar advice is given to Charmides.

barbarosque: a pupil of N. Wecklein in Philol. XLIII p. 677 conjectured fabrosque.

aliquid: cf. i 20, 45 n.

§ 105. Hermodoro: cf. Musonius Rufus ix p. 47 (ed. Hense) ἤδη τινὲς ἄνδρες ἀγαθοὶ ὄντες ἐξηλάθησαν ὑπὸ τῶν πολιτῶν ὡσπερ

Ἀθήνηθεν μὲν Ἀριστείδης ὁ δίκαιος, ἐξ Ἐφέσου δὲ Ἐρμύδωρος, ἐφ' ᾧ καὶ Ἡράκλειτος ὅτι ἐφυγεν ἠβηδὸν ἐκέλευεν Ἐφεσίου ἀπάγασθαι, where Hense notes that Cic. here and Musonius are probably using the same authority.

Hermodorus, according to Pliny, N. H. xxxiv 11, was the interpretes of the laws of the Twelve Tables.

nemo: ἡμῶν μηδὲ εἰς ὀνηϊστὸς ἔστω· εἰ δὲ τις τοιούτος, ἄλλη τε καὶ μετ' ἄλλων (Diog. Laert. ix 2); the unusual nemo for ne quis is probably intended to reproduce the emphasis of μηδὲ εἰς.

exsuperantiam: another ἅπαξ εἰρημένον.

Aristides: cf. the passage of Musonius Rufus cited above and Plut. Aristid. 7.

Graecorum quam nostra proferre) nonne ob eam causam expulsus est patria, quod praeter modum iustus esset? quantis igitur molestiis uacant qui nihil omnino cum populo contrahunt! quid 30 est enim dulcius otio litterato? iis dico litteris quibus infinitatem rerum atque naturae et in hoc ipso mundo caelum, terras, maria cognoscimus.

XXXVII. 106. Contempto igitur honore, contempta etiam pecunia quid relinquitur quod extimescendum sit? exsilium, credo, quod in maximis malis ducitur. id si propter alienam et offensam populi uoluntatem malum est, quam sit ea contem-
5 nenda secunda paulo ante dictum est. sin abesse patria miserum est, plenae miserorum prouinciae sunt, ex quibus admodum pauci in patriam reuertuntur. 107. at multantur bonis exsules. quid tum? parumne multa de toleranda paupertate dicuntur? iam uero exsilium, si rerum naturam, non ignominiam

30. iis dico M 2 O 3. hiis dico D C II. his dico R V G B 1 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 J O 1 2 7. om. B 2.

XXXVII. § 106, 2. exilium R V G B K S E. 3. maxumis R V G B K. maximis E. 4. contemnenda] sicuta R G. siç a V. siç a P 4 B 2. sicut ~~z~~ S. sic a E 1. sicuti R 17 O 7. sicut P 2 K 1 M 1. siçut E 3. sicuti B 1 at ras. post ti. sicut E 2 a post t eras. sic um P 6. ut O 2.
om. R 6 7 P 3 5 K 2 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 2 D C J O 1 3 ed. H. habet II marg. adscr. clausula e cont. om. secunda *correx*i. 5. abesse patria R 1 7 17 V P 2-6 G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C J O 1-3 7 ed. H.

abesse<sup>a</sup> patria II alio atr. superscr. abesse a patria R 6.

§ 107, 7. at multantur R G B K. ad multantur V atr. uiridi superscr.
8. exules...exilium R V G B K S E.

Graecorum...nostra: sc. exempla.
contrahunt, 'have dealings with': cf. Off. i 2, 4 'neque si tecum agas quid, neque si cum altero contrahas.'

iis dico litteris: for the (alleged) attraction to the case of the preceding Küh. compares Phil. viii 7, 20 'quam hesternus dies nobis, consularibus dico, turpis inluxit': pro Cael. 13, 32 'cum istius mulieris uiro, fratre uolui dicere,' where however fratrem is the better reading. It is more than doubtful whether these are parallel, or whether there is any attraction at all here: it is better to take iis dico litteris as equivalent to iis dico litteratum (or ornatum) litteris, the words iis litteris being not an equivalent to litterato otio but a qualifying abl. attached to a participle unexpressed, the whole phrase being an amplification of litterato.

XXXVII. § 106. contemnenda: the words sicut a or sic uti which follow in many MSS are simply omitted by most

edd. Heine (Pos. Progr. 9) thinks they are a corruption of sapienti, Kühn. a corruption of ac uana and Sff. of ac leuicula. It seems more probable that they are a corruption of secunda, used predicatively 'how much it ought to be regarded with indifference when favourable': secūda might easily become sicuta.

ante: in 36, 104.

abesse patria: the abl. without the preposition a seems well attested here and in Fam. iv 6, 2; v 15, 4; in Ac. i, 1, 1 'cum eius uilla abessemus' is the reading of all the MSS. though Reid inserts ab, as Wes. here reads a patria.

prouinciae: the reference is probably to Roman mercatores or publicani whose business compelled them to take up an abode outside Italy.

§ 107. quid tum: cf. ii 11, 26 n.

rerum naturam, 'actual facts': cf. iv 34, 72 n. Bentley's rei for rerum is uncalled for.

10 nominis quaerimus, quantum tandem a perpetua peregrinatione differt? in qua aetates suas philosophi nobilissimi consumpserunt, Xenocrates, Crantor, Arcesilas, Lacydes, Aristoteles, Theophrastus, Zeno, Cleanthes, Chrysippus, Antipater, Carneades, Clitomachus, Philo, Antiochus, Panaetius, Posidonius, innumera-

15 biles alii, qui semel egressi numquam domum reuerterunt. at enim sine ignominia...adficere sapientem? de sapiente enim haec omnis oratio est, cui iure id accidere non possit; nam iure

10. tandem a R 7 L 2. demum a R 6 E 3 L 36 W 2 M 2 O 3. damna R 1 P 2 G B 1 M 1 O 2 S marg. demū a. dāna B 2 K 1. damna V atr. uiridi superscr. damna a O 1. damnu<sup>a</sup> Π alio atr. add.

danna L 4. dāpna R 17 O 7. dāpna E 1 alio atr. superscr. dāpna a J. dampna a K 2 L 5. dampnū E 2. a D C ed. H. nā a W 1.
11. nobilissimi R G K. nobilissimi V B. 12. archesilas R V G B 1 2 K. || lacydes R G K. lacides V B 1 2. laudes E 1. 13. cleantes R V G B K E.
14. Clitomachus et Panaetius om. R 1. carneades philo antiochus possidonius V marg. paneatius clitomachus carneades. post carneades addit G in marg.
eod. atr. panaetius clitomachus carneades pergitque in textu philo antiochus (ex anthichus corr.) possidonius. carneades panaetius clitomachus carneades philo antiochus possidonius B 1 2 E 1 O 2. carneades panaetius clitomachus philo antiochus possidonius R 6 7 17 E 2 3 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 7 ed. H. carneades "S marg." panaetius clitomachus. possidonius habent R 1 K 1 2 E 1. || innumera biles alii qui R 1 2 6 7 10 16 17 V G B 1 K 1 2 E 1 2 W 1 M 1 2
O 1 7 ed. H. 15. reuerterunt R V G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1
D C H O 1 3 7. reuertere O 2. reuertunt J. 16. sine ignominia adficere (afficere) R 1 17 V G B 1 2 K 2 E 1 2 L 5 6 W 2 M 1 D C J O 1 2. si ignominia adficere K 1. sine ignominia afficere<sup>A</sup> S marg. poterit<sub>A</sub>. sine ignominia afficere poterit R 6 M 2 O 3. <sup>non</sup> sine ignominia afficere poterit H alio atr. suppl. sine ignominia affici poterit R 7. sine ignominia efficere poterit O 7 ed. H. <sup>sine</sup> ignominia afficere E 3 marg. poterit. 17. accidere R 6 7 17 K 2 E 2 3 L 5 W 1 2 M 1 D C H O 1 2 7. accipere V p in d alio atr. mut.
accipe<sup>d</sup> E 1 alio atr. mut. accipere R 1 G B 1 2 K 1.

tandem: Dav.'s conjecture (confirmed by two MSS) for demum (retained by Or. Tr.) has been accepted by Wes. Küh. Sff. etc.; demum is (as Wes. points out) never used in questions of this kind.

Xenocrates: Hei. notes that the names ought to be arranged in pairs according to the schools of philosophy represented; (1) the Old Academy (Xenocrates, Crantor); (2) the Middle Academy (Arcesilas, Lacydes); (3) the Peripatetics (Aristotle and Theophrastus); (4) the Stoics: (a) the original Stoa (Zeno and Cleanthes); (b) the Middle Stoa (Chrysippus, Antipater); (5) the New Academy (Carneades, Clitomachus); then follow the two contemporary representatives of the New Academy, Philo and Antiochus, and the two representatives of the Stoa best known to the Roman world, Panaetius and Posidonius.

Panaetius at any rate revisited his native Rhodes in after life as appears from Rep. iii 35, 48 (Schmekel, Phil. der. mittl. Stoa, p. 6 n.).

sine ignominia: it seems better (with Tr. Kl. Mo. Ba. Ml. Schiche) to mark a lacuna here than to adopt any of the numerous conjectures for filling up the sentence between ignominia and sapientem, such as ignominia afficiet sapientem (Küh.), an potest ignominia afficere sapientem? (Wes. and TS., the latter however inserting exilium after potest) or to rewrite the sentence with Man. (at enim non erit sine ign. : igno- exsulantem consolari non oportet. 108. postremo ad omnis casus facillima ratio est eorum qui ad uoluptatem ea referunt 20 quae sequuntur in uita, ut quocumque haec loco suppeditetur, ibi beate queant uiuere. itaque ad omnem rationem Teuceri uox accommodari potest:

Patria est, ubicumque est bene.

Socrates quidem cum rogaretur cuiatem se esse diceret, 'mundanum' inquit; totius enim mundi se incolam et ciuem arbitrabatur. quid? T. Albucius nonne animo aequissimo Athenis exul philosophabatur? cui tamen illud ipsum non accidisset, si in re publica quiescens Epicuri legibus paruisset. 109. qui enim beator Epicurus quod in patria uiuebat quam quod

18. exulantem R G B K E alii. exultantem V.

§ 108. omnis R V G B K. 19. facillima R V G B K. 20. sequuntur S

E 2 W 1 M 1 D II J O 3 7. sequuntur B 1. secuntur R V G B 2 K 1
 E 1 W 2 M 2. || suppeditetur R 1 10 17 V P 2 G B 2 K 1 D C. suppeditetur S. suppeditet R 2 B 1. subpeditet E 1. suppeditent R 6 E 2 3 M 1 2 II O 1-3 ed. H. suppeditent W 1 O 7. suppeditentur R 7. suppeditet J. suppeditaretur W 2. subpediret R 16. 21. queant R E. queant V K. queant G. 22. accommodari R G K E. accommodari V.

26. quid T. R G B 1 K 1. quid V atr. uiridi superscr. quid B 2. || aequissimo R G B K. equissimo V.

minia adf. potest sap.?) or Bent. (at est in nomine ign.; an ea adf. poterit sap.?) or Sff. (at est non sine ign.; eamne attingere sap.!)

§ 108. ratio, 'method' sc. consolandi; the reason for the superior ease of the Epicurean method is given in the clause ut...queant uiuere.

sequuntur: Mo. and Küh. take sequuntur as equivalent to accidunt, but one can hardly be said referre ad uoluptatem anything except one's own states of mind or actions; it is better to take sequuntur in the sense of 'pursue,' governing quae.

ad omnem rationem, 'to every system,' Epicurean and Stoic or Peripatetic alike, each school giving its own meaning to 'ubicumque est bene.' Heine's explanation 'jeder Lebenslage' is quite wrong. Nissen's 'ad omnem rationem consolandi, i.e. omnes philosophi hac consolatione uti possunt' is unsatisfactory; Teucer's reflexion is a 'ratio consolandi' which all schools can use, not a statement which can be adapted to every method of consolation.

Patria est: Ribbeck classes the line among the fragments of the incertae incertorum fabulae (Scaen. Rom. poes. Frag. 1<sup>2</sup> p. 248) though it is generally assigned to the Teucer of Pacuvius.

The sentiment in various forms is common in both Greek and Latin literature; Arist. Plut. 1151 πατρίς γάρ ἐστὶ πᾶσ' ἴν' ἀν πρᾶττη τις εὖ; Eurip. fr. 1047 N. ἅπανα δὲ χθὼν ἀνδρὶ γενναίω πατρίς; Ov. F. i 493 'omne solum forti patria est.'

quidem: cf. i 48, 116 n.

mundanum, 'a citizen of the world,' a translation of κόσμος. The phrase is attributed to Socrates in Arrian, Epict. i 9, 1 and Plut. de exilio 5 (p. 600 F.), to Aristippus in Diog. Laert. ii 99 and to Diogenes (ib. vi 63). The idea became a commonplace of Stoicism; cf. Marc. Aurel. vi 44 πόλις καὶ πατρίς, ὡς μὲν Ἀντωνίων μοι ἢ Ῥώμη, ὡς δὲ ἀνθρώπων ὁ κόσμος with Gataker's n. ad loc. Musonius Rufus ix p. 42 (ed. Hense) οὐχὶ κοινὴ πατρίς ἀνθρώπων ἀπάντων ὁ κόσμος ἐστίν;

Albucius was condemned for extortion in Sardinia and went into exile at Athens in 103. He had studied Epicurean philosophy when a young man at Athens (Brut. 35, 131) and was mocked at for his imitation of Greek ways (Lucil. quoted in Fin. i 3, 8).

Epicuri legibus: Epicurus discouraged political activity in a philosopher (Diog. Laert. x 119).

§ 109. patria: Epicurus was supposed by some to be an Athenian of the deme

30 Athenis Metrodorus? aut Plato Xenocratem uincebat aut Polemo Arcesilam, quo esset beatior? quanti uero ista ciuitas aestimanda est ex qua boni sapientesque pelluntur? Damaratus quidem, Tarquini nostri regis pater, tyrannum Cypselum quod ferre non poterat, fugit Tarquinius Corintho et ibi suas fortunas 35 constituit ac liberos procreauit. num stulte anteposuit exsilii libertatem domesticae seruituti?

XXXVIII. 110. Iam uero motus animi, sollicitudines aegritudinesque obliuione leniuntur traductis animis ad uoluptatem. non sine causa igitur Epicurus ausus est dicere semper in pluribus bonis esse sapientem, quia semper sit in uoluptatibus. ex quo aut V at a in marg. atr. uiridi adscr.
5 effici putat ille, quod quaerimus, ut sapiens semper beatus sit. 111. etiamne, si sensibus carebit oculorum, si aurium? etiam; nam ista ipsa contemnit. primum enim horribilis ista caecitas quibus tandem caret uoluptatibus? cum quidam etiam disputent ceteras uoluptates in ipsis habitare sensibus; quae autem aspectu perci-

§ 109, 30. aut W I M I O I 2.

<sup>a</sup> ut E I 2 alio atr. superscr.

ut R G B I 2 K I L 5 6 W 2 M 2 D C H J

O 3 7. at S marg. ut. || xenocratem R V G B K S E 2. xenocratē E I.

31. polemo R V K.

palemo B E.

plemo G eod. atr.

polemon J. ||

arcesilam R V G B 2

arcesilā K I.

arcessidam B I E I.

33. tarquini

R 10 K 2 E I L 3 4-6.

tarquini<sup>ni</sup> R I eod. ut uid. atr.

tarquii K I E 2.

tarquini L 2 O 2 3 ed. H.

tarquii E 3.

tarquii V.

tarquii G. ||

nostri regis R V G B I 2

K I S E I 2

W I M I 2 H O 2 3.

regis nostri

K 2 L 3 5 6 W 2 D C J

O I ed. H.

nostri pater tyranni L 2.

35. exilii

R V G B K S E.

XXXVIII. § 111, 7. contemnit R v B.

contempnit V P G K. ||

horribilis R v P G K.

horribilis V atr. uiridi superscr.

9. aspectu

R V P G B K S E.

Gargettus; others said that he was born in Samos, of a family of Athenian cleruchs, and did not come to Athens till he was eighteen (Diog. Laert. x 1).

Metrodorus, a native of Lampsacus: cf. ii 3, 8 n. The statement of some edd. here that another tradition made him an Athenian rests upon an old reading in Diog. Laert. x, 22.

aut...aut: the conjecture of Lamb. an ...an is unnecessary, as is the substitution of ut for the first aut (proposed by Dav.).

quo...beatior, 'in the means for securing greater happiness'; Xenocrates and Arcesilas were both foreigners, the former being a native of Chalcedon (Diog. Laert. iv, 6) and the latter of Pitane (D. L. iv 28).

Damaratus: cf. Republ. ii 19, 34; Liv. i 34, 2; Dion. Hal. iii 46 (Dav.).

Cypselum: tyrant of Corinth from 657 to 625 B.C.; Herod. v 92; Arist. Pol. viii (v) 1310 b 29.

stulte anteposuit: cf. iii 16, 34 n. on 'male reprehendunt.'

XXXVIII. § 110. The matter of this and the succeeding paragraphs is probably derived from some Epicurean source, now lost: cf. Usener, Epicurea § 599.

effici...ut: cf. i 8, 16 n.

§ 111. quidam...disputent: for the view of sensation referred to here cf. Aetius iv 23, 2 p. 414 D. Ἐπίκουρος καὶ τὰ πάθη καὶ τὰς ἀσθήσεις ἐν τοῖς πεπονητοῖς τόποις, τὸ δ' ἡγεμονικὸν ἀπαθές quoted by Usener op. cit. § 317; Lucr. iii 350 sqq. and the nn. to i 20, 46.

10 piantur, ea non uersari in oculorum ulla iucunditate, ut ea quae gustemus, olfaciamus, tractemus, audiamus, in ea ipsa ubi sentimus parte uersentur. in oculis tale nil fit; animus accipit quae uidemus. animo autem multis modis uariisque delectari licet, etiamsi non adhibeatur aspectus. loquor enim de docto homine et erudito, 15 cui uiuere est cogitare. sapientis autem cogitatio non ferme ad inuestigandum adhibet oculos aduocatos. 112. etenim si nox non adimit uitam beatam, cur dies nocti similis adimat? nam illud Antipatri Cyrenaici est <id> quidem paulo obscenius, sed non absurda sententia est; cuius caecitatem cum mulierculae
 20 lamentarentur, 'quid agitis?' inquit, 'an uobis nulla uidetur uoluptas esse nocturna?' Appium quidem ueterem illum, qui caecus annos multos fuit, et ex magistratibus et ex rebus gestis intellegimus in illo suo casu nec priuato nec publico muneri defuisse. C. Drusi domum compleri a consultoribus

10. non uersari R v G. ñ uersari P K. çonuersari V atr. uiridi superscr. || iucunditate R V G B K. iocunditate v P S E. 11. gustemus R v P G B K.

gestemus V atr. uiridi superscr. 12. uersentur R I 67 17 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 L 56 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 ed. H. uersantur W I. || tale nil R V G K. tale n'l B 2 W 2. tale nihil B I M I 2 O 2 3. tale nichil R 7 P E I 2 L 5 D H J. nil tale O I. nihil tale W I. nichil tale C. 13. dilectari V G. 14. aspectus R V P G B K S E.

§ 112, 16. etenim R v P G B. est enim V atr. uiridi corr. 18. antipatri R V P G K E 2. antiprī B 2. antipari E I. antipatris S s postea add. || est quidem R I 67 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I-3 L 2 3 4 6 W I 2 M 2

D C II J O I 3 ed. H. est q̄ M I. est q̄ O 2. quidem R 17. est id quidem corr. Seyffertus. 20. quid agitis R V P G B I K I S E I 2

L 5 6 W 2 M I 2 D C II J O I-3 ed. H. quid agit K 2. quid aegit B 2. quid ait W I. || nulla uidetur V P G B I E I. ulla uidetur B 2. ulla uidetur R K. uidetur n'la S. 22. annos multos R I 2 10 16 V P G B I 2 E I 2 W 2 M I 2 D C J O 3. multos annos R I 7 v K I O I 2.

23. intellegimus R V G. intelligimus P B K S E. 24. C drusi W I. G drusi v. Ç atrusi V C in G alio atr. mut. G. atrusi R B I E I P marg. C at drusi. C atrusi S E 2. Catrusi B 2. Gatrusi G. Cratusi K 2. Gratusi R 16 K I L 5 J. Gratū si R 17. cn. drusii O I. c. autem drusi R 6 L 6 M 2 O 3. G tusi W 2 marg. C aut drusi. || compleri R V G. cōpleri K. || a consultoribus R I 7 V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 W 2 M I 2 J O I-3. a om. R 6 L 6 W I.

uersari in: cf. iv 18, 42 'in magna parte pestis uersantur.'

fit...accipit: for the change to oratio recta cf. ii 7, 17; iv 10, 24. For the thought F. A. W. compares the line of Epicharmus quoted in Plut. fort. 3 νοῦς ὀρῆ καὶ νοῦς ἀκούει· τᾶλλα κωφὰ καὶ τυφλά. aspectus: cf. i 30, 73 n.

aduocatos: for the legal metaphor Mo. compares iv 23, 52; Ac. ii 27, 86.

§ 112. nam: cf. iii 16, 35 n.

Antipatri: for Antipater of Cyrene, the follower of Aristippus, cf. Diog. Laert. ii 86.

id quidem: the insertion of id proposed by Sff. seems necessary: cf. Madv. Gr. § 489 b.

agitis, 'what are you thinking of?,' 'what ails you?' F. A. W. and Mo. read aitis, which is a doubtful form. For the meaning of the phrase cf. the retort of Granius to M. Drusus quoted in pro Planc. 14, 33 'immo uero tu, Druse, quid agis?'

Appium: iv 2, 4 n.; Cato M. 11, 37.

C. Drusi, brother of M. Drusus, the opponent of C. Gracchus (Brut. 28, 109):

25 solitam accepimus; cum, quorum res esset, sua ipsi non uidebant, caecum adhibebant ducem. pueris nobis Cn. Aufidius praetorius et in senatu sententiam dicebat nec amicis deliberantibus deerat et Graecam scribebat historiam et uidebat in litteris.

XXXIX. 113. Diodotus Stoicus caecus multos annos nostrae domi uixit. is uero, quod credibile uix esset, cum in philosophia multo etiam magis adsidue quam antea uersaretur et cum fidibus Pythagoreorum more uteretur, cumque ei libri noctes 5 et dies legerentur, quibus in studiis oculis non egebat, tum, quod sine oculis fieri posse uix uidetur, geometriae munus tuebatur uerbis praecipiens discentibus unde quo quamque lineam scriberent. Asclepiaden ferunt, non ignobilem Eretricum

26. CN M<sub>12</sub> O<sub>1</sub> S at mut. est. GNP W<sub>1</sub> J. GNR V<sub>6</sub> G B<sub>2</sub>
K O<sub>23</sub>. GH W<sub>2</sub>. gñ B<sub>1</sub> E<sub>1</sub>. gneus E<sub>2</sub> II. || aufidius R<sub>16</sub>
P v E<sub>2</sub> W<sub>12</sub> II J O<sub>1-3</sub>. aufidius R V G B<sub>2</sub> K. aut filius B<sub>1</sub> E<sub>1</sub>.
28. uidebat R<sub>16</sub> 7 17 VP B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>12</sub> S E<sub>12</sub> L<sub>2-6</sub> W<sub>12</sub> M<sub>12</sub>

D C II J O<sub>1-3</sub> ed. H. uidebat<sup>an</sup> G eod. atr.
XXXIX. § 113, 2. nostrae domi R<sub>12</sub> 10 v P G B<sub>12</sub> K<sub>1</sub> S E<sub>12</sub> W<sub>12</sub>
M<sub>12</sub> II J O<sub>2</sub>. domi nostrae R<sub>16</sub> D C O<sub>13</sub>. nre domi iuixit V u in i ras. mut. nostrae domi R<sub>17</sub>. 3. adsidue G. adsidue V. assidue R v P B K S E.
8. Asclepiaden K. Asclepiadem R V G K<sub>2</sub> S E L<sub>56</sub> M<sub>12</sub>.
asclepiadē P B. || ignobilem R<sub>16</sub> K<sub>1</sub> M<sub>12</sub> D C O<sub>23</sub>. ignobilē R<sub>7</sub> 17
P B<sub>2</sub> E<sub>13</sub> W<sub>1</sub> II. ignobile V v G. || eretricum R<sub>10</sub> K.

ceterorū
eretricū R atr. ant. ereticū E. hereticum S marg. nec iscitū. hereticum R<sub>16</sub> K<sub>2</sub> E<sub>2</sub> marg. atr. ant. L<sub>56</sub> W<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> J O<sub>1</sub> ed. H. meretricū P al. atr. mut. metricum B<sub>2</sub>. metricum R<sub>17</sub> v L<sub>24</sub> W<sub>1</sub> II O<sub>3</sub>. medicum L<sub>3</sub>. creticum B<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub> D C marg. ereticū. nec inexercitum R<sub>6</sub> O<sub>2</sub>.

Val. Max. viii 7, 4 'Livius Drusus... aetatis uiribus et acie oculorum defectus ius ciuile populo benignissime interpretatus est, utilissimaque discere id cupientibus monumenta composuit.'

Cn. Aufidius: Fin. v 19, 54 'equidem e Cn. Aufidio, praetorio, erudito homine, oculis capto, saepe audiebam, cum se lucis magis quam utilitatis desiderio moueri diceret.' He was praetor in 108 B.C. The history composed by him was probably a Roman history, though written in Greek (v. Peter, Hist. Rom. rel. i pp. ccxxxvi f.).

uidebat in litteris: almost = 'neque uidebat nisi in litteris,' 'all the sight he had was literary insight': uidebat which Urs. said he found in one MS and which Bentl. adopted, is a peculiarly unhappy conjecture; it overlooks the fact that except for uidebat here there would be no mention made of Aufidius' blindness, the only title he had to appear in the context.

For the metaphorical use of uidere, edd.

following Vict. refer to Soph. O.T. 388 ἐν τοῖς κέρδεσιν | μόνον δέδορκε, τὴν τέχνην δ' ἔφην τυφλός.

XXXIX. § 113. Diodotus, mentioned by Cic. in N.D. i 3, 6 along with Philo, Antiochus and Posidonius as one of his teachers: cf. Ac. ii 36, 115 'Diodoto quid faciam, Stoico, quem a puero audiui, qui mecum uiuit tot annos, qui habitat apud me, quem et admiror et diligo': Brut. 90, 309; Fam. xiii 16, 4; he died in 59 B.C. (Att. ii 20, 6).

domi: this form of the locative has the almost unanimous support of the MSS here, though in i 22, 51 the best MSS have domui: the latter is read here by Sch., with the prima manus of V.

esset, sc. nisi ipse uidissem (Kühn.); Bake's conj. est, adopted by Ti., is unnecessary: cf. Brut. 70, 246 'quod mirabile esset.'

cum... tum: cf. iii 13, 27 n.

Asclepiaden, of Phlius, the friend of Menedemus of Eretria, whom he was said to have imbued with his own philophilosophum, cum quidam quaereret quid ei caecitas adtulisset, 10 respondisse, puero ut uno esset comitator. ut enim uel summa paupertas tolerabilis sit, si liceat quod quibusdam Graecis cotidie, sic caecitas ferri facile possit, si non desint subsidia uale-tudinum. 114. Democritus luminibus amissis alba scilicet discernere et atra non poterat, at uero bona mala, aequa iniqua, 15 honesta turpia, utilia inutilia, magna parua poterat, et sine uarietate colorum licebat uiuere beate, sine notione rerum non licebat. atque hic uir impediari etiam animi aciem aspectu oculorum arbitratur, et cum alii saepe quod ante pedes esset non uiderent, ille in infinitatem omnem peregrinabatur, ut nulla 20 in extremitate consisteret. traditum est etiam Homerum caecum

9. philosophum D O 2. p̄hm W I L 2. ph'm C. p̄hum M I.

philosophum B I marg. philosopho<sup>24</sup>. philosopho<sup>24</sup> S. philosophorum
 R I 6 7 10 17 V V P G B 2 K I 2 E I 3 E 2 marg. atr. ant. L 3-6 W 2 M 2
 Π J O 13 ed. H. || adtulisset K. attulisset R V P G B S E. 10. respondisse v P B K. respondissē R. respondiss& V. 12. cotidie R V P G B E. cottidie K. quotidie v. || ualetudinum V G. ualitudinum R P B K S E.

§ 114, 13. discernere et atra R V G B 2 K I S E I 2 W 2 M I Π J

O I ed. H. et atra discernere B I. et atra discernere R 6 7 17 P K 2 L 6
 W I M 2 D C O 2 3. 17. impediari R V P G B K S E. || etiam animi
 R V P G B I 2 K I 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2 D C J O I 2. animi etiam
 R 6 E 2 II. om. O 3. || aspectu R 6 17 v B I K 2 S E I 2 W I 2 M I 2

D C Π J O I-3. aspectum R I. aspectu P. aspectū K I. aspectū B 2. aspectum V. aspectus G in aspectū eod. atr. mut. 18. cum alii P v. cum aliis R G. cum aliis V K. 19. ille in infinitatem S E 2 M I II.
 ille infinitatem v P B I E 3 W I M 2 O I 2 ed. H. illa infinitatem R G

K I 2. illa infinitatem V atr. uiridi superscr. illam infinitatem W 2. illā ifirmitatem J. ille finitatem W 2. illā finitatem B 2 E I. ille p̄ finitatem D C. ille an illa incert. ante infinitatem F. || peregrinabatur R I 2
 V P B I K I E I W 2 D O I 2 F. perigrinabatur G. peruagabatur W I.

sophy (Diog. L. ii 137 ἀλλὰ πρεσβύτερος Ἀσκληπιάδης, ὡς λέγεσθαι ποιητὴν μὲν αὐτὸν εἶναι, ὑποκριτὴν δὲ Μενέδημον).

quod...cotidie: i.e. parasitari.

ualetudinum, 'attacks of ill-health,' lit. 'states of health,' the plur. being understood in malam partem as there are many kinds of ill-health but only one kind of good health: cf. Tac. A. vi 50 'regere ualetudines principis.'

§ 114. Democritus: cf. Fin. v 29, 87 'Democritus, qui (uere falsone non quae-remus) dicitur se oculis priuasse'; Plut.
 de curiosis. 12 p. 521 D. ἐκεῖνο μὲν ψεῦδος ἐστὶ τὸ Δημόκριτον ἔκουσιως σβέσαι τὰς ὄψεις; Decimus Laberius, Restio I (Rib-beck, Scaen. Rom. Poes. Fragg. 112 p. 291)
 'Democritus Abderites physicus philo-sophus | clipeum constituit contra exortum Hyperionis | oculos effodere ut posset splendore aereo.'

licebat...non licebat: cf. i 48, 116 n. on 'defuerunt...non defuit.'

notione rerum, 'an apprehension of realities'; for notione Usener (Epicurea
 p. 336 n.) suggests notatione.

cum alii...consisteret: for the reading in the text Bentl. (followed by Dav.) conjectured cum hi saepe...illa infinitatem omnem peragrabat, where hi=oculi and illa=mens; the reading illa is found in many MSS., but the conjecture misses the point, which is not to contrast Democritus' mind with his eyes or with the eyes of other people, but to contrast the blind philosopher with other people; alii then is necessary and consequently ille.

For quod ante pedes esset cf. Ennius ap.
Diu. ii 13, 30 'quod est ante pedes nemo spectat, caeli scrutantur plagas' Ter. Ad.
 386; and for the expression peregrina- batur...consisteret cf. N.D. i. 20, 54, fuisse; at eius picturam, non poësin uidemus. quae regio, quae ora, qui locus Graeciae, quae species formaque pugnae, quae acies, quod remigium, qui motus hominum, qui ferarum non ita expictus est ut, quae ipse non uiderit, nos ut uideremus effecerit?

 25 quid ergo? aut Homero delectationem animi ac uoluptatem aut cuiquam docto defuisse umquam arbitramur? 115 aut, ni ita se res haberet, Anaxagoras aut hic ipse Democritus agros et patriamonia sua reliquissent, huic discendi quaerendique diuinæ delectationi toto se animo dedissent? itaque augurem Tiresiam, 30 quem sapientem fingunt poëtae, numquam inducunt deplorantem caecitatem suam. at uero Polyphemum Homerus cum inmanem ferumque finxisset, cum ariete etiam conloquentem facit eiusque

21. poesin R V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 F. poesi W 2. poesim v W 1

M 1 2 D C plerique. 22. qui locus V P G K F. quilocus R alio atr. superscr. || graeciae v G marg. F. grecie R. grecie R 2 V P O 3. grecie W 2
 D O 1. || formaq; pugne D C. forme que pugna K 1. forme que pugna
 R 17 E 2 L 5 6 Π J O 1. forme q̄ pugna B 2 K 2 W 2. formae q̄ pugna
 L 2. fortune que pugna M 1. fortune q̄ pugna E 3. forme que pugna P B 1 S E 1 L 4 O 3. forme que pugna V. forme quae pugna R 1. formae quae pugna R 6 G L 3 M 2 O 2 F. quae pugna quae species formae v. que forme que pugne W 1. 24. expictus R V P G B 1 E 1 2 F. expict' K 1. expictum v. || effecerit R v P G E 1 2 F plerique. effecerit V K. 25. ac uoluptatem R 6 P B 1 E 1 3 L 6 M 2 C O 2 3. aut uoluptatem R 1 17 V G K 1 2 E 2 L 2-5 W 1 2 M 1 D H O 1 F ut uidetur. 26. defuisse R V P G B K E F. fuisse v.

§ 115, 28. reliquissent V P B K E. relinquissent R G. 29. dedissent R 1 6 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 2 W 2 M 1 2 D C Π J O 1-3 F. dedidissent W 1. dedisset O 2 ed. H. 31. polyphemum R V G. poliphemum P B K F. || inmanem R V P G K F. immanem B S E.
 32. finxisset v P B 1 E F. fixisset B 2. fixisset R V G. ~~fuisse~~ S marg. finxisset. || conloquentem V F. conloquentem R. cloquentem K. colloquentem P B 1 S.

'animus...ita late longoque peregrinatur ut nullam tamen oram ultimam uideat, in qua possit insistere'; with peregrinabatur we must supply animo or mente.

picturam: so Athenaeus v p. 182A "Ὅμηρος ὡσπερ ἀγαθὸς ζωγράφος and Luc. Imagg. c. 8 τὸν ἀριστον τῶν γραφέων Ὅμηρον (quoted by Dav.).

poësin: this form of the accusative ending seems best attested here though Wes. and Sff. read poësim.

§ 115. Anaxagoras...reliquissent: for the alleged facts see Diog. Laert. ii 6 [of Anaxagoras] οὗτος...πλοῦτῃ διαφέρων ἦν...τὰ πατρίᾳ παρεχώρησε τοῖς οἰκείοις and ix 35 [of Democritus] τρίτον τε ὄντα ἀδελφὸν νειμασθαι τὴν οὐσίαν...ὁ δὲ Δημήτριος ὑπὲρ ἑκατὸν τάλαντά φησιν εἶναι αὐτῷ τὸ μέρος ἅπαντα δὲ καταναλῶσαι.

dedissent: cf. i 30, 72 n. on dedissent; Or. here prefers dedidissent.

Polyphemum in Od. ix 447 ff. Cicero's recollection of the passage is hazy, as Polyphemus is not there represented as contrasting the ram's freedom with his own helplessness, but the ram's present slowness with his former freedom of movement. It seems hardly necessary to suppose that Cic. has in his mind a passage from some other poet whom he is confusing with Homer.

conloquentem...laudare: for the change of construction cf. N. D. i 12, 31 'facit enim...Socratem disputantem...eundemque...dicere'; cf. also Prop. ii 8, 33 'uiderat informem multa Patroclon arena | porrectum et sparsa caede iacere comas, | where however there is a change of subject: so after spectare in Prop. ii 19, 11, iv 12, 53: the emendation laudantem (Lamb.) is therefore unnecessary.

laudare fortunas quod, qua uellet, ingredi posset et, quae uellet, attingere. et recte hic quidem; nihilo enim erat ipse Cyclops 35 quam aries ille prudentior.

XL. 116. In surditate uero quidnam est mali? erat surdaster M. Crassus, sed aliud molestius, quod male audiebat, etiamsi, ut mihi uidebatur, iniuria. Epicurei nostri Graece fere nesciunt nec Graeci Latine. ergo hi in illorum et illi in horum sermone surdi, 5 omnesque nos in iis linguis quas non intellegimus, quae sunt

33. qua uellet R 17 v G B 12 K 1 E 12 L 2 3 6 W 1 M 2 D C II
O 1 3 F. q̄ uellet P. quo uellet S. q; uellet V. q̄ uellet K 2 L 4 5
W 2 J. q̄ uellet O 2. quo uellet R 17 M 1 ed. H. || et quae M 2 O 2.
et que P W 1 M 1 O 3. et que R 7 L 6 J O 1. et q̄ L 2 ed. H.

et quem L 4. et quem B 1. et que S ē in e mut. et q̄, B 2. et quē G K 1 2 E 1. et quem R V L 3 5 D C F. et quo W 2. 34. attingeret R 1 6 17 V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 L 2-6 W 1 M 1 D J O 1-3 F ed. H.

actingeret C. attige W 2. contingeret H E 2. attingere et recte corr. Lambinus.

XL. § 116, 3. epicurei R 1 2 6 7 10 16 V P 1 G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 2
L 2-6 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3 F. epycurei W 2. epicuri R 17 P 2.

epycurhei W 1. || graece R v O 2 F. grece B K. gce P. grece V.
graecae G. || fere R V P G B 1 2 K 1 E 1 D C F. fari R 6 v K 2
E 2 3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 II J O 1 3 ed. H. rari O 2. 5. omnesque nos
R 6 P 2 W 1 J O 1 F. omnesque id nos R 1 7 V P 1 G B 1 2 K 1 2
E 1-3 L 5 6 W 2 M 1 2 D C II O 2 3 ed. H. omnesque id nos S. omnisque nos v. || in iis v L 6. in hiis K 2. in eis F. in his R V P G
B 1 2 K 1 E 1 2 L 5 W 1 2 O 1-3. in illis D. || intellegimus R V G B K F. intelligimus v P S E.

fortunas: for the plur. Mo. compares pro Sull. 23, 66 'secundas fortunas amittere coactus est.'

attingere. et recte: this reading (Lamb. Wes. Schiche) seems to explain best on the whole the reading attingeret which is attested by nearly all the MSS. and is accepted by Tr.: the reading attingere: recte adopted by Küh. Sff. and others is less satisfactory as it assumes as a cause for the reading attingeret the influence of the preceding subjunctives, which is less likely than a purely mechanical error.

XL. § 116. surdaster, 'hard of hearing,' is ἀπαξ εἰρημένον.

male audiebat, κακῶς ἤκουεν, 'had a bad reputation': cf. Plut. Crass. c. 2 'Ῥωμαῖοι μὲν οὖν λέγουσι πολλαῖς ἀρεταῖς τοῦ Κράσσου κακίαν μὲν ἔπι σκοτῆσαι τὴν φιλοπλουτίαν· ζοικε δὲ οὐ μίαν, πασῶν δ' ἔρρωμενέστερα τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ κακιῶν γενομένην τὰς ἄλλας ἀμαυρῶσαι; he had been accused of corrupting a Vestal Virgin, but was acquitted on the plea that the attentions he paid her were of a purely commercial nature, as he wished to buy her property cheaply.

Epicurei: all recent edd. except Kl.

and Sff. expunge or bracket the word, which Madv. calls a 'foedum additamentum'; but it seems futile to resist the unanimous testimony of the MSS. in a case where there is no plausible explanation of how the word came to be inserted (as there is e.g. in Lucr. ii 42), and where the reading as it stands gives a good sense. It is characteristic of Cic. to gibe at the want of Greek scholarship shown by the Roman Epicureans (cf. i 3, 6; ii 3, 7; iv 3, 7, etc.), and there is a grim humour in selecting the coterie who laid such stress upon pleasures of the senses, as examples of persons deprived of pleasure (and wisdom) 'at one entrance.' Epicurei nostri and Graeci, moreover, give a better point to omnes nos below.

Latine: sciunt is to be supplied from nesciunt: cf. Ac. ii 47, 145 'tu nunc, Catule, lucere nescis, nec tu, Hortensi, in tua uilla nos esse' with Reid's n. and Fin. ii 8, 25 'recte ergo is negat unquam bene cenasse Gallonium, recte miserum,' where Lamb. inserts dicit, an excusable but erroneous proceeding, as Madv. remarks.

omnesque nos: many MSS. have omnesque id nos, which Kl. Wopk. and Küh.

innumerabiles, surdi profecto sumus. at uocem citharoedi non audiunt. ne stridorem quidem serrae tum cum acuitur, aut grunditum cum iugulatur suis nec, cum quiescere uolunt, fremitum murmurantis maris; et si cantus eos forte delectant, 10 primum cogitare debent ante quam hi sint inuenti multos beate uixisse sapientis, deinde multo maiorem percipi posse legendis his quam audiendis uoluptatem. 117. tum, ut paulo ante caecos ad aurium traducebamus uoluptatem, sic licet surdos ad oculorum. etenim, qui secum loqui poterit sermonem alterius 15 non requirit.

Congerantur in unum omnia, ut idem oculis et auribus captus sit, prematur etiam doloribus acerrimis corporis. qui primum

6. at R 2 10 v P E 2 W 1 M 2 C J O 1-3. aut R 1. aut E 1.
 aut R 17 V G K M 1. || citharoedi R F. citaroedi V G. cithaređi P K.
 †
 cytaređi E 1 atr. ant. 7. serrae R 6 v L 3 M 2 O 2 F. serre L 2 6 W 1 M 1 O 1. ferre II at re in ras. et fuerat fer. fere W 2 marg. serre. fere E 2 at f in ras. ferre R 7. fere R V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 1 L 5 O 3. ferri E 3 D C. fieri R 17 L 4. ferari ed. H. 8. grunditum R 17
 V G B 2 K 1 E 1. grunditum R 1 atr. nigriore mut. grunditū E 1.
 † di grunnitum B 1. grunnitum R 2 7 16 v P E 2 3 L 5 W 2 M 2 D C II J O 1. grunnitum R 6 L 6 O 2 3. gr|nitum F. grinnitum W 1 ed. H. grunnitū K 2.
 †
 gnnitum S marg. grunnitum. ginnicū R 10. grunntur M 1. || suis R V P G
 B 1 E 1 M 1. sus K 1 eod. atr. suis C. sus R 6 7 17 v K 2 S E 2 3
 L 5 6 W 1 2 M 2 D II J O 1-3 ed. H. om. B 2. 11. sapientis O 2 F. sapientes R V P G B K E. 12. his R V P G K E. iis F.
 § 117, 14. qui secum v K 2 W 2 D C II O 1-3 F ed. H. que secum V † ae
 i in e mut. qui secum B 1 eod. ut uid. atr. que secum E 1. que secum P. quae secum R G. que secum K 1. q̄ secum B 2. si secum W 1.
 16. congerantur R 1 6 7 17 v P 1 2 G K 1 2 E 2 3 L 5 6 W 2 M 2 II
 O 1-3 ed. H. congerentur J. cong<sup>er</sup>antur B 2. congregantur V. congregentur W 1 D C. cū gerantur M 1. cogantur B 1 E 1. rigerantur F initio abscisso. 17. prematur V B 2 E 1. praematur R eod. atr.
 p̄matur P K. praematur G. || acerrumis R V G B K F.

retain, explaining id as an anticipation of surdi following (Wopk. op. cit. pp. 159 sqq.); Hand (n. to Wopk. l.c.) proposed iidem, Man. followed by Lamb. Ml. and Wes. read item and Sff. conjectures denique; Dav. wrote 'in horum sermone surdi omnes. Quid? nos in iis' etc. The reading in the text is adopted by Tr. Ba. Or.

ante quam...sapientis: a sentiment due to Democritus; cf. Philodemus de mus. V.H.<sup>1</sup> i c 36, 29 (quoted by Usener, Épíc. p. 337 n.) Δημόκριτος μὲν τολύων...

μουσικὴν φησι νεωτέραν εἶναι καὶ τὴν αἰτίαν ἀποδίδοσι λέγων μὴ ἀποκρίναι τὰναγκαῖον ἀλλὰ ἐκ τοῦ περιεῦντος ἤδη γενέσθαι. sapientis is bracketed by Dav. and Bentl.

§ 117. paulo ante: in 38, 111.

secum loqui: cf. 36, 103.

captus, as often, = privatus: Diu. ii 3, 9 'oculis captus, ut Tiresias'; Ac. ii 17, 53 'mente captos.'

primum, without deinde following, its place being taken by sin forte; cf. i 24, 57 n. and Wopk. op. cit. p. 73.

per se ipsi plerumque conficiunt hominem; sin forte longin-quitate producti uehementius tamen torquent quam ut causa sit 20 cur ferantur, quid est tandem, dii boni, quod laboremus? portus enim praesto est, quoniam mors ibidem est aeternum nihil sentiendi receptaculum. Theodorus Lysimacho mortem minitanti ‘Magnum uero,’ inquit, ‘effecisti si cantharidis uim consecutus es.’ 118. Paulus Persi deprecanti ne in triumpho 25 duceretur, ‘In tua id quidem potestate est.’ multa primo die, cum de ipsa morte quaereremus, non pauca etiam postero, cum ageretur de dolore, sunt dicta de morte, quae qui recordetur haud sane periculum est ne non mortem aut optandam aut certe non timendam putet.

20. dii R V P G · B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 D J O 1 F. 21. quoniam mors ibidem est R P G B 1 K 1 E 1 2 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C H O 2 3. niā m. i. e.

F initio abscisso. quae m. i. e. v. que O 1. <sup>h</sup> 3 B 2. mors ibidem est V paginae parte abscissa. 23. cantharidis P B K alii. cantharidis G.

cantaridis F. Taridis V. || consecutus es P B 1 2 K 1 E 1 2 F alii.
 con....uf ef V. consecutus es R eod. atr. consequutus es v.

§ 118, 24. paulus R V P G B S E. || persi paene omnes. perse W 1 ed. H.
 perse O 1. persae v. per se O 3. 25. in tua id quidem R V P G B 2

K 1 2 E 1-3 W 2 I J O 1 2 F S marg. inquit ed. H. id in tua quidem B 1. in tua id inquit potestate R 6. in tua inquit id quidem W 1 M 1. in tua id quidem inquit M 2 D C. || primo die v K 2 E 2 W 1 D C H O 1 F ed. H.

~
 p die W 2. prima die E 3 O 2 3. primordie P E 1. primordie R V G B 1 2 K 1. 28. haud sane R v G K. hau.... V. haut sane B 2.

h aut sane E 1. aut sane F. haud sane P h extra lineam adscr. et t in d mut.

sin forte...laboremus: the doctrine of the εὐλογος ἐξαγωγή, professed alike by Stoics, Epicureans and Peripatetics. There seems to be no sufficient reason for inserting tanta (with Sff.) after causa.

portus: the metaphor is common; cf. i 49, 118 n. and Plut. non posse suau. u. sec. Ep. c. 23 p. 1103 C εἰς μίαν καταφυγήν καὶ λιμένα πράττοντες κακῶς, τὴν διάλυσιν καὶ τὴν ἀναισθησίαν, ἀποβλέπουσι; Epict. Diss. iv 10, 27 οὗτος δ' ἐστὶν ὁ λιμὴν πάντων, ὁ θάνατος, αὕτη ἡ καταφυγή.

ibidem, ‘at once,’ ‘on the spot’ like the Gk αὐτόθεν. The word is omitted by Or. Tr. and Mo. and altered to quidem by Nissen and Wes., the latter placing it after quoniam; many edd. follow Bentl. and Dav. in regarding quoniam...est as a gloss. Vahlen (Opusc. Acad. II 351 ff.) proposes ‘quoniam mors <ubi est>, ibidem est aeternum...’ Bake proposed to delete mors and take ibidem to mean ἐκεῖ, i.e. apud inferos.

Theodorus: cf. i 43, 102 for another tale about Theodorus and Lysimachus and n. there. Similar retorts are also to be found in Sen. de tranqu. 14, 3; Val. Max. vi 2, 3 ext.

cantharidis, a poisonous beetle or fly, from which a deadly drug was manufactured: cf. Fam. ix 21, 3 ‘Gaius accusante L. Crasso cantharidas sumpsisse dicitur’; Plin. N.H. xxix 30 ‘ipsarum cantharidum uenenum in qua parte sit, non constat inter auctores. alii in pedibus et capite existimant esse, alii negant. conuenit tantum pennas earum auxiliari in quacumque parte sit uenenum.’

§ 118. Paulus: Plut. Aem. Paul. c. 34 προσέπεμψε τῷ Αἰμιλίῳ δεόμενος μὴ πομπευθῆναι καὶ παραιτούμενος τὸν θρῆλαμβον· ὁ δὲ τῆς ἀνανδρίας αὐτοῦ καὶ φιλοψυχίας, ὡς ἔοικε, καταγελῶν, ἀλλὰ τοῦτο γ' ἔφη, καὶ πρότερον ἦν ἐπ' αὐτῷ καὶ νῦν ἐστίν, ἀν βούληται.

Persi: for the form see iii 22, 53 n. Or. reads Persae.

XLI. Mihi quidem in uita seruanda uidetur illa lex quae in Graecorum conuiujs obtinetur: 'aut bibat,' inquit, 'aut abeat.' et recte. aut enim fruatur aliquis pariter cum alijs uoluptate potandi aut, ne sobrius in uiolentiam uinulentorum incidat, ante 5 discedat. sic iniurias fortunae quas ferre nequeas defugiendo relinquant. haec eadem quae Epicurus, totidem uerbis dicit Hieronymus.

119. Quodsi ii philosophi quorum ea sententia est ut uirtus per se ipsa nihil ualeat, omneque quod honestum nos et laudabile 10 esse dicimus, id illi cassum quiddam et inani uocis sono decoratum esse dicant, ei tamen semper beatum censent esse sapientem, XLI. 2. obtinetur S E F. optinetur R v P G B 1 2 K 1. 4. in uiolentiam V v G B 2 K F. in uiolentiam R ead. ut uid. atr. in uiolentiam B 1 E 1 2 alii. in uinolentia P. 5. discedat v P B 1 E 1 2 F alii.

decedat K. dicebat R atr. nigriore corr. dicebat V G. 7. hieronymus R v. hieronimus V G B 1 2 K E. hyeronimus F: ante hieronymus inser. et v P 2 M 2 O 1 2.

§ 119, 8. ii philosophi v M 2. ii phi L 6. ii phi W 2 h ante ii eras. hii phi P 6 K 2 II. hi phi W 1. hi phi P 2 E 2 at f post hi eras. uidetur et spatium post phi relictum est. iis philosophis P 3 5. eis philosophis F. hii philosophis P 4. i hii philosophis R 7. his philosophis R 1 6 V P 1 G B 1 2 K 1 S E 1 J O 1 3. suis philosophis O 2. his phi credimus M 1. hii credimus phi D. is credimus phi C. 9. omneque v E 2 L 6 M 2 D C II O 1. oeq; W 2 f eras. omnesque R V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 3 L 5 W 1 M 1 O 2 3. omnisque ed. H. 10. dicimus R 6 1 7 B 1 L 6 W 1. dicamus R 1 7 V v P G B 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 5 W 2 M 1 D C II J O 1-3 ed. H. ducamus M 2. || cassum R v P B 1 2 K 1 E 1 alii. casum V. casus G in cassu ead. atr. corr. || inani R V G. inani f. inani K. inanis P. 11. et tamen R 1 6 7 10 1 6 1 7 V v P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1 2 L 3-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 D C II J O 1-3. & E 3. et tum L 2. ei corr. Wesenbergius.

XLI. obtinetur, for which Dav. Or. Tr. substitute obtinet, is the only form possible in the sense required here, 'is in vogue'; cf. i 12, 26 n.

The Gk proverb is quoted by Stephanus ἡ πῖθι ἡ ἀπιθι. The moral application of it referred to by Cic. here is of common occurrence: cf. Lucr. iii 938; Hor. Epp. ii 2, 213, S. i 1, 118; Plut. Cons. ad Ap. c. 34 p. 120 B προαπεφλίθησε τοῦ θνητοῦ βίου, καθάπερ ἐκ τοῦ συμποσίου, πρὶν εἰς τινα παρωϊαν ἐκπεσεῖν τὴν τῷ μακρῷ γήρα παροπομένην.

With inquit it is best to understand lex; for another use cf. i 39, 93 n.

Epicurus: Buresch gives reasons (in Leipzig. Stud. IX 62) for believing that this idea was developed in the Consolatio of Epicurus and borrowed from him by Crantor in his περὶ πένθους, from whom Cic. and Plut. derived it.

Hieronymus: ii 6, 15 n.

§ 119. ii philosophi: sc. Epicurei. The reading of many MSS iis (or his) philosophis (retained by Kl. and Küh.), if correct, must be explained as an anacoluthon, Cic. having intended to conclude with (e.g.) licet haec dicere, and having altered the constr. after the parenthesis quorum...dicant.

inani: cf. 26, 73 and iii 18, 42 n.: inani is a transl. of Epicurus' own phrase (perh. κενὸν φθόγγον as Usener Epic. p. 314 n. suggests) as appears from Fin. ii 15, 48 'ait (sc. Epicurus) eos uoce inani sonare (his enim ipsis uerbis utitur).'

ei: Wesenberg's emendation for the MSS. et adopted by Kl. Ba. Ml. Küh.; Or. La. Tr. and Sff. prefer to omit et.

quid tandem a Socrate et Platone profectis philosophis faciendum uides? quorum alii tantam praestantiam in bonis animi esse dicunt ut ab his corporis et externa obruantur, alii autem haec 15 ne bona quidem ducunt, in animo reponunt omnia. 120. quorum controuersiam solebat tamquam honorarius arbiter iudicare Carneades. nam cum, quaecumque bona Peripateticis, eadem Stoicis commoda uiderentur, neque tamen Peripatetici plus tribuerent diuitiis, bonae ualetudini, ceteris rebus generis eiusdem 20 quam Stoici, cum ea re non uerbis ponderarentur, causam esse dissidendi negabat. quare hunc locum ceterarum disciplinarum philosophi quem ad modum obtinere possint, ipsi uiderint; mihi tamen gratum est quod de sapientium perpetua bene uiuendi facultate dignum quiddam philosophorum uoce profitentur.

12. profectis G B 2 F. pfectis R 2 B 1 S E 1 M 2. pfectis J. pfectis R 7 16 17 P K 1 E 2 W 1 2 M 1 D C II. perfectis R 16 v O 1-3 ed. H. || faciendum O 1. faciendum R V P G K E. 13. uides R 1 P G B 1 2 K 1 2' S E 1-3 L 5 6 W 2 M 2 II J O 1-3 F ed. H. ui... V in fine lineae, cett. litt. excussis. uidetur v. censes D alio atr. superscr. censes C. putes R 6 7 17 W 1 M 1. 14. obruantur F. obfuant B 2. obfuant K 2 L 5. obsuāt W 2 J. obseruant G K 1. obseruāt R 1 a in e mut. alt. man. obserua... V litt. aliae sequuntur at obscuratae sunt. obfuet S. obfuent D. obseruent R 7 17 P 1 B 1 E 1 2 L 2-4 M 1 2

C O 3. obseruet P 2. obscurent<sup>r</sup> II at cur in ras. obscurentur v R 6

L 6 O 1 2. obscurē<sup>tur</sup> E 3. obseruent ed. H. 15. ducunt R V P G B 1

E 1 2 W 2 D C II J F ut uid. ducunt K 1 eod. atr. corr. M 2. dicunt B 2 S E 3 W 1 M 1 O 1-3 ed. H.

§ 120, 19. ualetudini R V G K. ualitudini P B S E. 21. dissidendi R 6. desid'andi P E 2. desiderandi R 1 7 17 V v G B 1 2 K 1 2 E 1 3 L 2-6

W 1 2 M 2 II J O 1-3 ed. H. desiderandi S. disserendi D alio atr. superscr. disserendi M 1 C. || negabat R V G B K alii. negabant v P S.

22. obtinere P E. optinere R V G B K. 24. quiddā P. quiddam V. quidam R G B K E.

quid...faciendum uides? : i.e. nonne idem...faciendum uides? 'What else do you see for them to do?'; sc. except to say semper beatum esse sapientem with the Epicureans. There is no necessity to change uides to censes with Küh., or putas with Madv. Tr. Wes. Kl. Ba., or iudicas with Sff. and T.S., or suades with Kl.

alii...alii : i.e. Peripatetici...Stoici.

obruantur : Bentley's brilliant emendation of the MSS has since been confirmed by the discovery of the Bodleian fragment. The error may have arisen from a confusion between r and f, the contraction for ser.

§ 120. honorarius : i.e. 'quod honoris causa ad aliquem arbitrium defertur' (Ern. Clau. Cic. s.v.); cf. Fat. 17, 39 'tamquam arbiter honorarius medium ferire uoluisset'; and on the position of Carneades iv 3, 6 n.

cum : for the cum-clause with another cum-clause in subordination cf. the exx. of si...si quoted in the n. to ii 27, 67.

commoda : i.e. προσηγμένα, praecipua.

dissidendi : cf. Fin. iv 26, 72 'uidesne igitur Zenonem tuum cum Aristotele et illis re consentire, uerbis discrepare,' a passage which Kl. quotes in favour of his conjecture discrepandi.

uiderint : i 11, 23 n.

25 121. Sed quoniam mane est eundum, has quinque dierum disputationes memoria comprehendamus. equidem me etiam conscripturum arbitror (ubi enim melius uti possumus hoc, cuicuiusmodi est, otio?), ad Brutumque nostrum hos libros alteros 30 quinque mitemus, a quo non modo impulsus sumus ad philo-sophiae scriptiones, uerum etiam lacessiti. in quo quantum ceteris profuturi simus non facile dixerim, nostris quidem acerbissimis doloribus uariisque et undique circumfusi molestiis alia nulla potuit inueniri leuatio.

§ 121, 26. comprehendamus R V G B S. comprehendamus K E.
28. cuicuiusmodi V P G B 1 2 K 1 2 W 2. cuicuiusmodi R 1 atr. nigro mut.
cuiusmodi R 17 L 5. cuiusmodi J. cuiusmodi R 6 v S E 1 L 3 4 W 1 D C O 3 ed. H. cuiuscunq[ue] modi L 2 6. 29. impulsus R V G K. impulsus v B E. || philosophas V G B 1 K 1 E 1. phas B 2 K 2. philosophas R 1. philosophicas R 6 7 17 v P S E 2 W 1 M 1 2 D C H J O 1-3 Vrs. 3240 ed. H. phylosophicas W 2. phylosificas E 3. philosophiae Nonii codd.
31. profuturi sumus R 1 2 6 7 10 16 17 V v P G B 1 2 K 1 2 S E 1-3 L 2-6 W 1 2 M 1 2 H J O 1-3 ed. H. l' p futuri sumus p fuerimus D alio atr. superscr. p fuerimus C. profuturi simus corr. Beroaldus. || dixerim V P G B 2 S E 1 2 M 1 C H O 3 ed. H. dixerimus R 1 atr. nigro corr. dixerim<sup>1</sup> R 6 17 K 1 J. dixerimus B 1 K 2 W 1 2 M 2 O 1 2. || acerbissimis R V P G B K E.

§ 121. eundum: sc. Romam.

ubi: i.e. in quo.

cuicuiusmodi: used in a depreciatory sense, as often in Cic. 'the leisure I have, if leisure it can be called': cf. iii 34, 83 where the meaning is 'I have leisure enough now if leisure it can be called,' the use of hoc there being (not, as Küh. and others say, equivalent to huius rei but) the same as here and meaning simply quod nunc est.

alteros: he had already dedicated to Brutus the five books de Finibus.

philosophiae: this, which is the reading known to Nonius p. 174, 18, is adopted by Tr. Kl. Kuh. Sff. Hei.: philosophas is kept by F. A. W. Or. Ba. T. S. It is highly improbable that Cic. would have used philosophus as an adj.; cf. Ac. i 2, 8 with Reid's n.

simus...dixerim: for the transition from plural to singular without change of meaning cf. de imp. Cn. Pomp. 16, 47 'de huius autem hominis felicitate quo de nunc agimus hac utar moderatione dicendi' (quoted by Hei.) and for the opposite change Or. ii 35, 150 'complectar uno uerbo quo saepe iam usi sumus.'

INDEX

The Arabic numerals refer to sections.

- Ablative, comitative use of III 11; of description IV 66; instrumental IV 66; modal IV 63; with passive verbs IV 13; with sine in series V 48; temporal IV 31
- Academia (at Tusculum) III 7; IV 7
- Academic views III 51; IV 6, 47; V 82, 83
- accessio IV 40
- accidere )( occidere III 44
- Accius III 62; Atreus IV 55, 77; Eurysaces III 39; Melanippus III 20; ? Nyctegresia III 62
- accusabilis IV 75
- accusative subject omitted III 60
- acupenser III 43
- ad III 79; with gerund IV 37; V 93
- addere...ut III 75
- adjective and adverb connected by conjunction V 5; adj. in place of adv. V 102
- adsensio IV 15
- adumbrare III 3
- Aemilius, L., Paulus III 70
- aemulatio IV 56
- aes Corinthium IV 32
- Aeschylus, Prom. Vinc. III 76
- Aesopus IV 55
- Afranius IV 45
- Africanus, P. Scipio V 49
- Aiax III 11
- ain tandem? V 35
- Alcibiades III 77
- Alcmaeon III 11
- aliquid uidere III 46
- aliter...atque ut III 73
- Amafinius IV 6
- amator )( amicus IV 27, 65
- amor IV 68, 70, 71
- Anacharsis V 90
- anacolouthon III 16 (bits); IV 53, 59, 72, 74, 75, 77, 80; V 45, 63, 82, 102
- anaphora III 82
- Anaxagoras III 30, 58; V 115
- animi locative IV 35
- annominatio III 64
- antecedent repeated in relative clause V 1; omitted V 20
- Antiochus of Ascalon III 59; V 30
- Antisthenes V 26
- Antonius, Marcus V 55
- apodosis, deferred III 36
- aposiopesis III 43
- aptus V 40, 62
- apud IV 49
- Archelaus V 10; king of Macedonia V 34
- Archimedes V 64
- Archytas IV 78; V 64
- argumentum a minore V 90
- Aristo of Chios V 27, 33
- Aristotle quoted III 69; V 40, 101
- Aristus V 21, 22
- asyndeton III 81; IV 66; V 61, 87
- at=atqui V 44; =at enim IV 56
- Athamas III 11
- Atilius IV 25
- Atlans V 8
- atque intensive V 45; transitional III 28; IV 27, 30; V 43, 53
- atque...quidem III 4, 28
- atqui III 14
- attraction, of case of relative V 30; of gender of relative IV 23; of mood or tense III 12, 35, 71, 80; V 37, 43
- audire V 31
- autem with intensive force IV 5; V 57
- Balbutire V 75
- Bion the Borysthenite III 62
- brachylogy IV 45, 59, 68
- Caecilius Statius III 56; IV 68
- caligo V 6
- Callisthenes III 21; V 25
- carmen IV 3
- Carneades IV 5, 53; V 11, 83, 87
- castigare V 4
- Cato (the Censor) III 70, IV 5
- chiasmus V 61
- Chrysippus III 52, 59, 68, 69, 72, 76; IV 9, 14, 15, 23, 30, 31, 36, 41, 45, 63, 66; V 69
- Claudius, Appius, Caecus IV 4
- Cleanthes III 76, 77
- Clitomachus III 54
- communes notiones IV 53
- complexio V 29
- concedere=cedere IV 59
- concludere V 72
- conditional clause, unreal IV 24
- confidens III 14

- confisio IV 80
 contractiuncula III 83
 Crantor III 12, 59, 71
 Crassus, M. III 31
 Crassus, P. Licinius V 55
 Critolaus V 51
 cuiusmodi genitive III 83
 culpa III 34, 73; IV 81 cum...tum III 27
 cuppedia IV 26
 Cyrenaics III 28, 52
- Dare 'grant, admit' V 34 dative (of agent) IV 44
 defluere V 62
 Democritus IV 44; V 104, 114, 115 deponent with passive force III 24, 30, 58; V 40; perf. participle with active meaning in abl. abs. V 97 dies, gender of III 53; in die III 74; die IV 39 Diogenes Babylonius IV 5
 Dionysius of Heraclea III 18
 Dionysius (the elder) of Syracuse V 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63 Dionysius the younger III 27 describere )( describere IV 3 dissoluere III 73
 diuinitus IV 1
 docere IV 63
- Ebullire III 42
 ecquid interrogative IV 52
 eculeus V 13
 elegans IV 6
 elidere V 16
 eligere III 83
 ellipse III 34, 57, 76; IV 9, 45, 46 eminent III 3
 enim with ellipse III 29
 Ennius III 5; IV 70; Alcumeo IV 19; Andromacha Aechmalotis III 44, 45; Iphigeneia IV 77; Medea Exsul III 63; IV 69; Thyestes III 26, 44 enucleare V 23
 Epaminondas V 49
 Epicureans V 94, 116, 119
 Epicurus, views of III 40, 41, 42, 46, 47, 49; V 26, 73, 74, 75, 87, 89, 108, 109 Erillus V 85
 escit III 11
 et...et III 37
 et=etiam III 28; in remonstrance III 35, 50 et quidem III 48; V 50
 etiam, intensive III 37
 etiam atque etiam III 69
 Euphoriion III 45
 Euripides, Chrysippus IV 71; Hypsipyle III 59; Phrixus III 67; Theseus III 29, 58 experimentum III 74
 expultrix V 5
- exsuperantia V 105
- Fabius, Q., Maximus III 70 facere with acc. and infin. IV 35; substituted for another verb IV 31; V 90 Fannius IV 40
 fidentia IV 80
 flagitium IV 70, 73
 frugi=utilis III 16
 future perfect, 'postponing' use of V 10
- Gaudere )( laetari IV 66 genitive of definition III 12, 20, 29, 80; IV 34, 44, 57, 82; V 63; double IV 14, 29, 31; subjective III 67 gerundive III 15, 36
 glosses IV 80
 grauitas III 1
- Habere III 27; IV 55, 58; V 38
 habitare III 83; V 69
 haud sciam an III 55 hedychrum III 46
 Heraclides Ponticus V 8
 Hermodorus V 105
 Homer III 63
 Hortensius III 6
 hydraulus III 43
 hypallage IV 6
- In V 28; with verbs of praise and blame V 24 indagatrix V 5
 indolentia III 12
 inducere animum V 30
 insanitas III 10
 inueteratio IV 81
 inuidientia III 20; IV 16 ira IV 78
 ita III 41
 iudicatio IV 26
 iungor with dative III 11
 ius applicationis III 44
- Laelius V 54
 lapsio IV 28
 Lentulus, L. III 51
 leuculus V 103
 libare )( haurire V 82
 licet with acc. and infin. V 44 locus IV 1
 longum est dum IV 48
 Lucilius quoted IV 48
 lumen III 2
 Lycon III 78
- Magister = paedagogus III 2
 Magna Graecia IV 2; V 66, 100 magno (magni) aestimare III 8 Mausolus III 75
 mediocritates III 22; IV 57 Metrodorus V 26, 27, 109 metus IV 64

miserari )( misereri IV 59 montivagus V 79
 morbus III 7, 23
 morosus IV 54
 mouere intransitive IV 30; in Stoic phraseology V 67
 mundanus V 108

Naeuius, Hector proficiscens IV 67 nam (in refut.) III 73 nam...quidem IV 52
 natura III 3, 5
 natus III 36
 ne...quidem with preceding negative IV 49 nemo=ne quis V 105
 nequicquam III 18, 59
 nihili III 18
 nobilitas (βίσις) IV 2 non ita V 23
 non...sed V 15
 non-clause, position of III 40 Numa IV 3
 nunc aduersative III 2; V 31 nutrix III 2

Ob III 28
 officiosus III 70
 opinatio IV 15
 opus quaerere III 81
 orator IV 55; written speeches IV 55 order of words IV 46 Orestes III 11
 oxymoron IV 76

Pacuius, Medus III 26; Niptra V 46 parens V 6
 paronomasia III 44
 parricida IV 18
 partes generis III 24=genera IV 11 participle with general reference, III 38; =relative clause, V 44; perfect=aorist participle in Greek, V 77 patibilis IV 51
 perfect tense in protasis IV 43
 perficere V 2, 72
 Peripatetic views III 69, 71, 74; IV 38, 42, 43, 48, 57; V 84
 perturbaciones III 7, 13; IV 27-37 philittiae V 98
 Piso, L. (Frugi) III 16, 48
 Plato, his journeys IV 44; Menexenus
 V 36
 plus )( magis III 72 poets, attack on IV 69
 pompa IV 48
 Posidonius III 68, 69, 75; IV 61; V 5, 69 posmeridianum III 7
 postremo=denique V 12
 praemolestia IV 64
 praestare III 34; V 29
 praeteritio IV 52
 premere IV 61

preposition, position of III 20, 33, 37;
 IV 11
 prepositional clause IV 17
 proficere IV 60
 profigere V 15
 prohibere )( cohibere III 60 propendere V 51, 86
 protasis in adverbial phrase IV 44 prouocatio IV 1
 proverbs III 25, 50, 52, 84; IV 75; V 118 Pythagoras IV 2, 10, 44; V 9, 10, 30

Quamuis=quantumuis IV 53, 57 quando=quoniam IV 34
 -que with prep. III 27
 qui=quis III 76
 quicquid=quidque IV 44
 quid (neuter for masc.) IV 35 quidam with metaphors III 75 quidem IV 50; concessive after ille and is IV 60
 quodnisi IV 36

Relative referring to a dependent genitive
 III 57; referring to more remote noun IV 49; transition to demonstrative V 8 repetition V 14
 rhythm (clausula) III 47
 rualitas IV 56
 Rupilius Lupus IV 40

Sapientia IV 57; V 7
 Sardanapallus V 101
 sequence (of tenses) III 32, 47, 63; IV 43;
 V 18, 19, 69
 Seven Wise Men V 7
 si quando III 14
 siccitas V 100
 simul ut IV 5
 situs III 26
 Socrates III 10, 77; V 10, 11, 26, 91, 97
 sonus IV 3
 Sophocles, ?Teucer III 71 soul, Platonic division of the IV 10 sphaera V 64
 Sphaerus IV 53
 status III 79
 stirpitus IV 83
 Stoic style of expression III 13, 22; IV 9
 Stoic views III 2, 3, 7, 11, 28, 47, 49, 68, 79; IV 6, 10, 15, 39, 43, 48, 51, 78;
 V 5, 37, 43, 72, 84
 stomachus IV 53
 subicere IV 16
 subject implied IV 17
 subjunctive due to attraction, see under 'attraction'; causal III 27; with classifying force III 76; V 40, 85; concessive IV 48, 60; V 85; conditional relative III 52; conditioned by hypothesis III 14; with cum temporal III 53; imperfect den-noting past supposition V 26; of limitation V 55; potential III 36; with relative

- giving reason III 35; 2nd person indefinite v 60
 subter v 4
 surdaster v 116
 Syria = Assyria v 101

 Tabellas obsignare v 33 templum III 44
 tempus = καρπός III 76; IV 8 Terence, Heaut. III 65; Phormio III 30 tergiuersari III 41
 Theophrastus III 69; v 24, 85
 Timon IV 25
 tonstricula v 58
 Trabea IV 35, 67
 Tubero, Q. IV 4
 turbare III 25
 Turpilius, Sextus IV 72
 Twelve Tables IV 4

 Vero affirmative IV 9
 uide ne IV 50
 uideri III 28; with acc. and infin. v 12 uox v 31
 ut with ellipse III 22
 ut...ne III 81; v 39
 ut si IV 41
 utrum...ne...an IV 9

 Verb, perfect indicative III 61; singular with collective subject IV 6; with cognate object III 74
 verbal nouns in -io IV 57, 59

 Zeno of Sidon III 38
 Zeno the Stoic III 24; IV 11; v 32, 33, 34 zeugma III 77
 Zopyrus IV 80

PA 6304
T6
1905
v.2

Cicero, Marcus Tullius
Tusculanarum disputationum

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

---

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

---

